"I have come here tonight to give a plain statement of facts. I find that there has been some criticism of the Council. When our franchise was before you some time ago, we unwisely expected that all legal formalities would be fixed, and that it would not be necessary for us to appear before you. The reason why I am here is known to you through the papers and the people who state that we want to obtain something for nothing. Take the past as a criterion. Many here remember seven years ago when the trolley was first brooded in this city. The matter was in your hands. At that time no one wanted to be a bloated capitalist and we were invited to come here and become such. We started the road in August, 1892. For the money invested we have not received one cent in dividends, interest or otherwise. At no time have the bonds amounted to more than 50 per cent, and they have not been watered or aired. All that is in this road represents hard dollars. This is for six years, and you can judge the value of the franchise we ask for. From July, 1898, to June, 1899, we received from passengers $51,011 54 and from advertising $55. Our disbursements were $53,199 29, and on account of construction such as purchasing new motors we expended $4,461 16, leaving a net loss of $2,400. People ask why we want that extension If you will go over the route with me I will show you how the route runs around Robin Hood's barn to the dead end of Second street, a valuable franchise about two miles long, out of which we ask the city for about 4,500 feet, and the rest of the route runs through private property. It would require two cars for that extension at an expense of $9,000. It would require $40,000 to build the road. We would not touch that franchise with a ten thousand foot pole if that franchise was all there is to it. It is the connecting link for the company between this city and Elizabeth. This is the plain statement. We have not tried to hoodwink anybody in this matter. We have agreed to do more than John Kean has for the county. This county boulevard talked of must be presented to Mr. Kean and kept in repair at the county's expense, and for that the county is to receive $250,000. For what we ask we agree to macadamize at an expense of $10,000. We give the city $250 a mile after 1901, making in all $14,000 that you will receive for this franchise. If the receipts increase to $80,000 we agree to pay 5 per cent. of that amount.

"Is it to your interest to grant that franchise. I state honestly, fairly and authoritatively that we cannot accept a limited franchise. It will cost us $40,000 to build our road and for a 15 or 20 years lease we cannot afford to do it."

A Stuart Patterson, of 927 Central avenue, was present and in reply to the remarks made by Mr. Riker stated that on an investment of $180,000 half of that amount is bonded and it is Plainfield Street Railway Company is losing about $9,000 a year, and that they are giving their services for nothing. He thought that in twenty-five years time the company will not be here. It is now a question of terms that is to be considered. The company says that they will not touch a limited franchise. Of course a man will not lease his house for fifteen years, and in fact there are only two classes of people, bachelors and widows, who agree to live for better or worse, for richer or poorer, through life. Twenty-five years is long enough to grant this franchise, and he urged that it be granted for not longer a time than fifteen years.

Mr. Patterson stated in behalf of Mayor Fisk that the reason he would not take bonds of the railway company was because he held a city position and did not want to hold the bonds of an outside corporation.

In speaking again Mr. Kirkner remarked that he thought that the street railway company had given a great exhibition of philanthropy. They have been operating the Plainfield road for six years and have been losing money. Now they come to us and want another franchise to extend their road. It looks as though the company is bankrupt and that they will get deeper in the hole. You can put figures down and they will suit one class of people, but not another. I believe that Mr. Riker tells the truth, but I think that the company is an extraordinary set of capitalists who will operate a road for six years and make no money.

Mr. Flannery, of Scotch Plains, made a vigorous speech in which he favored the granting of the franchise on the present conditions. He thought that there had been a great deal of fuss for two miles of road. He thought Mr. Riker's statement a fair and manly one.

Mr. Riker replied to Mr. Kirkner's remarks regarding the company being bankrupt. He said that the company was not in that condition; that they were able to pay their bills on the tenth of every month, and that the members of the company had invested between $85,000 or $90,000 in the Plainfield road.

Other remarks were made by J. B. Millis and Charles W. Runyon, both of whom favored the granting of the franchise on the present conditions.

At this period Mr. Barrows made a few remarks. He said that the members of the Council were elected as the servants of the people, and for the three years he had been in the Council he was of the opinion that there have been fewer men in the Council that have been actuated by politics than at any other time. Continuing he said: "On June 6th last we received an application from the Plainfield Street Railway Company for an extension in the western end of the city through Second street. We denied that application for the reason that the property owners along the street urged us not to grant the same Since then there have been twelve meetings, nine public hearings and ten meetings of the street committee. Up to three weeks ago no one appeared before this Council to guide the members in their actions in this matter. The street committee has night after night met and tried to frame a suitable ordinance. We remedied many difficulties in the old ordinance, such as requiring street sprinkling, etc., and we were of the opinion that a suitable ordinance had been drafted. The local papers have misrepresented us and have not told all. There are but two men in my district who object to granting the present ordinance and they are both here tonight. We are willing to give any section of the city the trolley, but we cannot force the company to locate their trolley. We want to let the people know where we stand on this question. The First ward people here tonight deserve consideration first in this matter in preference to other sections of the city."

Mr. Buckle stated that during the evening he had not heard anything that had changed his mind. He considered that the First ward people have a right to first say, but it must be remembered, said Mr. Buckle, that it takes two to make a bargain

Mr. VanHerwerden remarked that the Plainfield Street Railway Company gave the city last year the very large sum of $480 50 and the taxes this year would be higher than ever, for the reason that the city has been giving away valuable franchises for mere nothing.

Mr Riker then went on to say that his company had given Plainfield last year $1,853 34 in taxes and had expended $1,740 41, including macadamizing. He said that it would cost the company $500,000 to build the trolley line from here to Elizabeth, and they could not afford to accept a limited franchise.

This concluded the hearing, and when Mr. Barrows moved that further hearing be adjourned to Monday evening, Nov. 7th, Mr. Riker asked to have the company's application returned. He was told that he would have to present his request in writing. In the meantime while Mr. Riker was doing this Mr. Barrows moved that the Council adjourn.

Subsequently, however, Mr. Barrows had the motion to adjourn reconsidered, and the notice of withdrawl was presented to the Council. It was signed by Mr. Riker and Thomas Nevins, president of the street railway company, who was present at the hearing. Inasmuch as the ordinance under consideration had only been read for information to the Council and people, all that the street railway company need do, to have it considered further, is to renew their application, which is but the work of a minute, and can be done at the next Council meeting if they so decide.

DARING ROBBERY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Rockview Avenue House Looted of $275 Friday Afternoon.

$85 OF IT WAS IN COLD CASH

ONE MEMBER OF THE FAMILY AT HOME ALL THE TIME.

The Residence of Mr. Simmons Proved a Fruitful Field for the Thieves, Who Gained an Entrance by Climbing Over the Porch and Going in Through a Second Story Window—Furniture Upset.

One of the most daring robberies reported in sometime was that of Friday afternoon when the home of Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, No. 5 Rockview avenue, was entered by a thief or thieves, who stole $87 in cash, a ring with three diamonds and a diamond stud, amounting in all to about $275. There is not the slightest clew as to the guilty parties and the police have nothing upon which to work.

There resides in the house Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, their daughter and son. Mr. Simmons and the son were away at work, and the daughter was in New York. Mrs. Simmons was the only one at home, and she remained down stairs during most of the day. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon she went up stairs and everything at that time was all right.

She went up stairs again at 5 o'clock and then discovered that someone had been in the house and stolen the articles mentioned. The money was divided and placed under some bedding, but the parties who entered the house thoroughly ransacked everything on the second floor. Bedding was disarranged, bureau drawers were pulled out and the contents scattered about the rooms, and in fact everything was turned upside down.

Investigation proved that the thieves entered the second story through a front window over the porch. Footprints can be seen about the porch on the ground and that is all.

Friday evening about 6 o'clock the robbery was reported to Chief Marshal Wilson and since that time he has been at work on the case. He has, however, met with little success for the reason that no one remembers having seen anyone about in that neighborhood that acted strangely. It looks as though the persons were well acquainted with the house, for they seemed to know just where to find the valuables that were hidden away.

Mrs. Simmons says that she does not remember having heard any strange noises about the house or having seen anything that would arouse her suspicion.

SOLD BROOMS AND BRUSHES.

Something new is the line of a sale was held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Friday afternoon by the members of the Ernest Workers, the boys' missionary band of the church. Brushes and brooms of all varieties were sold at the regular market prices. The rain hurt the trade but there were a number present despite the unpropitious weather and the boys made a good showing.

The sale was under the charge of all the members and the officers. The officers are President, George Richards; secretary, Edward Janes; treasurer, *Witney Baker. The other mem*bers are Hugh Baldwin, Amos Brooks, VanWyck Brooks, Wickham Corwin, Frank O. Howard, Theodore Gavett, Richard Lovell, Brookholst K. Miller, *Raymond V. V. Miller, Charles Per*kins, and Ralph Vail. Mrs. Isaac L. Miller is the superintendent.

Break in the Train.

As the 7:55 train was pulling out from the depot Saturday the coupling between two of the coaches became loose, and while the engine and most of the train went on, the smoker and the club car "Netherwood" remained behind. The break was soon noticed and the train was backed and the two cars attached.

BIG TIME FOR PYTHIANS.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE ENTERTAINED OUT-OF-TOWN BRETHERN.

During the Business Part of the Meeting Two Members Were Initiated—Banquet and General Good Time.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., had a glorious time Friday evening at their regular meeting, when they entertained a very large delegation of Knights from the New Brunswick Lodge. The stormy weather did not stop the visitors and they came prepared to have a good time. During the business part of the meeting the lodge initiated George O. Stevens and Mr. Hoagland and gave them the third rank. This work was performed in a perfect manner and received high commendation from the visitors.

Following the business of the evening a programme of song, music, speeches and recitations were enjoyed. Both the visitors and the members of the home lodge took part in this programme. George Stevens was called on for remarks, but he said he was so much interested in what he had seen that he was lost for words to express himself. He then presented the propositions of two persons for membership. Following this bit of pleasantry an adjournment was made to the banquet room, where a fine supper was served by the committee in charge This was followed with more speeches and songs, and about 1 o'clock this morning the visitors left for home.

They all voted that they had enjoyed themselves and extended an invitation to the local members to visit them at New Brunswick. In addition to those from New Brunswick, there were present Knights from New York, Pennsylvania, and in fact many towns along the line of the Central Railroad.

LECTURE ON LIQUID AIR.

Wonderful Properties of New Science to be Demonstrated to Westfielders.

Thursday evening at the Westfield Club Hall, Westfield, W. H. Meadowcroft, of the Edison General Electric Company, will conduct an entertainment, under the auspices of the Public Library Association, consisting of a large number of experiments, with explanatory lecture, illustrating the wonderful properties of liquid air.

Seats are now on sale at Dorbell's drug store, Westfield, and there are many Plainfielders who will probably take advantage of this opportunity so close at hand to witness the exhibition.

A Soldier Boy Heard From.

Chris. Sorensen, Jr., of this city, who is a member of the Fourth Regiment U. S. N. Y. Vols., has been heard from. He together with the rest of the members of the regiment are stationed at Camp Mead, Middletown, Penn. He says that there are twenty-seven regiments in camp, and that the whole Second Army Corps, under Gen. Graham, expect to go to South Carolina at as early date. He says that his regiment is to take part in the peace jubilee at Philadelphia October 25th, 27th, and from there they expect to go to South Carolina. He speaks about the very cold weather in camp, but says that all are well and enjoying life.

Patent for Tree Guards.

A patent was granted to John E. Plammer, of Watsonville, on October 20th, for an improvement on tree guards. His invention is a tree guard that can be adjusted to any tree, without regard to shape or size, and it is so arranged that it can be easily expanded as the tree grows. It is also provided with intermediate pickets that appear and fill up the space as the guard is enlarged. The patent was obtained through L. W. Serrell & Son, of this city.

A Birthday Anniversary.

Miss Edna Randolph, daughter of Thomas Randolph, of Central avenue, celebrated the anniversary of her thirteenth birthday last Saturday and in the evening a party was given in her honor. It was arranged by her sister, Miss Carrie Randolph. There were present about fourteen school mates and the evening was passed in playing games and in listening to vocal and instrumental music. During the evening refreshments were served to the guests.

TEXT OF OPINION ON MARTIN ACT TAXES.

Judge VanSyckel Clearly Defines the Situation.

OF GREAT INTEREST TO CITY.

ONA FIDE PURCHASER CANNOT BE HELD FOR DEBT OF ANOTHER.

Innocent Purchasers of Property Cannot be Held for Liens on Property That Were Brought About by Failure of Former Owners to Pay Their Taxes—Judicial Authorities are Quoted.

It is a matter of great interest to Plainfielders to know exactly the decision given by Supreme Court Justice VanSyckel in the matter of the report of the Martin Act Commissioners for the city of Plainfield. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was for the city, while R. V. Lindabury represented the taxpayers. The report is a confirmation of the request made by the City Council inasmuch as it was the wish of the latter that the innocent purchasers of property be exempt from the enforcement of the act, and these facts were presented to the Court by the Corporation Counsel. The decision of the Court is a strong document and the text in full is as follows:

Three questions arise on this application for confirmation.

1 Should the report be confirmed in so far as it readjusts and reimposes taxes which were due more than twenty years before the appointment of Commissioners for the readjustment.

2 Should the report be confirmed in so far as it readjusts and reimposes taxes the lien of which had expired before the appointment of Commissioners.

3. Should the report be confirmed in so far as it readjusts and reimposes taxes in cases where not only had the lien expired before the appointment of Commissioners, but the property had also been sold to bonafide purchasers.

First—In regard to the first question I concur in the view of the late Justice Abbett reported in 17th N. J. Law Journal, page 23, subsequently adopted by Justice Lippincott, and can see no reason why the ordinary presumption of payment does not apply in cases of taxation. It accords with the general policy of the law and requires, that in actual payment will be presumed to have been made until that presumption is rebutted.

Second—In my judgment it is the clearly expressed intention of the legislative acts to authorize the readjustment of unpaid taxes and to impose them upon lands of the delinquent taxpayer. The Legislature was dealing with a public debtor and I know of no limitation upon the power of the Legislature to make provision for the appropriation of the property of such debtors to the satisfaction of their obligations to the public. It is not the levy of a new tax but a proceeding to enforce the payment of a tax legally laid, and the Legislature has the power to make it a lien on the property of the taxpayer, even upon property other than that which he owned at the time the tax was originally imposed. In my judgment the *fact that the lien of the taxes has ex*pired does not affect the right of the Commissioners to re-impose taxes upon land still owned by the delinquents.

Third—Where the lands have been sold to bona fide purchasers after the tax lien had expired and before the appointment of Commissioners, a different question is presented.

I agree with the views expressed by Justice Garrison in 23 Vroom, page 5, which were adopted by Vice Chancellor Pitney in Compton against The Mayor and city of Newark; but the difference between an assessment for benefits upon lands by a public improvement, and a general tax, is clearly pointed out by Justice Dupee in 20 Vroom, page 488.

In the absense of any lien imposed by statute or where the lien created by statute has expired by limitation, the tax is a mere debt of the taxpayer to the public.

The Legislature has no power to impose upon the property of A. a lien for the debt of B. and I can perceive no difference in principle whether the debt of B. is a debt to a private citizen or to the public treasury. The property of B. may be pursued for his debt, but when it has legally passed to a bona fide purchaser without any existing lien upon it, it is secure against a burden for the debt of B. After the lien of a tax has expired I think the case stands as if there had never been a law creating a lien upon lands for taxes.

While the lands remain in the ownership of the delinquent taxpayer the legislative power is ample to reimpose the burden, but after they have passed to a bona fide purchaser they are beyond the reach of the municipality for a debt of the former owner, in every case where there was a failure to take proceedings to establish or enforce the lien before it expired.

The imposition of a general tax creates no lien either equitable or legal upon the lands of a taxpayer. In the absence of a statute, or where the statutory lien is extinct, the owner must be free to convey his lands, unincumbered to a bona fide purchaser. It is not like an assessment made upon lands for benefits conferred upon them by the public. There is an equitable lien, and where that lien has not been legally pursued our courts have properly held that any informalities may be corrected by legislation and the public may get back what it has expended in adding to the value of the property. That case manifestly differs from this.

I will therefore send the report back or take such action as will enable the parties to review my decision.

HIS LOVE UNREQUITED; OSCAR WAS RECKLESS.

DID HE TAKE SOME POISON?

WHETHER HE DID OR DIDN'T, HEROIC TREATMENT WAS GIVEN.

Miss Hattie Stewart No Longer Accepts the Ardent Love of Night-watchman Vaughn, Who Whistled for Her While the Rain Poured Down—Found Frothing at the Mouth.

'Twixt love and duty Oscar Vaughn, the well-known night watchman of North Plainfield, attempted to commit suicide last Friday, but his efforts were not successful. Oscar has for some time past been desperately in love with Miss Hattie Stewart, of West Front street, and it was arranged that they should be married Nov. 22d. This plan was all right so far as Oscar was concerned, but his alleged sweetheart objected, and during the past few days she has absolutely refused to entertain his advances.

This action had a depressing effect on Oscar and the climax was reached last evening, when, it is said, he took a quantity of laudanum with intent to kill himself. Whether he took the poison has not yet been determined, but he was run through a course of treatment that was heroic enough to remove any poison that might have found its way into his stomach. He now lies at the hospital in a weakened condition, but all right. He will probably be discharged tomorrow.

Oscar's trouble took place last evening about 6:30, after leaving the home occupied by his sweetheart. He stood in the roadway without an umbrella, while the pouring rain thoroughly soaked him. He whistled for his girl, but she refused to come out and see her ardent lover.

After repeated efforts Oscar became discouraged and he went to the house across the street adjoining the one occupied by Edward Nelson. Here is where he attempted to kill himself. He was seen there by the neighbors and it was thought that Oscar was having a fit. Word was sent to Barker's drug store, and the ambulance was sent for. When this arrived it was found that Oscar was prostrated and frothing at the mouth. He was then taken to the hospital, where he was given heroic treatment. He refused to have anything to say, but the treatment no doubt was beneficial, for he is feeling much better today.

This adds another chapter to Oscar's history, but it will do doubt result in his remaining a single man for sometime, for Miss Stewart will not marry him now.

Death of Miss Casey.

Miss Dottie Casey, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Casey, of West Third street, died last Friday after an illness lasting for sometime. Through her illness everything that could be was done to alleviate suffering and the patient was uncomplaining. The funeral services were held last Monday morning from the house at 8:30 o'clock and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock.

Calvary Baptists' New Edifice.

The new edifice of the Calvary Baptist church, situated on Central avenue, is in rapid construction under the management of the contractor, William H. Smith. The church will be of stone, and if the weather continues favorable the corner-stone will be laid by next Sunday.

New Out of the Navy.

Michael O'Keefe, who is now at his home in this city, was on the auxiliary cruiser Alexandria, and not the Texas as stated Friday. His ship is now out of commission and the men have been discharged. His brother, Dennis O'Keeffe, who is with the Detroit, is now in Boston harbor.

Improvements in White's Store.

John L. Force, of this city, recently completed the work of installing several electric lights in White's dry goods store. In the show windows there are are lights and five incandescent lights have been placed in the millinery department up stairs. Last Thursday evening they were lighted for the first.

ROUSING ECHO OF STATE CONVENTION.

Local Endeavorers Hear of That Great Gathering.

INSPIRING MUSIC GIVEN.

STIRRING ADDRESS BY REV. LUCIUS R. DYOTT, OF NEWARK.

Short Talks on Different Phases of Convention by Miss Morse and L. D. H. Gilmore—Mr. Gilmore Led the Singing as at Convention—Consecration Service in Charge of Miss F. Hawkins.

Some of the enthusiasm that swayed the great Christian Endeavor convention at Asbury Park was imported by the Plainfield Local Union for the convention echo meeting in which the Endeavor Societies of the city united Thursday night.

The meeting was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and was well attended. The Endeavor spirit of interest and devotion pervaded the church from the moment the song service began, led by L. D. H. Gilmore, of Newark, who conducted the inspiring music of the convention. With the large, vigorous man, a skilful and enthusiastic leader, on the platform, and Miss Jessie Utter at the organ, the music could not help going well.

The Florence Genevieve Hawkins, president of the Plainfield local union, presided over the meeting. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. A. E. Main, and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. The first report of the Asbury Park convention was given by Miss Minnie Genevieve Morse, of the Congregational Endeavor Society. The report dealt briefly but with much enthusiasm with the social and intellectual side of the convention, and quoted a few especially strong or practical remarks of the best speakers.

"The musical side of the convention" was the subject assigned to L. D. H. Gilmore. His bright and entertaining little talk not only described the singing, by soloists and congregation at Asbury Park, but urged the Endeavorers to do better their part in the congregational singing. "We expect the clergyman to do our preaching and praying for us," said he "but when the singing begins it is our turn. Let us do our part better."

The real address of the evening was given by Rev. Lucius R. Dyott, of Newark. He did not make any formal report of the convention, but in his strong, fervent and helpful talk he brought to his hearers the very spirit of consecration and Christian joy that prevaded that grthering. He called his hearers to that service in which one hand is stretched up to God for that illumination of mind and strength of soul needed for the Christian life and the other hand stretched out to others in helpfulness. The solemn impression created by the address was increased by a beautiful solo sung by Mr. Gilmore, impressing the lesson of God's watchful care for his children. Then came the climax *of the meeting, the closing consecra*tion service, conducted by Miss Hawkins. "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done into you," was the keynote of the consecration meeting. Earnest words were spoken by the leader, urging a deepening of the Christian life among the societies, words of consecration and of prayer were heard from all parts of the house, then "God be with you" was sung, and the Mispah benediction, followed by the apostolic benediction, pronounced by Rev. A. E. Main, closed a very successful meeting.

The committee of arrangements in charge of the meeting consisted of Miss Ernestine Smith, secretary Local Union, chairman; A. A. Lake, of Dunellen, vice president Local Union and Ira Winthrop Travell, superintendent Local Union social department.

A NEW INDUSTRY PROBABLE.

It now looks as though there are pretty good chances of a new factory being located in this city, that is, the one which makes guns and fire-arms. The step taken by the Board of Trade last Monday evening offering to the company a strip of land along the the Central Railroad Company's line on West Front street, has struck a popular chord. The land necessary will cost about $400 and this amount can easily be raised by subscription.

Charles Hand has offered to meet the members of the firm in this city and take them in a carriage about the city, and this fact has been communicated to them. There seems to be no doubt but what this company can be induced to locate here. In addition to the above Mr. Hand has the applications of several other firms who want to locate in this city.

Attention, Felix.

If there is such a man as Felix Meyer in Plainfield or vicinity he will learn of something to his interest by calling on Secretary Manning at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

AN OFFICIAL VISITATION

COLUMBIA LODGE ENTERTAINED THEIR GRAND OFFICERS.

Occasion Was a Time for a Pleasant Social Gathering—Six Candidates Initiated—Niagara Falls Lodge Thanked.

Friday night was a great night for Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., the occasion being their annual reception to the grand officers of the State. The lodge rooms in the Coward building on Park avenue was crowded with the grand officers, and friends from Central Lodge, Upchurch Lodge, Westfield, and Bernards Lodge, Basking Ridge.

—Six candidates were initiated, F. C. Lounsbury, William G. DeMeza, John Lloyd, Oliver R. Pearson, Jr., Robert Striker and Oliver L. Drake. After this the meeting adjourned, and was re-organized again as a public gathering, so that outside friends could come in and participate in the speeches which were made by Grand Master Workman Stahl, from Trenton; Past Grand Master Workman John Diefendorf, of Newark; Grand Foreman Lambert, of Newark; Grand Receiver Golden Test, Camden; Grand Recorder J. J. Lippincott, Camden, and Grand Inside Watchman, V. W. Nash.

Besides these, several members of Central Lodge spoke, and it was nearly 12 o'clock before the guests departed.

On exhibition in the lodge room was a framed piece of parchment bearing upon it a vote of thanks from Columbia Lodge to International Lodge, *No. 6, of Niagara Falls. The resolu*tions will be placed in J. Hervey Doane's window for awhile, then they will have the seal of the order affixed before sending them away. The work is good and brings forth much praise. The printing was all done by Wiand, the artist being Spencer W. Wiand, of Cranford, a friend of Joseph D. Moon, one of the committee.

The thanks are accorded International Lodge for the fraternal love and care exercised over Edger E. Marshall and his wife when the former was taken ill at Niagara Falls. The work is as neatly executed as if printed by machinery. The names of those of the committee on resolutions, Joseph D. Moon, V. W. Nash and Julius W. A. Bauersacks, are placed at the bottom.

AUTUMNAL TEA.

Delightful Social Event Given by Miss Keith Clapp.

A most delightful tea was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Edith Clapp, of Mercer avenue, in honor of her friend, Miss Marion Henderson, who will soon leave town. Autumn leaves and flowers were used profusely in the decoration of the rooms. These with red shaded lights and the effective gowns of the young girls produced a very pretty picture. Miss Clapp and Miss Henderson were assisted in receiving by the Misses Emma Haviland, Harriet Shreve, Agnes Opdyke, Mary Whiton and Mary Wells.

In the dining room Mrs. John Gray Foster and Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen presided at the table, assisted by the Misses Marion Bowen, Gertrude Haviland, May Shreve, Lolen Hunn, Mabel VanDeventer, Alice Rushmore, Anna Miller and Alice Thompson.

CANDY AND CAKE SALE.

Junior Endeavorers Help Raise Funds for Trinity Church.

Anxious to do their part towards the sinking fund of the church, the members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held a candy and cake sale Saturday afternoon in the lecture room of the church.

The little folks presided over the tables and showed great delight in the responsibility reposed in them. The sale lasted from 2 o'clock until 6, and was well patronized.

At the candy table were Morris Brokaw, Ada VanDoren, Lida Wyman, Bessie Bond and Alice Pugh. Those at the cake table were Ida May Tier, Bessie Beighton and Lena Bohan. Mrs. Cornelius Schenck was present and kept a watch over the tables.

Settled Out of Court.

The case in tort of William Mount against George MacLaughlan, for damages, will not come to trial, as the matter has been settled out of court. Mount lives in Bound Brook and claims that MacLaughlan collided with him one night last August when they were both riding their bicycles on South avenue near Netherwood. Mount sued for $19.50 which he says the repairs on the wheel cost him. It is understood that the settlement was for the entire sum.

Street Car Axle Broke.

Friday evening about 6 o'clock an axle on car No. 11 of the street railway broke and passengers had to be transferred for a time to another car. The accident happened on the Netherwood line. A little later the car was run to the carhouse, where it is now being repaired.

Maurice Owens spent Saturday with Raritan friends.

A CHOIR OF PRIESTS IN SACRED CONCERT.

Fine Musical Programme Rendered in St. Joseph's Church.

NUMBERS WERE CLASSICAL.

REV. FATHER MILLER ONE OF THE ACCOMPANIST ON THE PIANO.

Frequent Applause Accorded to All the Participants—Interior of the Church Was Prettily Decorated With Roses and Potted Plants—A Number of Soloists Were Heard—Programme as Rendered.

St. Joseph's R. C. church was well filled with members and friends last Thursday when a sacred concert was given by the choir of the church, assisted by a choir of priests of the southern diocese under the direction of Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church. Mrs. Frank LaPorte and Rev. Father Miller were the accompanists on the piano and Miss Quinn assisted with the violin. The programme was a classical one and was well rendered throughout.

Frequent applause was accorded the several numbers and the work of both choirs was very creditable, as was also the solo work of Miss Smith, the Misses Betts, and the several priests whose names appear on the programme. The priests' choir is organized for the purpose of singing requim mass when a priest dies. Those in the choir consist of Revs. Wm. H. Miller, North Plainfield; D. J. Duggan, Bordentown; P. J. Petrie; Atlantic City; E. J. Eagan, Seabright; W. F. Dittrich, Vineland; J. H. Farrington, Sayreville; J. W. Norris, Hopewell; J. A. Ryan, Bernardsville; Dennis Kelley, Trenton, and J. A. Keuper, New Brunswick.

The interior of the church was very prettily decorated around the altar with roses and potted plants, and altogether the scene was very attractive. The programme was as follows:

PART FIRST.

WEARY PILGRIMS TO JAIL.

Sorrowful Couple Tried Their Wiles on City Judge But Failed.

In a companionship of true love and rags Jennie Thompson, white, and Edward Jackson, colored, were making a pilgrimage. The site of their Mecca had not been decided upon. All their earthly belongings were carried in an old tool bag. Friday they sought protection from the rain beneath the baggage truck at the Grant Avenue station. There Patrolman Weimzes reid found them and took them to the jail for the night.

A pretty fabrication of their imaginative minds was woven in the City Court Saturday to edify the City Judge. He was a wise young Judge, however. Jennie was sent back to jail for 60 days with a fine of $50 to pay as well. Jackson was ordered to jail for 53 days and to pay a fine of $100. Neither had a cent and the fines will have to be worked out.

The Mayor's Kind Act.

Mayor Wilson held court in the borough Saturday and there were two prisoners before him. One was a peddler and vagrant named John Rannan. His Honor heard his story, after which he gave him ten minutes to get out of the borough. The other prisoner was Mrs. Agnes Thompson, of Westfield. She came to Plainfield last Friday and became intoxicated. She says that it was her first offense. The Mayor suspended sentence and gave Mrs. Thompson some good advice. He then gave Chief Wilson 25 cents and told him to see that Mrs. Thompson secured a ticket to Westfield.

The Braves Treated.

At the meeting of Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men last Friday a musicale was given during the good of the order. Harry Dreier was congratulated on the new trail he is soon to follow. He did the right thing by the braves last night.

Realty Change.

The following real estate transfer has been recorded in Somerset county: Catherine A. Hughes and husband to William Lanehart, North Plainfield, $2,870.00.

BRILLIANT WEDDING AT TRINITY CHURCH

Marriage of Miss Laura L. Emmons and Gilbert B. Fletcher.

RECEPTION AT PARK CLUB.

Charming Young Woman From North Plainfield Wedded to Son of Pastor of New Market Baptist Church—Beautiful Gowns of Bridal Party—Ceremony Performed by Groom's Father

In the presence of many well wishing relatives and friends, Miss Laura Louise Emmons, eldest daughter of former Councilman and Mrs. Peter A. Emmons, of Jackson avenue, and Gilbert Boughton Fletcher, of New York, son of Rev. Frank Fletcher, of Dunellen, plighted their troth Oct. 19, at 7 o'clock p. m. in the Trinity Reformed church. It was one of the prettiest church weddings of the autumnal season and passed off without aught to mar the beauty of the occasion.

The church presented a most charming appearance. Palms and potted plants were grouped about the pulpit and platform in artistic array. Green and white were the predominant colors. The front of the platform and desk were hidden by plants arranged in pyramidical effect.

Long before the hour set for the ceremony, the guests began to gather, the ladies in their delicate-hued evening gowns and the men in the conventional evening dress. The first pews were marked off by a cordon of ribbons for the relatives of the couple. Half hidden behind the floral bower, W. E. MacClymont presided at the organ and rendered a programme of well-chosen selections until the hour of seven came. Then the majestic strains of the Lohengrin wedding march rang out.

The four bridemaids, all gowned in white organdie over yellow taffeta, and carrying handsome bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums, descended from the choir loft and walked slowly up the centre aisle to the entrance. There they turned and made their way to the front of the church, followed by the bride leaning on the arm of her father. The bride looked very beautiful in a gown of white satin, en traile, with chiffon trimming. She wore a tulle veil, caught up with a bunch of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. After the bride was the maid of honor, Miss Grace Dunham, of New York, who was gowned in organdie over white taffeta. Her bouquet was of white chrysanthemums.

The bridemaids were Miss Hester Holman, of New Brunswick; Miss Effie VanAngien, of New Brunswick; Miss Priscilla Beatrice Emmons, of this city, all cousins of the bride, and Miss Grace Emmons, sister of the bride.

As the bridal procession started down the central aisle the four ushers —John G. MacLaughlin and William Slape, of this city; George Harrison, of Flushing, and Edward Maxson, of Jersey City—kept apace on the side aisles, two on either side. Then the groom, accompanied by the best man, his brother, Loren Fletcher, of Boston, entered the sanctuary from one of the side doors, near the pulpit, while the officiating clergyman made his appearance from the other side. He was Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, and father of the groom.

The converging processions met and grouped about a white gate decorated with smylax, behind which the clergyman stood. Then the marriage of the Dutch Reformed church was performed and the couple were united with the ring. After the closing blessing, the music, which had continued through the service but so low as not to interupt the ceremony, broke forth into the exultant strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher led the bridal party up the aisle followed by the maid of honor and the best man, the bridemaids and the ushers.

From the church, the wedding party went to the clubhouse of the Park Club, on Washington avenue where the reception was held. There were 150 guests present consisting of the relatives and more intimate friends of the couple, together with the out-of-town guests. The building was artistically decorated, the prevailing colors were green and white. The decorations at both church and club house were in charge of Mrs. Denton.

After the newly married couple had received the congratulations of their many friends, the wedding supper was served. Then dancing was the order of the evening and continued until midnight.

The couple were the recipients of a handsome array of presents that included many of value and beauty, combined with useful features.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a magnificent gold ring, set with diamonds and sapphires. The bride gave to each of her bridemaids beautiful stick pins, set with pearls and amethists. The groom presented the ushers with gold clover-leaf pins, with a diamond set in the centre.

The groom formerly lived with his father in Dunellen and has a large circle of friends there and in this city where he frequently visited. Of late, he has been making his home in New York. He is employed by Lowenstein Brothers, of New York, as a traveling salesman. The couple left last night for Philadelphia and will then take a southern trip. On their return, they will reside at 673 Vanderbilt avenue, Brooklyn.

During the supper, the bridal party was seated in the alcove to the ballroom, near the door. After it was over, they quietly departed and drove to the bride's home where they prepared for their journey and then departed quietly by the back way. There was no throwing of rice or old shoes to mark their departure.

Overture La Muette di Portici.....Auber
Shepherd's Song.....Schuloff
Chorus.....Cavallo
Deli Rondo.....Morandi
Berceuse "Joeira".....Godard
Polonaise Militaire.....Chopin

POPULAR COUPLE WED.

MARRIAGE OF MISS KOLLER AND T. A. KURZHALS, JR., OCTOBER 19LH.

Held at the Home of the Bride on Lincoln Place—Ceremony Performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey Under Floral Bell

A pretty wedding of October 19 was that of Miss Louise Koller, daughter of Michael Koller, of No. 27 Lincoln place, in the borough, to Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr., of West Second street, this city. The wedding took place at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride in the presence of the relatives and near friends of the contracting parties. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel.

The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with lace and ribbons, and she carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Mamie Koller, as bridesmaid, who was also gowned in white and carried pink roses. The best man was E. H. Clevely, of this city.

The marriage was performed beneath a floral bell of roses, which was suspended from an arch of evergreen and autumn leaves. The effect of the decorations was very pretty. In the several rooms there were decorations of white and green.

Following the congratulations which were showered upon the popular couple, a reception was held, during which a sumptuous supper was served to the guests.

During the early part of the evening Mr. and Mrs. Kurzhals left their friends and departed for the North Avenue station, where they boarded a train for New York. They will be absent about one week and will visit many points of interest in New York State. In their departure they did not escape a shower of rice and old shoes. It was generally believed by their many friends that they were going directly to their new home at 430 West Sixth street, but they didn't.

The large collection of costly presents of both a useful and ornamental nature evidenced the high esteem held by many for the recipients. The bride is very popular among a large circle of friends, and is an active worker in Warren chapel. The groom is also exceedingly popular and he has a host of friends. He has furnished his new home at 430 West Sixth street, and he and his wife will reside there on their return.

WANTS WRIT QUASHED.

A Fanwood Woman Involved in Trouble in a Justice's Court.

Murphy & Blatz, the lawyers, were retained Thursday by Mrs. Ada Drake, of Fanwood, to have a writ of attachment issued out of Justice Moffett's court quashed.

Mrs. Drake, who is an old resident of Fanwood, sold her household goods at auction a few days ago, and while the sale was in progress Constable Rockafellow came up, and armed with a writ of attachment seized upon the unsold goods and the money in the auctioneer's hands on the grounds that Mrs. Drake was a new resident. Mr. Blatz will apply to Justice Moffett at once to have the writ quashed.

Entertained Scholars.

Mrs. Powell, of Fairview avenue, entertained her Sunday-school from Grace M. E. church, at her home last Thursday. There were in addition to the fifteen members of the class, about fifteen other guests and the time was pleasantly passed in a social way. There was a programme of vocal and instrumental music and recitations, while some of the guests enjoyed playing games. During the evening a bountiful repast was served by the hostess.

—This season promises to be very lively at the Park Club and several affairs are now being arranged.

SAYS WILLIAMS IS IN THE LAND OF LIVING.

Reported as Dead, But in Reality He is Alive.

TRICK TO GET INSURANCE.

STRANGE STORY TOLD BY PETITION FILED IN ORPHANS' COURT.

J. Fred MacDonald Asks That the Administrator's Papers Issued to Him to Settle Williams' Estate be Revoked, as He Has Strong Belief That Williams is Alive—Story of Disappearance

Ever since last summer when Walter Gordon Williams, the lawyer, suddenly left town and was next heard from while on his way to the Klondike gold fields, it has been generally suspicioned that Harry B. Williams, his brother, who was reported as being drowned by falling from a steamer in Nantucket Sound Dec. 8th last, was alive and well in the western states, where he had gone in some surreptitious way in the effort to hoax the insurance companies into paying several thousand dollars' worth of property.

The feeling that Williams was alive was confirmed officially October 19 h when in the Orphan's Court at Elizabeth a petition was filed from J. Fred MacDonald asking that his appointment as administrator of the estate of Harry B. Williams, late of Plainfield, be revoked, and Mr. MacDonald's bond, given by him to the court, be returned and cancelled.

This action is taken on the ground that Williams, instead of being dead, is to the best of the administrator's knowledge and belief in the land of the living. The petition sets forth that on December 8th, 1897, young Williams was supposed to have been drowned in Nantucket Sound, and, having died intestate, an application was made to the Surrogate on January 4th, 1898, by Walter E. Williams, the young man's father; Sarah E. Williams, his mother, Walter G. Williams, his brother, all being nearest of kin, for the appointment of James MacDonald as administrator, and letters to that effect were issued by the Orphan's Court on that date.

On May 10th last Mr. MacDonald collected from the Standard Life Insurance Company of Detroit, Mich., $1,500, being an insurance that Harry B. Williams has on his life. On September 23d last Administrator MacDonald was notified by counsel for the insurance company that Williams was alive and that the company wanted this money refunded

MacDonald further avers in his petition that the mother of the supposed dead man had written a letter to a party, and which was shown to MacDonald. In this letter, Mrs. Williams states that her son is alive.

MacDonald further states to the court that upon information and belief he is satisfied that Williams was alive on January 4th last, when the letters of administration were granted.

The administrator further sets forth that on December 31, 1897, both the father and brother of Harry B. Williams conveyed to Sarah E. Williams, his mother, all their right, title and interest in his estate, and that she is now the sole legatee.

Judge Vail, after the petition was read, made an order summoning Sarah E. Williams to appear before the Orphan's Court November 2d, and show cause why the appointment of James MacDonald as administrator should not be revoked, in accordance with the application.

The disappearance and alleged death of Williams is well remembered in this city. Together with his brother, Walter, and two other young men, Williams started for Maine ostensibly on a hunting trip and possibly to look into some mica mines that Walter had previously investigated. The morning that it was alleged that he was drowned, Williams was said to have been suddeiny taken sick and to have gone on deck to get some fresh air. While there he was seized with a vomiting spell, and while leaning over the side rail of the steamer it was claimed by his brother, Walter, who said he was a witness of the affair, that the sick man lost his balance and fell into the sea. It was not yet daylight at the time the drowning was alleged to have taken place. The cry of man overboard was sent to the officers of the ship, and the ship was stopped and a boat lowered and the surrounding expanse of water searched for half an hour afterwards in the endeavor to rescue Williams. He could not be found, however, and the steamer resumed its course to Portland, Me., where on its arrival Walter Williams reported the alleged death. The officers of the steamer signed a statement that a man supposed to have been Harry Williams was said to have been lost overboard. They declined to make a positive statement in reference to the alleged death. A couple of days after that Walter Williams arrived home, expressing deep sorrow over the alleged drowning of his brother.

Shortly after the family of the alleged dead man commenced proceedings to collect the insurance. The Prudential Life Insurance Company held an industrial policy for $150 and just before leaving on the trip William had paid the first premium on a $5,000 policy but up to the time of his alleged death the policy had not been accepted by the Prudential Company. He also held a $5,000 accident policy that he had taken out just before sailing from New York. The insurance companies commenced investigating the case and immediately concluded that the young man was not dead at all. Detectives were put on the case and, it is alleged, secured pictures of Williams while he was working in a western State under an assumed name. The industrial policy, however, was paid by the Prudential, the amount involved being so small.

Matters evidently became too warm for Walter Williams to remain in town and he suddenly disappeared early in the summer, leaving his business to be adjusted as best it could through the courts.

FOR THE CHURCH FUND.

DELIGHTFUL TEA GIVEN AT HOME OF REV. MR. DOWNEY.

The House Prettily Decorated for the Occasion—Profits to Be Used for the Building Fund—Those Who Had Charge.

One of the most delightful teas of the autumn season was that of Thursday afternoon between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock, given by Mrs. Downey, wife of Rev. Mr. Downey, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, at their home on Sycamore avenue. The affair was given for the benefit of the church building fund and was in every way a success. The home was prettily decorated with greens and cosmos, while the several tables were made attractive through the use of different colored lights, and the display of many pretty things for sale.

In the dining room Mrs. George Dupee poured chocolate, and Mrs. Clapp poured tea. Miss Rita Pound, Miss Phillips, Miss Faber and a number of other young women of the church assisted in waiting on the guests. Mrs. Downey, assisted by Mrs Charles Matthews and Mrs. Phillips, received the guests.

At the candy table Miss Barlow and Miss Phillips were in charge, while Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Rhoads presided at the cake table. A very pretty fancy table was in charge of Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr., and Miss Minnie Wilson. Everything was disposed of and it is believed that $75 will be cleared. An encouraging feature was the large attendance of not only members of the church, but many out-of-town guests, as well as the men of the church and several clergymen in this city and the borough.

The sum of twenty-five cents was received at the door and Miss Stevens attended to the reception of the money. These teas will be given at intervals throughout the fall and winter at the homes of the various members of the church.

TAKES THE HYGEIA'S OUTPUT OF ICE.

Contract Requires That Not Over 40 Cents a Hundred Shall be Charged

F. T. Ostrom, of this city, has just made a contract with the Plainfield Hygeia Ice Company for the control of the entire output of the new plant located in this city, and has taken charge at once. It is proposed to harvest 3,000 tons of ice a year and a market for the product will be sought between the points of Long Branch and Somerville. Already Mr. Ostrom has received applications for ice by the carload.

The contract signed by Mr. Ostrom and company stipulates that the people of Plainfield shall not be charged over 40 cents a hundred for ice and it may be sold lower. No matter how scarce the supply the price will not go over 40 cents. The work of harvesting ice is now in progress and the quality is of the finest. The company is already considering the advisability of having the Westinghouse Company put in an exact duplicate of the present plant.

FOUR SCORE YEARS OF LIFE.

William Graydon, aged 80 years, who for the past fifteen years has been a resident of this city, died at 2 o'clock last Friday at his home 321 West Eighth street, corner of Central avenue. The cause of death was heart trouble which disease had been troubling the deceased for about one year. Mr. Graydon was born in Ireland October 25th, 1818, and when a young man came to this country. He was for many years a widely-known dry goods merchant in New York. He retired from business many years ago, and since that time had been living a life of quiet and ease. He was a communicant of Grace P. E. church on East Seventh street. He leaves a widow. The funeral services were held last Sunday afternoon from the home on Eighth street, at 4:18 o'clock. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery and was private.

THE BOARD OF TRADE TALKS OF TROLLEY.

Resolution Passed Favoring the Present Trolley Ordinance.

ONLY FEW VOTED, THOUGH.

ALL SORTS OF OPINIONS EXPRESSED BY MEMBERS.

Mr. Woolston Couldn't See Great Value of Franchise—C. W. Runyon Offered a Resolution—Ex-Mayor Hegeman Favored City Getting as Much as Possible—Newspapers Criticised for Opposing Ordinance.

The Board of Trade at its regular meeting October 19, suffered a severe attack of "trolleyosis," and what at first appeared to be a tame meeting ended in a discussion such as has not been heard since this distinguished organization grappled with the celebrated building ordinance. Mr. Woolston started the ball rolling by asking if there was any one present who knew the value of a franchise. As for himself, he said, he could not see but what the City Council is doing the best for the interests of the city, and he could not see where the value of the franchise comes in. "We need the trolley out Arlington avenue toward the cemetery, and it's a great mistake holding on hoping to secure more from the trolley," continued Mr. Woolston.

Manager Charles Runyon, of the telephone company, was the next speaker. He said: "I am not like Mr. Kinsman who says that he is the only one in Plainfield who knows what a trolley franchise is worth, and after reading Mr. Serrell's article I cannot understand his argument. The trolley is just as valuable to the city as it is to the railroad. It cost the present company a good deal to locate here and they deserve some consideration. The Kean trolley scheme has nothing to do with the questions that now confront us." Mr. Runyon later in the evening offered a resolution which was adopted, that the Board of Trade favor an extension of the trolley to Scotch Plains according to the present ordinance. Many of the members present would not vote at all and so it was carried by a few.

R. A. Meeker spoke somewhat in favor of the extension on the present terms and stated that if the city decided to accept any of the streets on the line of the road the company would have to pay their share, and on Front street the company would have to pay one half where there are double tracks. He thought the city would gain much by increased value of property.

Elston French favored the present arrangement, but thought in addition that it should be made for a term of ten, twenty or thirty years, and that low fares should be secured during certain hours of the day.

Harry C. Runyon spoke at some length on the subject and stated that while he did not know the value of a franchise he did know what counsels are worth. In every case where people now have the trolley they are delighted and would not have it taken away. He was afraid that if the Council should hold out too long the city would be the loser.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., talked as follows: "The granting of a trolley franchise is a delicate matter. The trolley company came to North Plainfield and asked the Council for our main highway. We knew it would drive business away from that street, which it did. We, in the Council, at that time were sworn to protect the people, but the people thought it a crime to refuse the franchise. They attended the meetings and forced us to grant it, while a representative of the company stood there laughing at us. The trolley is a benefit and they are a profitable investment. The great question is to settle on an equitable amount to be asked by the city. Steam railroads are forced to buy every inch of land and trolley roads come along and parallel them by getting a franchise for nothing. Today one can ride from the Market Street station, Newark, to Glen Ridge for six cents. That is one result of the trolley. This Board should strive to help the Council in its actions. Let us get as much as we can in fairness."

President Lounsbury made a few remarks in which he thought the Plainfield papers had overlooked the property owners' interest. They oppose the granting of the trolley franchise, he said, when the Council know more than the papers what can be secured. No one has shown any interest in this matter except Mr. Kinsman. The papers seem to be doing it all.

Mr. Woolston stated that Mr. Barrows has worked hard night after night on this trolley ordinance, and now the papers had come out and talked as though the Council knew nothing about it. What the Council wants, he said, is the confidence of the people. Other remarks were made by Charles Hand and others. The president appointed C. W. Runyon, R. A. Meeker and W. A. Woodruff a committee to present the resolution to the Council.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., reported progress as chairman of the committee on transportation, regarding the securing of a ten-trip ticket between here and New York. Charles H. Hand reported on the matter regarding the letter received from a concern that would like to locate a factory in this city to make fire-arms. He was authorized to reply to the letter and offer the company a strip of land 500x300 along the Jersey Central Railroad. Ira L. LaRue was elected a member of the Board and S. S. Swackhamer resigned. Hereafter the Board will meet the third Monday of each month instead of the third Wednesday.

SUES FOR BICYCLE DAMAGES.

William Mount Wants George MacLaughlin to Pay Him $19.

Justice Mosher has issued a summons in the case of William Mount, of Bound Brook, against George MacLaughlin, of this city, for $19, which Mount claims MacLaughlin ought to pay him for repairs on a wheel. It seems that on August 20th Mount and MacLaughlin were riding their wheels on South avenue in opposite directions, Mount going home and MacLaughlin riding towards Netherwood. Near the Netherwood station the wheelmen collided. Mount claims he was on the right side of the road, and that the other was to blame for the accident. At all events Mount's wheel was wrecked, and he claims it cost him just $19 to have it put back in good condition again. Mount also says that when he sent the bill for repairs to MacLaughlin, the latter sent back an impertinent answer, refusing to pay it. The case comes to trial October 27th.

TOWER FOR COOLING WATER.

Extensive Improvements Being Made at Electric Light Plant.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company is making a number of improvements about their property on West Second street. The house formerly occupied by Mr. Krymer and family is being remodeled and put in shape for the increasing needs of the company. On the rear of the lot close to the station a tower to be about forty feet high is being erected. This tower is filled with pipes and will be used to cool water from the steam condenser. By this scheme the water can be used over and over again and it diminishes the amount of water used. All of these improvements are being made with a view to handling more business in the near future.

Improving All The Time

John Powers, the druggist at the corner of Craig place and Somerset street, has been making extensive improvements in his up-to date store. He has been adding several counters in the rear for prescription work and his soda counter has been lengthened. The improvements are just what is needed and Mr. Powers is now better able to attend to the increasing business. An extra fine stock of toilet soap has just been received and it is being sold rapidly at prices that are reasonable.

On the Way to Manila.

William Stepenson, of East Sixth street, is now on one of Uncle Sam's warships on the way to Manila. He enlisted as cook and he has an excellent job. It is not known when he will return.

Dam Gave Way.

A dam which is being built by John Herrmann, on upper Somerset street, to form a water power to turn a mill, gave way Thursday. There was very little water in the stream and no damage was done.

Liver Trouble

When the yellow flag of quarantine is hoisted over a dwelling it means disease and danger. So when the yellow flag flies in the face—when the cheek is sallow and the clear white of the eye is dyed saffron—there is danger. It is liver trouble. The liver is one of the most important organs of the body. On the proper discharge of its functions depend human health and happiness. When the liver fails of its duty, poisons at once begin to generate, and other organs of the body become involved. Never neglect the liver if you value health. If you are suffering from liver trouble, begin at once the use of AYER'S PILLS and you will find prompt relief and permanent cure.

"I was so weakened by liver trouble that I could scarcely lift my head. While in this condition I began the use of Ayer's Pills, and finding almost immediate benefit, continued their use until I was cured of my complaint."

DEMOCRATS MEET IN OLD SOMERSET.

No Lively Contests For County Nominations.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

S. S. CHILDS, OF BERNARDSVILLE, TO RUN FOR ASSEMBLY.

Selah Schoonmaker, of Millstone, Will Be Democratic Candidate For Sheriff—Convention Held at Somerset Hall—Temporary Organization of a Rather Quiet Gathering—Leaders Are Present. (By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, Oct. 20, 2:45 p. m.—After the convention reassembled the reports of the committees were received. Nominations for sheriff were then called.

John Groendike, of Hillsboro, nominated Selah Schoonmaker, of South Somerville. There were no other candidates and Mr. Schoonmaker was regularly nominated by acclamation.

The nomination of the candidate for the Assembly was next announced, Samuel S. Childs, of Bernards, was nominated by the chairman of that delegation. James Trewin, of North Plainfield, seconded it.

Peter Hall, of Neshanic, nominated M. Mount Corle, of Branchburg, and made an eloquent speech, saying that the county wanted a resident, not a "rooster," to represent it in the Assembly.

The ballot was taken and resulted in a vote of 40 to 22 in favor of Childs. The vote was then made unanimous.

For the two coroners, the vote was as follows: John M. Brady, of Raritan, 63; Dr. D. C. Adams, of North Plainfield, 34; Dr. J. F. Robinson, of South Bound Brook, 24.

The first two were declared the nominees and their election was made unanimous.

Mr. Childs and Mr. Schoonmaker were then escorted to the platform and thanked the convention for the favors bestowed.

Somerville, October 20.—Today it is the turn of the Democrats from Somerset county to gather here for the county convention. There is the usual gathering of the leaders and the customary button-holing of the delegates. So far, there have been no startling developments. There are several candidates in line for each nomination, but in both instances there is one whose support is so strong as to leave the others in the shade.

Selah Schoonmaker, of Millstone, appears to be almost sure of the sheriffalty nomination. He is a general favorite and is considered a strong man for the place. His fellow-townsman, Adam Hummer, is also in line but his boom is not gigantic. The name of Calvin McMurtry, of Somerville, has been used but he refuses to run under any circumstances.

S. S. Childs, of Bernards, is the popular man for Assemblyman. He is the Childs of restaurant fame in New York but lives in Bernardsville. He will agree to run if there is no fight but refuses to make any contest for the nomination. That may mean that the others will be asked to give up even before the nominations are made and allow Mr. Childs to be nominated by acclamation. A little boom sprang up this morning for T. P. Gallagher, of Raritan, but it may be squelched.

As court was in session the convention was called to order by Dr. Taylor, of Millstone, at Somerset Hall at 11 o'clock. W. J. Logan, of Bridgewater, was made temporary chairman and Horace Coddington, of Warren, secretary. The latter was elected by ballot over E. V. Cruiser, of Montgomery, by a vote of 20 to 17.

There are 62 delegates entitled to sit in the convention and most of them are present. The report of the convention officers from the different townships were made. The North Plainfield delegates reported that Richard McCullough had been made chairman of the delegation. The committeemen chosen were L. B. Bodine on permanent organization; W. M. Demler on resolutions; L. M. Bird on rules, and Andrew Love, Sr., on credentials. The convention then adjourned to meet at 1:30 o'clock.

The committees met in the hall for organization. Horace Coddington, of Warren, was chosen chairman of the committee on resolutions, and W. J. Tunison, of Somerville, as secretary. A platform was drawn up endorsing the State candidates and condemning the Republican administration. Henry Reimer, of Somerville, was chosen chairman of committee on credentials. There were no contests.

The committee on permanent organization, T. B. Hall, of Branchburgh, chairman, and L. B. Bodine, of North Plainfield, voted to make the temporary organization permanent.

STOLEN WHEEL FOUND.

FRANK DENCKLAU'S BICYCLE CAPTURED IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Colored Man Tried to Sell it at Pollart's Repair Shop—Escaped Policeman and Caught by Witt—Was Sent to Jail.

Two weeks ago Sunday, Frank Denckiau's Eldridge wheel disappeared. There was no clue to the thief. Denckiau thought that the wheel was gone forever. Saturday afternoon, there came a message that a wheel answering the description of his had been found in New Brunswick. The colored man in whose possession it was found could not account for it.

Saturday afternoon, a colored man went to Myron Pollard's repair shop in New Brunswick and wanted to sell a wheel. The proprietor was suspicious and told Policeman Allen. Allen told the colored man he knew of a purchaser and led him to the station house. There the stranger threw down the wheel and bolted. The officer pursued.

The stranger was increasing his lead when a man named Witt put out his foot and tripped the fleeing negro. Then Witt fell upon him. In the struggle the colored man bit Witt's hand. He was finally landed safely in jail.

The negro gave his name as William Gray, of Rahway, where he claimed he had purchased the wheel. He was identified as having been in Philadelphia six months ago and was caught in several contradictory statements. The Magistrate sent him to the county jail for fifteen days. Meanwhile Chief Harding telephoned to all the neighboring cities.

COSTLY FARE HE PAID.

Last Saturday night at Fanwood Geanto Ermo, an Italian, aged 27 years, a resident of Graceland, fell from a coal train which he was trying to jump, and his right foot was badly crushed. Ermo was trying to reach home and having no money, thought he could steal a ride.

He was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday morning about 8 o'clock, and it was found necessary to amputate three toes. It is thought that the rest of the foot can be saved. Shortly after the accident happened a telephone message was received at the hospital asking if they would receive him, and if they would have the ambulance meet the t. a. m train. The ambulance was at the North Avenue station, but the man did not come on the train. He was brought yesterday to the hospital in a beer wagon. Ermo is married and has a family.

A Missionary Service.

At the First Baptist church next Friday evening a missionary service will be held under the direction of the Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor societies of the church. At the close of the service a farewell reception will be given to Miss Julia Shinn, the church missionary, who is soon to leave the city.

Fractured a Small Bone.

FUNERAL OF A SOLDIER.

HE DIED WHILE WAITING TO FIGHT FOR HIS COUNTRY.

Private Charles Johnson Taken Sick While in a Southern Camp and Died in a Newark Hospital—Funeral in This City.

The funeral services of the late Charles Johnson, who was a private in Co. D, First Regiment, and a former resident of this city, were held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Trinity Reformed church, where the deceased was for many years an attendant. The church was filled with friends who had known the departed and the services were exceedingly impressive. The floral display about the platform and casket was beautiful and consisted of a number of pillows from friends, and the company of which the deceased was a member. There was also a large pillow from the Ladies' Auxiliary of the church in Newark, where Mr. Johnson attended.

The body was brought to this city by a detail from Co. D, of which Captain Orrin E. Runyon is captain, and they acted as bearers. They were Captain Runyon, Sergeants Townley and Mills, Corporal Bitt, Bugler J. A. Shauger, and Privates Pudney, Smith and W. C. Baldwin. They wore their uniforms and presented an impressive appearance.

The services at the church were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., and after reading the Scripture lesson, he made a few appropriate remarks.

About thirty members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., were present in a body to pay their respects to the departed.

Interment was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery, and at the grave Pastor Schenck offered prayer and Bugler J. A. Shauger sounded taps.

The November Century.

The November Century is to have a novelty in the way of a colored cover designed by Grasset, the finest poster-maker of Paris. He has pictured Alexander the Great on his steed "Bucephalus," to mark the opening of Professor Benjamin Ide Wheeler's serial "Life of Alexander," which will be a feature of the magazine during the coming year. The great gray war horse is represented in the immediate foreground, reined in until he has almost fallen on his haunches. On his back is the determined young Alexander, in rich trappings of gold and purple. The background is a typical Macedonian scene, with stately temples and palaces showing through the foliage. In the distance are the purple Olympian mountains. The colors are quiet but rich, like old tapestries.

Pythians to Pay a Visit.

Past Grand Chancellor Rockafellow, of Somerville, attended the meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., Friday evening, and announced that next Friday evening all of the Grand Lodge officers would be in Plainfield to attend the district meeting, at which time a Grand Lodge session will be held.

Mr. Cooper Paid the Bill.

E. E. Cooper, Republican candidate for Assembly in Somerset county, says that he paid the bill of the Mt. Bethel hotel keeper for the refreshments furnished the delegates to the Warren township primary ten days ago.

PLAINFIELD SOLID FOR E. R. ACKERMAN

Will Support His Candidacy For State Senator.

WAS NO OPPOSITION HERE.

THREE WARDS INSTRUCTED DELEGATES TO VOTE FOR HIM.

Thirty-one Votes Will be Cast for Mr. Ackerman at County Convention—Some Republicans in Second Ward Objected to Instructing Delegates—Ackerman Ticket Elected in Fourth Ward.

The Republicans of Plainfield are to present a solid front at the county convention at Elizabeth today in support of their candidate, Ernest R. Ackerman. Last night, the Republicans of this city held their primaries to elect delegates to the convention. In three out of the four wards, resolutions were passed instructing the delegates to support Mr. Ackerman. In the other, the Fourth ward, the Ackerman ticket won.

FIRST WARD.

The primary in the First ward was held in the old City National Bank building. C. B. Coward was made chairman and L. A. Dunavan secretary. The following resolution was unanimously passed: "Resolved, That the delegates elected at the primary meeting be instructed to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Ernest R Ackerman for State Senator from Union county."

The officers of the election were: Judge, Wm. B. Ayres; inspector, B. T. Barnes; clerk, H. B. McDonald. The votes cast were 91, of which 8 were thrown out. The votes of the successful candidates were as follows: David S. Dunavan, 87; E. B. Maynard, 87; Amos Andrews, 87; H. G. Adams, 87; J. E. Flannery, 87; H. Templin, 86. There was a small scattered vote. C. J. Newman and L. A. Dunavan were elected members of the county committee without opposition.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward primary, held in the Bryant School building, passed off without incident save for a little argument as to whether the delegation should go instructed or not. There was an unanimity of opinion in favor of Mr. Ackerman as State Senator, but there were a few who objected on principle to the instructing of delegates, but they were overcome and the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the delegates should use their best endeavors to secure the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman as Senator." Geo. D. Patten was chairman of that primary, and H. C. Durar, secretary.

The officers of the election were as follows: Judge, P. N. Kline; inspector, W. P. Spangenberg; clerk, R. A. Frey.

There were sixty-two ballots cast. The vote for the seven delegates was S. A. Ginns, 62; Marion S. Ackerman, 62; J. B. Dumont, 61; Josiah Browne, 61; George P. Mellick, 60; Charles C. Davis, 60, and Lewis Peterson, 55. The unsuccessful candidates were A. B. Beers, 4; J. W. Jackson, 4; Benjamin Sutton, 2; C. S. Foote, 2, and J. B Bromfield, 1.

William N. Runyon and George D. Patten were elected members of the county executive committee. One vote was cast for H. C. Durar for that office.

THIRD WARD.

The primary in the Third Ward was held at the Casino. Assemblyman Roger F. Murray was elected chairman and John D. Titsworth secretary. The following resolution was passed: "Resolved: that the delegates elected at the primary election of this ward be requested to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman for State Senator and to vote for him at the county convention as long as he is a candidate."

The officers in charge of the balloting were Judge F. E. Marsh; Inspector, Eli Odam; clerk, J. Casper Kirkner.

There were 59 ballots cast. The vote for the eight delegates was as follows: Alex. Gilbert, 58; F. H. Andrews, 58; I. W. Rushmore, 59; J. W. Murray, Jr., 57; L. M. Daniel, 59; B. Frank Coriell, 59; F. E. Marsh, 58; A. S. Paterson, 56. J. Frank Hubbard, John Bushnell, William Mayhew and J. C. Kirkner received one vote each.

William C. Kirk and Roger F. Murray were elected to the county executive committee. Alex. Gilbert received one vote.

FOURTH WARD.

At the Fourth ward primary, held in Reform Hall, it was decided by the leaders that it would be better policy not to attempt to pass any resolution favoring Mr. Ackerman. There was a small opposition but it accomplished nothing and the ticket, known to be in favor of Mr. Ackerman, was elected almost unanimously. Frank H. Smith was chairman of the primary and William H. Abbott secretary. The election officers were: Judge, H. C. Runyon; inspector, Fred J. Huff; clerk, William H. Abbott.

There were 167 votes cast. The vote for delegates to the county convention was as follows: Frank H. Smith, 167; John Porter, 167; William H. Abbott, 167; James H. Stewart, 167; Edward Galbraith, 166; Edward Mosher, 167; A. H. Davis, 166; Frank Nelson, 165; Buton Harvey, 166; Richard Norwood, 166; Robert Randolph, 2; John Ward, 1; D. Page, 1.

RECITED HER OWN HYMN.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE QUOTED HER GREAT NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Almost the only living member of the brilliant New England literary coterie that made the middle decades of the century famous in the history of our literature, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is welcomed everywhere as a charming and clever woman, a delightful speaker, and an author known and loved by all. The announcement that the author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" would give a lecture at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, Monday afternoon, created wide-spread interest, and when the hour for the lecture arrived it found Mrs. Hall's pleasant home crowded with eager listeners.

Mrs. Howe, who was born in 1819, is a beautiful old lady, with a clear, sweet, musical voice and an easy, conversational manner of delivery. She was dressed in black, with a lace cap over her hair. Her subject was personal recollections of the great writers whom she had known, and her graphic talk about Whittier, Longfellow, Holmes and Lowell brought those famous men very clearly before her listeners. The anti slavery agitation, Longfellow's writing of "The Skeleton in Armor," the odd and amusing personality of Dr. Holmes, and Lowell as editor, poet and critic, were some of the points touched upon in a bright and humorous way, enlivened with many anecdotes which made the audience break into smiles or listen in hushed silence. Poems of Whittier's, and strong bits from Lowell, were quoted with much sympathy and appreciation by Mrs. Howe. In closing, she spoke of the influence for nobility and helpfulness that these great men of our country should have over us, quoting the words:

"Lives of great men all remind us
We should make our lives sublime."

A fitting close to the afternoon was Mrs. Howe's grand Battle Hymn, recited as only she can recite it, with the solemnity, passion, and religious fervor that prompted those deathless words of devotion to God and native land.

SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS OFFERED

Funeral Services of Dottie Casey at St. Mary's Church.

The funeral of Dottie Casey took place Monday morning from her parents residence, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Casey, 415 West Third street, and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, where a solemn requeim mass was offered by Rev. Father Smyth, who spoke at length on the kind disposition and loving character of the deceased, who was a member of the Angels' Society of the church. The members of the society turned out in a body in charge of St. Mary Esther. The floral tributes were magnificent, completely covering the entire top of the handsome white casket. The family have the sympathy of their many friends who knew that everything possible was done to alleviate the pains of the little one who bore her suffering uncomplaining. The pall bearers were Masters Owens, Kelly, Sommers, Kyle, Flatly and Lyness.

HAVOC OF THE WIND.

Part of the Washingtonville Ice House Blown Over—Workmen Hurt.

During the wind Monday afternoon a bend in the roof of the new ice-house, being built in Washingtonville for the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, blew off, carrying with it two men who were at work there, Frank Conger and Theodore Stites, both of the borough.

When Conger felt the roof going he jumped, the distance being thirty feet. He struck on his feet and was considerably jarred. Stites fell the entire distance and was bruised and scratched as a result. Dr. Buchanan was sent for and made a hasty examination. Although not able to tell positively yet, the doctor thinks there are no internal injuries and that the man is not hurt seriously.

Attachment Issued.

Alvah Hoagland, the expressman, has sworn out a writ of attachment against Richard Menzel, who kept a music store on West Front street until a few months ago, when he went to Germany. The attachment is made on goods in the store house.

Another Baker Child Dead.

Charles Baker, aged six years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baker, of West Front street, died Thursday evening, of diphtheria. This makes the third child that has died of the same disease in that family.

WOULD RATHER DIE THAN TO BE BLIND.

Charles Brassler Cut His Throat With a Butcher Knife.

HIS EYESIGHT WAS FAILING.

Found By His Wife Lying in a Pool of His Own Blood in His Bedroom Last Night—He Had Been Morose of Late on Account of His Eyesight Failing—Coroner Gave a Burial Permit.

Chas. Brassler, aged 69 years, a well educated German, living at Adamsville, between Bound Brook and Somerville, committed suicide last Sunday night between 9 and 10 o'clock by cutting his throat to a considerable depth, severing the windpipe. The cause assigned for the deed is that Brassler had of late been losing his eyesight and this made him despondent.

He was found in his room by his wife. He was lying partially on the bed and partially on the floor, while there was considerable blood scattered about. Close by was a large butcher knife, covered with blood, which had been used by Brassler. Dr. C. R. P. Fisher, of this place, was called first and found the body almost cold. It was thought that Brassler had been dead about one hour. Later Coroner Stillwell was called and after an examination gave a burial certificate.

For a short time past Brassler had been acting queerly and his mind did not appear to be right. He was morose and did not act like himself. All of these actions were noticed by his wife, but still she thought little of it.

Mr. Brassler was a contributor to several New York publications, among which is the Jeweler's Circular Publishing Company. He has two sons, Charles A. and Otto, of New York, both of whom are also writers. The family resided on a farm, and Mr. Brassler spent his time in writing and doing odd jobs about his place. His great fear of becoming totally blind seems to have been the cause for committing suicide.

FOR NEW STORM SEWER

ORDINANCE PROGRESSED AND PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD.

It Will be Built by Issuing $2,500 Worth of Bonds, But the Plan is Opposed by Councilman Hetfield, Liefke Moffett.

At the regular meeting of the Common Council last Monday $1,500 was borrowed to meet the third payment on the new engine house, and two electric lights were granted to petitioners. The special meeting of the Council followed.

Mr. Barrows moved that a public hearing be given regarding the installing of a storm sewer through Park avenue, Front street and Somerset street.

Mr. Hetfield objected to the bonding of the city for $2,500 to do this work. As there is not much chance of doing any asphalt work this year, he thought that matter could go over to next year and the work could be paid for out of next year's appropriation.

Mr. Baker agreed with Mr. Hetfield and thought that it would scarcely be right to bond for $2,500. He thought that bonds could be issued to cover both the sewer and asphalting.

Mr. Barrows stated that the law would not allow them to issue bonds to cover both. He said he did not care personally whether the sewer was built or not. It did not affect him and he did not have to use it, but thought the people wanted it. He said that the people howl for sewers, trolley, etc., and they hold the Council responsible for them.

Mr. Buckle favored the sewer and thought the people along the avenue are entitled to it.

Mr. Barrows stated that each year the Mayor had suggested such improvements, but the Councils have always been afraid to adopt the suggestions.

Mr. Hetfield thought there was no rush about the sewer and it could go over to next year. He advocated it strongly, but not under the present conditions.

The ordinance was finally adopted on first and second readings. Messrs. Hetfield, Moffett and Leifke voted against it. This concluded the business and the Council adjourned.

For Champion's Release.

William G. DoMeza, the lawyer, has procured a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Vail, of the Court of Common Pleas, in the case of Albert Champion. The writ is returnable Wednesday morning, November 2d, at 10 o'clock, when it will come up for argument to show cause why Champion should not be released.

First Political Meeting.

Matthew Maguire, of Paterson, the candidate for Governor on the Socialist Labor ticket, will address a meeting of workingmen in T. A. B. Hall Thursday night.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the beneficial character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is the highest and best intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the gentleman's name—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES enclosed in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale by druggists at five cents. This low-priced form is intended for the poor and for those who cannot afford the more economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (12 tablets) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL CO., No. 10 Spruce St., New York. Ripans Tabules may be had of certain druggists throughout the United States, Canada and Great Britain. If your druggist refuses to supply you, TEN TABULES will be sent for Five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of some grocers, druggists, news agents and at some liquor stores and barber shops. One gives relief.

FOOTBALL TOPICS OF LOCAL INTEREST.

The Plainfield Eleven Practicing for Election Day Game.

WHERE MEN WILL PLAY.

A GOOD STRONG ALL-AROUND TEAM BEING MADE-UP.

Practice Held on Westervelt Avenue Grounds Last Night—Candidates for Various Positions—Great Hustling for Tickets for the Yale-Princeton Game Saturday, November 12th—Other Notes.

The Plainfield eleven will continue its practice for the election day game Thursday and Friday evenings at the Westervelt avenue grounds. Such of the players as can turn out Saturday afternoon, will meet at Martine's field for a little practice punting and catching punts in which they are decidedly at present.

The Plainfield team met for practice last Tuesday at the Westervelt avenue grounds and continued its work by electric light. Manager T. U. Smith had a big squad out. Almost all of the team he has selected was out together with nearly a score of others. Good work was done and the lineups were quick and snappy. The backs held the ball better and there was not so much fumbling. The interference was a trifle ragged but good coaching will round that into shape before the game.

There has been considerable discussion on the centre position in the line for the Plainfield team in the election day game. T. A. Cuming has played there but he is not up to the weight of the usual centre. The other principal candidate is Nathan E. Lewis, centre on the Stevens Institute eleven. With two such giant guards as Milne and Brown, it seems that Cuming will be able to more than hold his own at centre despite his light weight and it has been definitely decided to place him there. Lewis is needed at tackle where his weight will greatly strengthen the line. There was some talk of trying Cuming behind the line but there is now plenty of material for the backs.

The cast for the election day game will probably be Fletcher Hallock and Volney F. Green. Hallock is playing a brilliant game there in practice and has done wonderful work breaking up interference. Green is just home from the war and is strong, quick and brings increased weight. Before he left, Green had the reputation of being one of the best ends in this section although very light. He is much heavier now and is as speedy as ever.

There is a great hustling among the local football enthusiasts to secure tickets for the Yale-Princeton game which is to be played at Princeton, November 12th. Some of the Plainfield boys at both colleges have received quantities of requests for tickets. Now each of the college boys is limited to four tickets so it can be seen that none of them will be able to do more than supply their intimate friends. There are plenty of tickets yet, however, for a great stand capable of holding twenty thousand has been put up just for the game.

The first of the great football games among the leading colleges will be played Saturday at Philadelphia when the Pennsylvania-Harvard game will be played. Several Plainfielders are preparing to go over.

Solemn High Mass to Be Said

The funeral services of the late Jos. Tobin, who died in New York Monday, will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Ann's R. C. church on Twelfth street, between Third and Fourth avenues, New York, where there will be solemn high mass. The body will arrive in Plainfield on the 1 o'clock train this afternoon and interment will take place immediately afterwards in St. Mary's cemetery. There will be carriages awaiting the arrival of the relatives and friends.

Home From Europe.

Charles E. Brooks, of West Eighth street, returned Tuesday from Europe on the Steamship Friesland. He reports having had a pleasant time, but the return trip was quite stormy, there being a very heavy head wind.

The New Fire House.

In another month the new fire engine house in the West End will be completed and possession will be taken. The officials have not yet decided just what apparatus will be stationed in that part of the city.

Registration is Large.

Tuesday was the last day for registry in the city, and in each of the wards several names were added to the list. In each case the number registered is large, and in the main exceeds that of last year.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"A Bachelor's Honeymoon," the latest farce success from Hoyt's Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the Stillman Music Hall tonight. The play is from the pen of John Stapleton, an experienced author-actor, and is as thoroughly original and clever in theme and construction as its singular title would suggest. It was originally produced last season in New York city and was received with unanimous praise by the critics. This is sufficient endorsement, alone, to warrant a good entertainment, as the New York critics are more prone to condemn than praise. The play hinges on the results of a secret marriage and abounds in laughable complications which commence when the curtain rises and are never unraveled until its final fall. Messrs. Warde and Sackett, the managers, have engaged a cast of more than ordinary merit, headed by the funny comedian, Walter Walker.

"Where is Benson?" a farce-comedy by Mr. John Fowler, to be presented at Music Hall Saturday night, is as clever a conception as has ever been seen. A satire on theosophy, it absorbs the attention of the audience from first to last and is one ripple of merriment all through. The company is made up of New York people and every member is an artist of the highest capability. Everybody pronounces the comedy far ahead of "What Happened to Jones" and "My Friend From India," the two popular farces of the day and the organization is highly praised. Look for Benson by all means and don't lose him. Find him, for he is one laughter from start to finish.

* * * *

One of the few genuine successes of the past two dramatic seasons was Denman Thompson and George W. Byer's "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which first saw the light of day in May, '95, at New York. The new play is not only a treat, but something which produces on the stage scenes and incidents common in every day life of the world. It is excellently staged, its scenery realistic to a great degree, and the vivid portrayals of character and effecting scenes blending together make the play one that every one will want to see. It will be given here during the current season.

HOME FOR EPILEPTICS.

NEW STATE INSTITUTION LOCATED ON MAPLEWOOD FARM.

Unfortunate Victims of Epilepsy Will Now Have a Place Where Their Peculiar Malady Will Get Attention.

The State village for epileptics will be established soon at Maplewood Farm, situated near Princeton and about two miles from Skillman station. The farm of 187 acres was owned by the family of the late David C. Voorhees up to the date of the purchase by the State Board of New Jersey appointed by Gov. Voorhees under an act of the last Legislature, to establish a State village for epileptics. The proposed village was the outgrowth of an investigation of the State commissioners appointed by Gov. Werts, whose attention was directed to the unfortunate condition of epileptics in the State Insane Asylum as reported by the State Hospital managers.

Adjoining Maplewood Farm is another tract of 213 acres owned by Rev. John F. Mesick, which the Board has agreed to purchase for the same purpose, making 400 acres in the State village.

The mansion house on Maplewood Farm was built nearly a century ago, but is in an excellent state of preservation. Another story will be added to it and it will be the main building in the village. Smaller dwellings will be erected on the farm and these will constitute the village.

Prof. Garrison, the secretary of the Board, gives his opinion that from his experience with the Skillman Farm for Feeble minded at Vineland, the State village for epileptics will eventually exist without an appropriation and be self-supporting.

Lost His Toes.

Westfield, November 2.—August Orlowsky, who conducts a hotel at Lorraine, had the toes of both his feet taken off in front of the station here at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He stepped in front of the passenger train which he intended to go home on and was thrown to the side of the track. Before he could regain his balance the engine had run over his feet. He was carried into the station and Dr. P. A. Kinch dressed the wounds and had him removed to his home.

NEW WAY OF TALLYING.

ASSEMBLYMAN MURRAY'S PLAN TO BE PUT IN USE.

An Important Legal Objection Has Been Overcome so That One Tally Will Count for Every Candidate on Straight Ticket.

The new tally sheets as designed by Assembly Roger F. Murray have been prepared and are now ready for examination. It is customary for the city clerk to furnish tally sheets to the election boards. While all that is really necessary is a large sheet of unruled white paper, it has been the custom to furnish them with sheets neatly ruled and arranged after a method prepared by Mr. Murray several years ago. This year, City Clerk MacMurray will furnish each set of election officers with the new Murray sheets which they can use if they want to or else make one of the old fashioned kind for themselves.

It seems quite likely that the new method of tallying will be adopted throughout the city. There is almost universal favor shown the new sheets with the exception of in one or two districts which, it is believed, will see the advantage of the new system before election day.

The new tally sheets have been criticized by several and one prominent lawyer declared them illegal on the ground that it was necessary to tally after the name of every candidate instead of the straight ticket only. This has been overcome by printing the names of the candidates in very small type in black line under the political title of each ticket printed in red ink so that each tally will be made after the names of all the candidates on the ticket as well as after the name of the ticket or party itself.

A NEW MAP OF MIDDLESEX.

It Will Go Into Details and Will Be of Great Value.

Middlesex people will soon have the privilege of buying a map of the county that is certain to give the greatest satisfaction, as well as the most detailed and accurate information concerning its topography and people. The map has been prepared, after months of hard labor, by F. A. Dunham, the well-known engineer, of this city, assisted by A. W. Vars, of Dunellen, and others. Every road in the county has been traversed and measured. Nothing has been left to chance. Engineer Vars, who directed the surveys and collated the data, took pride in the work, because he is a Middlesex man. This, coupled with Mr. Dunham's long experience as a map publisher, has insured a map which for thoroughness and authentic information could not be excelled.

The map will show rivers, streams, roads, canals, railroads, trolley roads, county roads, townships, cities, boroughs and villages, schools, churches and other public buildings; residences and owners names; cities, boroughs and villages and other points of interest. Also statistics of population and manufactures from the latest official sources, and interesting school statistics.

Young Lad Fractured His Arm.

A young German lad about 12 years of age, in the employ of Mrs. Ulrich, of Sixth street, is now suffering with a fractured arm, the result of a fall last Sunday in a barn owned by John Giles and located on Highland avenue. The lad together with some other boys went into the barn without Mr. Giles' permission and he was injured. He is now being treated at the home of Louis Miller on Lake street, to which place Joseph Blatz, a relative of Mrs. Ulrich had him taken. Mr. Giles does not want to be held responsible for the accident and says that if he had been home it would not have happened.

Death of Harvey B. Eycke.

Miss M. E. Eycke, of 39 Summit avenue, the trained nurse, was called last Saturday to her home at Lambertown, N. J., on account of the serious illness of her father, Harvey B. Eycke. Mr. Eycke died Monday evening. He was fifty-six years of age, and for a year past has been in poor health. His death was due to acute Bright's disease. Mr. Ecke was known in Plainfield, where he has visited. The funeral services will be held today morning from the house at 10:30 o'clock.

Work at the Hospital.

The monthly report of Dr. Endicott, medical director of Muhlenberg Hospital, for the past month, shows that the total number of patients admitted were 24, discharged cured, 16; discharged improved, 3; died, 3; total treated, 39; dispensary cases, 52; total number of visits, 120.

A Romance of the Alps.

The Servias illustrated lecture will take place at the Casino tonight. The subject will be: "William Tell and the Romance of the Alps." Mr. Servias will give an entertaining talk.

WILLIAMS IS NOW OFFICIALLY ALIVE

Administrator's Papers Have Been Set Aside.

ACTION IN ORPHANS' COURT.

STATEMENT MADE BY MOTHER OF ALLEGED DEAD MAN.

Testimony Taken Before Judge Vail This Morning—Mrs. Williams Said She Had Received Letters From Her Son—Father's Deposition Also Received—The Alleged Death was Sensational

Elizabeth, Nov 2—Judge Vail, sitting in the Orphans' Court yesterday, decided the application to set aside letters of administration granted last January on the estate of Harry B. Williams on the supposition that he was then dead. The testimony produced was that of the mother of Harry B. Williams, who produced several letters from her son since the date on which he was supposed to have been drowned. Mrs. Williams stated that she did not learn the fact until long after Mr. McDonald had been appointed administrator. The deposition of Walter C. Williams, the father, was also produced. In this, the father stated that he knew of his own knowledge that his son had not been drowned as he had previously believed, but was alive and well. The stipulation of counsel for the father and mother was also produced admitting that the facts set forth in Mr. McDonald's petition were true.

After the taking of testimony, the court heard argument by Craig A. Marsh and immediately rendered an opinion granting his application and making an order that the letters of administration be set aside, and declared null and void.

The Standard Life and Accident Insurance Company, of Detroit, which company had previously paid the administration $1,500 on an insurance policy, now expect to procure the refunding of the money without further trouble.

* * * *

December 6th, Williams, his brother, Walter Gardon Williams, a young lawyer, and Frank Swackamer, of this city, sailed for Portland, Me., ostensibly on a hunting trip. While off the Rhode Island shore the next morning it was alleged that he was taken sick and fell into the sea. No trace of him could be secured after that. Just previous to that he had taken out several thousand dollars worth of insurance policies. The Prudential Life Insurance Company, of Newark, paid an industrial policy of $150, and the Standard Life Insurance Company, of Detroit, also paid one for $1,500. The insurance companies became suspicious that Williams was not dead, and put detectives on the case.

Detectives, it was claimed, found Williams working in Pierre, Neb., under an assumed name and secured his photograph. Soon after that a detective concealed himself in the office of Walter Gordon Williams and overheard a conversation between the lawyer and his father. The detective was unable to suppress a sneeze and he was discovered. An exciting scene, it is alleged, took place in the office, and a short time after that all those implicated in the affair left town. The next heard of the Williams, was that they were on their way into the Klondike gold fields.

A NATIONAL PROBLEM.

Important Question to Be Debated by Young People

Just what disposition the United States ought to make of the Philippine Islands will be decided Friday night at the debate between the Plainfield Law Debating Society and the North Plainfield High School, and representatives from each society will meet and hold a debate, taking that for their subject.

The North Plainfield debaters chosen are Fred Overton, Arthur Smith, Miss Katherine Dwight, Donald McGee, Frank Bach, Miss Emma Line, Miss Laura Osgood, Miss Maud Honeyman, Fred Emmel and Miss Rita Pond.

The other side will be represented by Charles Dolliver, Sanford Robinson, Douglass Drake, Edward Bellis, Harry Lönbarger, Fred Van Liew, Harry DeMeza, John VanWinkle, Chas. McCann and Wm. Nash. The judges are Prof. Wightman, Francis J. Blatz and S. St. J. McCutchen.

—Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has secured the services of Mr. Richardson, of New York, as typewriter and stenographer. Mr. Richardson is a court stenographer and conversant in all legal matters pertaining to court work.

TO STIR UP COLORED MEN

COLONEL MURRELL WILL GIVE A POLITICAL TALK.

Will Tell of the Republican Treatment of the Colored Men—Other Well-Known Speakers Will Also be Present

Friday night the Democrats will have their first and last mass meeting in the present campaign, but it is calculated to be a rousing one. It will be held in Reform Hall on West Second street.

There will be several speakers, among whom, as announced yesterday, will be Col. Wm. Morrell, the somewhat noted colored politician. He used to be associated with the G.O.P., but now he is fighting them bitterly and some people think effectively. He is a speaker who throws his whole soul into his talks, and those who attend the meeting can expect to hear an address that will be decidedly stirring. He will devote himself particularly to telling how little the Republicans have done for the colored people.

Former Senator Fred Marsh, of Elizabeth, and Hon. John B. Green will also speak on the issues of the campaign. A number of the county candidates are expected to be present and say a few words.

A special feature of the meeting will be a number of moving pictures thrown on the screen by the cinematograph.

LIBRARY BUSINESS.

Suggestions Offered to Directors by School Superintendent.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library was held last Tuesday with Messrs. Tyler, Cox, Tracy, Larrabee and Stillman present. A number of bills were ordered paid from the general fund and the Babcock fund. A letter was received from Superintendent Maxson, of the public schools, making some suggestions as to the use of the library by the public. The letter was read, received and referred to the library committee. Other matters referred to the same committee with favor were the application of Albert E. King for teachers' cards, binders for periodicals, perforating stamp for Babcock library books, appropriations for replacing worn out books and buying a few new ones, label holders for new stock and bulletin boards. The report of the librarian was read and ordered filed.

Funeral of Mrs. Green.

The funeral service of Mrs. Thomas B. Green were held Monday afternoon from her late residence on East Front street, and was largely attended. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, conducted the services and spoke conforting words.

He also spoke affectionately of the life of the departed. During the services vocal selections were given by Miss Hardenburg, Mrs. Asa Collier, E. E. Runyon and Charles L. Lewis. There were a great many floral tributes from friends. Interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

Maddon's Remains Brought Home.

The remains of William Maddon, who was killed Saturday night on the railroad near Cranford, were brought home yesterday and removed to the house in the "Eight Row." A service was held at the house yesterday and interment was in this city. Two of Maddon's children attended the Methodist church in Dunellen, and Rev. E. S. Jamison, of that church, officiate at the services.

An Aged Woman's Fall.

Mrs. Loomis, of Mailiu, N. Y., who has been visiting at the home of of J. E. Morse, of Franklin place, fell down the back stairs at Mr. Morse's house Sunday. Mrs. Loomis is over eighty years of age, and when she was picked up it was found that she was unconscious. One finger was broken and also dislocated. Dr. Hedges attended her, yesterday she was able to return to her home.

Still Alarm of Fire.

A still alarm of fire occurred yesterday at out 2 o'clock, caused by a bonfire built by some small boys near Westpal's grocery on West Fourth street. Chief Deane dispatched No. 2 hose wagon to the scene of the fire, but it was out before the apparatus arrived. There was no damage.

A Busy Scene.

Woodhull & Martin's stores presented a busy scene this morning at the arrival of the Christmas goods which the firm are receiving in large quantities. The goods began to arrive last night, and the clerks are kept busy unpacking and marking the goods.

Mrs. Mulford, of Chicago, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Baker, of West Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matthews, of Grove street, have returned from Philadelphia, where they have been attending the Peace Jubilee.

THROWN FROM TANDEM.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE ON A BICYCLE BUILT FOR TWO.

Perth Amboy Young Couple Encountered a Bad Man Near Netherwood —Butcher Wagon Appeared in Time.

It was a lucky thing for Charles Christian and his lady friend last night that a butcher's clerk drove by the Netherwood station, just about 7 o'clock, for in that way Christian escaped serious injury perhaps, and the loss of everything of value.

Christian lives in Perth Amboy and he and a lady friend rode over here Tuesday on a tandem to visit friends. They started for home about 6:45 o'clock and had ridden as far as Netherwood, when they were held up.

Christian sat on the rear seat with his companion on front. When they were wheeling past the Netherwood station a man was seen to step out from a clump of thick trees which are in front of the station and hurl something at the pair.

Christian and his companion both dodged the expected blow, but it was not aimed at them but at the front wheel of the tandem. The club lodged in the spokes and threw both riders, the tandem falling on top. Before Christian could struggle to his feet, the man was on top of him and had his fingers in his throat.

Christian was in such a position that he could do nothing to help himself. Just then he heard the wheels of an approaching wagon, and let out a loud yell. The highwayman heard it too and at the shout left his prey and ran.

All this occurred so rapidly that the lady did not have a chance to extricate herself. Both were badly frightened and the wheel was wrecked, but neither one of the wheelmen was hurt. The wagon proved to be a butcher's wagon, and the driver helped the two carry their wheel to the station where they took a train for home.

VOORHEES IS TO SPEAK

REPUBLICAN MASS MEETING IN MUSIC HALL TONIGHT.

He Will be Accompanied by the Rest of His Campaigners and Former Speaker Cross, Candidate for Senator.

Plainfield Republicans were among the first of New Jersey to push along the boom of Foster Voorhees for Governor, and tonight when that eminent gentleman, together with the rest of his campaigning party, appears in this city to speak in Music Hall the local G. O. P. will probably "hump" itself and give them a rousing reception. Of course, Voorhees is a favorite son in Plainfield in all that term applies in a political way, and his Republican friends will take every means to let him know how good they feel for him and for the battle he is fighting.

Besides the address by Voorhees, Congressman Fowler will also be present and discuss the issues of the campaign. Former Speaker Cross, Republican candidate for Senator, will be here as well to guage the afterthoughts of the local Republicans as to how they regard his candidacy after having their favorite, Mr. Ackerman, defeated.

Hon. Frank Scott, of Paterson, will be among the speakers in the Voorhees party.

The Republicans have decided to reserve seats for the ladies who care to attend the meeting.

The Union County Republican candidates for Senate and Assembly began yesterday a stumping tour of the county which they propose to continue until election day. They drove to New Providence and Summit, and today visit Springfield and Union. All the other townships and cities in the county will be visited on the following days, and personal conferences will be held with the voters.

There will be meetings held by the Republicans at Westfield and Cranford on Saturday night at which Judge Cross and Assemblymen Squire, Houston and Murray will made addresses.

The Republicans in Union will whoop things up in a lively fashion from now until election day.

Funeral of Mrs. Yetes.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Andrew Yates, of Nee street, were held Tuesday afternoon from the house at 2 o'clock and from the German Lutheran church at 2:30. The services were in charge of Rev. Eyme, pastor of the church, and he spoke comforting words concerning the departed. There were many floral tributes from friends and a large pillow from the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery and the pall-bearers were Augustus Feiring, Christopher Koller, John Becker, Fred Gray, Wm. Cortwright and Frank Scheiele.

Miss Berthe Clum, of Netherwood, who has been quite ill, is recovering.

MEIZ GAINED FAVOR WITH THE COURT.

Sneak Thief Received Sentence of Six Months in Jail.

WHY LENIENCY WAS SHOWN

HE EXPOSED A PLOT OF PRISONERS TO BREAK JAIL.

For This Reason Judge Vail Decided to Let Him Off as Easily as Possible—His Wife Was in Court When Sentence Was Pronounced—He Stole $125 From the Home of William Stanbery in Fanwood.

Elizabeth, N. J., November 2.—Paul Metz, the self-confessed sneak thief who entered William Stanbery's house in Fanwood early this fall and ransacked the house of money and valuable jewels, came up before Judge Vail this morning for sentence. It was expected that he would get off lightly, and it was no surprise when he was given only six months in the county jail and ordered to pay the costs of court. As Metz has already spent two months in confinement, the punishment is more severe than it appears at first sight.

Metz appeared at the Stanbery homestead one day two months ago in the guise of a piano tuner. No one was at home at the time except the servant, to whom Metz made his business known. The girl hesitated, but being assured that everything was all right, finally admitted him and went off about her work.

When Mr. and Mrs. Stanbery returned home, the piano tuner was gone and with him all the money and jewelry he could find which amounted to $125. Mr. Stanbery put detectives on the man's track, and a few days afterwards Metz was arrested in Benner's road house in Fanwood where he was trying to sell a piano.

Metz pleaded guilty when arraigned in court, and was remanded for sentence. During his confinement he became aware of a plot to break jail, in which Roesel, the murderer of Farmer Pitts, and Wilson, who was confined for obtaining money under false pretenses, were the principal movers. Metz confided the information to one of the keepers, and the attempt was nipped in the bud.

For this the Court yesterday reduced the sentence as much as possible, and now Metz will escape State prison. The complaining witness in the matter and his lawyer, ex-Judge W. R. Codington, were present at the passing of sentence, and so was the prisoner's wife.

TALLY-HO PARTY.

Wealthy People Passed Through Plainfield Yesterday Morning.

The arrival of a tally-ho and four at the City Hotel yesterday attracted considerable attention from local people, and while the party stopped in the city a great crowd gathered and watched proceedings with interest. In the party was H. McK. Twombley and wife, (nee Miss Vanderbilt,) and four friends from Madison, where Mr. Twombley has his country seat. They were on their way to Princeton, where they will spend a few days. They expect to return home Friday or Saturday. Previous to the start from here a piece of harness broke while driving through Park avenue, and this delayed the party for a short time. The course taken from here was through Park avenue to Metuchen.

Borough Registration.

Tuesday being the last day for registry there was considerable hustling in the borough. The registration this year is the largest for several years and there is every indication that the vote this year will be very large. In the First district there were fifteen names added to the list and four erasures, making a total registration of 665 as against 631 last year. In the Second district there were thirteen names added to that list, making the total 544. In 1897 there were only a few over 500 names registered in the Second district.

Corner Stone Laying.

The corner stone of the new Calvary Baptist church (colored) will be laid Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Several out-of-town speakers will be present, and the services will last until 10 o'clock at night, being continued in Reform Hall.

Many Amendments to be Considered.

Next Tuesday evening a very important meeting of the local branch of the United Brotherhood Carpenters and Joiners of America, will be held at which time fifty amendments to the by-laws and constitution will be considered.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

During the fall and winter months at the large, roomy houses in the country and the suburbs of the big cities, house parties are all the rage, and at these merry gatherings many a happy hour is spent which is remembered for long years after. Now that athletics and outdoor sports are indulged in to such an extent by both sexes there are no end of amusements to entertain the young people, and with bicycling, golf and long walks throughout the surrounding country, together with sleighing and skating during the winter, many pleasant hours are whiled away until night falls when dancing and all manner of gay entertainments are in order.

The proper amount of clothing to bring with one to an affair of this sort is what generally troubles the mind of the feminine visitor. A stylish tailor-made suit for travelling is indispensable, and one short skirt is a necessity. Then there must be a pretty evening gown, a becoming house dress and a dressing gown or lounging robe for the seclusion of one's own room. The proper amount of dainty lingerie is always included and shoes and slippers for the different occasions are also necessary.

At these gatherings many handsome creations of the dressmaker's art are first brought to view, but perhaps the most exquisite handiwork is seen in the lovely robes donned by the feminine portion of the gay party when they gather together in the afternoon in the room of one of the guests and gayly gossip and chatter over their cups of afternoon tea.

Light weight woolen goods, such as challie and fine cashmere, silk and other clinging materials which lend themselves to the graceful folds which are so desirable in gowns of this description are usually employed, while the colors are of the daintiest.

A lovely model, in a soft silk of a very delicate green tint, is made after the same fashion with the upper portion cut square in the neck and bordered with wide cream colored lace, which also forms epaulets over the shoulders and extends in stole like ends on either side of the front to the foot of the skirt. The back has a full Watteau pleat which merges into a short train. The flowing sleeves reaching just to the elbow are slashed part way and filled in with cream lace.

Another equally effective gown is of an artistic shade of blue cashmere trimmed with white silk and lace and worn over a petticoat of cream colored silk. This frock is made to fasten down the front and is belted in at the waistline with a jeweled ceinture of blue velvet. Soft jabots of lace adorn the upper portion of the garment, which has full elbow sleeves finished with lace ruffles. The skirt made with a short train opens in front over the silk petticoat and is elaborately adorned with lace ruffles, applied in festoons.

A beautiful tea gown fashioned by a swell couturiere, is carried out in rich old rose brocade, trimmed with real lace. This garment is made to blouse slightly at the waistline, where it is belted with a girdle of black velvet. The neck cut in a V in front has handsomely embroidered revers on both sides, and a high roll collar finishes the back of the neck, extending up above the ears. Lace ruffles adorn the full sleeves. The skirt hanging in rich, soft folds is unadorned save for two millinery folds of rose colored satin which finishes the foot of the skirt, one overlapping the other.

With gowns of this description slippers and hosiery of the daintiest style and color are worn, sometimes matching the robe, or if preferred of a contrasting color. A pair of rose colored, hand embroidered silk stockings, with satin slippers of the same shade accompanies the embroidered tea gown described above.

But aside from these gowns of comfort and ease, we must turn our thoughts to other things, and the gowns designed for church and visiting are so beautiful in material and make that they certainly deserve a few moments' notice. One decidedly chic and stylish church gown recently turned out by a swell dressmaker for a young and stately society bud is certainly worthy of mention. The material employed is a beautiful fawn colored satin faced cloth, combined with velvet of a darker shade.

The skirt patterned after the latest model is mounted over a gored foundation skirt of taffeta, made separately, and is adorned with bands of velvet, outlined with dark colored satin folds. Velvet bands also trim the tight-fitting corsage and the vest and collar are made of cream white Liberty satin, trimmed with shirred puffs of silk muslin. The close-fitting sleeves are finished at the top with a small puff. A picture hat of brown velvet to match the bands accompanies this gown, and is adorned with black ostrich feathers and soft folds of white Liberty satin.

Blue serge suit.

A stylish suit of cadet blue serge has the corsage made double breasted Eton style, rounded at the sides and back and pointed in front, and adorned with two rows of jewelled buttons. The tiny revers of embroidered satin adorn the top which opens in rather an odd fashion over a vest of cream colored silk with stock and tie of black satin. The lower part of the sleeve is tight fitting and the upper part is laid in folds. The hat to match is of cadet blue velvet, a dainty turban like affair with a jaunty black wing in the front.

Very old people shorten in stature as they increase in years.

NEW STYLES IN LINGERIE.

Muslin Petticoats Cut After the Patterns of the Latest Dress Skirts.

The woman has yet to be born who has not a fondness for dainty, fresh, beautiful lingerie, and it is therefore natural that this phase of fashion should interest and fascinate all womankind.

English nainsook is the fabric most in use for fine underwear.

The nightgown of the immediate future is gored and trained and most elaborately trimmed.

This season the short-waisted effect is much sought in night dresses, and laces and embroideries are inserted bayadere fashion.

The fichu is a feature of the newest night-dress, and is a most becoming part of it.

The chemise has again come into use. Formerly this garment was worn next to the skin under the corset, but it is now more frequently worn over the corset, doing duty as a corset cover and short skirt. The most highly approved design is rather short—falling just low enough to hide the drawers. Most of the newest models are made to draw in behind at the waist line with a ribbon, so that they fit the figure as snugly and smoothly as a fitted corset cover.

Drawers are by no means so wide as they were last season. Very few umbrella drawers are shown, this design having been greatly modified. They are narrower, and fit very snugly and plainly about the hips, having no gathers at all in front and on sides, and as few as possible in the back.

Both the very short and the long muslin petticoats, are cut after the newest dress-skirt patterns, and their fit is faultless. Their tops are sheath-shaped, and they fit back and front around the top without a gather or pleat or even so much as a pucker. It goes without saying that they flare decidedly at the bottom, and on the long petticoats three lace-edged graduated ruffles are made to fall over one another, and are set on an attached lace-edged flounce, which makes four fluffy ruffles about the feet.

While the matinee more properly belongs to neglige dress, the average woman thinks of it in connection with her lingerie.

The most useful one is the Geisha dressing sack illustrated. This is made of fine French flannel in delicate pinks and tans, and is lined with pale pink India silk. Another good model is a matinee of white albatross with a square, horizontally tucked yoke back and front. Heavy lace of the shade known as age yellow almost hides each tuck. The sleeves and skirt are tucked vertically, a style most becoming to stout figures. By the way, very desirable nightdresses for steamer or sleeping-car wear are made of albatross in all colors, and fine flannel gowns made after the most approved styles, except not quite so elaborate as to trimming, are considered desirable.

Spain's Ill Luck Due to an Opal.

Opals are coming into fashion again, but the old superstition as to the ill-luck attending them is not dead in Spain.

Spanish people believe that all the trials that have come to the reigning house are through the influence of a cursed opal ring.

One of the admirers of this beauty was Alfonso XII. of Spain. She thought he was going to marry her, but he did not, and she resolved on revenge. She sent him this magnificent ring.

The King showed it to his wife, Queen Mercedes, who was charmed with its beauty, and begged to keep it. Alfonso gave it to her readily, and she slipped it on her finger. From that moment she pined away, and in a few months died.

The ring fell from her dead hand, and the King gave it to his grandmother, Queen Christina, who died a few months later.

Next the ring was given to Alfonso's sister, the Infanta Maria del Pilar, who wore it but a few days before she died of a mysterious illness.

After this series of fatalities, the King determined to keep the ring himself, and he slipped it on his finger. From that moment his health commenced to fail, and in twenty-four hours he was dead. Physicians could never quite account for it, and the matter was hushed up.

Queen Christina, who is not in any wise superstitious, took possession of the ring after her husband's death, but the other members of the family begged her to destroy it. This she refused to do; but to prevent it from doing other damage she hung it about the neck of the patron saint, where it is to-day.

The Spaniards, however, are not satisfied yet. They credit this war with the United States to the ring.

Shamrock Photograph Frame.

To make this frame a piece of strawboard or stout cardboard is necessary which is cut into the shape of a shamrock. Cut oval shaped apertures in each section of the leaf and then cover each one with velvet, green being the most appropriate.

The covering is done by gluing the velvet on the wrong side, snipping pieces here and there out of the edges so that they may not make thick folds. Across the hole slit the velvet lengthways and across. Turn these edges in, straining them well over the board as you do so, and glue them into place. At the back of this glass is glued, and then the photograph or picture is placed behind it; glue brown paper over the back. This kind of frame is easily made and when hung against the wall is very effective.

The Art of Furnishing.

The housekeeper returning home with her activities directed temporarily towards house-cleaning interests will be wise to let some of the wisdom and knowledge she must have gathered through the much preaching on these matters of late years bear fruit. Her new intelligence applied to autumn renovating will be of great benefit to her family's health and comfort. It is true of modern furnishings that they aid or retard sanitary conditions accordingly as they are wisely or recklessly made use of. Rugs, hard-wood floors, steam, gas, and electric heating and lighting add to the ease with which a house may be kept clean, but after this good start conditions are often complicated by some other modern inventions. Much bric-a-brac, hangings, bad draperies, tufted furniture, and other details of this still in the separate scheme of furnishing materially retard the keeping-clean process. As renewals are needed in the reopening of the closed home, every purchase and alteration should be considered in the sanitary as well as the artistic light. It will be found that the two are almost always entirely consonant.

Handsome Fabrics.

Very handsome fabrics for stylish autumn tailor gowns are those of soft, beautiful finish—that is smooth, light surface is like velvet—manufactured in shades of Russian green, a red and dark blue, pale silver-blue, hues that are rich but also deep in tone; grayish-brown, a dark reddish plum shade, golden brown, tan, gray, and black. These elegant materials will be made of one fabric with handsome silk gimps and tailor buttons by way of trimming, or combined with silk, velvet, fine wools in fancy effects, or, richest of all, lustrous corded silks of a matching shade, with added garnitures of velvet on the waist portion. Among the most generally becoming colors of the season before us will be the damson dyes and a varied class of similar plum tints, like dahlia, petunia, etc.

A caterpillar in a month will devour six thousand times its own weight in food.

Handsome Street Gown.

It would be hard to enumerate half of the coat and jacket effects which the couturieres are showing. Jacket and coat gowns are extremely modish for fall and winter and are the safest models to choose for gowns that one wishes to wear without a wrap.

A chic costume is made of a tobacco brown rough cloth. The jacket is tight fitting slashed in front with the belt carried through the slashing and fastened in the center of the front. The jacket is lined throughout with satin. It is fastened slightly to one side of the front with fancy buttons and the revers and collar are faced with satin and embroidered in black and silver.

Use Both Hands.

Children should be taught to use both hands; they will find the knowledge useful in after life. Writers' cramp is a thing which can only be cured by rest; the man or woman who must sit down and write for eight or more hours a day, is bound to suffer sooner or later, unless unusually strong. We have muscular bands and nervous connections which are liable to be overstrained and worn out. If a wire used by a telegraph operator gets out of order, he sends his messages over another wire; if the owner of a few horses rides one till he can do no more work, he gives him a rest for a while.

Just so—if a man suffering from cramp in the hand and arm wants to get cured, he must rest. To think of effecting a cure by liniments is nonsense. Nature, and Nature alone, aided perhaps by bathing with cold water, which acts as a tonic, can restore a cramped or tired arm.

Why should not people who have a great deal of writing to do learn to write with both hands? Then, when one needs a rest, the other can go on duty. We shudder and pity a person if we see him using a knife or pair of scissors with the left hand, but we really ought to envy him and strive to do likewise, but at the same time not allow the right hand to get out of practice.

About Babies.

Garlic, salt, bread and steak are put into the cradle of a new-born baby in Holland.

Roumanian mothers tie red ribbons around the ankles of their children to preserve them from harm, whilst Welsh mothers put a pair of tongs or a knife in the cradle to ensure the safety of their children. This custom is also extant in some parts of Ireland.

In the Vosges, peasant children born at the new moon are supposed to have tongues better hung than others, while those born at the last quarter are supposed to have less tongue but better reasoning powers. A daughter born during the waning moon is always precocious.

At the birth of a child in Lower Brittany the neighboring women take it in charge, wash it, crack its joints, and rub its head with oil to solder the cranium bones. It is then wrapped in a light bundle, and its lips are anointed with brandy to make it a full Breton.

The Grecian mother, before putting her child in its cradle, turns three times around before the fire whilst singing her favorite song to ward off evil spirits.

The Turkish mother loads her child with amulets as soon as it is born, and a small bit of mud, steeped in hot water prepared by previous charms, is stuck on its forehead.

In Spain the infant's face is swept with a pine-tree bough to bring it good luck.

Queen Wilhelmina.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is a pretty girl with almost golden hair, blue eyes, an oval face, and a bright complexion. She is remarkable for her intelligent and frank expression. She is rather above the middle height, and has a pretty figure. On those occasions when she is seen in public it is always noticed how devoted she is to her mother, and how deferential she is to her, quite sinking the queen in the daughter in her relations towards her parent.

To Fatten a Scraggy Neck.

If there be a general absence of flesh on the body, careful dieting will do all that is required. As many as five meals a day may be indulged in; but they must be taken at regular hours, allowing sufficient time for digestion in between. Plenty of milk, milk-pudding, eggs, bread, cakes, sweet fruits, and all kinds of vegetables, meat well cooked, and fish should be partaken of till signs of improvement are visible; then care must be taken that one does not err in the other direction and become stout. When trying to put on flesh, avoid everything acid, take plenty of warm baths, and sleep and rest as much as possible.

But if it be only the neck and shoulders which are scraggy, and more flesh is not required or desirable on the rest of the body, a different method must be pursued. Cod-liver oil can be easily taken in a little cold water, with a pinch of salt afterwards to remove the taste. The neck and shoulders must be bathed in warm water before retiring for the night, and olive or sweet oil be well rubbed in. In the morning, after bathing, rub gently and in a circular direction for about ten minutes, followed by ten minutes' exercise with dumb-bells. Singing lessons always greatly improve the shape of the throat, and this has a great deal to do with breathing properly. Take a deep breath, and hold it as long as possible. Keep the neck always well and warmly covered.

Bag for Opera Glasses.

A pretty bag for opera glasses is made of cream colored satin, lined elaborately trimmed with lace. The bottom is made over a firm round piece of card-board, measuring five inches in diameter, and is covered inside and outside and seamed together at the edge. The satin for the sides and top is eighteen inches long and six inches deep.

The dainty design is worked on the lower part of the bag with silk and beads. Ten rings are sewn on the bag about an inch above the embroidery and pale pink satin ribbon is run through these both ways so that the ends will draw up the bag.

Women Are Growing.

Athletics have revolutionized woman's figure. They have increased the measurements of the ideal feminine form by inches. The absence of corsets has had something to do with the matter also, but not to the extent of athletics.

If the Venus of Milo were reduced to life-size she would measure:

Height, 5ft. 8¾in.
Weight, if a living woman, 12st. 2lb.
Neck, 13½in.
Waist, 31in.

Here is a description of the size and weight of what might be called an ideal type of modern girl. She is a young woman of the leisured class who is devoted to athletics, swimming and bicycling being the two branches of sport in which she is most interested. Her measurements are:

Weight, 11st. 6lb.
Neck, 14in.
Bust, 38in.
Waist, 27in.
Arm, 13in.

See how these measurements compare with the Milo and differ from the fashionable wasp-waisted figure of five years ago! Then the average woman prided herself on wearing a 12¼in. collar and a 20in. corset, "laced to meet" over a bust of 36in., and with an arm of 12in.

Grape Cure.

Every autumn revives the discussion of the therapeutic value of grapes, and discovers anew the grape-cure enthusiasts. It is satisfactory to know, at least, that the delicious fruit is certainly one of the most wholesome, even while its properties as a cure-all may be doubted. In the matter of a fruit diet, an authority asserts that one meal a day exclusively of good fruit is more effective than the same quantity taken with other food.

Lavender Fashionable.

In France the old-fashioned lavender has come back into favor. The plant itself used to be considered the emblem of affection, and it is certainly associated in our minds with sweetness and freshness. Many of the best Parisian flowers are scented with it, as well as sachets, while any number of bottles of the perfume are being sold.

The use this past season by ladies of men's weight foot gear has met with great favor. The women who have long held the belief that their feet were too tender for any but kid gloves shoes have found that the stout soles and uppers, made on generous lasts, were at once the best protection and the most comfortable wear.

Dressy Silk Blouse.

In spite of the edict which has gone forth declaring tight bodices to be the proper attire this fall and winter, many handsome blouse waists are still shown for evening and dressy wear, and it is safe to predict that this becoming style of garment will remain in favor with a large majority of the feminine world.

A smart bodice in Cuban red silk is made with a tight fitting back, the material in the front gathered on to a

V-shaped yoke which is trimmed across both ways with straps of black velvet ribbon, with appliques of lace arranged inside the squares thus formed. The sleeves are trimmed in a similar manner and are finished with puffs of silk at the top.

Fancy Collars.

A pretty finish to the neck of a dress is at all times desirable, the plain linen collars being only suitable for morning or business wear. Cravats are made in silk, silk muslin, lace, and chiffon, and the foundation of each is a plain band, a well fitting linen collar being useful for this purpose.

White silk is employed for a dainty neck finishing. The material is slightly fulled on the band and is edged top and bottom with a narrow ruche of chiffon, which also trims the bow in front which is strapped with a band of white ribbon. Another collar has the band covered with pale pink tucked silk. The bows and long ends are finished with tucks and fine lace.

Bed Candlesticks.

A particularly acceptable present after a visit to a country house or to a bridal pair who will possess an out-of-town residence is a set of bed-candlesticks. These in silver pewter or old brass are sure to be found on the landing of the staircase duly set out on a table, copying the English fashion. Gas, oil lamps, and electric lights cannot banish the bed-candle, whose lighting by a merry house party in an old English castle hall has been made the subject of a fine picture.

Cheese Sandwiches.

Delicious cheese sandwiches may be made by cooking in a double boiler half a pound of grated cheese with half a cup of cream or milk, a tiny pinch of mustard, and a little salt. Thicken with a teaspoonful of flour, stir thoroughly, cook, and just before removing from the fire, add a well-beaten egg. Have ready some thin slices of toasted bread or some crackers, and spread. These sandwiches must be eaten while hot.

Mrs. Timkins was taking her son to school for the first time, and after impressing the school-master with the necessity of his having a thorough good education, finished up by saying: "And be sure he learns Latin."

"But, my dear madam," said the school-master, "Latin is a dead language."

"All right," said Mrs. Timkins; "he'll want it. He's going to be an undertaker."

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Dame Fashion has decreed that the hat worn "off the face" will be the correct thing in headgear for dressy wear this fall and winter, and that this mandate will be obeyed by that portion of fair femininity who wishes to be strictly up-to-date in all things pertaining to the toilette, goes without saying. Not, however, without decidedly detrimental results to the complexion. Youth and beauty and a certain piquancy of expression are necessary to set off these fetching little toques, and if the girl not possessed of these attributes will still insist upon adopting the style, we may expect to see some queer sights during the coming season.

As those toques, or properly speaking toquets, set well back on the head elaborate coiffures are necessary and the becoming pompadour will have a new lease of life.

Velvet is extensively employed in millinery this autumn and ostrich feathers, the longer and fluffier the better form the chief adornment. Jet is also used in profusion, the pins with large fancy jet knobs at the top being very fashionable. Paradise, pheasants and owl feathers are greatly in demand, turbans made entirely of breasts of birds being seen in great variety, while silk, lace, fancy aigrettes and even fur are seen on many of the newest models.

Another pretty way to trim these smart little hats is with the wired velvet and pretty bowknots of velvet and satin. These have a very frail appearance, but indeed are wired in such a strong manner that they can withstand the strongest wind storm.

Castor color is a popular shade in millinery this autumn and makes up charmingly in velvet or felt. Royal blue, all the purple tints and the evening wear amethyst blue and many delicate shades are also extensively employed. Black, especially when combined with white is much in evidence, a lovely model, made with a full crown of black velvet, covered with applied lace, being trimmed with white ostrich feathers.

After the all-velvet models, hats of pleated chenille and a sort of satin covered straw come next in favor, and as they need very little adornment are decidedly popular with the amateur milliner, a couple of handsome plumes, with a dashing bow of velvet caught with a jeweled or rhinestone buckle making a dainty and fashionable headcovering.

Many different names are applied to these turbans, but as each one is usually built to suit the individual style and beauty of each patron, there can be no distinguishing title to bestow upon them.

The stiff hats displayed at the openings, intended for traveling or walking gowns are bewildering in their array. They come in all shapes and colors and have a chic appearance all their own. The Alpine model with the brim a little wider and broader than those of former seasons, is popular. And then we have the English walking hat slightly different in shape from last year's model, and for cycling there is the low felt hat with narrow brim and the larger campaign, "Rough Rider" and Dewey hats, all of which are high in favor.

Although the separate waist has been relegated to the background time and time again it still holds a very prominent place in my lady's wardrobe, and the large establishments have set apart a separate department for the display of these lovely confections at all the openings, and it is safe to say that fair womankind will not soon relinquish so handy and becoming a fashion.

As an example of opening a very dainty blouse bodice was composed of checked velvet in tones of green and brown, and trimmed with embroidered green velvet. The blouse made rather plain fastened slightly to the left side with jeweled buttons and opened at the top with narrow velvet revers over a yoke of cream colored peau de soie, with stock collar of same edged with narrow velvet. Embroidered velvet finished the top of the close fitting sleeves and shoulders while the belt was of green velvet to match the revers. An attractive hat of green velvet, adorned with loops of ribbons and fluffy black plumes accompanied this pretty waist.

Taffeta still holds its own for the making of separate waists and a decidedly handsome model worthy of mention was made of royal blue taffeta, tucked in groups of six with about two inches between each group. In front the fabric was arranged to have a pointed effect in the center, where it is trimmed with a band of embroidered taffeta, these bands also adorning either side of the bodice. Embroidered taffeta, gathered on, gave a full appearance to the top of the close fitting sleeves. Girdle and collar of black velvet, with trailing blue toquet of black velvet, with two black ostrich plumes caught in the center with a jeweled buckle gave the finishing touch to this stylish waist.

Cuban red silk composed another handsome waist, which was tucked and plaited and adorned with bands of silk embroidery. The simulated yoke and vest was simply tucked at even distances, while the remainder of the material laid in tiny lengthwise folds, was elaborately intersected with bands of embroidery. Epaulets edged with embroidery capped the shoulders, and the sleeves which moulded the arm had a slight puff at the top, finished with tucks and embroidery. A dainty capote of Cuban red velvet, adorned with ribbon and feather bands and a dark rhinestone buckle directly in front almost resting on the hair.

OAK WOOD GETTING SCARCE.

Danger Apprehended of Using Up the Visible Supply.

No one who is at all familiar with existing conditions in the lumber trade can fail to note that there is already considerable complaint of a dearth of desirable oak. Both in quartered and plain stock fairly good lots of dry oak are notably scarce. The leading jobbers have had their buyers out for months picking up anything good they could find, and the result is that a very large proportion of the oak on sticks has already passed into second hands and is held by the present owners for distribution to consumers. Mill men in the south are cutting it all the time, but they do not have to wait until it is dry, or even partly dry, before selling. If they choose to do so, they can usually negotiate for it in advance of the sawing, and on terms that a few years ago would have been regarded as extremely liberal. Oak is, perhaps, the most readily salable of any saw mill product, which fact indicates that it is now, and is believed likely to be hereafter, relatively a scarce article.

While there is no occasion for alarm as to the present adequacy of the oak supply, it is a question if the time has not come when serious consideration should be given to the possibility, not to say probability, that in the not distant future oak may become one of the scarce woods.

It is the conviction of those who have given the closest study to oak that its present market value is based upon an incorrect idea of what is left, and that we shall wake up some morning to find that we have sold almost for a song the most valuable of our timber possessions. Oak, except in the finest grades of quartered stock, is still a cheap wood. It is not too cheap for a variety that is in universal demand and in only limited supply?—St. Louis Lumberman.

THE TREES OF PARIS.

Some of the Horse-Chestnuts Bloom Twice a Year.

Paris is probably the only city in the world which has trees that bloom twice a year habitually. These are the horse chestnuts. There are 17,000 of them planted in the squares along the boulevards, and 26,000 buttonwoods. The men in Paris are numbered, just like the people, the cabs, the animals, the lamposts and the matches. These horse chestnuts have only been doing this trick for about five years, and only some of them have made a practice of it. These die, or apparently die, in the latter part of July, and all the leaves fall off. A month or so afterward they all come out into flower again and little green leaves shoot forth continually until they are nipped by the first frost. There is a reason for this, and the scientists worked over the matter for a long time to be able to explain it. Briefly and unscientifically, the trees lose their leaves because they are attacked by a little fungus which is blown upon them by the wind; then, being still full of sap, they start to put forth leaves all over again. —New York Sun.

A Piano to be Played A-Bed.

A new device to cheer the loneliness of convalescence or the dreariness of chronic sickness is the piano for invalids.

On each side of the bed are the frames that support a small upright piano. Adjustments are provided which will secure the piano in any position desired. The keyboard is inclined so that the keys may be reached easily by the sick person.

Of course such a piano is too expensive for the average invalid or for a brief illness. But it is proposed that they be hired out at moderate cost by music firms in cases of temporary sickness and that private sanitariums be provided with them.—New York Journal.

Sixteen thousand dollars is the record price paid for a cablegram, that price having been paid for a message sent by Mr. Hemiker Heaton to Australia in behalf of the British Parliament. Reuter's account of the murder Deeming's trial, 4,000 words, cost $8,000. An 1,800-word dispatch from London to Argentina cost $7,500. The most expensive private message so far is that sent by the King of Italy to the Duke of Abruzzi at Rio Janeiro, informing him of the death of his father, the late Duke of Aosta, which cost $2,670.—Electrical Magazine.

ARMOUR TRIED TO TIP A BARON.

And Really found One Person in Europe Who Refused to Accept It.

P. D. Armour generally spends his summer vacation at Carlsbad, Germany. Baron Kissengen, one of the richest noblemen in Germany and a great lover of horses, was at the springs at the time of the Chicago millionaire's visit one summer. Near Carlsbad, the baron kept half a hundred magnificent horses. Mr. Armour, says the New York Herald, with an American friend, went out to visit the stable. A custodian to whom they applied granted permission.

"Can you give us some one to show the horses?" asked Mr. Armour. The custodian looked about. Near one of the stalls stood a plain-looking man, and the custodian said: "I think he will show you the horses."

The plain-looking man did show them, and did it well. He knew the horses by name, their pedigrees, and how to tell all about them. It happened that Mr. Armour always carries in his coat pocket when in Europe a few rolls of silver coins, which he distributes among people who are good to him. So when it was all over he fished out about a half pint of coins and tendered them to the plain-looking man. The latter, with an amused sort of smile, declined, but waved the American to the stable boys, as people who commonly made small objections to such favors.

"I am Baron Kissengen," said the plain-looking man simply, but graciously. "I am glad to know you," said Armour. "Not only because you have the finest lot of horses I have seen in the country, but because you are the first person I have found in this country who has refused to take a tip."

HE MET HIS WATERLOO.

"Billy" Pinkerton Found a Denver Pickpocket Too Slick for Him.

William Pinkerton, whom the world knows as "Billy" and has supposed the real modern pVidocq, has fallen from his pedestal. The fall was occasioned by an unknown pickpocket who, in Denver, the other day relieved Mr. Pinkerton's inside coat pocket of $250. Mr. Pinkerton's purpose in going to Denver was to advise the local police how to best protect people from pickpockets during a carnival that was in progress. The day following his arrival there was a parade, and Mr. Pinkerton undertook the role of being an object lesson of his method of foiling pickpocket designs.

He moved about among the people who lined the streets and kept a sharp outlook for the light fingered folk who take the chance that in stealing another man's pocket book, trash, Just how it happened, no one, not even Mr. Pinkerton, knows, but when the Chicago detective king reached his hotel he found himself minus the $250, that had been in his possession when he began his day's work in Denver.

This is the first time, so far as criminal records show, that a man who has won international reputation as a chief catcher was ever made the victim of a thief whose business was looking for just such a criminal. Mr. Pinkerton gave no further lessons to the Denver police, but returned to Chicago, where the thieves know and fear him.

MANUFACTURE OF HAIR PINS.

The Greatest Care Required in Putting on the Enamel.

For ages the English and French controlled the manufacture of hair pins, and it is only within the last twenty years that the goods have been produced in other countries to any extent. The pins are a delicate, a delicate and intricate character, as the price at which the pins are sold necessitates the cheapest and most rapid process, which can only be secured by automatic machines. The wire is made expressly for the purpose and put up in large coils, which are slowly fed in a clamp and so carried to the machine while being straightened. This machine cuts, bends, and by a delicate instantaneous process sharpens the point. Running at full speed it will turn out 120 hair pins every minute. To consume this amount of wire keeps the machine going day and night. The difficult part of the work is in the enameling, which is done by dipping the pins in a preparation and baking in an oven. It is here that the most constant and careful attention is required, as the pins must be absolutely even in and the enamel have a perfect polish. The slightest particle of dust causes imperfections and roughness.—Pearson's Weekly.

ROSA BONHEUR'S ADMIRERS.

The bon camaraderie which exists among French artists is well known, but the esteem in which they hold the veteran Rosa Bonheur amounts almost to enthusiasm. The aged lady was expected at the chateau of By, near Melun, to superintend the hanging of her four latest pastels. All the artists in Paris were there to receive her, and she was led along the corridor by the most distinguished of them, as if she had been a Princess of the Blood Royal.

Of her four pictures, two were of stags—one standing in deep water, the other bathing in the early rays of the rising sun. Another picture is of a bison in the snow. The fourth, which is generally considered the finest of all, shows a shepherd cooking his supper in a shed, surrounded by his flock. The wool of the sheep is executed with marvelous technical skill. A sheep dog guards his charge.—Philadelphia Ledger.

At School.

"Where was Magna Charta signed?" asked a teacher.

Fat Men's Clubs.

There is sympathy in fat. It has a sympathy which those superabundantly gifted in the way of adipose do not receive from those of whom Julius Caesar called the "lean and hungry," but which is bestowed in proportion to the necessity, by all and sundry who are of the more generous and voluminous proportions, while it overflows, even as the milk of human kindness, from those approaching the Falstaffian size.

Nearly everywhere these more or less unwieldy mortals have formed themselves into clubs for common enjoyment, and it may be for mutual sympathy, and the comparing of notes as to their increase in size, for we may be sure, that though the outside world is very infrequently permitted to penetrate into the arcana of these meeting places, a scale is one of the chief articles of furniture.

Paris has a Fat Man's Club, which is called "Les Cent Kilos," a title which sufficiently designates the object of the institution. No one is admitted until he can tip the scale at that very respectable weight.

Vienna, too, has a Fat Man's Club. So has New York, and so, indeed, have several other cities.

At times, like the clown cricketers, the members of these various clubs show their agility and exhibit their bonhomie by festivities, in which they permit their friends to participate. Such an exhibition, indeed, there has been of the Paris Fat Man's Club, in which these good people indulge in such "innocent delights" as dancing and a walking match.

Men as Careless as Women.

There seems to be an idea that the average woman is the individual who persistently and wilfully outrages her digestion; but there is much evidence in favor of equal carelessness on the part of men. At a railroad lunch-counter last Sunday evening several middle-aged, well-dressed, intelligent-looking men, evidently prosperous business men en route to New York for the week's work, were noticed satisfying their appetites in what seemed a most reprehensible manner. One made his meal entirely on a full quarter of a large apple pie, taking as second course a cream cake. This man looked like a scholar, and it was noticed that two books which he put down beside him while he ate were of a character that required close and hard reading. Another ate a sandwich and took as dessert something that is called "fried pie" and is an abominable edible peculiar to New England lunch-counters. The others of the set behaved equal absurdities upon pastry and cake, to the exclusion of the simpler food that was to be had. All ate with the keenest relish, indicating that the diet they enjoyed and presumably took regularly was before them.

Why the Sky Is Blue.

Did it ever strike you to inquire why the cloudless depths of sky above us are so delicately blue? It isn't that the gas we call air is in itself blue, for for as we know, it is quite transparent and absolutely colourless. No; the blue comes from reflected light.

Air is never pure; you couldn't live in it if it were. Countless millions of tiny particles, chiefly of water, are always suspended in it, and these are of a fine passage of light. Each particle has a double reflection—one internal, the other external—and so the reflected rays suffer the usual result of what is called "interference," and show colour.

You will notice that the sky appears much bluer if you look straight up than if you look across towards the horizon. The reason is that, in the first instance, you are naturally looking through a much thinner layer of air than in the second.

If there were no air, and consequently no watery vapour, and nothing to interfere with the free passage of light, even at mid-day the sky above would look perfectly black, and all the stars plainer than they do now at midnight.

Early Marriages.

The farther south one goes, the earlier one finds marriages take place. A census was taken lately in Algeria, and it was found that the youngest Arab married man was twelve years old, and that there were very many boys who were married at thirteen and fourteen, while some at fifteen years of age had several wives. There is a youthful Algerian husband of fifteen, and a divorced husband of the same age. Girls are still more precocious, and are sometimes married when only eleven years old, though twelve is the more usual age. There are 158 widows of fifteen, and 1,176 divorces of the same age.

Spiced Herb Vinegar.

This is a valuable addition to sauces and salads, and a few drops added to a mince or hash will give it a piquant flavour. Put into a clean dry bottle one tablespoonful of finely-chopped chervil; one tablespoonful of tarragon; also chopped eschalot, minced; one dozen peppercorns; a salt-spoonful of celery-seed, and one clove of garlic; pour over the herbs and spices half a pint of the best French vinegar; cork the bottle tightly and seal it with wax. In a week or ten days strain the vinegar through muslin into another bottle. It should be shaken two or three times while the herbs are being steeped in it.

If a cloth is wetted in vinegar and then wrung out as dry as possible with the hands and wrapped round cheese, and then the whole put in a large paper bag and kept in a cool place, the cheese will retain the moisture and freshness of a new-cut cheese, and will not mould.

Advice to Mothers.

Children's teeth should be cleaned from the first. A corner of a silk handkerchief dipped in water with a little borax in it should be wiped over the gums after each meal. From eighteen months and upwards they should be cleaned daily, at first in the same way, and afterwards with a soft badger's-hair brush. After two years, with a dentifrice, such as prepared chalk, may be used. When this is done the teeth will not fall out early, and the child will be saved from such deformity as often happens on the arrival of the second teeth before the jaw is sufficiently formed to receive them. The mouth becomes overcrowded when this happens, and early visits to the dentist become necessary.

In fever a wineglassful of the following may be given from time to time to quench thirst.

Citrate of potash.....30 grains
Rice-water .....1 pint.

Tonics should not be given to a child whose bowels are disordered, as they are not likely to be then of any service, absorption being too imperfect. Some tonics, notably iron, may even act as irritants, and increase the mischief in these cases; they are medicines for convalescence, when they will increase the appetite, the force of the pulse, and the muscular strength.

To prevent needles from rusting in the summer-outing housewife, they should be thrust through a bit of oiled silk as they are put into the flannel leaves.

Cleaning Made Easy.

An apparatus for cleaning horses by machinery has been invented.

The cause of this revolution in the art of horse-cleaning, rubbing-down, and currying, all in one, is a simple contrivance, a movable shaft at one end of which is a circular brush composed of fairly stiff bristles. The brush, which is driven by steam, revolves many hundred times a minute, and if guided by the cleaner. Two of these cleaners operating with the brushes can on one animal accomplish more in one minute than four men with the old brush and curry comb in twenty minutes.

In exactly forty seconds the animal can be turned out as clean as a new pin, not a speck of dirt to be discovered on his fine sleek coat. No sooner does the brush touch the body of the horse than the dead hair and dirt fly in all directions. At first the horse starts nervously at the noise of the revolving shafts, but the instant he feels the touch of the brush he gives every indication of pleasure.

The harder the pressure on the brush the harder it works in the rubbing, of course, and when the sensation becomes uncomfortable the horse moves away. In this way the cleaners are easily informed how hard a rubbing the animal will stand.

Starch For Collars and Cuffs.

The following recipe is a very valuable one, being learned from a French laundress whose collars and cuffs were remarkable for the beautiful ivory gloss her skilled treatment imparted to them. Take two ounces of the best white starch, and pour over it, without stirring, half a pint of cold water. Allow this to stand for half an hour or so, as much borax as will lie heaped up on a shilling in a teacup of boiling water. When the borax mixture is cold, add it to the starch. Pour into the starch one tablespoonful of turpentine, and mix the whole carefully with the hand. On no account must any undissolved borax be put in the starch, or it will make shiny patches on the linen. This quantity is enough for four pairs of cuffs and seven collars. A little borax water should be kept in readiness for adding to the starch should it become too thick.

A PARIS SUGGESTION.

Separate Waists.

Separate waists made up in rich and handsome materials still retain their popularity for dressy wear and it is hard to prognosticate when this almost indispensable article of feminine attire will be entirely abandoned. For the woman with a slim figure it is positively as much one as with one handsome skirt, waist and blouses may be donned suitable for almost any occasion.

To Prepare Parchment for Painting.

Make a firm pad with blotting, and having dipped it in finely powdered white pumice stone, rub it over the parchment. If water colors be mixed with alum water, and used upon parchment prepared in this manner, they will not sink.

EVOLUTION OF SOUTHERN WOMEN.

They Have Gained a Self-Reliance Never Dreamed of Before the War.

In 1860 there were only about half a million females in the United States engaged in gainful pursuits, almost all of whom were women and girls at work in the factories in the New England States. Few or none of them could have been found south of Mason and Dixon's line. In the year of grace, 1897, there are five million wage-earning women in our country, of whom the South has its full proportion. This evolution had its inception when the war closed and the South lay prostrate and impoverished, its fertile fields a desert waste, its four millions of slaves liberated, its one million of splendid men dead or disabled, and its fair women and their children half naked and half starved. These women had been reared in the lap of luxury and were distressingly helpless, languid and dependent. Thousands of these were left self-dependent, with young children to raise and educate. Many were much unfitted for the doing men's work, they had to do it, and did it well. The necessity that seemed a calamity has proved a blessing. The evolution or development through which the Southern women have passed has resulted in the most remarkable growth, and in no way impaired their attractiveness. They are stronger physically and mentally. They are vastly more self-reliant, and more independent of men. They realize their superiority to such men as are thriftless, self-indulgent, or dissipated, and look upon them with pity or contempt. They have discovered in themselves possibilities of which they never dreamed.—Godey's Magazine.

PAPER MATCHES.

A New Process that Makes Them Cheaper and Lighter for Exportation.

It is predicted that paper is the coming panacea for many ills. One prospect of the wooden match industry being appreciably affected by a new process for manufacturing matches of paper is held to be extremely probable, particularly as the best wood for this purpose is constantly growing scarcer and more costly. The new matches are considerably cheaper than the wooden product, and weigh much less, which counts for much in exportation. The paper matches consist of paper rolled together on the bias. The paper is rather strong and porous, and, when immersed in a solution of wax, stearine and similar substances, sticks well together, and burns with a bright smokeless and odorless flame. Strips one half inch in width are first drawn through the combustible mass, and then turned by machinery into long, thin tubes, pieces of the ordinary length of wood or wax matches are then cut automatically by the machine. When the sticks are cut to size they are dipped into phosphorous, also by machinery, and the dried head easily ignites by friction on any surface.—New York Journal.

SHOES FOR HUNTING DOGS.

This Practical Method Prevents Their Having Sore Feet.

They do many strange things in Nebraska, but the latest and strangest is putting shoes on bird-dogs. Col. Robert Coffin, a veteran sportsman of Randolph, is responsible for the innovation. Now hundreds of dogs in all parts of the State have been trained to wear shoes in the field while hunting prairie chickens.

A little consideration will make clear the practical advantages of having a hunter that must travel dozens of miles over stubble or virgin prairie in a day's pursuit of game shod with something more durable than what nature has provided. Heretofore it has been almost impossible to hunt with the same dogs more than two consecutive days. Their feet would become too sore.

The way Col. Coffin overcame this difficulty was to fit his dogs with canvas shoes that covered the feet closely and were tied snugly at the ankles. Great difficulty was found in teaching the dogs to wear the shoes and hunt. Now all old hunters in Nebraska equip their dogs with these canvas shoes.—New York World.

Not So Innocent as He Seemed.

Two venerable clergymen who were traveling in the elevated train in this city the other day noticed a beautiful little boy, with the typical angelic face, seated opposite them with his mother. "Ah, me!" exclaimed one of them, "will we ever be as pure and innocent in the next world as that dear little boy opposite?" His companion was just going to make a suitable reply, when the dear little boy broke out as follows, in a voice that could be heard all through the car: "Ma, I had a pistol, I'd like to shoot those two old crows across the aisle!"

President Kruger's Widow.

President Kruger's new famous decision in the case of a dispute between two sons as to the division of their father's property—it having been willed equally between them—has gained the Boer President the title of the "South African Solomon." President Kruger said to the eldest son: "You are the eldest, are you not?" "Yes," was the answer. "So you shall divide the property." This pleased the elder immensely "You are the continental Kruger," said to the other, "so you shall have first choice."

Mother—"Johny, I see your little brother has the smallest apple. Did you give him his choice as I suggested?" Johny—"Yes'm. I told him he could have his choice, the little one or none, and he took the little one."—Tit-Bits.

BOILING WATER WITHOUT FIRE.

It Can Be Done by Stirring With a Paddle For Five Hours.

It is possible to make a pail of water boil without putting it on the fire and without applying external heat to it in any way. In fact, you can make a pail of water boil by simply stirring it with a wooden paddle. The feat was recently performed in the physical laboratory of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., and any one may do it with a little trouble and perseverance. All you have to do is to place your water in a pail—it may be ice water if necessary—and stir it with a wooden paddle. If you keep at it long enough it will certainly boil. Five hours of constant and rapid stirring are sufficient to perform the feat successfully. The water will, after a time, grow warm, and then it will grow hot—so hot, in fact, that you cannot hold your hand in it, and finally it will boil. Professor Ames of Johns Hopkins annually illustrates some of the phenomena of heat by having one of his students perform this trick in front of his class. It is a tiresome job, but it is perfectly feasible.

The point which Professor Ames wishes to illustrate is what is known as the mechanical equivalent of heat. It requires just so many pounds of work to develop a given quantity of heat. By turning the paddle in the water at a regular speed it is possible to find out just how much work is required to raise the temperature of the water so many degrees. This measurement so far made, and, in fact, the one which is accepted as the standard of the world, is that which was measured in Johns Hopkins College.

Heat is developed in almost any substance which is subjected to continuous or very violent action. It is an old trick for a blacksmith to forge without a fire. Long continued and violent hammering on two pieces of wire will heat them to such an extent that they can be welded together. A lead bullet, if shot directly at a stone wall, will develop heat enough by the contact to melt and fall to the ground a molten mass. There are many other occasions wherein this mechanical development of heat becomes manifest. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

STUMP PENCILS ARE MASCOTS.

Members of Stock Exchange Superstitious About Lead Sticks.

"Talking of hoodoos and mascots," said a member of the stock exchange, "the boys on the floor of the exchange are as suspicious as a lot of sailors. If you don't believe it you look at the lead pencils they are using the next time you are in the building.

"You won't find a man using a long lead pencil, for why? Because a long pencil is a 'hoodoo' of the worst kind. They always cut a new pencil in half before they sharpen it. Some of these pencils acquire the reputation of being lucky.

"Less than a week ago I came down without my pencil, which, by the way, is a lucky one—every memorandum made with that pencil results in a profit for me—and I borrowed one from a friend on the floor. He handed me a stump about an inch long, and said: 'You can use that; it's a lucky pencil.'

"Sure enough, I made two deals in the morning, and each netted me a handsome profit.

"I was about to make a memorandum of some stock I had bought when my friend approached and said:

"'Here, take this pencil and let me have mine again. I've lost on every deal since I loaned it to you.'

"Sure enough, I was on that deal and the luck went back to the owner of the pencil.

"Some of the boys have little lucky pencils not much over an inch long, and they guard them as they would their lives.

"If you, through carelessness or accident, cause them to break the lead point they lose whatever regard they have for you and forever afterward regard you as inimical. Some of them wouldn't take $5 for a little piece of pencil worth considerably less than a cent."—New York Press.

A Woman of Faculty.

"It was the morning after the battle of Lexington that Mrs. Pond, the wife of Colonel Pond of West Dedham, was greatly astonished at seeing a company of about one hundred men stop in front of her house. She soon discovered that they were totally exhausted, having marched all night, and that on empty stomachs.

"They were in great haste for something to eat, but Mrs. Pond, not having on hand them, was totally unprepared. With a woman's wit, however, she rose to meet the emergency. With the aid of a woman and a hired man she filled an enormous kettle full of water and put it over the fire to boil, so that she might make some hasty pudding.

"There was a store not far off, and here some of the soldiers helped themselves to earthen dishes and pewter spoons, while others milked Mrs. Pond's ten cows, and still others stirred the pudding. The two servants meanwhile collected all the milk available around the neighborhood. Within an hour the meal was served, and the soldiers, refreshed and cheered, marched on to their destination."

Take Life Quietly.

The life of a girl in this latter end of the nineteenth century differs considerably from her predecessors of a past age. She enjoys a liberty, both social and domestic, wholly undreamt of by her grandparents, while in a thousand and one ways she possesses an advantage over even her mother's generation.

But the alterations in girl life have changed the home life too, and though the first in many ways is a good thing, the latter is wholly to be deplored. The characteristics of the day have bred the fever of unrest, in the train of which the demon of discontent has entered into the hallowed confines of the home, rendering it to the up-to-date daughter a veritable prison.

Hurry and excitement are the dominant features that characterize the girl of the period; she never has time for anything—little duties are forgotten, little brothers and sisters overlooked, while her mother is worried to death by her nervous, irritable temper. She cannot take life quietly, but rushes up and down stairs as if pursued by a legion of horrors, and knocks at the door of existence with such force enough to rouse the rest. Everything belonging to her is chaotic, and her memory is so treacherous that other people are continually blamed for both her omissions and commissions. In short, she is simply a nervous bundle of nerves, and will speedily develop into a fretful woman, dreaded by society at large, and a source of trial to those belonging to her.

My dear girls, will you not take a quiet look and think whether such is likely to be your fate? Perhaps as yet you cannot realize the necessity for taking life quietly and easily, but, believe me, unless you do, the day will surely come when you would willingly sacrifice anything to secure a "real rest." You cannot have and be everything, and all the rush and hurry in the world will only hinder you from achieving even the lowliest ambition.

Try and be content to set aside some of those countless engagements that occupy such a large portion of your time, and go into the nursery and study the beauties of child-life; go into the kitchen and learn the ropes of domesticity and endeavor to fit you for the sacred office of wife; and then, when you emerge from girlhood to woman's estate, you will be fitted to guide the mechanism of a home of your whom self and your husband; for her life and actions. He wants to come home to the loving ministrations of a pair of unselfish hands, who will have his slippers warmed and a cosy chair waiting in readiness for him, while her ears are open to listen to the confidences of the day; and her lips, though sealed as to her own domestic worries, will utter loving, sympathising words to smooth away all the jarring elements of business.

Such is what every man expects to find in his own home, and the girl who would fit herself for the position of wife and mother, must escape from the hurry and excitement of the age, and by taking things quietly, conquer, and subjugate self.

New Long Cloaks.

The new long dust-cloaks and redingotes—riding-coats being their original name—are either elaborate or of useful character. For instance, those of figured silk, lined with plain silk, repeating one of the colors on the patterned fabric, and decorated with lace and ribbon, are in one sense more for ornament than use, though they serve to protect the dress beneath. Oftener than not the gown that is thus covered is not destined for view, and is only an excuse for wearing the over-garment, which is, indeed, the piece de resistance of the toilet. The more useful dust cloaks of mohair or even of tussore, in the peculiar creamy brown of the material, trimmed with the popular cloaking lace of the season, are pretty enough to satisfy the most exacting; and the surface of either of these materials is eminently calculated to resist dust. The autumn models are cut with fitted princesse backs and semi-fitting fronts, some of which fasten from throat to skirt hem, others in true redingote fashion, being open to show a portion of the dress beneath.

Handy Steamer Bag.

A steamer bag which was much appreciated by its recipient last summer is simply a rather deep bag of art denim provided with double shirred ends. A embroidered scroll across one side held its designation "For the deck," and when received it held a little Japanese hot-box with a bundle of fusses, a late novel, and a tourist's notebook. Hung on the corner of the steamer-chair for the voyage over and back, it was invaluable as a catch-all for eye-glasses, a newspaper, knitting-work, or what not that otherwise would be slipping about. Through much jaunting ashore the same bag continued its useful offices. So many words over so simple a thing are permissible only to accentuate the fact that it is not the elaborate, many-pocketed, ornamental, and often expensive bag on case that gives the greatest service.

When the holland shades have passed their usefulness as such, they may be denuded of sticks, fringes, and fixtures, and boiled thoroughly to take out the stiffening. After they are reduced to a state of pliability, dried, and ironed, they serve a variety of uses. They make, among other things, the best of cleaning, washing, and dish-cloths.

Two or three drops of oil of peppermint mixed with an equal amount of suet, and rubbed over a baby's chest, will give almost instant relief in case of a cold on the lungs, or a cough.

Victory Assured.

By the next time the Constitutionalist makes its appearance it is our confident and gratifying thought that we will be able to record a good old rousing Democratic victory throughout the State—one such as a few years ago was almost a foregone conclusion long before the votes were counted.

Through reasons which it is unnecessary to refer to now, the Republicans have held sway in State affairs for the past three years. Their control has been so absolute as to allow none of the blame for the management of the Government to be laid anywhere but to the Republicans themselves. Their records stands as inglorious monument of their mismanagement of the people's funds and absolute inability to grasp the ideas of honest government.

Foster Voorhees, of suave tongue and Chesterfieldian ways, is ending a so-called whirlwind campaign. Wherever he has gone he has encountered only that political enthusiasm that comes from the politicians whose sense of gratitude is guaged by a lively sense of favors to come. He has sorrowfully found the people in his own party apathetic and the Democrats thoroughly alive and aroused to their old-time vigor.

In the clean candidacy of Elvin W. Crane the Democrats have struck a winning galt. Mr. Crane has gone over the State pretty thoroughly—earnestly and convincingly discussing the issues of the campaign. Every Democrat has done all he can for his part to reclaim the State from the wretched rule of the Republicans and in many sections have had the quiet but sincere co-operation of voters who are supposed to be in the G. O. P. column. The Democratic activity has not been wasted because the managers of the party have found it easy to awaken the keen interest of the people in the ticket that they are espousing.

For Senator, George A. Ford.

In the nomination of George A. Ford for Senator from Union county, the Democrats selected a man who goes into the campaign with every element of strength promising victory. He has a clear record in both private and public life, and is backed by a party that is thoroughly in harmony in every respect.

Mr. Ford is a member of the Board of Alderman of Elizabeth, in which position by his devotion to the interests of the people against the corporate greed of certain monopolies, who have tried to make Elizabeth a catspaw to their private benefit, he has won not only the respect of the citizens of Elizabeth but also their complete confidence in his honesty of purpose. Mr. Ford will poll an unusually heavy vote in his home city. Considering the factional disturbances among the Republicans of Union county and the consequent bitterness that has developed between those who were successful in party manipulation and those who were not, and also the fact that the Democrats throughout the county have bestirred themselves more this year than in any recent campaign, Mr. Ford will easily cut down the usual Republican majorities in all the townships and cities.

Every voter who favors Mr. Ford with his suffrage on election day can rest assured that he is voting for a man who will not only be a creditable Senator, but one also who will always be found looking out for the people, no matter what anyone else may do.

The Assembly Candidates.

D. C. Collins, Mulford Scudder and F. T. Higgins are the Democratic Assembly candidates in Union county. Geographically, they are representative of the county in its various sections. In matter of qualification for the office for which they have been chosen to fill in case the people so will, they are qualified in every particular. They are all men who have been successful in their business ventures, and the same care and energy that they devote to private interests can be depended upon to serve the people in the Assembly if they are elected.

Mr. Childs has made himself a great business man by his own industry and intelligence, the qualities that are needed in the State Assembly. He will be an able representative for Somerset county, and every voter who has the interest of the county at heart will see that he gets their ballot instead of the Republican candidate, Cooper.

In this issue of The Constitutionalist appears a splendid picture of Senator Smith. Senator Smith's management of the present campaign has been admirable and will undoubtedly result in an old-time Democratic victory. New Jersey will welcome such an out come of the present campaign.

The way to help rebuke the McKinley administration for its inhuman treatment of the gallant American soldiers is to elect Colonel E. H. Snyder to Congress. Fowler, if elected, will be there to shield the Republican politicians and money-grabbers of the Hanna stripe.

Selah Schoonmaker owes his nomination for Sheriff of Somerset county to no political boss. He was nominated because he was a good, honest man, who would give a clean administration of one of the most important offices in the county.

It is reasonably certain that Patrick Convery will be elected to represent the Third Congressional district in the National legislature. The retirement of Howell and the principles, if such they can be termed, will be a marked gain for the people.

That section of the platform adopted by the Democratic county convention Thursday which refers to corporations being compelled to give a fair return to any city or county granting it privileges, is the last plank in the platform, but it is not the least important by any means.

To have seen the activity and influence of "Farmer Orator" Martine in the Democratic convention Thursday it didn't seem that he had lost any of his old-time political vigor. As a matter of fact he hasn't.

The agitation of the Woman's Town Improvement Association for public playgrounds for the poor children can easily be fulfilled by removing the "please-keep-off-the-grass signs" in the city park.

It is being talked openly now among certain Republicans that Mr. Ackerman's defeat for the Senatorial nomination can be laid at the doors of certain other Plainfield Republicans.

The Prohibition chandidates in this county are: Senator, J. M. Brookfield, Rahway; assembly, W. H. Chandler, Summit, George B. Savre, Elizabeth, Edward L. Massett, Westfield; coroner, J. T. Syer, Elizabeth.

UNITED STATES SENATOR JAMES SMITH.

Who Has Been "Bullying, ?"

Mr. Wright Babcock, of Fanwood, who has heretofore had a word or two to say in reference to the trolley project, is now stirred up again and comes forth with a newspaper communication in which he talks about "the recent bullying of the Plainfield Council in the interest of that project." Mr. Babcock may be able to keep himself well-posted in affairs of Fanwood, but if the above expression is an index of what knowledge he possesses of municipal affairs in this city he certainly is wofully deficient.

Mr. Babcock labors under the impression that the citizens of Plainfield are striving to forever prevent the Plainfield Street Railway Company from securing a franchise, thus making the way clear for the county trolley project. Time and again it has been stated by those who opposed the granting of the franchise that the Common Council had under consideration that they were not opposed to the Plainfield Street Railway Company only in so far as they were asking for inestimably valuable privileges for which they did not propose to afford either ample protection or fair compensation to the public. If the Plainfield Street Railway Company will agree to do what is fair and just in negotiating the use of the public rights they will find that the citizens of Plainfield will gladly acquiesce in their plans.

If there has been any "bullying," as Mr. Babcock describes it, in the agitation of the trolley franchise matter for the eastern section of the city, it has not been on the part of the people.

The fact that J. Harry Green, of North Plainfield, was compelled to pay the tidy sum of $60 for having brought game into New Jersey that was legally shot in New York, has caused considerable comment, and it has all been in the nature of calling it an outrageous condition that there should be such an inconsistent conflict of the laws between the two States. If Mr. Green cared to fight the matter he no doubt could prove that the construction of the New Jersey game laws that fines a man for having in his possession game legally shot in another State, is unconstitutional.

There is one very important matter that should at an early date engage the attention of the City Council, and that is the present overhead drainage system now in vogue on most of the buildings in the business part of the city. This sort of thing is not only very annoying in rainy weather, but is positively dangerous in winter when the water freezes in cakes on the sidewalks.

The Elizabeth Journal takes an optomistic view of Assemblyman Murray's ballot-counting scheme and has the following comment to make on it:

> Assemblyman Murray seems to have hit on a little device which can hardly be objected to even by the most scrutinizing constitutional lawyer, and he is getting out sample ballot sheets and explaining his plan to all who are interested. If it is successful it will prove a boon to election officers, the voters, the newspapers and the public generally.

The plan of Democratic re-organization in Plainfield is interesting the Republicans to a great extent. The local G. O. P. has had undisputed away for several years past, but with an energetic organization of their opponents their feeling of serenity will probably be disturbed.

The Newark newspapers seem to have lost sight of Crane and Voorhees in the State campaign and are fighting over the question of which will make the best United States Senator, Smith of Kean.

The Trolley and Voorhees.

Evidently the trolley is not only a local issue peculiarly interesting to the city, but it has a bearing on the State election. Wherever and whenever the opponents of the county trolley project have had an opportunity they have not hesitated to say that every member of the State government, from Governor Voorhees down should be ingloriously retired for having aided in the enactment of the law which has allowed the Bergen scheme to become a reality. One of the reasons why the private trolley promoters want Voorhees defeated is contained in the following unique issue raised by Wright Babcock in a newspaper communication inspired by the trolley agitation in Plainfield:

> In this connection the people should be reminded that Chancellor McGill's term of office expires in a few days. He is one of the few public officers who has always stood for right and equity. Before his court will come, in the last resort, the cases of those unfortunate owners of improved properties who object to the granting of their property without just and adequate compensation to the public. If the Plainfield Street Railway Company will agree to do what is fair and just in negotiating the use of the public rights they will find that the citizens of Plainfield will gladly acquiesce in their plans.

John Kean Active.

The latest report is that John Kean is engaged in a plan of campaign which is particularly directed toward the fostering of his own boom for United States Senator, says a Trenton correspondent. He has selected a committee of his friends, it is said, to go through the State and pay special attention to the campaign for the Legislature. This committee is well heeled and is given carte blanche to do everything that is deemed necessary to secure a Republican majority on joint ballot in that body. Accordingly to this plan, then, the head of the ticket will not be allowed to monopolize all the attention of the campaign. The Legislative ticket must awaken as much, if not more, interest, and Mr. Kean's committee, which consists of skillful and experienced politicians, will be kept busy from now until election day. If the report is true that the Democrats intend trading their Gubernatorial candidate for the Legislature then it is the intentions of this committee to nip the scheme in the bud.

In their threat not to vote at all unless they are allowed to cast their ballots in their home districts, the members of the Third Regiment would seem to hold a pretty good hand. A thousand or more votes are not favors to slightly pass over by either political party in this campaign and if the threat of the soldiers is actually to be carried out it is not at all unlikely that most of the men will find furloughs conviently awaiting them the day before election.

The Democrats seem to have struck the right plan in their reorganization efforts in their intention to interest every Democratic voter in the association they intend to form. With a Democratic Association, the management of the party is constantly in the hands of the rank and file.

Anthony Killgore is now editor of the Hunterdon County Democrat. He promises to continue the same policy that has marked the course of the paper for the past sixty years—sturdily Democratic.

In view of the large number of young lawyers Plainfield has turned out within the last few years and the numbers still in process of incubation, the determination of the lawyers of Newark to secure legislation which will make more stringent the rules for admission to the bar arouse considerable interest hereabouts. It is proposed that no young man should be registered as a law student until he has passed an examination in the common English branches or is a college graduate or able to give satisfactory evidence of his ability in those branches. It is also proposed that every student should pass an examination at least once a year and a thorough examination just prior to the motion for admission to the bar.

> If the nomination of Judge Cross for Senator in Union has left any lingering sorehead among friends of others of the many candidates, they should follow the honorable example set by Mahlon Pitney. The ex-Representative saw that the people wanted to give to Mr. Voorhees a full term, and that while they appreciated him and his services, the public demand for Mr. Voorhees must be heeded to insure a victory. Mr. Pitney bowed to the decree, then jumped into the fray to help elect Mr. Voorhees, and because of this magnanimity the people of Morris nominated him for and will elect him a Senator. The only way to achieve success is to deserve it and earn it, and in the fullness of time Judge Cross' opponents will, if they emulate Pitney, be in line for political preferment.

Senator Smith had interviews with Democratic leaders throughout the State yesterday and cautioned them against having any candidate sacrificed on the Democratic ticket in favor of any other candidate. As for himself the Senator said that he did not want to go back to the United States Senate at the expense of someone else. The Senator, however, believes this is a Democratic year and that it will be unnecessary for any candidates to be traded off with Republicans.

Plainfield won't see real interesting politics till after the State election. Then comes the municipal campaign, and lively times are expected.

MUSIC THE FEATURE.

New Way of Conducting Epworth League Meetings in Grace Church.

A new departure in the method of conducting the Sunday evening Epworth League meetings at Grace M. E. church was taken Sunday. Instead of following the old routine with prayer and testimonies, a musicale was given.

Miss Agnes Tingley sang a solo, D. Winckler rendered a violin solo and Mrs. Gardner, wife of the pastor, accompanied them on the piano. Mrs. Gardner also led the meeting, and the privilege was given any to take leader's place, give out a favorite hymn, and it would be sung if the announcer would read the first two verses of it. The meeting was so successful that it will be repeated soon.

A Dunellen Marriage.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Irving Beetham, of Greenbrook, to Alexander Frazee, formerly a resident of the borough. The wedding took place at the home of Rev. E. S. Jamison, pastor of the Dunellen M. E. church. Mr. Jamison performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mabel Walker, of Greenbrook. After the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Frazee came to this city, where they took a train for Brooklyn, where they will reside.

Gashed His Finger

George Frazee, of Watchung avenue, caught one of his fingers in a piece of machinery Monday and cut a gash in it to the bone. Frazee was putting a nut in the machinery, and it was started up before he was quite ready. The consequence was that the finger was caught, and rather than have the end taken off he pulled it out gashing it deeply.

A Church Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Baker, of Stelle avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Baker to Howard Wade Beebe, of 718 Madison avenue. The wedding will take place Tuesday evening, Nov. 15th, at 8 o'clock in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

To Draft Resolutions of Condolence

H. J. Hall, J. P. Lalre and O. W. Dunham teachers in Trinity Reformed church Sunday school were Sunday appointed by the school as a committee to draft resolutions to be sent B. A. Hegeman, Sr., expressive of the sorrow of the officers, teachers and scholars at the death of Mrs. Hegeman, their friend and benefactor.

Mrs. Edward Rathbun and Mrs. Hiram Rathbun, of Connecticut, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Amos Andrews, of North avenue, have returned home.

FACE CUT WITH A KNIFE.

A FRACAS THAT OCCURRED IN A BOROUGH MARSHAL'S BARN.

Jules Berrek Accuses Martin Holmes of Doing the Cutting—Wound Not Serious—Men Were Evidently Drunk

Early Sunday morning a stabbing affair occurred in Marshal George Wise's barn on Grandview avenue, at which time Jules Berrek, an employe of Mr. Wise, was badly cut about the face with a knife. The deed, according to Berrek's story, was committed by Martin Holmes, a resident of this city.

According to the injured man's story Holmes and one of his brothers were asleep in the barn when he returned home. He always sleeps in the barn and he went in to retire for the night. After he got inside he stumbled across Holmes and his brother. Evidently all hands were somewhat under the influence of liquor for a scrap followed, in which Berek's face was cut with a knife. After the cutting the brothers escaped, and Berrek went to the house and awakened the inmates. His face was bleeding profusely and it was feared that he might bleed to death. The family at once sent for Dr. Rushmore and he dressed the wounds and made the man as comfortable as possible.

This morning Berrek appeared before Recorder Long and made a complaint against Martin Holmes, charging him with assault and battery. Holmes has not yet been found by the authorities.

Information for Pensioners.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS B.A.HEGEMAN,SR.

Contracted Acute Pneumonia and Passed Away Saturday.

TAKEN SICK IN NEW YORK.

ARRIVED HOME ONLY TO LIVE FOR A FEW HOURS.

Mrs. Hegeman Was Active in Church and Charitable Circles—A Member of the Crescent Avenue Church. But Attended Regularly With Her Husband at Trinity—Funeral Wednesday.

The community was deeply shocked Sunday when the sad news of the sudden death of Mrs. Catherine E. Hegeman, wife of Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Sr., of 37 Sycamore avenue, became known. Mrs. Hegeman's death was due to acute pneumonia, contracted within the past few days. She and Mr. Hegeman went to New York week before last for the purpose of spending two weeks at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Thursday last Mrs. Hegeman was taken ill with a cold, and as she did not improve it was thought best that she should return home. She returned under the medical treatment she was receiving Saturday afternoon with Mr. Hegeman. Dr. Jenkins was called at once and everything known to medical science was done to restore her health. At 5 o'clock that afternoon Mrs. Hegeman passed into a stupor and did not regain consciousness again. Her death occurred at 11 o'clock Saturday evening.

Mrs. Hegeman was 68 years old and was the daughter of the late Judge William J. Roome, of New York. During the past two years she has not enjoyed good health. The critical illness of her husband several months ago, when he passed through a violent attack of hiccoughs, had attendency to weaken her constitution considerably. However, she was not at any time considered seriously ill, and her sudden death is a terrible shock to her husband and her relatives. Dr. Jenkins called Dr. D. C. Adams in consultation, but it was soon learned that her life could not be spared.

Although Mrs. Hegeman was a member of the Crescent Avenue church, she attended Trinity Reformed church regularly with her husband, and was one of the most active workers in that church. She was a valuable member of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church and will be greatly missed by those with whom she came in contact, both in church work, and also as a member of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Management of Muhlenberg Hospital and the Board of Managers of the Children's Home. She was closely identified with charity and her works will follow her. She gave freely to those who were needy and in many channels her death will prove a great and irretimable loss. The bereaved husband and members of the family have the sympathy of the whole community in their deep hour of sadness.

The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon from her late home at 3 o'clock, and interment was in Hillside cemetery this morning.

The death of Mrs. Hegeman leaves Miss Eleanor Roome, her sister, who resides adjoining the Hegeman residence, the only remaining member of a family of ten.

For the Firemen's Benefit.

Next Thursday evening the Firemen's Mutual Benefit Association, Branch No. 7, of this city, will hold a ball in Washington Hall. This association was organized to give moral and material aid to its members. With the consent of the councilmanic fire committee and board of engineers this ball will be given to assist the benefit fund of the association.

To be Interred at Hillside.

The death of Mrs. Minerva E. Disbrow, wife of Henry G. Disbrow, of Brooklyn, occurred last Saturday at her home No. 66 Morton street, Brooklyn. She was a sister of the late Mrs. F. H. Gardner, of this city. The funeral services were held in Brooklyn last Monday at 8 o'clock, and interment was in Hillside Cemetery this afternoon.

HILLSIDE GOLF CLUB WON FROM BALTUSROL

A Great Victory for the Local Golfers Saturday Afternoon.

THE SCORE WAS 18 to 6.

J. H. P. WHARTON WAS THE WINNER OF MRS. FISK CUP.

Three Players Who Were Regarded as Possible Winners, but Two of Them Fell Three Points Below Mr. Wharton, Whose Score was 12—Great Interest in Match Game—Grounds in Good Condition

After a close and exciting contest the play for the Mrs. Charles J. Fisk cup was decided last Saturday on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. There were three players who were considered possible winners, J. H. P. Wharton, Carl Walz and A. R. Fisk. Mr. Wharton won the first honors by scoring 12 points, while the other two players each made 9 points. The cup is now the personal property of Mr. Wharton whose fine playing has won for him many honors in golf play.

An event of great interest on the links Saturday was the match play between the Hillside and Baltusrol Golf Club teams. The latter team is considered to be very strong, and being more experienced, was, of course, thought to be the winner. Such was not the case, however, for the home team won easily by a score of 18 to 6. At no time were the visitors in it and they were outplayed at every point. The score in detail follows:

HILLSIDS.		BALTUSROL.
Dumont	4	Candler
Richards	4	Palmer
Fisk	0	Van Sooder
Stockton	2	Cobb
Glenny	0	McKenzie
Wharton	6	Harvey
	18	6

The golf grounds are now in excellent condition and during the winter months if the weather permits a great deal of work will be done on the links, so that by next season they will be superior to anything in this vicinity. New bunkers and hazards will be built and much will be done to improve the links. The past season since the new grounds were opened the members have gained much experience as to how the grounds want to be, and they will be fixed accordingly.

Next Saturday the girls' handicap play will be the feature on the grounds, and on the following Saturday play will be opened for the Chapman championship cup.

Fought the Constable.

A report comes from Washingtonville that Constable George Steward, of that place, and a Swede farm hand were engaged in a fistic encounter Sunday and that the constable received several blows in the face. It is said that the constable was trying to arrest the Swede and the latter refused to be arrested, hence the scrap. It is reported that the Swede got away and that a warrant has been issued for him.

POLITICIANS FEAR THE STAY-AT-HOMES.

Great Deal of Apathy Exhibited By Both Parties.

CANDIDATES' HARD WORK.

BOTH CRANE AND VOORHEES ARE DOING THEIR BEST.

One More Week of the Campaign to be Gone Through and Much Territory Yet to be Covered—Result Will, it is Said, Depend on the Independent Vote—Democrats Seem Confident.

The last week of the exciting political campaign, which is now at hand, will develop many interesting points in the situation, which all along has been so perplexing to the leaders and politicians of the two great parties. The rival candidates for Governor have been working so hard during the past two weeks that it is feared they will become physically exhausted before the closing of hostilities. The work of the coming week, beyond a doubt, will be the hardest of all. So far Candidate Voorhees has covered the ground pretty thoroughly, and he intends to devote most of the time now at his disposal to Essex county. Candidate Crane has several counties yet to visit, and he expects to have his canvass well performed by the end of the week.

Although the campaign has put to the test the staying qualities of the candidates to a marked extent, and they have stood it pretty well, yet on the part of the voters, the same interest has not been manifested as in former years. Nor is the galaxy of stump orators as large or as brilliant as three years ago, when John W. Griggs was accompanied on his whirlwind tour by some of the best oratorical talent in the State. The mass-meetings then were much larger and more enthusiastic, and there was more evidence of sincerity and earnestness among the followers of each party than the present campaign has demonstrated. It is no wonder, then, that the politicians are nonplused as to the meaning of this peculiar situation of affairs.

Apathy among the general masses of voters, it is feared, prevails to an ominous degree. Mr. Voorhees, in a recent interview, gave expression to his feeling that there was danger ahead for his side unless the Republican voters awoke from the lethargy which seems to envelop them. He had no doubt at all of a sweeping victory for his ticket if the Republican voter did their duty election day. A stay-at-home vote was the only danger apprehended.

On the Democratic side, excepting in a few of the lower counties, the campaign has developed a confidence in the result, which is apparently undisturbed by any dread as to apathy among the rank and file of the party. Still, while there seems to be much activity among those Democrats who are ever loyal to the party, yet there is reason to believe that others who are not so much interested in the result feel somewhat indifferent as to the duty they are expected to perform election day.

The result will depend upon the independent vote, which will come from the vest pocket. Some of the best informed politicians incline to that belief, and hence the uncertainty which seems to prevail in circles which are not moved by party bias and prejudice. It is easy enough to get figures on the result from hide-bound parties who never see any merit in the opposite party. He is generally a reckless prophet and a resourceful mathematician. His prominence in the present campaign is easily perceived, and most of his predictions seem ridiculous.

From an independent stand the augury is that neither party can lay claim to a positive victory. There are so many weak spots in the campaign on both sides that it is hard telling at the present time which ticket stands the best chance for success. A leading Republican said a day or two ago that he feared the Republican leaders were not giving Foster M. Voorhees the loyal support which was expected of them. There was an absence of interest on their part, he added, which was very displeasing to the friends of the Republican Gubernatorial candidate. He hoped for the best, however, and he felt that despite this apparent indifference on the part of those leaders to the ticket that Mr. Voorhees would be elected by a good majority.

Claims Bullman Took Her Jewelry.

Summons in tort have been issued by Justice Mosher in the case of Mrs. Annie Clarkson, of New York, against Charles Bullman, of Third place. The case was to have come to trial Monday morning, but as Bullman seems to have left the State, and taken all his household goods with him, the summons has not been served on him personally. The plaintiff claims that the defendant took a watch and ring belonging to her, and has not returned them. Counsellor W. K. McClure represents Mrs. Clarkson.

GO TO SCHOOL TOO EARLY

STRANGE PRACTICE THAT SCHOOL BOARD HAVE TO COPE WITH.

In Some Instances Scholars Are Reported Going to the School House at 7:30 a. m.—Style of Window for New School.

The Borough Board of Education met last Sunday in regular session, but not a great deal of business was considered. One matter that engaged the attention of the board for some time was that in reference to certain scholars who make it a point to come to school every morning about 7:30 This practice has become a nuisance and the board decided last evening that hereafter all scholars who persist in doing this will be sent home with a note from their teacher. The practice, aside from being a nuisance, is dangerous for the scholars cannot get into the school yard, and they spend their time on the sidewalk and in the street. At that point the trolley cars pass on a switch and more than once the children have had narrow escapes from being injured. For these reasons the board has taken a decisive stand in the matter.

Another matter considered was that regarding the use of a certain kind of a window for the new school building now in course of construction. The special style of window was adopted and will be put in the new building. The favorable features of this new window are that it can be swung back and forth and can be easily cleaned on both sides, and at the same time allows of perfect ventilation. The board signed the contract with the firm making this window last evening. Nothing else of any importance was considered by the board.

COL. MORRELL TO TALK.

Democratic Mass Meeting for Colored Men on Friday Night.

A Democratic mass meeting will be held in R-form Hall Friday night, when Col. William Morrell, the well known colored politician, who has received a great deal of attention in this campaign, will deliver a speech. Although it will prove entertaining and instructive to all classes of people it will be especially so to the colored voters. Col. Morrell has the reputation of being a vigorous speaker. It was he that created a sensation in the Democratic State convention by berating the management of the Republican party. Col. Morrell will probably stir up the colored men in Plainfield when they hear him.

A number of the Democratic county candidates are also expected to be present at the meeting. A special feature will be a cinematograph, which will throw Candidate Crane's picture on the canvass.

SHOT GAME LEGALLY, BUT WAS FINED $60.

Strange Conflict in Game Laws of Two States.

EXPENSIVE FOR J. H. GREEN.

KILLED RABBITS IN NEW YORK, BUT FINED IN NEW JERSEY.

The Season for Shooting Rabbits in New York is Now Open in New York, But Not in New Jersey and Rabbits Shot in Former State and Brought to This State Make Possessor Liable to Fine of $60 Each.

A week ago J. Harry Green, a New York business man who resides in North Plainfield, went up in New York State on a hunting expedition for rabbits, the time for their shooting being legal in that State. He succeeded in bagging six of them, but only decided to bring four home with him.

Somewhat proud of his trophies, he left New York and crossed the Liberty street ferry and took a train for Plainfield. Knowing that he had legally shot the rabbits in New York State he did not attempt to conceal them after his arrival within the limits of New Jersey, where rabbits are still prohibited game. On the train Percy C. Ohl, an officer in the Union, Middlesex and Somerset Counties Game Protective Association, saw Mr. Green with the game swung over his back. He immediately concluded that the rabbits must have been shot in New Jersey in violation of the game laws. As Mr. Ohl has always been energetic in exposing and securing punishment for violators of the State game laws, he concluded that it was his duty to do the same to Mr. Green.

When Mr. Green arrived in this city he went to his home in North Plainfield serenely satisfied with the success of his hunting trip. Mr. Ohl proceeded to the home of Freeholder Andrew Lutkins and notified him of what he supposed was a violation of the State game laws. Freeholder Lutkins in turn notified Game Warden Sebring, of Bound Brook, and the latter came to this city and made an investigation of the case. Of course, he found that the rabbits had been killed in New York in a perfectly legal manner, but on looking into the law he saw that there was a fine of $30 for each rabbit found in the possession of anyone in New Jersey before the open season arrived. The law made no allowances as to where the game was shot. Possession of the rabbits was all that the law provided for.

Mr. Green consulted a lawyer and found that though he had shot the rabbits legally in New York he was guilty of a violation of the New Jersey game laws, and yesterday afternoon he paid $60 to Warden Sebring for the four rabbits found in his possession.

A SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

Mispah Lodge's Event Closed Saturday Night After a Profitable Run.

The fair held for three days last week under the auspices of the sewing circle of Mispah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., closed Saturday evening. It was in every way successful and the members feel gratified with the success of the affair. The Odd Ladies' quilt for the most popular member of Mispah Lodge was presented to Miss Maggie Wilson. The red, white and blue quilt was disposed of privately. Everything on sale was disposed of before the fair closed and it will be a few days before the members will be able to tell exactly how much money was made.

Choral Society Officers

The Choral Society of the First Presbyterian church, which is composed of a number of members of the choir, met last Friday at the home of Mr. Hinnman, of Grandview avenue, to re-organize for the season. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mr. Hinnman; vice-president, Miss Isabelle Scarborough; secretary and treasurer, Miss Ada Dunham. The society will meet again in two weeks, and will meet at intervals through the winter to hold socials.

Ask your doctor how many preparations of cod-liver oil there are.

He will answer, "Hundreds of them." Ask him which is the best. He will reply, "Scott's Emulsion."

Then see that this is the one you obtain. It contains the purest cod-liver oil, free from unpleasant odor and taste. You also get the hypophosphites and glycerine. All three are blended into one grand healing and nourishing remedy.

A SINCERE FAREWELL.

A FITTING EXPRESSION OF ESTEEM FOR MISS SHINN.

She is Soon to Leave for Missionary Fields in Far Off India—Baptists Make Presentation She Will Remember.

Friday evening at the First Baptist church the Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies of the church, together with a large number of the members of the church, met and gave a farewell reception to Miss Julia Shinn, who, for sometime past, has been the faithful and efficient church missionary looking after the members of the home department of the Sunday-school and other church interests. After a course of preparation at the training school at Newton, Mass., she will go to Burmah, India, as a missionary.

The first part of the programme was devoted to the presentation of a dialogue entitled "The Higher Patriotism." Miss Velma Oakley acted as the leader and introduced the representatives from the different countries as follows: Japan, Miss Miriam Sherman; China, Miss Ella Serrell; Congo Free State, Miss Nettie Haffner; Egypt, Miss Daisy Bogart; Turkey, Miss Bessie Wilson; America, Miss May Serrell; India, Miss Sadie Mantz; Christian, representing the Banner of the Cross, Miss Mattison. Each one of the above had a part to recite which was along the line of missionary work, and at the close Miss Madeline Evans gave the recessional, while Miss Beulah VanWinkle recited the "Hindu Widow." Mrs. Tennyson presided at the piano and every part was perfectly given.

At this time Miss Shinn was called to the platform where she was presented with a handsome traveling dress case by George F. Brown. The gift was from the members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. Miss Shinn was also presented with a chatelaine bag by Miss Bessie Wilson on behalf of the Junior Christian Endeavorers.

Mr. Bigiow, president of the Senior Society, who had charge of the exercises, suggested that each person present append a greeting on a piece of paper and place the same in the dress case for Miss Shinn to read at her leisure. This was done, and another pleasing feature was the silver offering which was given to Miss Shinn.

BICYCLISTS COLLIDE.

Mr. Ernie on Wrong Side of Street and Admits His Blame.

Friday afternoon on West Front street in front of Henry Liefke's bakery, Mrs. E. D. Barrett, of East Fifth street, had an accident while riding her wheel. She was riding on the right of the road, when Mr. Ernie, draughtsman at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, accompanied by his friend, Mr. Williams, came along on their wheels and tried to pass Mrs. Barrett on the wrong side of the street. Mr. Williams escaped, but Mr. Ernie collided with Mrs. Barrett's wheel, and the front wheel was completely wrecked. The rim was smashed and the spokes were badly twisted. Fortunately neither rider was injured. Mr. Ernie admitted that it was his fault and agreed at once to pay for having the wheel repaired. Mrs. Barrett accepted the offer in a very pleasant manner and stated that she wanted only what was due her. This is the second accident of a similar nature that Mrs. Barrett has experienced in one week.

TALKED OF MISSION WORK.

Rev. A. I. Martine Addresses Warren Chapel Endeavorers.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at Warren chapel was addressed Friday by Rev. A. I. Martine, of Dunellen, upon the subject of mission work. The time usually given up to prayers and testimonies was taken by Mr. Martine for his address.

The speaker quoted extensively from the Psalms, and used as his real subject "The Greatness of the Church." He showed how the people can make the church great and raise her to the dignity that God intends her to reach. This is not done, said he, by running dancing halls and billiard tables in connection with the church. Dancing and billiards are wrong when conducted under the auspices of the church.

Mr. Martine urged all those present to consider they are as much responsible for the souls of the heathen as the missionaries who are sent out to convert them, for everyone can help, he said, by their prayers and through their pocketbooks.

FAST DRIVERS HELD UP.

WERE SPEEDING DOWN PARK AVENUE FRIDAY.

Newton B. Smalley, William Baldwin and C. V. D. Corle Caught by Police Officers—The Trial Friday.

Complaint after complaint has come up to the police lately concerning fast driving on Park avenue within the city limits. The roundsman doing day duty takes a ride in that direction frequently afternoons, especially on Saturdays, when the owners of speedy horses are returning from the driving park.

Lately Roundsman Flynn has been on duty, but at his appearance on the avenue there would be a sudden pulling up of horses, and when the officer passed the horsemen the latter would be jogging along quietly enough and would look at him out of innocent eyes.

But Friday afternoon Newton B. Smalley, William Baldwin and C. V. Corle were returning from the park. Chief Grant and Roundsman Flynn were riding out that way and they claim caught the three horsemen violating the ordinance, and speeding down Park avenue three abreast at a three-minute clip.

Why it was that the three didn't see the officers is not very plain. Perhaps they were so much interested in the race that they were oblivous to their surroundings. At any rate the officers came to them, brought the horses to a stop and ordered the men to appear in the City Court this morning at 9 o'clock. Smalley and Baldwin were there, but Corle didn't appear.

A smile went around the court room, when Smalley and Baldwin lined up against the rail. Every one knew them both, and also knew that their only fault was a love for a fast horse and that sometimes their anxiety to show what their animals could do led them to bursts of speed. Both pleaded not guilty and the trial was set down for next Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

GRAND LODGE DEGREE

CONFERRED ON PAST CHANCELLORS IN THE PYTHIAN LODGES.

Meeting Was Held in the Rooms of Perseverance Lodge—District Meeting Was Held Previous to Grand Lodge.

Last Friday in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., three meetings of Knights of Pythias were held. First, there was the meeting of Perseverance Lodge, at which time two propositions for membership were received.

After the business of the lodge was transacted, the regular district meeting of Knights was held, when members of the Grand Lodge were present and made a number of speeches. Reports from the several lodges in the district were submitted and all showed that the lodges are prospering and doing well. There were several fine addresses by Grand Chancellor De-Witt C. Cobb, of Trenton; Past Grand Chancellor Rockafellar, of Somerville.

Following the district meeting there was held a provisional Grand Lodge session, when the Grand Lodge Degree was conferred on the following Past Chancellors: Robert Jackson and Louis Mowring, of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74; Robert Rushton, George Radford, Alfred Dunavan, Alvin TenEyck, Frank Green and Robert Loughlin, of Unity Lodge, No. 102; Robert Jahn, John Haskard and Mr. Archibald, of Goodwill Lodge, Scotch Plains.

HUNTED FOR HUNGRY MEN.

Plenty of Edibles That Were Not Served to the Delegates.

A pleasant preface to the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church Friday night was a supper in charge of the young ladies of the church to which the gentlemen were invited, with this provision, however, that they each pay 25 cents for their meal.

The idea originated late Friday afternoon in the minds of some of the young folks, after dinner had been served to the delegates who attended the all-day session of the Mission Workers, and a great deal of food was left. So the young ladies went out into the highways and byways and compelled the men to come in. It was a genuine man hunt.

In spite of their pains, only a few male friends could be found at the late hour so situated that they could attend, but those who did go enjoyed a good supper, plenty to eat and everything well cooked. If any went anticipating a meal of warmed-over things, they were disappointed.

The Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session of the semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Circles of the East Association of New Jersey was held in the Park Avenue Baptist church Friday. The speakers were Mrs. Dr. Luther, a returned missionary, and Mrs. Dr. Gould, from Nahlore, India. The delegates left for their homes soon after 4 o'clock.

REGREANT LOVER RAN OFF WITH $1,500 CASH.

TRUSTED A DECEITFUL MAN.

GUSTAVE GERS DECAMPED WITH PROSPECTIVE WIFE'S WEALTH.

Mrs. Wedemeyer Gave Him the Money to Go to Newark to Complete the Purchase of a Saloon for Her, But He Has Gone Where No One Knows—Police Are Looking for the Deceptor.

Another case of misplaced confidence has just come to light, and now a borough woman, who was also a prospective bride, is bemoaning her fate and realizing what a fickle thing human nature is. Recently Mrs. Christine Wedemeyer had $1,500 that she hasn't today, and more than that, she had a sweetheart whom she was to have married last Wednesday. Now she has neither, and the police are scouring the country for the man who took the $1,500, but in the capacity of a sweetheart and prospective husband. Mrs. Wedemeyer has no further use for him.

Gustav Gers is a German, and since Mrs. Wedemeyer's husband's death, has managed her hotel and saloon business on Somerset street.

When Mrs. Wedemeyer sold out her business to Charles Jensen, a few weeks ago, she began to look around for another opening. She finally decided upon a little saloon in Newark which was to cost her $1,500. This she decided to buy. Oct. 24th she gathered together what money she could and found she had $1,500 altogether. Part of it was in a check given to her by Murphy & Blatz, the rest in cash.

Mrs. Wedemeyer had the check cashed, and then handing over the entire sum in bills and gold to Gers, sent him to Newark to pay the purchase money on the little saloon.

It was quite early in the morning when Gers started for Newark, and nothing more was thought of him until the afternoon was well advanced and Ger's hadn't returned. When night came and the head man still was absent, Mrs. Wedemeyer became alarmed and went up to Murphy & Blatz's law offices and had them telephone to Ballantine & Co., the Newark brewers, where Gers was to pay the money, to see if he had been there. He had not. Then Mrs. Wedemeyer's fears were confirmed; she was sure that her trusted employee had run away, taking with him all the money she had in the world.

A visit to the Dime Savings Bank the next morning showed her that October 24th Gers had drawn $175 which he had on deposit there. Then Mrs. Wedemeyer knowing that the man had really gone set the police on his track. Where he is no one knows for he had covered up his tracks well.

Gustav and Mrs. Wedemeyer were engaged to be married, and the ceremony was to have taken place Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Gers were then to move to Newark, where Gers was to run the business. Mrs. Wedemeyer is glad that her intended husband developed this bad trait of character before their marriage, but she would like to see that $1,500 again.

The Companion's First Subscriber.

The Youth's Companion is probably the only periodical in the world seventy-two years of age, whose first subscriber is still living and still a constant reader of the paper. The subscriber who enjoys this unique distinction is Mrs. Hannah M. Parsons, of Brooklyn, New York, now in her 85th year. She was the little sister of a friend of Nathaniel Willis, father of N. P. Willis, the poet, and founder of The Youth's Companion. When Mr. Willis had resolved upon publishing a new paper for young people, his friend had him put down his sister's name as the first subscriber. The Companion's first issue was dated April 16, 1827, and for more than 70 years this first subscriber has continued to read and enjoy it. The volume for 1899 will be the best The Companion has ever published. The most popular of living writers will give the best work of their best hours to the entertainment of the hundreds of thousands of households in which The Youth's Companion is every week a welcome guest. New subscribers will receive all the remaining issues of 1898 free from the time of subscription, and the beautiful Companion Calendar for 1899—the most beautiful one ever given to Companion readers—in addition to The Companion for 52 weeks, a full year, to January, 1900. The Youth's Companion, 211 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass.

A Missionary Spoke.

Mrs. Dr. Gould, a missionary from Nahlore, India, addressed the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church last Friday. She spoke of her work in that vast country, and was listened to with interest.

THEIR NINTH RECEPTION.

CYPRESS COMMANDERY, K. T., ENTERTAINED ELABORATELY.

Gave an Exhibition Drill—Entertained Ivanhoe Commandery, of New York—Dancing Enjoyed—Committee in Charge.

The ninth annual reception of Cypress Commandery, No. 6, K. T., was held Thursday evening in the Cycle Academy on Watchung avenue, and was attended with great success. It was nearly 10 o'clock before the affair really began, but from that time until 3 o'clock this morning everyone present had a thoroughly good time. About 10:30 o'clock the members of Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 5, of New York, arrived in a body and later there was an exhibition drill between Cypress and Ivanhoe Commanderies.

The great feature of the affair was the dancing. Music was furnished by Prof. Vanderveer, of Elizabeth, and the large floor was well filled throughout by merry dancers. To those in charge much credit is due for the complete arrangement of all the details. Prof. MacDonald was the floor manager, and he was assisted by Walter Bean.

At midnight supper was served by the committee in charge, after which dancing was continued. Below will be found the names of those who had charge of the reception:

Reception committee—Sir Benj. Johnson, Sir Nathan J. Williams, Sir Jas. A. Saunders, Sir Jas. W. Brown, Sir Wm. E. Jones, Sir W. J. Doug.

FOR STUDY OF THE BIBLE

PLANS OF OFFICERS OF TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Teachers to Meet Every Wednesday to Study the Lessons—Home Department for Those Unable to Attend Sunday-school.

The quarterly meeting and social of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school was held Thursday in the parlors of the church. There were about fifty persons present and an evening of profit and pleasure was spent by all. The forepart of the evening was devoted to the discussion of plans for the coming winter's work, and two important schemes were adopted.

The first was that every Wednesday evening directly after prayer meeting the officers and teachers of the school are to meet to study the Sunday-school lesson for the following Sabbath and thus prepare themselves to teach it. The second plan is to organize a home department, whereby people who find it impossible to attend Sunday-school may study the lesson from week to week and at the same time contribute something toward the support of the school. For this work a superintendent will be appointed to organize and look after this department.

The Sunday-school finances was discussed and many plans were offered whereby the revenue coming to the school will be increased. Nothing was done in this line, however.

Following the business part of the meeting a social time followed and refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. E. E. Anthony and Miss Martha Anthony, the Christian Endeavor Sunday-school committee.

ROBBERY IN BOROUGH.

Coddington Avenue House Ransacked and Cash Stolen.

Friday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock some person or persons entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Waldron, on Coddington avenue, and, after ransacking the house, made way with a large quantity of pears and $8 in cash. Some of the pears were on the table in the dining room, while the others were in a closet.

The thieves entered the house through the cellar door, which was open, and they found it easy to get into the kitchen through another door which was unlocked. Many things about the first floor were disarranged and scattered about.

During the above-mentioned hours Mr. Waldron and his wife were out enjoying a drive, and when they returned they found that someone had been in the house. The matter was reported to the police, but this is another case where there is no clue upon which to work, for no one in the neighborhood remembers having seen any strange person or persons about Mr. Waldron's house or the neighborhood.

Recently another robbery was committed on the same street, when thieves entered the cellar of Corra Ryno's house and stole about fifteen cans of fruit put up by Mrs. Ryno. No clue to the thieves in this case could be found.

—About December possession will be taken of the new fire engine house in the West End. The house is one of the most complete of its kind to be found anywhere.

COUNTRY IN A BAD WAY

THAT IS WHAT THE SOCIALIST CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR SAYS.

Matthew Maguire Addressed His Followers in T. A. H. Hall Thursday—Who Was Chairman of the Meeting?

Members of the Socialist Labor party came out in full force Thursday at the meeting held in T. A. B. Hall and addressed by Matthew Maguire, the nominee for governor of New Jersey on that ticket. There were about 100 men present, consisting principally of the working class, and they listened attentively to all that Mr. Maguire had to say.

The speaker was introduced by a man who confessed his inability to make a speech, so he gave up the platform to Maguire. Who this individual was his constituents evidently desired to keep secret for some unknown reason, for when a Press reporter inquired the chairman's name of a meek faced young man doing duty at the door, he was met with a sneer and the remark, "What difference does that make to you?"

Mr. Maguire devoted some time to describing the organization of the Socialist Labor party and explained that one half of their ten cent dues goes into the State treasury while the other half goes towards national expenses. In this state, he said, it is not difficult to get the names of the requisite number of legal ballots, as only 800 signatures are needed, while in some states as many as 12,000 are necessary.

Mr. Maguire claimed that they were up against both of the old parties, and taking ex-Governor Grigg's remarks at a recent convention he picked them to pieces and explained that the country is getting worse each year instead of better, and that when Mr. Griggs says the country is prosperous he alludes to the wealthy class, which comprise only one-half of one per cent of the population of the United States.

Mr. Maguire is a fluent talker and placed his claims before the people in such a clear and perspicuous light that those who didn't know what socialism was when they went into the meeting understood it better when they went out.

HEARD ABOUT MISSIONS.

Interesting Address Delivered in Crescent Avenue Church.

The Young People's Missionary Societies of the First Presbyterian and Crescent Avenue churches met last Friday in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church and listened to a very able address given on missionary work by Edward F. Reimer, of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Mr. Reimer is a talented speaker and he recited the progress of missionary work both in this and foreign countries. He spoke of the great work being accomplished by Christian Endeavorers all over the world, and said that now it can truly be stated that this society belts the globe. He urged more personal work on the part of young people. He quoted the fact that at present there are about five hundred students in Presbyterian colleges and universities that are preparing for foreign and home mission work, and in a year or two these students will be knocking at the door of the Board for Foreign Missions asking to be sent to the field of labor.

During Mr. Reimer's talk he told much of the condition of affairs in many foreign countries where there is need of the Gospel of Christ, and he excited a great interest among those present in the work. He exhibited a photograph of George Pearson, a missionary in China, who is being supported by the young people of this Presbytery. The meeting throughout was one of great interest and all felt that they had been helped as a result of Mr. Reimer's talk. During the service a vocal solo was given by Miss Charlotte Messersmith, accompanied on the piano by Miss Mabelle Force.

HIS FRIENDS SURPRISED HIM.

Fifty-five Young People Came in Unexpected on Albert Utzinger.

Three friends of Albert Utzinger, of 63 Grandview avenue, Miss Nellie Apgar, Fred Dunavan and V. Willie Nash, arranged a surprise party for him Friday. There were fifty-five present and the guests met at Fred. Dunavan's home, on East Second street, and proceed to Utzinger's house in a body. A pleasant evening was passed in playing games and singing, and before the young folks went home refreshments were served.

Among those present were Mrs. Dunavan, the Misses Pittingere, Lucy Jennings, Grace Webster, Florence Simmons, Florence Layton, Jennie and Lillian Thorn, Mabel Simmons, Kittie Webster, Carrie Wise, Fred VanLew, Matthew Sweeney, Edward Bellis, Hillaire Blatz, Charles McCann, Howard Drake, Edward Smalley, Bert Ford, Horace Martin, George James and Willie Pope, Harry De-Meza, Thomas Keenan, and Wesley Randolph, of Brooklyn, William Vanderweg, of Newark.

—It is not expected that the new borough public school will be ready for use before next spring. The work progresses rather slowly.

WOMEN RUN TROLLEY, THROUGH LINCOLN.

Spectacular Incidents Carried Out by Silas Dashing Drake.

SILVER SPIKE WAS DRIVEN.

MISS EGEL MANIPULATED THE MOTOR LIKE A VETERAN.

Two Car Loads of Representative Citizens Witnessed the Great Event—Mayor Drake Was in His Glory—Banquet Prevented to Superintendent Radel—A Bottle of Champagne Broken Over the Dashboard.

The opening of the extension of the Brunswick Traction Company between Dunellen and Bound Brook Saturday was accompanied with a wealth of spectacular incidents on the part of the people and officials of Lincoln, in which Miss Emma Egel, president of the Lincoln Common Council, and the other members of the Lincoln government played a conspicuous part.

Accompanied by a band of music, two cars containing fifty of the representatives citizens of Bound Brook and Middlesex county, left Bound Brook shortly after 9 o'clock to make the first trip over new extension. As the cars passed over Peters' brook bridge, the dividing line between Somerset and Middlesex counties, Mayor Richard Brokaw, of Bound Brook, immersed the dashboard of the first trolley car with a bottle of champagne to celebrate the end of the contentions between the officials of the two counties growing out of the applications for franchises.

As the first car reached the western limits of Lincoln, Mayor Drake, Miss Emma Egel, president of the Common Council, the other women members of the Common Council and a number of Lincoln residents boarded the car. Edward Radel, superintendent of the traction company, who had run the car to this point, then retired from the front platform and delivered the manipulation of the motor into the hands of Miss Egel, who ran the car to the center of Lincoln. Miss Egel performed the duties of motorman or motoress like a veteran, running the car at good speed and clanging the bell to warn the excited residents of the community, who were out in full force waving flags and shooting off fireworks, to get out of the way. All the factory whistles were blowing full blast as the cars came into Lincoln.

In front of the Lincoln statute the cars were stopped, and a picture of Miss Egel, as motoress, was taken to be developed for the benefit of future generations to gaze upon. Then a bevy of school children threw bouquets at the trolley cars and Mayor Drake, ascending a soap box, made an impromptu speech and presented Superintendent Radel with a mammoth bouquet of flowers.

In the meantime Mayor Drake had been wearing a large silver spike set in his vest to resemble a scarf pin. This he took out with a flourish, and while another photograph was being taken Miss Egel struck the first few blows with a gilded maul driving the last spike to complete the construction of the road. Then the other women Councilmen were given a few whacks at the silver spike, as well as a number of the invited guests.

With the band again playing and factory whistles tooting, the cars resumed their trip, with Miss Egel at the motor, and continued to this city without further incident except a demonstration from the people living along the line of the road.

The return trip was made with Mrs. Flora Wrench, a member of the Lincoln Council, at the motor. At Lincoln on the return trip a banquet was served to the guests by Mayor Drake.

This completes the last link in the extensions of the Brunswick Traction Company, and opens up fifty miles of trolley roads to Plainfield.

THIRD REGIMENT BOYS WON'T VOTE.

The voters of the Third Regiment, encamped at Pompton Lakes, almost to a man have signified their intention of not voting for either candidate for Governor in November unless they are allowed to go home to do so. Nearly five-sixths of the regiment are voters and the number of votes will therefore amount to over eight hundred. The members of Company G have already made a binding agreement not to vote in camp. Company I's men say they will not vote there, and from talk Companies A, H, M, F, B, D, E will also fall in line and refuse to vote in camp. Company L's members swear that they will not vote unless it be at home.

It is said that there is little prospect of the regiment leaving Pompton Lakes until after November 1st, and it is very doubtful if it will get away until after election. In fact, the prophets are forecasting another pay there, which means that the Third will remain until possibly the 15th of next month.

ACKERMAN FAILED TO GET THE SENATORSHIP.

Elizabeth Politicians Easily Bested the Plainfielders.

JUDGE CROSS WAS NAMED.

ROGER MURRAY WAS RENOMINATED FOR THE ASSEMBLY.

The Convention Was One of the Most Exciting Ever Held by Union County Republicans—Fight Narrowed Down Between Cross and Ackerman—Donaldson Runyon one of the Secretaries.

Thursday afternoon at Elizabeth, there was a great gathering here of the G. O. P. men from all over the county, to attend the county convention, at which nominations were to be made for State senator, three assemblymen and coroner. Plainfield was early in the race with a candidate for the senatorial nomination. Ernest R. Ackerman was the choice of Plainfield and her delegation stood solidly by him to the end. The outlook for his nomination had been very bright but, at the last moment, Elizabeth rounded up a sufficient vote from the other parts of the county to secure victory for the Elizabeth candidate, Judge Joseph Cross.

The convention met at the Lyceum Theatre, and was called for 3 o'clock, but two hours before that time the delegates began to assemble in the lobby and in front of the theatre.

The Plainfield delegation held a caucus in the Freeholders' rooms at 2:30 o'clock. Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert was chosen chairman of the delegation. It was decided by a unanimous vote that Plainfield should cast its entire thirty-one votes for Mr. Ackerman as long as he remained a candidate.

Just before the convention convened the news went forth that Charles N. Codding had withdrawn from the contest, and that his supporters would be divided among the other candidates. There also came the announcement that Freeholder J. Martin Rohl would not make any attempt for the nomination. Former Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood, had declined in favor of Mr. Ackerman, and his supporters joined hands with the Plainfield delegation.

The convention was called to order at 3:30 o'clock by Charles N. Codding, chairman of the county executive committee. The Plainfield delegation occupied a prominent place just to the left of the centre aisle. The Plainfield delegates all wore blue and gold badges, on which was advocated their candidate for senator, John W. Cliff, of Summit, and William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, were chosen secretaries of the convention. Edward B. Horton, of Cranford, was then elected temporary chairman without opposition. J. W. McMurray, of Plainfield, and Joseph Potter, of Rahway, were appointed a committee to escort the temporary chairman to the stage.

After a brief delay, Chairman Horton announced the makeup of the committees. Plainfield was represented on each one as follows: Credentials, H. Lewis; resolutions, F. E. Marsh; permanent organization, George P. Mellick; rules, B. Maynard. Frank Allen, of Fanwood, was placed on the committee on permanent organization.

A recess of fifteen minutes was taken in which the committees met and prepared their reports. During the interval, John D. Barr, former president of the Elizabeth Common Council, introduced William N. Runyon, of Plainfield and suggested that Mr. Runyon be asked to sing. There were calls for "Runyon," and the popular young Plainfielder responded with a song.

The committees reported at the close of the recess. The committee on permanent organization reported that the temporary organization should be made permanent. The usual rules were presented, while the credential committee reported that there were no contests. Frank Berger, of Elizabeth, as chairman of the committee on resolutions, read those prepared in which the work of the Republican party was applauded and the Republican candidates praised.

The convention then proceeded to the nomination of a Senatorial candidate. The call was made by wards, boroughs and townships. John D. Barr, for the First ward of Elizabeth, nominated Ernest R. Ackerman. The Third and Fourth wards seconded the nomination. The Fifth ward named Judge Joseph Cross, and the remainder of Elizabeth announced Cross as its candidate.

Alex. Gilbert, as chairman of the Plainfield delegation, made an eloquent speech presenting Mr. Ackerman as Plainfield's candidate and seconding his nomination. The First of Rahway came out for Charles N. Codding. Cranford placed James W. Torgenson in nomination. The chairman of the Cranford delegation made a speech in which he said that Cranford had been attending conventions for many years and had always worked for the benefit of the convention. This year she wanted something herself.

Fanwood seconded Mr. Ackerman's nomination. Linden township announced Cross and Linden borough Ackerman. Mountainside also came out for Ackerman. Roselle endorsed Codding, and Summit and Union Cross. Westfield surprised all by seconding Mr. Ackerman's nomination.

The call for the vote came on the four nominees. By this time it was tactly understood that Codding was out of the race. Cranford voted for her favorite son and the rest of the delegates were divided between the Plainfield and Elizabeth men. At first it was nip and tuck and no one could say who would win. Then the advocates of Codding all went over to the Cross faction, while Westfield, which had endorsed Ackerman, cast its vote solidly for Cross. At last it was evident that Judge Cross had secured the nomination. Before the call was scarcely completed there was a scramble among some of the small delegations to have their votes changed from Ackerman to Cross. John D. Barr moved Judge Cross's unanimous nomination and Alexander Gilbert, of Plainfield, seconded it. It was carried with great applause.

Robert G. Houston and George A. Squier, of Elizabeth, and Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield, were named for the nominations for the Assembly, and all three were unanimously elected without contest.

For coroner, John M. Randolph, of Rahway, and Frank C. Stutslen, of the First ward, Elizabeth, were named. A contest ensued, in which the Cross faction supported Randolph, and the friends of Mr. Ackerman stood by the Elizabeth man. The name of the latter being rather difficult to pronounce, there was considerable amusement when most of the delegates favoring him cast their ballot for "Elizabeth." Randolph was finally elected by 88 to 72 votes.

Alex. Gilbert and John D. Barr were appointed a committee to escort the victorious candidates to the theatre and also to bring the Republican candidates for Governor and Congressman.

The ballot for Senator was as follows:

FIRST AUTUMN SOCIABLE.

First Methodist Epworth Leaguers Had a Pleasant Time.

The Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal church gave the first autumn sociable Thursday to introduce their new president and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gee, of Sandford avenue. Mr. Gee was not present, as he did not return from a business trip to Buffalo as soon as he expected, so Mrs. Gee had to do the honors for him.

The church parlor, where the sociable was held, was fitted up to resemble a home, with rugs, easy chairs, couches and lamps, and everyone felt very much at ease. The programme consisted of two vocal solos by Miss Etta Rayhert, who was accompanied on the piano by Miss Maude French, and a talk upon the word "Up" by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell. The sociable was well attended, and everyone had a good time. Refreshments were served at the close of the address. The sociable was in charge of the social committee, of which Miss Persis Snodgrass is chairman.

The Last "At Home."

Mrs. George L. Homan, of Hillside avenue, gave her last "at home" Friday and it was largely attended by Plainfield society folks.

Mrs. J. P. Homan and Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle received, while Mrs. Frank Hubbard and Mrs. E. H. Bird presided in the dining room and poured tea. The house was prettily decorated and the affair was a delightful one.

To Arrange for Anniversary.

Central Lodge A.O.U.W. met Thursday and appointed a committee of three composed of N. C. Magee, C. T. Rogers and I. J. Spicer to arrange for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the lodge December 22. A plan was formulated Thursday to make this anniversary a memorable one, and each member has been asked to aid in securing twenty-five candidates to be initiated that night.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

NUPTIALS OF SCHOMP-WESTPHAL PERFORMED OCTOBER 26TH.

A pretty wedding of October 26th was that of Miss Lucy Annie Westphal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Westphal, of 1001 South Second street, to Fred Bloom Schomp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Schomp, of 712 West Front street, which took place at the home of the bride's parents at 7:30 o'clock in the presence of about fifty guests from this city and other nearby points.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and the Episcopal service was used. The bride was gowned in white mousseline de soie over white silk, trimmed with lace and ribbon. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Amy Gee, of Bayonne, who was the bridesmaid. Mis Gee wore a gown of white Brussels net over cerise silk, and she carried pink roses. The best man was Albert Schomp, brother of the groom.

The house decorations consisted of chrysanthemums and Japanese lanterns, and a beautiful arch of cut flowers was arranged in the parlor beneath which the ceremony was performed. The bride was given away in marriage by her father. Miss Mary Graves played the wedding march.

Following the marriage the bride and groom received the hearty congratulations of their relatives and friends present, and were wished long life with success and happiness. A wedding supper was served to the guests during the evening, and about 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Schomp left the scene of festivities for a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls. On their return they will reside at the home of the bride's parents for the present. When they left the house last evening they were completely showered with old shoes and rice, and their departure was attended with lots of jollity. The gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Schomp are of a useful as well as ornamental nature, and evidence the high esteem of their many friends.

Mrs. Schomp was for several years the chief operator at the local office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, where she made warm and personal friends. Mr Schomp has an excellent position with William Wilson, the West End grocer.

THE BIBLE AND STRONG DRINK

A Lively Discussion at Reform Hall Last Evening

The last chance to argue upon the liquor question and the attitude of the Bible towards using strong drink, was given the members and friends of the Reform Club Thursday. Those who took advantage of the opportunity to speak were Ethan Lanphear, Robert Armstrong, Rev. A. A. Phelps, Charles Rayhert, Mr. Johnson and Benjamin Hand. The speakers took one side or the other, that the Bible forbade the using of strong drink, or else that there was nothing in it to prohibit.

The president, Wm. Smith, did not decide the debate last night but deferred rendering a decision until further consideration. Next Thursday night another discussion, "The Devil in the Box," will be opened. During last night's meeting Mrs. Manley sang a solo and there were two signers to the pledge.

Scrofula is Snake-Like in its subtlety. It lies hidden for years in the ambush of the blood, and when it strikes it voids its venom alike on strength and beauty, disfiguring the one and undermining the other.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is a specific for scrofula in its worst and most malignant forms. Scrofula is a blood disease. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifying medicine. Mineral medicines only drive scrofula below the surface. Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a vegetable remedy and it eradicates the disease. There is no remedy for scrofula equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"I was cured of a long-standing case of scrofula by Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The disease first manifested itself when I was a child, by breaking out in red blotches all over my body. I was not free from the trouble until I took several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. That effected a permanent cure."—MRS. E. H. SNYDER, Lehighton, Pa.

FORD TO MAKE FIGHT FOR THE DEMOCRATS

Nominated For Senator Without Opposition.

EVERYTHING HARMONIOUS.

ELIZABETH SECURED ONLY ONE ASSEMBLY NOMINEE.

Convention Was an Enthusiastic One—P. J. Ryan Chairman—A Number of Plainfielders Given Convention Honors —Assembly Candidates are Collins, Higgins and Scudder—The Platform.

In a convention that was harmonious without lacking a lively interest in their work, the delegates to the Democratic county convention, held in the Star Theatre, Thursday afternoon, nominated a ticket that is generally conceded to be a strong one in all respects, and chosen geographically so that members of the party throughout the county will lend their best endeavors for its success.

Several names were mentioned for Assemblymen, among them being Irving L. Ross and Mulford Scudder, both of Westfield, Phillip E. Tufts, of Rahway, Louis A. Mathis, of Cranford, Francis T. Higgins, of Linden, Capt. D. F. Collins and Capt. George King, of Elizabeth. Nearly all of these gentlemen were around the convention hall in person, and while none were actively engaged in soliciting votes they all admitted their willingness to accept if named by the convention.

Shortly before 3 o'clock John H. Crowell, of Rahway, chairman of the county executive committee, called the convention to order, State Committeeman Peter Egenoff, of Elizabeth, nominated P. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth, for chairman, and he was unanimously chosen. He was escorted to the platform by a committee of which William K. McClure, of Plainfield, was one of the members.

Timothy J. Scott, of Summit, and James Oliver, of Rahway, were named for secretaries and were accepted without opposition. After the call for the convention had been read, Chairman Ryan was authorized to appoint three members each for the convention committee. His selections were as follows: Credentials, Elmore D. Moffett, of Plainfield; William W. Erickson and Samuel D. Redmond.

Resolutions—Josephus Shann, of Rahway; James E. Connoly, of Elizabeth; and James E. Martine, of Plainfield.

Permanent Organization—Andrew P. Huches, of Elizabeth; William F. Swain, of Summit; W. K. McClure, of Plainfield.

After this a recess of thirty minutes was taken to allow the committees to perform their work, and the delegates scattered and discussed politics in general. Col. E. E. Snyder, of East Orange, the Democratic Congressional candidate in the Eighth district, was in the lobby and most of the delegates were given an opportunity of meeting him.

When the convention reconvened the credential committee announced that there were no contests. The committee on permanent organization recommended that Mr. Ryan be continued as chairman. A list of vice-chairmen was announced, among whom was Edward M. VanBuren, of Plainfield.

We, the Union county Democracy, in convention assembled, announce our adherence to the principles of Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden, believing in the widest liberty of the citizen, and the least governmental restraint. We are opposed to the centralizing tendencies of the government, maintained and fostered by the Republican party, and believe that the home affairs of the different States of our united country can be best attended to by the people of those States. We believe in the opening of trade and commerce with all the peoples of the world, and the adoption into our system of government of such territory as lies contiguous to this continent, thus following the policy adopt by the Democratic party, under which our Nation has expanded from the Atlantic seaboard to the shores of the Pacific Ocean.

In State affairs we denounce the legislation of the last four Republican Legislatures, which has been in the interests of combinations of capital and monopolies, and against the just demands of the people.

We demand the enactment of such laws as will give to juries the power to fix the amount of damages to which individuals shall be entitled for injuries caused by the wrongful act of persons or corporations.

We denounce the partisan and unfair legislation which makes a personal registry necessary in the larger cities of the State, while a home-to-home canvass is provided for in the smaller cities and country districts. Such legislation has for its object the disfranchisement of a large number of legal voters in the city and neighboring counties, and merits the severest condemnation at the hands of the people.

We believe in an economical administration of county affairs, and we denounce schemes, which have for their object the aggrandizement of a few as against the whole community; and we insist that every expenditure of money for county purposes should be carefully scrutinized.

We believe that the county records should be put in such condition that they may be accessible to any person who wishes to consult them; but feel that the amount expended for that purpose should be kept within reasonable bounds.

We favor a fair return from all corporations for any franchise which may be conferred by county or city authorities, and feel that all persons, natural and artificial, ought to contribute fairly to the burden which government imposes.

The last paragraph referring to the use of public franchises shows the astute handiwork of Mr. Martine and was suggested by the recent trolley franchise agitation in Plainfield.

Mr. Martine, who was one of the leaders in the convention, then moved that the convention proceed to the nomination of a Senator. James F. Connoly arose for the Third ward of Elizabeth and nominated George A. Ford. There were no other candidates and Mr. Ford was chosen without opposition.

Councilman Hetfield, of Plainfield, then moved that the nominations for Assembly be commenced. Elizabeth delegates presented two candidates, Captain Collins and Captain King. Rahway named Philip E. Tufts, Cranford Louis A. Mathis, Fanwood Irving L. Ross, Linden Francis T. Higgins and Westfield Mulford Scudder.

The vote on the first ballot was as follows: Collins, 91; Scudder, 78; Higgins, 68; Tufts, 61; King, 39; Mathis, 1. The nomination of the first three named was then made unanimous. George A. Horning, of Elizabeth, was unanimously nominated for coroner.

A committee, of which Mr. McClure, of Plainfield, was one, was then appointed by the chairman to escort the nominees to the convention hall. In the meantime E. W. Crane, candidate for Governor, who had come into the hall during the recess amid quite an ovation, and had witnessed the proceedings of the convention from one of the boxes, was introduced to the delegates. He gave them a short talk from the box, in which he related the enthusiasm which he had found among Democrats wherever he had gone. He predicted that if the Democrats only presented a united front on election day victory would be theirs.

Soon after the candidates came into the hall and were greeted with vigorous applause. Each one had a few words to say, thanking the convention for the honor bestowed upon them and promising to do their best to be elected, and if elected to serve the people faithfully.

The convention then adjourned.

A DUNELLEN MARRIAGE.

MISS LILLIAN STAATS BECOMES THE WIFE OF THOMAS G. ROBINSON.

One of the most popular and well-known young ladies of the borough, of Dunellen, Miss Lillian Staats, daughter of ex-Postmaster Peter C. Staats, was married October 26th to Thomas G. Robinson, of Newark. The ceremony took place at the bride's home on North avenue in the presence of the relatives and near friends of the two parties and was one of the prettiest autumn weddings of the year.

The couple were married at 7 o'clock by Rev. E. S. Jamison, pastor of the Methodist church. The bride and groom stood under a floral bell, in the front of the parlor, and the impressive marriage ceremony of the Methodist church was used. They were united with the ring. After the few brief words which made them one were said, the clergyman stepped aside and the young couple were showered with congratulations and good wishes.

The wedding was noted for its simplicity. The bride and groom were unattended, but her brother, Harry Staats, acted as usher. The bride was attired in a pretty dark blue traveling suit.

The house decoratiocs were very pretty. In the front and back parlors they were green and white while in the dining room pink and green predominated. The table presented an inviting appearance with its snowy cloth and sparkling silver and china. Autumn leaves tastefully arranged added color to the scene.

The bride is one of the best known and best liked young ladies in the borough. She has been employed as assistant in the post office for five years, first with her father for four years, and with the present incumbent one year. The groom is an employe of Banks & Miles, a large firm of grocers of Newark. Mr. Robinson lived in Plainfield until a couple of years ago, and was employed by R. O. Howell.

The couple were well remembered with presents, most of which were sent to their future home, 261 Belmont avenue, Newark, which is furnished and ready for them when they return from their honeymoon. The groom's employers remembered him in a substantial manner and the members of the "Somerset Club" and the "Diamond Club," of Newark, both of which the groom belongs to, sent something nice. While in Plainfield Mr. Robinson was a member of the fife and drum corps and Guttman's band.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold marquise ring set with diamonds and emeralds. On their return to Newark the couple will be given a reception at the Somerset Club.

POPULAR COUPLE WED

CEREMONY PERFORMED IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH YESTERDAY.

A charming wedding took place Thursday, October 26th at St. Mary's church, when Miss Katie A. Dorgan, daughter of Thomas Dorgan, of South Plainfield, was married to Thomas Strapp, of this city. The wedding was at 4 o'clock, and Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a very large number of relatives and friends from this city, New York, Brooklyn and other places.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. The wedding march was played by Miss Smith, organist of the church, and previous to the wedding a selection of classical music was rendered.

The bride wore a gown of creame colored silk en train, trimmed with lace and ribbon. She was married with a veil and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorgan, who acted as bridemaid. She was gowned in white chiffon, trimmed with lace and yellow satin ribbon, and carried pink carnations. The best man was Mr Strapp, of New York, a cousin of the groom.

The ceremony was a pretty one and much admired by everyone present. Following it the bridal party returned to the home of the bride at South Plainfield, where a reception was held from 4 o'clock until 10 o'clock. The home was thronged with guests and the happy couple received the best wishes of all for a happy and successful married life. During the evening supper was served and this part of the reception was complete in every particular.

About 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Strapp left their friends amid showers of rice and good wishes, for a honeymoon trip to Washington and the south. On their return they will reside at 701 Berkman street, where the groom has furnished a home complete.

The collection of gifts of a useful and ornamental nature received by Mr. and Mrs Strapp gives strong evidence of their popularity. Last Saturday evening on their return home the employes of the Aluminum Press and Plate Works, where Mr. Strapp holds the position of one of the foremen, met at the home of the bride and groom and presented them with a handsome chiffonier as an evidence of good will and appreciation.

DISCUSSED POPULAR TOPICS.

Profitable Sociable Held by Presbyterian Young People.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the First Presbyterian church held a sociable last Thursday in the chapel of the church which was largely attended by members and friends. The affair was in charge of a committee of which Miss Grace Petrie is chairman. A novel feature was introduced through the introduction of popular topics of the day on slips of paper. These papers were handed to each person present and they were supposed to discuss the several topics among themselves. Among the topics were: war, newspapers, peace, fish stories, Y. P. S. C. E., cooks, games, chestnuts, music, crops, missions and wheels. The discussion of the several topics proved a great source of amusement to all, and some very excellent ideas were brought forth as a result.

MRS. ZEISZ DIED SUDDENLY.

Taken Ill While Out Calling Yesterday and Passed Away Today.

Mrs. Margaret Zeisz, wife of Andrew Zeisz, of New street, died Saturday at 9 o'clock a. m. very suddenly. She was out calling Friday and was taken ill. She was taken into the home of Fred Haberle, West Front street, and later removed to her home. Dr. Currie was called and did all in his power for Mrs. Zeisz. She failed rapidly, however, and passed away very suddenly.

She was seventy-three years of age and had lived in this city for a great many years. She had a large host of relatives and friends, and was beloved by all. She leaves a husband and four children. The funeral services were held last Tuesday afternoon from the German Lutheran church on Grove street.

Death of Mrs. Greene.

The death of Mrs. Harriet S. Greene, wife of Thomas B. Greene, of this city, died Friday evening just before midnight, after an illness extending for a short time past. Mrs. Greene has been a resident of Plainfield for several years, and both she and her husband have lived retired lives. The funeral services were held from the late residence, No. 172 East Front street, last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Broke the Glass.

A large plate glass window in Curtis M. Thorpe's store on Park avenue was broken Friday by an expressman who attempted to go in the door with a large table on his shoulder

BIG TROLLEY LINE IS NOW PROJECTED.

Philadelphia Will Eventually be the Western Terminus.

CONSOLIDATION TO OCCUR.

ROAD WILL ONLY RUN AS FAR AS TRENTON FOR TIME BEING.

Purchase of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company Has Just Been Completed—Success of the Project Depends on Getting Through Plainfield—A Great Scheme for Capitalists.

The purchase of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company by Judge Gottfried Krueger and Andrew and Edward H. Radel has been consummated. The agreement of sale was made last November, and the shares, rolling stock, railway franchises, privileges and other property of the company were to have been transferred May 1st, but the shares were so widely scattered and the other property in such shape that not before last Monday could the transfer be made.

This is a long step in the direction of establishing a great system of trolley roads between Trenton and Elizabeth.

The main line, as projected by the new owners of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, will cross the Raritan at Bound Brook by a bridge now in use. The company will lay rails back to Dunellen, there connecting with the Rikers' street railway, which is to extend between Elizabeth and Dunellen. This will complete the line between Elizabeth and Bound Brook, providing the Rikers get the franchise through Second street in Plainfield.

After crossing the Raritan, at Bound Brook, the new trolley road will strike out for Princeton and Trenton, through the stretch of fine farming country between the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia and Reading Railroads. Already a right of way is being acquired through the farms. Land of a width of thirty feet is being purchased from the Raritan to Trenton. In about a year the right of way will have been secured and the work of construction begun.

This region has no adequate railroad facilities. It has not been tapped by any railroad line between the Millstone Branch of the Pennsylvania and Princeton. The traction company contemplates carrying freight on its line, and in this way the road will be very beneficial to the farmers.

Judge Krueger and the Radel estate now own the New Brunswick road operating between Bound Brook and New Brunswick. The latter city will be connected with the main line by a spur branching from the main line some miles below the Raritan.

When this new trolley system is in operation it will be possible to go all the way from New York to Trenton by trolley. Moreover, Judge Krueger recently had a talk with a representative of a road projected between Trenton and Camden, and all built excepting ten miles. A connection with this road would enable one to go all the way to Philadelphia by trolley.

LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

Mrs. Gielow's Sympathetic Sketches of Negro Characters and Incidents.

A fashionable audience assembled at the Park Club last Thursday and listened with pleasure to Mrs. Henry J. Gielow, of Greenville, Ala., who entertained with sketches of life in the south on plantation. She gave original character sketches, monologues, poems and cradle songs. Mrs. Gielow was cordially received by all and her impersonation of negro folk-lore captured her audience. Her recitations throughout evidenced a delicate humor and pathos that was delightful, and bore the great merit of originality. At times her audience was convulsed with laughter, and then again there was a silence during which one could almost hear a pin drop.

Mrs. Gielow stated at the opening that many of her sketches were the result of her personal association with the colored folks of the south, and especially in her own home. She lived in the same town in which Lieut. Hobson was born and lived, and this announcement evoked hearty applause from all During her stay in this city Mrs. Gielow was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, of Washington Park.

Volunteers Wanted

The Relief Association would be glad if two ladies would volunteer to take charge of the "Mother's Sewing Class" which meets at the Relief rooms, 544 West Front street, Friday afternoons at 2 o'clock. Ladies to visit among the beneficiaries are also much needed. Will the friends of the association please remember that donations of worn clothing are desired and any matereial even the contents of piece bags can be made use of.

—The streets of the borough are now in excellent condition and travelers appreciate the fact.

DEMOCRATS READY FOR ORGANIZATION.

Enthusiastic Conference of Leaders Monday Night.

PLANS WERE DISCUSSED.

PERMANENT ASSOCIATION WAS FORMED YESTERDAY.

Representatives From All the Wards Were Present—Democratic Association Will Probably be Formed After Constitution and By-laws are Decided —John M. Hillman Was Chairman

An unexpected and very gratifying interest and attendance of representative Democrats from various sections of the city was shown Monday night in the meeting held in Councilman Moffett's office on North avenue for the purpose of deciding upon plans for the reorganization of the Democratic party in this city on a thorough, active working basis. The various wards were represented as follows by committees appointed by the chairmen of the last ward primaries:

First ward—Walter L. Hetfield, Joseph C. Blimp, George R. Wyckoff, John L. Force, John Angleman, William Gloak and Michael J. DeCourey.

Second ward—John H. Hillman, James E. Martine, Sylvester Sharkey, W. K. McClure, Leonard Spangenberg, Alfred Cox and James B Guttridge.

The conference was called to order by Councilman Moffett, of the Fourth ward, and John M. Hillman, of the Second ward, was unanimously chosen as chairman. W. W. St. John was chosen as secretary.

M. E. Flynn, of the Fourth ward, who suggested the reorganization movement in the Fourth ward primary, which took the initiative in the matter, was called upon to explain the purpose of the meeting. Briefly, Mr. Flynn recounted the well-known lethargic condition of the party as it now constituted in the city—merely an empty title, to whose support now and then when primaries were held a few people accorded perfunctory aid. Mr. Flynn said he believed that the time was ripe for a thorough reorganization of the party machinery and that with a little effort a wonderful change could be brought about. Just what line of reorganization should be decided upon he had no decided opinions, but suggested that an association which would enroll every Democratic voter in the city and arouse his personal interest in the welfare of the party would be the proper method.

The secretary, who had in his possession a copy of the old constitution and by-laws of the defunct Democratic Association, read the essential parts of the by-laws to the meeting. They provide for the enrollment of every Democratic voter in the city, dues of 25 cents a year to be exacted from members. Honorary members from out of town, who have no votes in the business of the association, are privileged to be elected. The officers are president, vice-presidents from each election district, corresponding secretary, financial secretary, treasurer and a number of committees such as executive, finance, printing, public meetings, canvassing and naturalization. It was stated that in a general way the rules and regulations of the old Democratic Association would probably serve, with some slight alterations and improvements to meet the present condition of affairs, the new organization that was to be formed.

Chairman Hillman also presented copies of the by-laws of the Kings County Democracy and the Shepperd Democracy of Brooklyn. Mr. Hillman, who was at one time closely identified with both organizations, and was, in fact, one of the leading organizers of the latter Democracy, gave a brief description of the way they were operated

F. M. Bacon, of the Third ward, moved that the committee of one from each ward be appointed to draft suitable constitution and by laws for the organization and report at the next meeting. The following were appointed: Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, Counselor W. K. McClure, F. M. Bacon and M. E. Flynn, the chairman to serve ex-officio.

On the suggestion that a committee be appointed to secure rooms, Councilman Moffett tendered the use of his office to the Democrats till a permanent organization could be formed.

Mr. Hillman, who, as stated above, has had extended and practical experience in political organization, gave a short talk on the essential things required in organization, first and foremost of which was the necessity of every member of the party lending his best efforts personally to the movement. Finance was also an important matter, Mr. Hillman said. A properly conducted organization would need plenty of cash to run it, and every Democrat should feel it his duty to give whatever he felt that he could afford to give. To make the movement effective the organization should flourish the year around, and an important fact in this connection was the headquarters. Rooms should be secured and kept open the year around, virtually forming a club, where meetings could be held when desired, the daily papers kept on file and a place made for all Democrats to meet socially and unreservedly. Mr. Hillman ended by saying that all of his experience in organizing political movements was at the service of the Plainfield Democrats and that he would gladly to do whatever he could to make the movement a success in every particular.

Councilman Hetfield and Counselor McClure also spoke briefly of the need of the thorough organization and the personal efforts of all Democrats to make it a success.

Before the meeting closed a liberal sum of money was collected for the secretary to purchase an enrollment book and a book to keep the minutes in.

A Fanwood Marriage.

Charles Kyte, of Fanwood, has sent out invitations for the marriage of his granddaughter, Grace Estelle Kyte to Stranton Williams Pentz, Wednesday evening, November 9th at 8 o'clock, in All Saints church, Fanwood.

THE WORK INCREASES FASTER THAN INCOME.

GREAT NEED FOR FUNDS.

PATIENTS INCREASED 500 PER CENT. BUT FUNDS ONLY 75 PER CENT.

Statistics That Show the Trying Situation at a Glance—Economy Administration During the Last Year—Invested Funds Amounting to $6,510 88, Only Produce $328 35—119 Contributors

The annual report of the Hospital for 1897-98, issued Tuesday, contains details of the work of the year, most of which have appeared in The Press from time to time.

The most striking feature of the report is the comparison made between the work, income and expenses of the Hospital during the year just passed and during 1892-93, five years ago. The report says:

"A very brief review will show that during the last few years the growth of resources of the Hospital has not been commensurate with the growth of its work, and a comparison of the more important items of regular receipts and expenditures for the Hospital years 1892-3 and 1897-8 will strikingly show the disproportion.

The following figures show the numbers of patients and the receipts from the different sources mentioned in the two years referred to, and the ratio of increase or decrease:

Patients—Indoor, 1892-3, 113; 1897-8, 256; increase, 144. Dispensary—1892-3, 78; 1897 8, 438; increase, 360.

Receipts—From donations of money, 1892-3, $1,847.50; 1897-8, $3,818.90; increase, $1,971.40. Paying patients, 1892-3, $1,095.90; 1897-8, $1914 37; increase, $819.17. Hospital Sunday collections, 1892-3,$457.31; 1897-8, $319 31; decrease, $138. Totals—1892-3, $3 400.01; 1897 8, $6,052.58; increase, $2 652 57.

Thus it appears that while during the last five years the number of in door patients has increased 130 per cent. and the number of dispensary patients has increased 460 per cent. the aggregate regular income of the hospital from the principal sources mentioned has increased only 75 per cent.

The increase in the principal items of ordinary expenditure affected by the number of patients treated are for medicines, provisions, and salaries and wages, and are as follows: Medicines, $456 63; provisions, $426.36; salaries and wages, $1,363.80. Total, $2.247.69

These figures, which show a ratio of increase of expenditure for the items mentioned less than the ratio of increase in the numbers of patients treated, indicate economy of administration during the last year.

In regard to the immediate needs of the hospital the report says:

The invested funds of the hospital, aggregating $6.510.80, produced during the last year an income of only $328 35, and now, as always, the chief support of the institution must come from regular contributions.

The hospital has friends and the board is pleased to note the number increasing; but all do not realize its pecuniary needs nor manifest their interest in a practical way. Plainfield and with Plainfield have together a population estimating 20,000, including more than 3,000 voters, and in such a community surely more than 119 contributors of money should be found. The number should rather be expressed by thousands, and if during the coming year a general canvass for contributions be deemed best, it is hoped that the representatives of the hospital will meet a kind and considerate reception and generous response.

Ordinary current expenses of administration, however, should not alone receive attention. The number of patients at times reaches the limit of the capacity of the hospital, and the pressure for enlargement and additional facilities is constant. The hospital building now contains one ward for males and one for females, with a very limited number of separate rooms for private patients and special cases requiring isolation. Separate wards for medical and surgical cases, both male and female, are needed, and many will recall the annoyance and dissatisfaction frequently felt by reason of the lack of accommodations for the reception and treatment of cases of contagious disease. Such cases, as will be readily understood, cannot be admitted without peril to the lives or health of other patients, and the admission of any such case is forbidden by the constition of the hospital. The Board of Governers, however, recognizes the fact that some provision for cases of contagious disease is desirable, but cannot maintain separate buildings for such cases unless furnished with adequate means.

The construction at the present time of a costly permanent brick or stone building, designed to meet all requirements of hospital service for many years to come, may not be wise but some enlargement of accommodations is needed. This matter is of common interest to the entire community; and to it the attention and earnest consideration of all is invited and urged. Any suggestions touching the solution of the problems involved will be welcomed by the board of governors, and any aid towards the accomplishment of the ends in view will be gratefully received. All are invited to visit the hospital and investigate its work, and the officers and superintendent will gladly facilitate inquiry and furnish information.

THEIR SEVENTH YEAR.

QUEEN CITY LODGE CELEBRATE AN AUSPICIOUS EVENT.

Anniversary Exercises Attended by a Large Number of Members—History of the Lodge—Smoker Followed the Business.

The seventh anniversary of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., was appropriately celebrated last Monday in the lodge rooms on West Second street. There was a large number of members present and a short history of the lodge was presented for the consideration of all. There is now a membership of about one hundred and fifty, and there is nearly $1,000 in the treasury. The lodge is in a very prosperous condition and new members are constantly being taken in. At the meeting next Monday evening there will be initiation.

After the business of the evening was transacted the members enjoyed a smoker and a phonographic entertainment given by Salmon C. Baker, a member of the lodge. There was also a number of speeches by members of the home lodge and of visiting lodges, after which all adjourned to the banquet room where Messrs. Thaddeus Smith, Charles Randolph and William Barbour, the committee in charge, provided a bountiful collation for all. After the inner man was filled there were more speeches and the happy event was brought to an end after all had congratulated each other on the successful growth of the lodge.

PRESENTATION OF BOOKS.

A Gift Which Will Prove of Practicable Value to Miss Shinn.

Monday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union there was a programme of special interest. After the devotional exercises and the teaching of the lesson, Miss Beeching, on behalf of the members, presented to Miss Julia Shinn, the city missionary from the First Baptist church, four valuable books and an autograph book containing the names of the members, which will assist her in her proposed work in preparing for foreign mission work.

Miss Beeching made a pleasant speech in presenting the books, and Miss Shinn in accepting them thanked the union most heartily for their acceptable gift. Following the presentation the members enjoyed a social time in which all bid Miss Shinn an affectionate adieu. Miss Shinn will leave the city in a few days for Newton, Mass., to prepare for her work in foreign fields

A HALLOW 'EEN SUPPER

Given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue Church.

A pleasant Hallow 'een event of last Monday was the supper and entertainment given in Monroe Avenue church under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of which Mrs. Lathe is the president. The affair was arranged and given for the benefit of the church and was largely attended. Supper was served between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock and nearly everything was disposed of. The menu was an excellent one and the large number of people who partook were loud in their praise of it.

During the evening there was a short and informal programme of music and recitations. Stephen Hafland L. A. Hummer, Jr., favored the audience with several excellent piano selections, while Mrs. Grannatt and Miss Foster gave readings and recitations.

Hollow'een Parties.

In connection with Hollow'een there were several parties about town. One was given by Miss Edith Pruden, of East Second street. There were about twenty five guests present and the evening was passed in playing all sorts of games. Another party was given by Miss Clara Williams, of Madison avenue, and games furnished the chief amusement. So far as the boys and girls were concerned the night was one of great pleasure and everyone indulged freely in all sorts of frivolities. Many people are glad the event is over, but when another Hollow'een rolls around the small boy and girl will be just as much in evidence.

A Soldier Sick

Word was received in this city last week by Mrs. Charles Boggs, of Warren street, that her brother, William Dennis, who before enlisting in the army was a machinist in Scott's, was lying very ill in a Philadelphia hospital. Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Boggs went to see their relative and found him very ill and weak. It is thought that he will pull through, however.

BUNCO MEN WERE ONCE ESTEEMED RESIDENTS.

How Plainfield Received a Rude Shock Last January.

RESPECTED BIG CRIMINALS.

THEY POSED HERE AS QUITE SUBSTANTIAL BUSINESS MEN.

Spencer and Ludlum Lived in Quiet Style and by Their Demeanor in This City Made the People Regard Them as Estimable Residents—Story of New Years Eve Supper—His Attempted Escape

When the news that the man known as George Spencer, esteemed resident of Putnam avenue in this city, was arrested last January as he was about to board a steamer for Europe in Philadelphia to escape the minions of the law, Plainfield received a rude shock in its confidence in human nature. Posing here as a quiet, substantial business man, austere in a general way, though a perfect Chesterfield to those with whom he was acquainted, Plainfielders could scarcely believe the charge that he was the king of bunco steerers in this country and was a large dealer in gold bricks, etc., for the purpose of parting confiding agriculturists and their financial hoards of years of hard toil. But such he really proved to be and a few months ago he was sentenced to fourteen years in prison. Plainfield had forgotten all about the great bunco steerer until Monday they read of his escape to liberty.

Spencer alias Reed, alias Greenlage lived in elaborate style in a house on Carlton avenue, near Watchung, with spacious bow windows hung with lace curtains, and parlors well filled with bric-a-brac. Not far from the Reed house lived a family known as the Ludlums on Putnam avenue, who likewise seemed to be well-to-do and were the bosom friends of the Reeds. Subsequent events proved that Lou Ludlum was the particular pal of Reed in his bunco practices.

There was a small party at the Spencer house last New Year's eve. Messrs. Spencer and Ludlum had returned home after a long absence.

Business had been good and the Merry Christmastide had been gaily celebrated. Only guests from out of town were bidden to the jollification.

Next day neighbors saw Spencer and Ludlum going down Putnam avenue for the last time, but they returned quietly and for three days following they were at home.

Then they took a trolley car to Netherwood and a day or two later came a despatch from Philadelphia saying that John Reed, alias George Spencer, alias John Greenhalge, of Plainfield and the United States at large, had been arrested by State Detective Whitney, of Massachusetts, and was awaiting requisition papers, on a charge of swindling farmers by the green goods and three card monte process.

Detective Whitney returned to Massachusetts to get requisition papers. Reed declined to say a word, but declared he must consult counsel.

Meanwhile, Mr. Ludlum disappeared. When Reed was arrested in Philadelphia he appeared to be making plans to go abroad.

FIRST OF THE STAR COURSE.

J. Williams Macy Entertained the Audience Very Cleverly.

The Star Y. M. C. A. course of entertainments were opened last Monday in an auspicious manner. There was a large attendance of people and in the audience were seen many new faces, while the patrons were on hand as usual. J. Williams Macy, humorist and buffo-basso, entertained the audience, while Miss Carrie Dewey, of this city, assisted on the piano. Mr. Macy is an artist of great ability and his work last evening was of the highest order. He recited a number of poems and selections written especially for himself by well-known writers. Some of his selections were very pathetic and sad, while others abounded with humor. Mr. Macy had complete control of his audience throughout and could easily have entertained for a much longer period. Those in charge of these entertainments deserve great credit for the very excellent list of entertainers secured for 1898-1899.

Won the Cake.

A Hallow'een party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones in honor of their guest, Miss F. Jones, of Easton. Music was rendered by Miss Jones and Thomas Randall. Music and playing games were the features of the evening. There was a cake walk and the cake was awarded to the most graceful couple, Miss Dollie Bolsterli and Frank Jones The lucky prize in the cake was won by Frank Schafer.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and wife will move into their new home this week. The house is new completed and electric lights and water is now being placed in the structure.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure Ripans Tabules. In a hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a lozenge and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?" He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press and coming out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES packed in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FIVE CENTS the carton. This low-priced style is designed to meet the requirements of those who, for economical reasons, cannot afford to buy the 60-cent bottle. A tabule can be had by mail by sending forty cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL CO., No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Ten cartons will be sent for forty cents. Ripans Tabules may also be had of some druggists, stores and others who do not keep them, but who will procure them promptly if requested to do so by their customers.

Wine Making in Portugal.

In great emergency when all the men are demanded in the vineyards, women are called to assist in wine treading. Our correspondent saw young women wearing their own garments which they skilfully gather up around them until they assume the biggest and most abbreviated of Dutchman's "britchen" costumes, while in the winery.

ENTERTAINED AT EUCHRE.

Monday Evening Club Met With Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lowe.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Lowe, of Park avenue, entertained the Monday Evening Euchre Club at their home last Monday in a delightful manner. This was the first meeting of the club, which comprises about thirty members, and the affair throughout was one of great pleasure to all. The home was prettily decorated for the occasion and the hospitality of the host and hostess was proverbial.

The first and second prizes for the women were won by Mrs. Howard Fleming and Mrs. O. T. Waring, while H. M. Stockton and E. H. Ladd, Jr., were presented with the first and second honors for the men. Following the games refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The club will meet again in two weeks.

Election News.

BIG REPUBLICAN SWEEP.

PLAINFIELD ROLLS UP ONE THOUSAND PLURALITY FOR THE G. O. P.

In Plainfield Roger Murray Leads the Ticket By 1,009, With Cross, Fowler and Voorhees Next in Order—Results Throughout Somerset and Union Counties.

The Republicans of Plainfield surprised both city and county leaders of the G. O. P. as well as their opponents, by giving the Republican ticket a plurality of almost a thousand votes. Although the campaign that preceded the election was a quiet one, the vote was surprisingly heavy. The Republican leaders expected and counted on a plurality of from 700 to 800 for their candidates, but their expectations were exceeded by 200. The Democratic organization was in better working order than it has been for several years and the Democratic ticket polled 213 more votes in the city than at the county election last year.

The day was a pleasant one. A large majority of the voters enjoyed a holiday and dropped in at the polling places all day. Both parties made a strong effort to get their vote out early but the Democratic workers claim that they were unable to get the full vote out.

On account of the unsuccessful candidacy of E. R. Ackerman for the State senatorial nomination on the Republican ticket, it was expected that his successful rival, Judge Cross, would be cut, particularly in the Third Ward. He was, however, as stoutly supported here as any other place in the county. It was expected that Assemblyman Roger F. Murray would run ahead of his ticket, and he did, in the First and Third wards more noticeably.

The fact that Elvin W. Crane was candidate for Governor on two tickets, the Regular Democratic and the County Democracy tickets, resulted in a larger vote for him than any other Democratic candidate. On the County Democracy ticket he was the only candidate, and the voters who cast their ballot for him on this ticket voted for none of the other candidates. This probably lowered the county Democratic vote a small number, as there were 44 County Democracy ballots cast in the city.

Another result of the candidacy of Crane on two tickets was to slightly reduce Voorhees' plurality in comparison with the rest of the Republican candidates. According to the complete returns, Voorhees' plurality in Plainfield was 898. S. F. Murray received the greatest plurality in the city, 1009. Congressman Fowler received 995 plurality and Judge Cross, candidate for state senator 987 plurality. The total Republican vote in the city was 1798, and the regular Democratic 849.

The Republicans of the borough polled a plurality of about 250, a good Republican plurality but nothing phenominal. The Democrats of the borough made their fight on the Assembly candidate and E. E. Cooper, the Republican candidate, ran nearly 50 behind his ticket. Howell and Van-Doren ran well with the ticket.

UNION COUNTY.

The Republicans made substantial gains in all Union county as well as in Plainfield. The entire G. O. P. ticket was elected by pluralities averaging 700 and 800 more than at the election last year. Union county gave Voorhees 2,227 plurality as against 1514 for Griggs in 1895. Fowler received a plurality of 2,443. In 1896 he received a plurality of 5,412 in the county. Cross ran slightly behind his ticket with a plurality of 2,033. The pluralities of the Assemblymen averaged 2,200. Houston ran highest with 160 votes more than Squier, who was 90 votes ahead of Murray. The vote throughout the county was large.

DUNELLEN.

Dunellen, N. J., Nov. 9.—There was a good vote cast here Tuesday. Out of a registry list of 328, 293 votes were polled. Crane ran ahead of his ticket and polled 174 votes to Voorhees' 128. The day passed quietly, and the greatest number of votes were cast in the morning. The vote for Governor is as follows: Crane, Dem., 154; Voorhees, Rep., 128; Landon, Pro., 10; Schrayshuen, Peoples, 1.

For member of Congress, Howell, Rep., 154; Convery, Dem., 121; Bird, THOUSANDS VIEWED ELECTION RETURNS.

WAS MAGNIFICENT SERVICE.

COMPLETE REPORTS GIVEN FROM STATE, COUNTY AND CITY.

North and Park Avenues Blocked by Great Throng That Watched the Returns as They Were Flashed on the Screen—Much Enthusiasm Shown—How the Press Secured the News Quickly and Completely.

From all over the city they came to watch the Daily Press bulletin of election returns last Tuesday. On a great sheet spread across the front of the Taylor building at the corner of North and Park avenue, the news of the election from all over the country was flashed by the light of the stereopticon. National, state, county and local returns were shown to the crowd that stretched far along North avenue from curb to curb and way out Park avenue. From eight o'clock, when the first returns were bulletined, until one o'clock this morning and the result was certain, two and three thousand people waited and watched and cheered.

It was the only place in the city where the people could learn anything of how the election was going and the enterprise of the Daily Press in providing such an opportunity was appreciated by all. Praise came from Republicans and Democrats alike for the Daily Press in thus keeping its patrons and friends in touch with the situation. The fairness with which both parties were treated was highly commended.

The notice that the returns would be shown during the evening attracted a large crowd long before eight o'clock. Then the returns came fast and the crowd cheered or groaned as the report happened to please them. Tin horns and a bugle added to the din of the voices. John Naegle was in charge of the stereopticon and handled it in excellent fashion. There wasn't a break to mar the evening and the returns were thrown on the screen with a promptness and rapidity that kept the people right up with the situation.

The Daily Press was particularly fortunate in the excelent service it was able to secure. The full service of the Postal Telegraph Company was received together with complete returns furnished by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, which included New York and New Jersey in detail. The Standard News Association also gave New York and New Jersey returns. The returns in this State and Union county were early secured through the co-operation of the Newark Evening News and the Elizabeth Daily Journal. Somerset county was heard from through correspondents in Somerville.

In this city, a large corps of Daily Press reporters kept in touch with the vote all through the city and the crowd watching the bulleting was able to see just how the city vote was going and to learn the complete returns in each district as soon as the count was completed.

The result was uncertain until mid night. In New York, both sides claimed the victory, but the tidings in New Jersey began to favor Voorhees as early as 10:30 o'clock. Nothing was settled, however, until nearly midnight. Then the crowd went wild and howled and cheered itself hoarse.

Some of the more enthusiastic scurried around and secured materials for half-a-dozen great bon-fires that illuminated Park and North avenue until 2 o'clock Wednesday morning.

At 1 o'clock it was certain that both New York and New Jersey had gone Republican by varying majorities and the display of returns was ended. This morning everybody was loud in their commendation of the enterprise of the Daily Press in giving the returns so fully to the people.

OPENING DAY OF GOLF FOR THE PARK CLUB.

One of the Most Conspicuous Society Events of the Season.

THE FIRST SCORES MADE.

SILVER PRIZES OFFERED FOR THE BEST PLAYING.

Pretty Clubhouse Decorated for the Occasion and Therein the Ladies Served Tea—Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers Won the Lady's Prize and George Richards the Gentleman's—Description of Course.

The formal opening of the Park Golf Club and the course took place yesterday and was one of the most auspicious social events of the season. Throughout the entire day the course was filled with golf enthusiasts from the borough and city. There was fully 200 people present during the day, and all were impressed with the nicety of arrangement. The pretty clubhouse was decorated tastefully by the lady members of the club, and during the afternoon a tea was given by Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. F. G. Meade, Mrs. Pierre Malli, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. H. D. Hibbard, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Miss Edith Hyde, Miss Caroline Randolph, Miss Ann's Murphy, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Shepard, Miss Margaret McCutchen. There was a large attendance at the tea, and including the guests were many members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and many people prominent in social and business circles.

Tee club offered two prizes, a silver loving cup and a silver powder case, in competition for the lowest scores made by the ladies and gentlemen. There were not many excellent scores made on account of the fact that the grounds are new to most of the players. Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers won the ladies' prize with a score of 134, and George Richards with a score of 103 won the prize for the gentlemen. During the day the following scores were made in addition to the two given above: Aubrey Crowe, 121; Herbert Crowe, 137; W. A. Townsend, 120; G. W. Faber, 123; Edward Overton, 135; Herbert Rogers, 139; L. W. Howard, 157; F. O. Ball, 154; Olaf Saugstad, 110; W. J. R. Thiers, 155; M. T. Townsend, 129; Arthur Peck, 129; J. L. Myers, 141; Arthur Murpty, 157; S. St. John McCutchen, 176; George T. Rogers, 133; S. Townsend, 142; J. H. Howell, 130; Frank Talmage, 109; Miss Watson, 196; Miss VanBoskerck, 135; C. S. Cook, 181; Clarence Murphy, 146; E. T. Douglass, 147; H. D. Hibbard, 124; W. H Anderson, 115. There were several other players but they did not turn in their scores. Charles Hyde made one round of the course, nine holes, and his score was 80. All of the other players went around the course twice. Mr. Bendalow, the golf expert, was present and he went over the course several times, with no particular effort to lower his score.

SAN REMO TEAM WON BY ONE TOUCHDOWN.

Plainfield Football Eleven Defeated in First Game.

THE SCORE WAS 5 TO 0.

PLAINFIELD LACKED IN WEIGHT AND TEAM PLAY.

Visitors Had Number of Substitutes in Second Half—Only One Change on Local Team—Narrow Escape of Plainfield in First Half—There Was Very Little Kicking Done in Game.

It was a close game but the visitors proved too much for the local players and the San Remo team of the New York Athletic Club was victorious over the Plainfield team by a score of 5 to 0. Superior weight and better team playing were the advantages of the visitors. It was a plucky fight, however, by the local boys and they did good work considering their lack of practice.

The game was played on Martine field before a crowd numbering eight hundred people. There was a lack of organized rooting but considerable enthusiasm was shown.

Plainfield had the choice and took the western goal to defend and played with the wind. San Remo had the kick-off. Milne finally got possession and advanced the ball to the centre before he was downed. San Remo took possession of the ball on a fumble and advanced it steadily to within a foot of the Plainfield goal, there to loose it on downs.

Then the local boys made a great effort. The signal came for a fake kick but was misunderstood and bounced over the line where McGee picked it up and carried it back again before the San Remo backs could stop him. The Plainfield team then took a brace and carried the ball back to the middle of the field at the end of the first half.

In the second half, Plainfield was on the defensive most of the time. The only change in the team was the substitution of Phillips for Darling at quarter. Cuming played a great game throughout, getting in the fiercest of the tackling.

Gradually the San Remos hammered the Plainfield line and gained steadily until four minutes before the call of time. Simm dove through left tackle for three yards and a touchdown. Huntington failed to kick the goal.

The game ended with the ball in Plainfield's territory where it had been most of the game. The Plainfield team was slack in its interference but the men held at it pluckily and refused to lose heart up to the very last.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		SAN REMO.
Carey	right end	McMillen, Hunt
Shinn	right tackle	Simm
Brown	right guard	Worcester
Cuming	centre	Morris
Milne	left guard	Arnold, Carr
Lewis	left tackle	Handley, Wesley's
Darling, Phillips	quarterback	Wenk
Smith	right halfback	W. Gilham
McGee	fullback	Lutes

THE ARTIST'S PUPIL.

It was the Lady Clara Curzon's first London season. Six months before, she had romped in the nursery adorned with a pinafore and pigtail but now she was bursting the bud and developing into a society rose of the fairest blush. To effect this development her mother, the Duchess of Bracering, a celebrated beauty in her time, had sacrificed much, though, like the Spartans of old, she concealed the trouble which gnawed at her vitals with quiet dignity and considerable tact. Every one hazarded that a break-up of some kind must sooner or later take place, for the ducal estates were heavily encumbered, and the financial position of the noble family was becoming more and more rotten at the core. Of this little Lady Clara knew nothing. Her buoyant young heart was entirely free from the weighty considerations which engaged her mature parents' thought. The pinafore and pigtail had been good enough for her, and beyond a childish appreciation of fine feathers, she had treated her court attire with little respect. She had inherited romance—an affection which, in the opinion of her mother said—from wayward ancestors who had wedded where eyes and heart and not reason had dictated; hence the fragile state of the family purse from which the duchess, herself veined with spotless feelings of effete blue, had now to suffer.

"I mean to marry some one who is talented and artistic," Lady Clara announced, when suitors were talked of, "not a popinjay who will divide his affections between me and a racing stable."

She echoed this from her friend Eldred Raymond, a clever girl whose poems had entitled her to a prominent position among the select coterie known as "Souls."

The allusion to the racing stable poked at the unlucky young duke who was first favorite in her mother's calculations. Second in the running came a millionaire, son of a prosperous manufacturer, whose name was ignored by Lady Clara, in spite of its all-pervasiveness on hoardings, boardings and advertisement sheets. The youth himself, who was not "in society," was privately known to the Duchess of Bracering, in consequence of certain mortgaging transactions wherein the signatures of the husband of the lady and the clerklike autograph of his father sat cheek by jowl. Mr. Blakewell junior was in fact a solicitor, though a sleeping partner in the paternal concern, and he was professionally engaged in the two harrowing details in the Bracerings' financial history. Painfully aware, too, because alas! he had, like the cats who look unreservedly at kings, taken in every beautiful line of Lady Clara's young face, and had often had gazed on her from afar—at the opera, the Savoy, Niagara; because, wherever money could carry him, there he had been for the express purpose of feasting his eyes on the one object he had ever looked at with love.

When, therefore, the contumacious Clara twisted her pert little nose at the horsey duke, her parent's distressed thoughts rebounded to the manufacturer, for his calling of the law she looked upon merely a necessity veil to cover the aggressive complexion of the world-famed trade.

"You might marry a wealthy parvenu who would set the old house on its legs again," the lady ventured to hint, "and smother your face in your only fortune, my darling."

"And a very nice face, too. I mean to marry some one who'll appreciate it—paint it, or sing odes to it—anything but plant it at the head of a table like a well-fed lamb! Aunt Sally for people to fling compliments at;" and Lady Clara danced off with Miss Raymond to sit for a picture that Selwin Forrest, A. R. A., was in act of receiving.

Between the artist and Eldred, Lady Clara's views were being in a bohemian turn, highly disconcerting to her unhappy mamma, and, during the Duchess' next interview with the solicitor, she made haste to bemoan her daughter's vagaries. She has almost promised an introduction, and in the present state of affairs was duly aware that the manufacturers' son stood little chance, and, moreover, that any attempts at coercion might make the already restive little filly totally ungovernable.

"It was the greatest mistake having her portrait painted," she groaned; "my child has picked up the studio jargon, and loves about 'values,' and all that kind of rubbish."

A HAPPY MISTAKE.

"Daisy, did I hear you promise that fellow to go to the picnic with him next Tuesday?"

"What fellow?" asked Daisy icily.

"You know who I mean." Dick was pale with jealousy and wrath.

"I presume that I can go with whom I choose," answered Daisy, haughtily.

"So you can; and I want you now to make your choice; but I tell you, once for all, that if you throw me over for that fellow, you will be done with me forever."

"What right have you to speak to me in that tone? I am not your slave, and I shall go with Doctor Fenwick to the picnic."

"Well," he said shortly, and turning on his heel, walked off in the direction of the barn.

As Daisy entered the cool dining-room Miss Maria was standing at the window with her arms akimbo, gazing out at the prospect.

"That boy," she said solemnly, "that boy ain't himself. I shouldn't be surprised if he's driven to do something desp'rate," and she looked resentfully at Daisy.

"You don't eat anything, Daisy," kindly said Uncle Edward, who never saw much of what was going on right before his eyes. "Maybe you think the weather's too warm for hot rolls and coffee. Well, take some iced milk and berries. Why, bless me! What's the matter with the child?"

Daisy had burst into tears.

"That girl's in trouble, but out of doors where she could relieve her heart by sobbing unseen and unheard. Passing through the garden and the orchard, she followed the little footpath which led to a pretty strip of woodland. Here in a cool ravine ran a narrow but rather deep stream between mossy banks.

There had been a little rustic bridge leading to the hillside beyond, but this had been lately washed away, after a heavy rain and—wasn't that Dick, his arms folded, with his eyes bent upon the deep pool which the rocks had just here pent in?

A sudden fear seized Daisy. Surely, surely, Dick could not be thinking of drowning himself. She stood still and breathless, watching him.

Presently he started, as if from a revery, and with his lips compressed into a firm look of resolve, picked up a coil of rope which lay at his feet. Then he wound and wound and wound the tall, straight tree, growing close to the edge of the stream, loking up into its thick foliage as if for a convenient branch to which to attach it.

For a moment she felt paralyzed, but with a great effort she hurriedly make a noose on one end of the rope, and prepare to climb the tree, the spell was broken. She rushed forward with a wild shriek and threw her arms about him.

"Dick—dear Dick—don't do such a dreadful thing. Don't hang yourself, Dick—for my sake, don't. Oh, forgive me, dear Dick, and I'll never tease or grieve you again."

He looked down into the white face of the sobbing girl and his stern eyes softened. But then he said gloomily—

"How can I believe you, Daisy? You have as good as told me that you do not love me, and without you I don't care to live."

"Dick, I am dreadfully. Dick! I—I do love you."

"Answer me truly, Daisy. Do you really love me?"

"Yes," sobbed the girl. "Indeed I do, Dick! Please throw away that dreadful rope!"

"Yes—oh, yes."

"And you will marry me, Daisy?"

"Yes, I will, Dick; indeed I will!"

Dick slid down the rope into a thicket of laurel on the other side of the stream, and drawing Daisy to him, kissed her solemnly.

"Remember you have promised to be very true, Daisy."

"Yes," she answered meekly. And so, hand in hand, they returned through the orchard and the garden to the house.

"Well, Dick," said he, cheerfully, "have you fixed that tree with the rope all ready to pull it down in the right direction?"

"No," answered Dick, quietly, "I'll attend to it to-morrow."

"Well, don't forget it, for the sooner that bridge is finished the better, if we want to get the hay over in good time."

Daisy stopped and looked straight up into Dick's face.

"You have deceived me," she said, indignantly.

"No, Daisy, I haven't; you deceived yourself, dear, and I'm very glad of it, I assure you."

"It was use but for that I might never have gotten you to say 'yes,' and we might both have been forever miserable. But how happy we are going to be for all the rest of our lives."

"Still, it was a dreadfully mean trick," she murmured, "and if you ever say a word about it to any one I'll never forgive you—never."

Select Winter Gowns Early.

It is a question to many women whether it is advisable to select fabrics for winter gowns as early as this, in view of the fact that new designs and materials are constantly added to the importer's display during the entire autumn season. On the other hand, it is very certain that with so many different weaves put upon the market, the early shoppers have unlimited choice, which is not afforded them later on. This has been proved over and over again by women who have bought some stuffs at handsome bargains when it first appeared, and later on, wishing to match these same goods, have been unable to do so. No duplicates are imported in a single season or year. It is therefore a very good rule to make a purchase on either entirely satisfying patterns or weave when one finds it, be it early or late; to hesitate and decide to wait is generally to lose the fabric desired or admired, especially in a city where tons of material are sold in a single day.

Where Cyclists are Benefactors.

It is a strange idea to many folk that this could be so anywhere, but far away in Siam, where bicycling is the pleasure of princes and nobles, it seems likely to have an enormous effect for the better on the country.

Up till now the roads in Siam have been, excepting in the towns, few in number and very bad. It is clearly no good to be an enthusiastic cyclist without the roads on which to ride, and the Siamese aristocracy have fully realized the fact. The result is that new roads are to be made which, in the interval for the pneumatic tire, and incidentally of the greatest service commercially, for hitherto an immense amount of the produce of the country has been wasted for lack of the means for taking it into the towns for sale. It is hoped that the enthusiastic bicyclist may as a result in a good system of roadways throughout the country.

Egg Croquettes.

Egg croquettes were a decided novelty taught recently to her class by a cooking-school demonstrator. Six hard-boiled eggs were cut into fine dice, about a quarter of an inch in size. With these were mixed a few mushrooms chopped fine. A white sauce made of milk, flour, and butter, with a little onion juice, had been provided, and into this the eggs and mushrooms were dropped, and the mixture being packed in a cold bowl and set on the ice to stiffen. When chilled the mixture was moulded into croquettes, dipped in egg and powdered breadcrumbs, and fried in a basket in hot fat. They were served on a folded napkin laid on a platter, and were garnished with parsley and slices of lemon.

Handy Tweed Costume.

Go where the shopper may, tweeds and cheviots, both smooth and shaggy, and of almost every conceivable color, thickness and quality, meet the eye. For utility costumes these materials are in as great demand as ever, and with good reason, for they are at once natty in effect, useful and stylish in pattern, and have the additional advantage of requiring but little trimming. Notwithstanding the rage for elaborate decoration, there is no radical change this season in the style of making the tailor gown, and good taste is still shown in the construction of both skirt and bodice. In the first place, elaborate effects would be out of place on a tailor gown designed for any sort of practical wear, and then there are certain limitations due to the weight of the fabrics composing them, even supposing that trimmings were allowable.

Excellent Polish.

A furniture-polish that may be made at home, and which is reliable, needs for a foundation half a pint of linseed oil. This should be boiled and put into a stone jug, two ounces of yellow wax, cut in thin shavings, being added. Set the pot in a saucepan of boiling water until the wax is thoroughly melted, then strain through muslin, and stir constantly until cool. Add a quarter of a pint of spirits of turpentine and a quarter of a pint of vinegar; mix thoroughly and bottle.

Fringes and Buttons.

Fringes of every width and buttons in every variety of shape and size are shown with other new things in the way of dress trimmings, and among the very old-fashioned revivals is a cape in long shawl-point shape, both front and back finished with a fringe about eight inches deep, with a knotted network at the top—a style in fashion when Queen Victoria was in her teens.

Lovely Color Effects.

Many beautiful dyes have been added to the season's color list, which are effective offsets to shades already fashionable. Notable among these is a rose red, a superb color that will be much used for dress accessories and autumn and winter millinery. The color is neither crimson, cherry, nor geranium. Cranberry jelly, held up to the light in a clear crystal glass, gives the nearest reflection of its rich, beautiful tone.

Home-Made Ice Cream.

Home-made ice-cream sometimes turns out buttery, to the dismay and surprise of its producer. To prevent this misfortune it is obligatory that the scalded and unbeaten cream should be put together and thoroughly chilled before the dasher of the freezer is turned.

Black gowns of lovely transparent or semi-diaphanous weaves over silk or satin, and in heavier materials for day wear, will take high place in the ranks of fashion for the two seasons before us.

MY MATCH MAKING.

My scheme was that a marriage should be arranged between Uncle James and Miss Stubbs.

We met Miss Stubbs while we were traveling in Switzerland. She was a little, timid, washed-out old maid.

"My dear," she said to me one day when we had become intimate with each other, "dont say you want to see life—seeing is dreary work. I never wanted to see life, but I wanted to live life; but I have never done either.

"Were you unhappy when you were young?" I asked.

"Oh, no, not unhappy, my dear; but not happy, either. I am not complaining, for everyone was very kind to me, and ready to give me little scraps of their lives to share; but no one seemed to realize that I wanted a life of my own."

"Poor Miss Stubbs!" I whispered.

"It is very kind of you to be sorry for me, my dear Madge, but really I am not complaining. I have had a very peaceful compared with many women!"

"But did you never fall in love?" I asked, with extreme boldness.

The pale cheeks filled with tears.

"Yes, dear Madge. And I should like to tell you about it, only there is nothing to tell."

"Do tell me what happened," I urged.

"Nothing happened. I once met, some one who loved me very much, and I think he loved me; but I am not even sure of that. I sometimes feel I'd give everything I have is I could only be sure of that, but I am not. He was a young man who had his way to make in the world, but very clever. He told you before—thought a great deal of our family and position, and considered the man I loved was not good enough for me. So he just put a stop to our friendship."

"And you tamely submitted?"

"What else could I do? My dear father was a very stern man and I feared not disobey him."

"What was your lover like?" I asked.

"Oh, my dear, he was the handsomest man I ever saw, with such attractive manners," she replied.

"Was he tall?" I asked. (Being five-foot-nine myself, I had a profound contempt for little men).

"Yes, dear, and such a fine figure; also rode splendidly, you know, and a splendid carriage."

I was filled with pity for poor Miss Stubbs; it seemed so sad to go through life without ever really living, as she had done; and thus it was that my great scheme occurred to me.

Uncle James was a worthy, middle-aged bachelor, rather short and fat, wearingly stout—and was the apotheosis of commonplace respectability.

He possessed a kind heart and a dogmatic manner; and he lived chiefly at his club, and thought a great deal too much of his dinner to eat.

I divulged my scheme to mother.

Mother laughed.

"I should be very glad for your uncle to marry," she said, "as it worries me to think of him all alone, especially when he is gouty. But how could you expect him, or any other man, to fall in love with that faded old maid?"

"Oh! I don't expect him to fall in love," I replied; "he is far too old. But I should like to see Miss Stubbs comfortably settled, and I am sure she would be a good, peaceful, little wife. Besides, Uncle James isn't exactly the sort of person to win a beautiful princess for his bride."

"Your Uncle James! And yet he had his beautiful princess once, like other men."

"Tell me about it mother. You don't mean that that prosaic old uncle of mine was ever in love?"

"I do, though; he was dreadfully in love once, many and many years ago. He used to tell me lots about the girl, and how happy he would be if only he could win her, though he hardly dared to hope she would ever look at him. I never knew exactly what happened; but he wrote to me, saying that the thing was finally at an end, and begging me never to mention Annie Lorimer's name to him again. And I have never done so."

"What a pretty name! And was she pretty too?"

"I never saw her," replied mother, "but James used to say she was lovely; a dainty, exquisite, fairy-like girl, so fragile as a bit of china, with golden hair and blue eyes. A pretty complexion. She danced beautifully, and was just the type to attract James, who had always been accustomed to big strong women." (Mother is quite six feet, I am, and my grandmother was even taller.)

"Poor Uncle James!" I said. "It is funny to imagine his caring for anything except pork chops and safe investments."

When our Swiss trip was over and we were settled at home again, I induced mother to invite Uncle James and Miss Stubbs to pay us a visit at the same time.

She said it was an absurd arrangement and would lead to nothing, but she sent the invitations, nevertheless.

So Uncle James and Miss Stubbs came to stay with us. My uncle arrived first; and as he sat with mother and me in the morning-room, he asked.—

"Is anyone else staying with you, Jane?"

"Only Miss Stubbs," replied mother; "and she arrives this afternoon. We met her at Lucerne you know."

"Oh! some girl that Madge took a great fancy to, isn't she?"

"I took a great fancy to her," I answered; "but she isn't a girl. She is quite old."

"You won't hate her, James," said mother, soothingly; "she is so quiet and retiring that you'll hardly know she is in the house." Then she smiled slyly at me, and I felt my matrimonial plans foredoomed to failure.

At that moment Miss Stubbs arrived, and mother and I ran into the hall to meet her. She looked as faded and washed-out as ever, and as I followed her and mother into the morning-room I sighed over the futility of my well-meant scheme.

"Let me introduce my brother to you," mother began. "James, this is——"

But before she could finish her sentence Uncle James jumped up and seized Miss Stubbs' hand in his. "But why on earth did you call her Miss Stubbs?"

Miss Stubbs answered for mother.

"They only knew me as Miss Stubbs, James. When my father came into that estate which proved such a disapointment to him, he had to give up the name of Lorimer and take that of Stubbs; and I suppose I had never mentioned that my name had once been Lorimer."

As we all sat at tea together I meditated deeply on the romantic situation, and thought how sad it must be to be parted from a fine, handsome man, such as Miss Stubbs had described to me, and from a golden-haired fairy such as uncle used to talk about to mother; and then to meet them after twenty years afterward, transformed into a fat old batchelor and a faded old maid. But my cup of amusement was full when I heard Uncle James say.—

"What have you been doing to keep yourself so young, Annie? You haven't look a day older than when I last saw you."

And Miss Stubbs replied,—

"You are scarcely altered a bit, James. I should have known you anywhere."

This fairly knocked me over. It is absurd to say that love it blind. Love not only sees beauties no one else sees but what it has once seen it sees always. It is very funny and interesting.

On the day that Uncle James and Aunt Annie were married mother said to me.—

"No, mother," I answered, "Providence took it out of my hands altogether and finished the business alone, and did it a million times better than I could have imagined."

Mother smiled.

"You see," I continued, "my scheme was to bring two rather uninteresting, middle-aged people together and insure a dull and comfortable old age for them; but Providence's plan was to reunite two old lovers, who had waited for each other for a quarter of a century, and to make a young pair again and happy with the highest sort of happiness. The ways of Providence are better than our ways, after all; aren't they, mother?"

"As the heavens are brighter than the earth," said mother, softly.

Value of a Gold Dollar.

"It might be well to inform the public that there's a handsome premium on gold dollars," says a bank man. "Many people know this, and there are plenty who don't. A dollar gold piece is worth two dollars of good money. No gold dollars have been issued for years, and they have become a scarce article. The scarcity makes the demand. The mints are not at all responsible for it. There is no law to compel you to tell a man who hands you a gold dollar in payment for goods that he is in reality giving you $2.00. If he doesn't know the value of money he is the loser, unless you order otherwise. A ten-dollar gold piece does not command a premium, but a dollar piece is good stuff."—Kennebec Journal.

If a child in Switzerland does not attend school on a particular day, the parent gets a notice from the public authority that he is fined so many francs; the second day the fine is increased, and by the third day the amount becomes a very heavy one. In case of sickness the pupil is excused, but if there be any suspicion of shamming a doctor is sent. If the suspicion proves to be well founded the parent is required to pay the cost of the doctor's visit.

HOW HE WAS DUPED.

The messengers of a certain European State who travel to and from the adjoining capitals may easily be recognized by the red wallets they carry, emblazoned with the arms of the state in gold. The agents of the great powers travel in the most unostentatious style, and would be very fearful of carrying any important State papers in a blazing red wallet. The State of which we speak being an unimportant one, its official must go dressed out in the most gorgeous uniform—by the way, the pockets of the uniform are always empty; but that is another matter—and similarly the usual Government papers are of so trifling a nature that it would matter just as little whether they went through the ordinary post or whether they were heralded by a brass band. On one occasion, however, it did happen to matter, and the bearer of the conspicuous red wallet came unmistakably to grief, and in the present moment the owner of an obscure cafe in London; and who can tell—but to our story.

The messenger, who was then a younger and not so wise a man as he is now, had safely completed three-quarters of his journey, and had arrived at Buda-Pesth in the best possible spirits, and in the knowledge that his task was nearly completed. His wallet had never left his sight from the moment he started until now. He was in a fair way to fortune.

If there is anything more than another calculated to make a young man on the Continent lose his head it is the sight of a young and beautiful Englishwoman. But to travel alone with the most charming woman he had ever seen put the young courier in a tremor from head to foot.

He sat in his corner of the railway carriage and contemplated her as calmly as he could. She certainly was most ravishing, with that delicate pink and white complexion and clear blue eyes. She was English, there was no doubt about that. The dirty white labels with Charing Cross printed on them on her black dressing trunk that lay beside his red wallet proclaimed her such. But she had not deigned yet to give him even so much as a look. She unwound the fur that encircled her neck and displayed the charms of the whitest and most symmetrical throat he had ever seen. Her hand, too, when she removed her glove, was equally fair and dainty, and the young man the more desirous to find out who she could be.

His mental endeavors to find some sort of excuse to speak to her remained unsolved. At last the train stopped. The official thrust his head into the window and asked if madame had not ordered tea, to which she replied in French that she wished to have it brought to her. Here was the young courier's opportunity, which he embraced in an instant. He gave him the value of several smiles, and he rushed off to get the English beverage.

Had he seen the action of the lady during his absence his heart would have stood still. Quick as a cat she touched a spring in her black trunk, which opened in a second, revealing the latter gentleman's red wallet into it she drew out another so exactly alike in appearance that when he returned, accompanied by a servant carrying tea on a tray, he glanced at the sham red wallet and believed it to be his own.

Could greater fortune have befallen him? he thought, as he sat and sipped the tea from the cup which she graciously handed him, while she looked the picture of loveliness. They comically sipped and chatted with him, now that the ice was broken. Never had eyes looked so deeply violet, nor lips so perfect of shape and hue. Hours passed as minutes—it is ever so in affairs of the heart—after all who shall say that the fool's is not the paradise of paradises? The wise man is too wise to have one.

The English lady proved to be the daughter of Lord Trathan, and the delighted courier learned of her that his fair companion gave him (it was the way of couriers in those days) when she parted company with him at Vienna. Alas, poor young man, how was he to know that Lord Trathan was a fictitious name, and that his fellow-traveller was none other than La Belle Pucelle, alias Madam Kratov, alias the Countess de Varnac, and the bearer of I don't know how many more sham titles, one of the astutest secret service agents in Europe.

The treaty he had carried was on its way to Paris when he presented himself at the Foreign Office at Vienna. The Austrian Minister looked at first very grave and then broke into a violent rage, calling the astounded courier the meaning of the sham treaty which he thrust into his trembling hands. There was a fine scene, and the poor wretch was not sorry to take his leave, although when he stepped out of the salon he was a ruined man.

The little State still sends its couriers to and fro with red wallets, and the proprietor of the little cafe near Regent street, London, dare not, even if he would, return to his native country, where a dozen of those toy soldiers would be drawn up in a line, and he would be shot as a traitor to his country. But then everybody does not know the story of the beautiful English lady with the blue eyes and white.—Golden Penny.

EXPLOITS OF CAMERA FIENDS.

Even weddings and funerals are not safe from the kodak fiend. A wedding which made a stir in Boston took place at the bride's summer home on the coast. It was a charming affair, picturesque in the highest degree, and delightfully informal. The informality had disastrous results, for each of the guests, knowing that the wedding was to be an out-of-door affair, was inspired with the idea of smuggling in his camera and getting some snapshots of the happy couple and the bridesmaids.

When the bride and bridegroom, already in the last stage of nervous embarrassment, received the rector's benediction and turned to face their friends, there was a unanimous and sudden movement in those crowd, and the unfortunate couple were confronted by rows upon rows of cameras, of all shapes and sizes. Each aggressor having flattered himself that his was unique, was surprised at the unanimity of interest but no one resented. The crowd closed in upon the victims. The bride looked hysterical and the bridegroom looked savage. They had thought that the worst was over, but this was adding insult to injury. All avenues of escape were closed to them. They must grin and bear it—and they did.

One of the wedding guests, who was in the front ranks during the onslaught, has a wide reputation along the south shore, and, though he is middle-aged and elderly, his advent will scatter a crowd more effectually than a small pox flag. Every one knows him and realizes that the only safety from being photographed when he appears lies in instant and hasty flight. He can't stand taking pictures. He has a most virulent and long standing case of the mania.

Not long ago his wife's mother died and the old gentleman was summoned to the funeral. He was sincerely grieved; even for his mother-in-law his kindly soul had felt no dislike. He hurried to the city, where the funeral was to take place, and conducted himself with becoming and sorrowful dignity. But at the close of the service, when the mourners filed out of the house, he was amazed to see, crouched behind a convenient hedge, with his camera pointed at the imposing procession, was the missing mourner. The temptation had been too strong for him. Processions were his specialty. He was tempted, and he fell. Later, when he afterwards explained, he thought it would be a comfort to have the picture in the family. It was a fine funeral.—New York Sun.

A BURMESE DIVORCE.

It is worth a moment's notice that, while we, of this highly civilized land, are perplexing ourselves in our efforts to make simple method of obtaining divorce, on grounds of "incompatibility of temperament," and are wasting much time and large money in litigation and lawyers' fees, the simple people of Burmah manage to settle this question without the least difficulty and without a waste of substance. Recognizing the fact that marriage is often a lottery, and that, in cases of suddenly discovered incompatibility, it always is, the Burmese man and wife agree that divorce shall be decided by lottery also. If the Burmese couple find that they cannot live in peace, and decide that they would best separate, the wife goes out and buys two candles of equal length. These candles are made for this especial purpose, and are the only "legal expenses" that need be incurred in obtaining a Burmese divorce. The wife brings them home. She and her husband then sit upon the floor, and, at a signal, each lights a candle. One candle stands for him and the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, taking nothing. The one whose candle burns longest, even by the fraction of a second, remains and takes everything. Thus the divorce is settled without any fuss or scandal, the general public is not annoyed by the contentions of the separating couple, and each is free to remarry. There are, indeed, some lessons in plain common sense that may be learned even from the ways of the heathen who "call a spade a spade and a wood and stone."—Godey's Magazine.

Field Glass That Shows Distances.

The latest improvements in optical instruments is a gauge attached to a field glass and a prismatic lens in one of the barrels to determine the distance of an object. This is accomplished by producing two images of the object seen, one superimposed upon the other. The prism creates the angle which forms the basis for the mathematical calculation of the distance, and the scale contains the solution to the rest of the geometrical problem. On the barrels of the glass are human figures—one of an infant-man and the other of a cavalryman—with a graduated scale. By observing the portion of the body against which the top of the second image is projected and consulting the scale the distance of the object is easily ascertained. Of course the accuracy of the test depends upon accurate focusing of the glasses and careful observation.—Jeweler's Weekly.

Would Not Marry the Family.

They were in all the blissful transports of a couple who had been engaged three hours and a half. It was verging on to midnight, but he manifested no sign of going, and she trembled lest he should do so. Suddenly he drew a pencil from his pocket, tore a blank leaf from his note-book, and said:—

"Now, my own little lovey dovey, let's make a diagram of the little home we will have."

"Oh, yes, let's do!" she said ecstatically.

"Our home! Don't it sound lovely? It will be genuine love in a cottage, won't it, sweetheart?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! We can get along with a dear little reception-room, double parlors, a library, dining and music rooms downstairs. Then we'll want a large, sunny, beautiful room upstairs for dear mamma."

"Yes, dearest, when she comes to visit us we'll make it a——"

"Oh, ah—I—I——"

"I knew I'd surprise you, darling! Won't it be lovely? Then Auntie Harriet will have a room next to mamma's and——"

"Auntie Harriet?"

"Why, yes, precious. She dotes on you, and I've always told her that if I ever had a home it should be hers, too, and you wouldn't want your little girly-girly to break her word?"

"No—ho—I—don't, darling. Then sister Nellie will want a pleasant room, and dear old Uncle Horace, and brother Tom won't want to be separated from dear mamma and me, and I've always said that dear old Auntie Miggs should be with me at least half of the time, and if we could spare a room for——"

Their engagement came to an end there on the spot, and dear Albert has a breach of promise suit on hand now.

Suggestion for an Umbrella Stand.

The accompanying sketch represents a variation of the old-fashioned "drain-pipe umbrella stand." Cover an earthen pipe with a thin equally spread layer of putty. Into this stick dried peas, pressing them until they project only very slightly beyond the putty, being put on close together or in patches. When quite dry paint the whole a dull willow green and the interior of the pipe poppy red.

Now take some thin felt and stick it with some very strong glue upon brown paper, which will vent cutting it out into pieces the shape of a poppy's petals and the long branching leaves. Paint them the natural shades and when dry attach them to the pipe first sewing them in the shape of a plant, the centers of the flowers being formed of large black, fancy braid buttons.

About the Feet.

Women are more often too short than too tall, and consequently try to gain height by putting on high-heeled shoes. These will give dignity as long as the wearer stands still, but in motion they are graceless and deform the feet. The better shape a foot is the smaller it will look, but in the disproportionately small foot there is always involved an awkward gait. The foot of a young woman should be larger than the foot of a small woman, or a slenderly-built woman, and to her unnecessary sorrow, it usually is.

The foot should be the same length as that from the elbow to the bone which projects beyond the outer portion of the wrist. Most people are surprised that the foot should be as long as the forearm, and are inclined to dispute the fact unless proven by experience.

Large women will pinch their feet in tight shoes because they are ashamed to have them in proportion to their bodies, and in time the feet become deformed. The public eye, not being critical of proportion, without their going to the pain of pinching their feet, consider them small, therefore there is no excuse for exchanging this kind of torture and the dignified carriage, two essentials to the greatest beauty. In fact, anything else could be better sacrificed than ease of motion.

A French butter for frying vegetables, eggplant, cold boiled sweet potatoes, etc., is made by moistening a little flour with water, adding a good pinch of salt, two teaspoonfuls of olive oil, and the same of French brandy. When ready to use, beat in the stiffly beaten white of an egg. To fry bananas, apples, and similar fruits, sugar should be used instead of salt.

The Cutaway Coat.

The cutaway jacket, which is one of the popular forms of outdoor garments designed for this autumn, though a very severe garment, is extremely stylish in appearance and is a fad which not appealing to the generality of womankind will undoubtedly prove popular to the woman of exclusive tastes.

A jacket of this description built of castor colored Venetian cloth, moulded the figure like a glove and fastened slightly to one side of the front with six small velvet covered buttons. A soft fluffy feather boa encircles the neck and tends to soften the mannish aspect of the coat. A saucy little toque of satin and straw is trimmed in front with black velvet and wings.

Handsome Rugs.

Probably the most satisfactory inexpensive rug is one of body Brussels carpet. These are usually kept in stock at the large carpet-houses, made from remnants as they accumulate. They can be had in various sizes from a square of nine feet or even somewhat less to a size that will serve in a large room. They come, too, in beautiful Persian patterns, and well made as they are, with borders carefully matched and seams lined and pressed, they are both handsome and durable. A good domestic Smyrna costs a little more, and has the added advantage of use on both sides. The ingrain art squares are also to be recommended in a room where the wear is at all serious. They are useful and effective, as they come in excellent designs, for light service, their extreme cheapness being another advantage. The imported rugs of this character are more durable, as they ought to be, costing twice as much or more, but their patterns are rather dull, and their grade of colors limited and difficult to tone with furnishings. Jute rugs are to be found in most attractive patterns and in a variety of colorings, dark and light, and at a very low price. They should be purchased, however, with the knowledge that their wearing qualities are poor.

Dainty Sandwiches.

The scented sandwiches, such as clover, nasturtium, rose and violet, in vogue with very dainty people, are made by covering both the bread and butter with the leaves or flowers, allowing them to remain over night, and then simply serving the bread and butter sandwich. Thim the crusts from the loaf of bread, put it into a large soup tureen in a bed of clover or any highly scented flower; wrap the butter in a piece of cheese-cloth and put it also in a tureen; cover with clover. Next day the butter and bread will be filled with the flavor and odor of clover.

For afternoon teas nut sandwiches, mixed fruit sandwiches, or slices of chopped fruit which have been firmly pressed together, using no bread whatever, may be used.

Pignolias or pine nuts, black walnuts, almonds and pecans may all be put through a meat chopper, mixed, a very little salt added, and spread over bread.

"Wilhelmina" jackets, hats, ties, and blue in some of the most beautiful shades we have ever seen these dyes produced in appear among tailor cloths, velvets, etc., for autumn gowns, and the trace of white needed appears on the silk or satin revers, vests, guimpes, and plastron or blouse fronts of the waist or jacket. In millinery these colors are quite as prominent, and in the red shades particularly are some dahlia and damask inks with a military name that are superb examples of the dyer's art.

Result in the State.

With a plurality approximating 10,000 votes Hon. Foster Voorhees will be the next Governor of New Jersey. The elevation of Mr. Voorhees to the highest position in the gift of the people of the State by their suffrages, after having served with distinction through a constitutional provision, is of course particularly gratifying to Union county, whose favorite son in Republican circles he is. Mr. Voorhees is extremely popular in his own bailiwick, and it was not surprising the amount of strength he developed among those with whom his personal acquaintanceship extended.

Mr. Voorhees had not only the honor of carrying his own county, but also that of his opponent. The old saying of as goes Essex so goes the State proved quite the truth in this election.

The Democrats had prosecuted an aggressive campaign in Essex and seemingly had intrenched themselves strongly in this nominally Republican section. But their efforts were unavailing and the whole idea of Mr. Crane's selection for the Gubernatorial race—that of bringing Essex into the Democratic column, thus ensuring success—amounted to naught.

When the success of the Republicans in the Gubernatorial contest also goes the majority of the Legislature, which means the election of John Kean to the United States Senate to succeed Senator Smith. This is another great honor for Union county, an I to the Republicans of this section is reason for great rejoicing.

A majority of the Congressmen elected are Republican, too, and in this way New Jersey approves of the administration of President McKinley.

The Result in Plainfield.

The Republicans in Plainfield did their part in making the victory of their party what it was. It was believed that the defeat of Mr. Ackerman for the Senatorial nomination would result in alienating a good many Republican votes from the support of the ticket, but such did not prove the case. On the contrary, Mr. Cross secured almost one hundred votes more than the head of the ticket in this city.

Another unexpected result was the good man made by Congressman Fowler. It was considered that he would run considerably behind his ticket, but when the votes were counted it was found that, with the exception of Assemblyman Murray, he received the largest plurality in Plainfield.

The pluralities of the successful candidates were as follows: Voorhees, 808; Fowler, 995; Cross, 987; Murray, 1009.

Law students who served in the late war will have the privilege of having the time they were soldiers applied to the time they must devote to their studies before being permitted to come up for examination for admission to the bar. There is no one in Plainfield to whom this rule will apply, but that doesn't mean that there are no brave law students here. The nerve that some of the law students display in the local Justices' courts is sufficient to relieve them of any charge of being fearful to meet a Spaniard on the battle field.

According to the annual report of the State Board of Education the total number of pupils enrolled in the State is 304,480, there being 2,000 more boys than girls. The average daily attendance was 209,278. There are 1,620 school houses. The total number of male teachers is 834, an increase of 20 over the preceding year, and the female teachers number 5,443. The average monthly salary paid to the male teachers was $68.88, and to the female teachers $39.72, an increase of $4 43 in the salary of males and $1.53 in that of females.

Chas. S. Foote, of Putnam avenue, is mentioned as the Republican can didate for the Common Council in the Second ward. Mr. Foote has been a resident of this city for many years, is a prominent New York lawyer and has many friends endorsing him for the position.

Six hundred claims for pensions have been filed at Washington as a result of the Spanish American war. There are more to come, though.

Sanitary Possibilities.

It has long been the contention by the most sagacious thinkers that the great advances of the future would be not so much in the curing of disease as in the prevention of disease. The safeguards prefigured in vaccination found in the germ theories of disease and the prophylactic methods deduced from it a promise of almost incredible marvels. Much has been done in this luminous path of human discovery, but it is only a beginning. But it is not so much in isolated and sporadic cases as in the prevention of epidemics that the immediate triumphs of preventive science were to be expected. It is in this light that comment on the life of the lamented Colonel George E. Waring, recently cut down in the prime of a splendid career, is of special interest.

This remarkable man, whose genius for sanitary engineering placed him at the head of his profession, was called by the city of Memphis after the awful scourge of yellow fever about 20 years ago to devise a new system of drainage with special reference to the prevention of epidemics. He was so successful that Memphis has been practically immune since that time. He achieved an approximate feat in New Orleans, though the riverine conditions of the city prevented the most complete application of the theory which underlay his plans. It is a distressing irony of fate that in his reconnoissance of the field preparatory to the campaign which he was depated to undertake against the disease "by carrying the war into Africa" he should have been the victim of the fatal germ which ripened in his blood immediately on his return. It is understood, however, that his plan of reorganizing drainage and other conditions of municipal management in Havana and Cuban cities in general is complete. He considered the epidemic question as perfectly within reasonable control. Should his success be as great as it was at Memphis, it will be "a monument more enduring than bronze, a pyramid more stately than royal edifice." In such manner and by the perfecting of street cleaning methods, a branch of sanitary work which the object lesson of Colonel Waring's life has taught so vividly, the solution of the problem is properly defined.

The disappearance of the "black death" from Europe, where it once raged so fearfully at recurrent periods, and the reappearance of the analogous bubonic plague in Bombay and other Indian cities where conditions make city cleanliness almost impossible speak for themselves are facts laden with suggestion. In all regions of the world where it is possible to enforce scientific regulations by law it is reasonably sure that the day of effective safeguard against epidemic pests is not far distant.

In a pamphlet just issued by Professor Daniel G. Brinton of the University of Pennsylvania on the Philippines we find some interesting information about the language and literature of the Tagals, who occupy most of the island of Luzon. They are almost purely Malay in type. The race is characterized by a keen commercial sense and by an appreciation of the advantages of a settled order of things. The Tagalog language is highly developed and harmonious and far from difficult of acquisition. The characters are closely analogous to those found on Buddhist monuments in India, dating back 500 B. C. The literature abounds in poetry, and the gift of finent improvisation is common among the Tagals. The verses are imperfectly rhymed, but good in rhythm and accent. The Spanish padres pronounced this literature worthless, but one can easily fancy such a verdict as prejudiced. It will furnish a fresh field of research for American linguists and scholars.

The proposition of a wrecking company from the Pacific coast to raise the warship Maine, now submerged in the mud of Havana harbor, carries with it a good deal of sentimental interest. The United States seems to have considered the task hopeless, though the government grants permission to a private organization on the conditions of purchasing the wreck by paying salvage, if it elects, when the work is done. If the Maine could be raised and reconstructed so as to become as good as ever, it would be a supplementary triumph, fit to cap the end of the war gloriously.

The report of Captain O'Neill of the ordnance bureau as to the naval lessons of the war concentrates special attention on the importance of quick firing guns. It was the tremendous volume of fire from these that drove the Spanish sailors from their guns. All our 6 inch and many of our 8 inch guns should be converted into quick firers.

Hotel keeping is the best advertised business in the world. The big caravansaries in our larger cities are so constantly in evidence through reports of news and in the society columns that it amounts to many thousands of dollars in value in the course of a year.

A Theory of Suicide.

It has been a prevalent notion with many observers that more suicides occur in gloomy or wintry weather than in summer. The fact that the pressure of want on the poor is greater at this season, the facilities of obtaining work less, would seem at first to warrant this conclusion. Yet criminologists assert that crime increases and decreases with temperature. The scientific students of suicidal crime, too, are largely convinced that the gloomy or distressing conditions of nature have very little to do with the problem.

Signor Morselli, a professor of Bologna university, in his standard work on this subject, published many years since, drew conclusions from an immense mass of carefully verified statistics, which he illustrated in this vivid and concrete form. He asserts that of all persons and conditions most likely to comerge into suicide, he would select a German scholar in some secluded university cloister, preferably a student of metaphysics, in the season of June, the most delightful month of the year, and at high noon. The stolid creature never commits suicide. It is always the imaginative soul, where the tendency to melancholy and the consciousness of the immense chasm between longing and attainment are the most active. It is contended, too, that the ineffable splendor and wealth of summer tide reacts on certain temperaments with irresistible power to create a restless and morbid mood. De Quincey, in his "Confessions of an Opium Eater," has embodied in the most eloquent English prose the thrillingly and impressions made on him by the gorgeous vision of a June sky flooded with golden sunshine.

Dr. Oscar Geck, a scientist of Strassburg, Germany, has recently published figures, confirmatory of the foregoing views of the conditions which favor suicide. In 100,000 cases which occurred in Prussia between 1876 and 1885 the greatest number was in June, the least in December. The figures increased and decreased between these months with the certainty of the tides. It is contended by most students that the ultimate causes of suicide are climatic and physiological. Heat produces nervous excitement. People eat more than the diminished needs of the organism require, and so a plethora of life is generated which must find an outlet, often in crime against others or against self. The fact that women more rarely commit suicide is explained on the theory that they are much more temperate eaters and develop far less of that uric acid in the blood which, poisoning the life fluid, fills the brain with perverse and gloomy fantasies. Whether the reasons, psychic and physiological, given are valid or not the main fact as to summer being the ripe and chosen season for the self murderer appears to be well justified in truth.

Professor Cummnock of the School of Oratory at the Northwestern university of Evanston, Ills., has instituted a new line of study in his course. This, it is alleged, will deal with the art of getting married and the avoidance of those clumsy and embarrassing mistakes which sometimes occur at such a trying moment. He desires that the future brides and grooms who graduate under his instruction shall be perfect adepts in the requisite ceremonial ease and dignity. This is all very nice, but it would be far more to the purpose if the instructor could teach the right things to do after marriage when the glamour has worn off. He would then be the greatest of philanthropists. As for instruction in matters which precede marriage, which are summed up in the art of lovemaking, nature is far more potent than artifice. Here no Professor Cummnock could possibly be needed.

Horace Walpole once wrote to Sir Horace Manu, in that famous correspondence which lights up the events of an epoch, "The world is a comedy to those that think, a tragedy to those who feel." To most thoughtful persons life is a drama which mingles tragedy and comedy, a play where man is both actor and spectator, a human comedy in the sense so powerfully suggested by Balzac in his great series of novels.

Dr. Martin, a surgeon at Camp Thomas, has averred before the war investigation committee that he was threatened with court martial by his superiors because he reported the pest conditions of Chickamauga at an early date. If this is true, there is need of punishment worse than any possible court martial verdict could bestow.

Alcohol is largely used in the manufacture of smokeless powder. One consignment for Japan recently paid a tax of $1,000,000, but vastly more men will be slain by this ingredient shot from a glass than that shot from gun or cannon.

The notion that men of genius have some madness mixed with quality may be true, but it is frequently false. Disregard of the conservative commonplaces, which so many regard as sanity, is easily misunderstood.

There are two classes of specially disagreeable persons in the world who are met as we mix in the daily current —those who never think what they say and those who never say what they think.

LOVE SICK YOUTHS FOUGHT LIKE TIGERS.

Pugilistic Blows to Settle Which Was to Have the Girl.

BRUTAL DEVOTION TO HER.

BOTH OF THE SWAINS WERE STURDY FARM HANDS.

The Scene of the Battle Was in a Meadow and the Disputants Were Stripped to the Waist—George Young and Robert Howell Were the Jealous Admirers and Matilda Martin Was the Fair One Admired.

Bound Brook, Nov. 8—While the eleven young men that compose the Rutgers College football squad were dreaming of the encounter of the next day, Friday evening two powerful farm hands were struggling for mastery on the banks of the Raritan only a few miles away. It was a struggle far more sanguinary than the wearers of the canvass jacket ever dreamed of and ended with the defeated contestant in a pitiable state, so cut and bruised that he was hardly recognizable. Of course there was a woman in the case.

In the village of Middlebush, seven miles from here, there lives Miss Matilda Martin. Fair is she of face and form and her bewitching smiles have wrought sad havoc among the rustic swains for miles around. Among all her suitors, however, it was evident that George Young and Robert Howell were the favorites. Between the two the greatest rivalry existed.

George Young is employed on the farm of Peter Randolph which lies midway between this place and Middlebush. George is in the prime of life, a tall and angular man of powerful build. Howell is one of the trusted employes of John Baldwin, whose farm is in that neighborhood. Howell is short, but stout, and has long had the reputation of being handy with his fists.

In the schoolhouse at Weston, a local evangelist has been holding meetings Sunday and Wednesday nights. There the evening of Sunday, October 30th, Miss Matilda Martin went under the escort of her uncle, Thither also went Young, likewise Howell. The fair Matilda smiled on the brawny Young, but she showed the same favor to his rival. Both of the suitors laid in wait to accompany her home and thus came together. It was only by dint of great exertions that the Westonites prevented an open rupture, while the cause of all the trouble disappeared down the road with her uncle.

Since then, there has been open war declared between the rivals. Each had his friends through whom negotiations were started and as a result, it was decided that the men should meet some evening and settle by force of arms the question that had troubled them for so long.

Friday night was the time set for the meeting and the meadow by the Raritan river in the farm of Peter Randolph was the place selected. There they went together with some fifteen friends to settle the differences.

The question of weapons was raised. Young has long been famous for his handling of the flail and he wanted the battle fought with flails. Pitchforks were suggested but voted down. At last, Howell's proposition that it be a pugilistic encounter was favored and the contestant stripped to the waist.

A ring was made in the soft turf and lanterns placed about it to illuminate the scene. The seconds prepared themselves with the necessary paraphernalia and the battle opened.

For half an hour they fought with short breathing spaces between the rounds. The blood flowed and soon participants and ground were covered with gore. Blows were exchanged with vigor and made up in strength what they lacked in science.

At last, the unlucky Howell went down before a mighty upper cut and lay on the turf insensible. They washed the blood from off his face and brought him to his senses, then he was carried home by his friends. Howell is once again on his feet and has declared that he will resume the battle on the first opportunity.

It has been fully demonstrated that Ely's Cream Balm is a specific for Nasal Catarrh and cold in the head. This distinction has been achieved only as the result of continued successful use. A morbid condition of the membrane in the nasal passages can be cured by this purifying and healing treatment. Sold by druggists or it will be mailed for 50 cents by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York. It spreads over the membrane, is absorbed and relief is immediate.

No Cure—No Pay.

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Malaria, Chills and Fever. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price, 50c For sale by R. J. Shaw. 12 2 1y

BURGLAR GRASPED WOMAN BY THROAT.

A Borough House Entered in a Bold Manner.

PEARL ROGERS IS ACCUSED.

After Being Chased From Jeter's House He Waded Through the Brook and was Afterwards Found in His Home Feigning Sleep—Accused of Another Burglarious Attempt—Held for Trial.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jeter, on Belmont avenue, was entered last Tuesday at 3 o'clock by Pearl Rogers, colored, whose home is at 426 East Third street, and it is evident that Rogers intended to make a haul. In default of this he committed assault, and got away only to be caught at his home where he was in bed.

Rogers has worked for Milkman Jeter, and is thoroughly acquainted about the premises. There is every indication that he entered the house through the kitchen door, for it was found open after his departure. He went upstairs, where Mr. and Mrs. Jeter and Misses Sally and Ida Jeter were asleep. He removed his coat, hat and shoes.

While in the room occupied by Miss Sally Jeter, he was detected. The latter is a sister-in law of Mrs. Jeter, and she sleeps with Miss Ida. They were awakened and saw a man standing at the foot of their bed. They asked what he wanted and the there was no response. Again he was asked what he wanted, but still there was no reply. Finally, the intruder rushed to the side of the bed and grappled Miss Sally Jeter. She had the bed clothes wrapped about her throat. This probably saved her from strangulation. She screamed and this awakened Mrs. Jeter, who got up and started for the other room. The man then ran into the hall where he met Mrs. Jeter and knocked her down with his fist. Her screams awakened Mr. Jeter, who sprang from the bed.

The desperado rushed downstairs with Mr. Jeter after him. He passed out of the back door and ran like a deer across lots In the meantime Mrs. Jeter screamed at the top of her voice. This attracted the attention of Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Saffron, and they followed in the direction from whence the sound came. They saw the man running and saw him wade the brook in reaching the city, but the officers lost him for the time being.

A little while later Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson, in company with Mr. Jeter, went to Rogers' home on East Third street. They had his hat, coat and shoes. They found Rogers in bed. He pretended to be asleep when the officers entered the house, but he was aroused and made to dress. His clothes were thoroughly soaked, showing that he had been in the brook. He claimed he had no shoes to put on, but when the officers produced his shoes he was dumbfounded. Rogers was then taken to the city jail, where he was held until this forenoon. He was then taken to the borough for trial.

Miss Sally Jeter, whom Rogers attempted to choke, suffered greatly from shock. She fought Rogers as best she could. Rogers did not succeed in getting anything. This is not Rogers' first offense. He has served a time in State's Prison and is likely to do so again.

He was accompanied last Tuesday by another negro, but he got away. His companion did not enter the house, but remained outside. He escaped before Rogers came out of the house.

An attempt was made to enter the home of Alexander Mair, who lives next door to Jeter, at 3 o'clock same morning. Mr. Mair was awakened by a noise down stairs. Slipping on his trousers, he crept downstairs to find one of the front windows open and a man about to climb in. Mair called to him to desist. The man slowly retired cursing at Mair. The man had a screw driver in one hand and some heavy weapon in the other.

The window was found broken where the would-be burglar found a way to slip the catch to the window.

Mr. Mair came to the city jail next morning and promptly identified the prisoner as a colored man who had been employed by Jeter to husk corn. The colored man, he said, had been to his house several times for a drink of water. The man he saw in the night had the same appearance as the prisoner, was of his height and had the same sloughing gait.

THE COUNCIL HEARS OF COUNTY TROLLEY.

Receives a Communication From John Kean's Road.

POSITION OF THE CITY

IT AWAITS DEVELOPMENTS FROM BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

Councilman Barrows Resents the Action of the County Authorities and Says the City Should Fight Them at the Proper Time—Cases in Court That the City Is Interested In—Other Matters.

The regular City Council meeting held last Monday was void of any business of special significance, and it did not take the members a great while to transact that which came before them. Mr. Hetfield was the only member absent.

D. A. Moran & Co., of New York, asked the Council for particulars concerning the proposed issuance of the $6,000 bonds for storm sewer work. The Elizabeth City Horse Railway Company submitted several propositions to the Council regarding the proposed intention of that company to locate and operate an electric street railway between Elizabeth and Plainfield, in which they stated what they proposed to give for the franchise accompanying the propositions was a note testifying to the fact that the Board of Freeholders had granted certain priviledges and rights to the trolley company, and that the matter had been approved of by the Court The propositions include the rate of fare to be charged, which is 25 cents a round trip between Elizabeth and this city. The franchise is for seventy-five years, and $100 a year is to be paid after the sum of $250,000 is given for the franchise. The cars are to run under fifteen-minute headway, and the road is to be sprinkled. School tickets are to be issued thirty-three for $1.

In connection with the above Mr. Barrows stated that all were cognizant of the fact that the Board of Freeholders were trying to give away Plainfield streets. He had been in close touch with the Corporation Counsel and had been informed by him that the city could do nothing until a move was made by the Board of Freeholders. Mr. Barrows stated that he hoped the people of this city would be alive and interested in this matter. He thought that the people would live to see all of the streets taken away in a similar manner. He cited the small compensation to be received by the city from the county trolley people for what is given.

Following the reading of the above remarks, the Plainfield Street Railway Company withdrew their application for a franchise and on Mr. Barrows' motion the same was granted.

Corporation Counsel Marsh presented to the Council the report of the Court regarding the Martin Act Commissions' work, as published in The Daily Press in full. The report was filed. Mr. Marsh also reported on the case now in the courts in which the city is interested. Regarding the case of Mrs. Milliken against the city, he said that it had been postponed on account of the illness of the plaintiff, and would come up at the January term of court. In the case of the city against Rev. P. S Gibson and Spencer Conway, regarding a bond given by the latter for the former, judgment had been given to the plaintiff. He reported on the case of the city against Champion, now in the court, and asked for the privilege of carrying the case to the Supreme Court if the city should be beaten in the court in which the case is now pending. This privilege was given. Mr. Marsh stated that the case of Joseph Carbone against the city is still pending. This case was one on a charge of Sunday selling, which was appealed.

On a motion offered by Mr. Barrows Monday evening, November 21st was set as the time when sealed proposals would be received for macadamizing certain streets which the Council has already decided to macadamize according to ordinances adopted. An other resolution was offered by Mr. Barrows to the effect that the money subscribed by East Ninth street residents for macadamizing under the old ordinance be returned as they had failed to raise the stipulated amount, $6.0.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered a resolution borrowing $4,000 on account of general fund, and he also reported on the contract between the city and the telephone company. According to the contract a telephone will be placed in the Industrial Home and another in the new engine house in the West End.

MRS. COCK'S FUNERAL.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock were held Monday afternoon in Grace Episcopal church. The service was one of the most beautiful ever held in Plainfield.

The casket was surrounded with beautiful floral pieces. A magnificent wreath of ivy from the members of the choir and a cross of white roses from the members of the family occupied a place on the casket.

The full Episcopal burial service was used and the full choir participated. The musical part of the service was in charge of Mrs. Freeman, the organist, and was particularly well rendered. The opening sentence was read by Rev. E. M. Rodman, and between each sentence the choir sang a verse of the hymn, "Jesus Lives," a part of the service was performed before in Grace church.

The choir, "Lord Let Me Know Mine End," was sung, then Rev. Floyd Appleton read the lesson. Another anthem, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," was sung by the choir, the solo part being taken by Arthur Freeman very feelingly and effectively. The anthem, "I Heard a Voice From Heaven," followed the prayers, and as the funeral party passed out the choir burst forth in that victorious hymn by Henry Alford, "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand."

The honorary pall bearers were Mahlon Vail, John B. Dumont, Samuel Huntington, Francis Wood, Charles P. Bull and Dexter O. Tiffany. The committal service at Hillside was read by Rev. Mr. Rodman. Members of Mrs. Cock's family from Philadelphia and of Mr. Cock's family from New York and Long Island were among those present.

Scholars to Leave Earlier.

With the introduction of the roll of honor into the Plainfield High School, Principal Ira W. Travell has inaugurated several other plans that will work for the advancement of the standing of all the pupils. Such of the pupils as are on both rolls of honor for standing and attendance will hereafter be allowed to return to their homes as soon as they have completed their recitations without waiting for the regular hour for dismissal. The arrangements of studies is such that a number of pupils will thus be allowed to go at 12:10 o'clock instead of 1 o'clock.

VanDoren's Defeat.

Somerville, Nov. 9—The entire Republican ticket in Somerset county was elected with the exception of P. V. D. VanDoren, nominee for Sheriff. There is no denying the fact that L. A. Thompson worked heart and soul for E.—E. Cooper for the Assembly. While he gave instructions to his political friends not to cut VanDoren, but to push Cooper, the scheme worked disastrously for VanDoren. The latter was Senator Reed's man, and the defeat of VanDoren is viewed in the light of giving Mr. Thompson control of the county again.

Rogers Held For Grand Jury.

Pearl Rogers, the colored man who was arrested Tuesday morning on a charge of entering the house of Charles Jeter, Belmont avenue, with intent to rob, and choking Miss Sally Jeter, also on a charge preferred by Alex. Maire, for entering his house on the same avenue, was arraigned next morning before Justice Crosley. Rogers claimed that he was drunk at the time the affair happened and that he does not remember what he did. Justice Crosley decided to hold Rogers for the Grand Jury without bail.

OPENING DAY OF GOLF.

and from it there floated yesterday the club pennant in the club colors, red and white. From the pole to a tree some distance away a strong wire was stretched, and suspended therefrom was a large American flag.

The course is 1 5-8 mile in length and is a very pretty one. Owing to the rolling ground it has been found unnecessary to build any hazards or bunkers, and everyone has found that the course is an ideal one. The clubhouse is a model of beauty. It is provided with rooms for the women and men with every convenience, while a large reception room is found to be a comfortable place to stop and enjoy a rest.

The house committee consists of Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. C. W. McCutchen, and the greens committee comprises C. W. McCutchen, H. D. Hibbard and W. J. Buttfield. These committees have received flattering comments for their earnest efforts. The membership of the club comprises the very best people of the borough and many residents of this city. The opening took place a little late in the season, but there will be playing for at least a month yet. Next season this course will no doubt be one of the finest in the State, and will be patronized largely by golf enthusiasts. The grounds are located on Charles Hyde's property near the mountains and are easy of access by trolley, carriage or bicycle.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Pleasant Event Held at the Home of Arthur Williams.

A very pleasant event of Tuesday afternoon was the celebration of the eighth birthday anniversary of Arthur Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Williams, of Elmwood place. Mrs. Williams arranged the affair and everything was complete. The young host received a number of his intimate friends during the afternoon and the time was spent in playing games and in having a general good time. The decorations in the dining room were very pretty and especially attractive were the decorations on the table. A delightful repast was served late in the afternoon, which all present enjoyed fully. The celebrant was nicely remembered by his friends and received a number of both useful and ornamental presents. He also received the best wishes of all for many happy returns of the day. Those present to enjoy the festivities were Arthur Williams, Harold Williams, Lulu Vail, Ethel Vail, Maisa Gray, Cora Gray, Catherine Gray, Ira Vail, Russell Vail, Bert Gray, Ernest Conover, Eddie Mosier and Howard Hooper of Dunellen. A. E. Hoagland and Miss MacKillop were also present and assisted to entertain the young people.

City Jail His Home.

William King is a colored man who struck town Saturday night and who is making the city jail his home for want of better quarters. There is something strange in his anatomy. He claims to have two hearts which he is able to move about from place to place and two sets of ribs which can also be displaced. Dr. M. B. Long has examined the man, and has given him a slight letter stating that he has examined King and that his assertions are true.

Run Down by a Wheelman.

Miss Alyn Marie Chandor, of East Fifth street, was run down by another wheelwoman at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fifth street, Monday afternoon. Miss Chandor was knocked from her wheel and badly bruised by the collision while the front wheel to her bicycle was wrecked.

DOWNED WESTFIELD ON THE GRIDIRON

Alis Football Eleven Won By the Score of 16 to 0.

PLAYED AT MARTINE FIELD.

SUPERIOR TEAM WORK AND INTERFERENCE WON THE VICTORY.

First Game of the Alis Team This Year—Some Changes in the Line-up—Long Runs Made Around the Ends—Coming Scored First Touchdown—Westfield Made Two-Great Line Work.

Rivalry on the football field between Plainfield and Westfield has been of a long standing. The contests each year have been watched with more than the usual interest in the game. Saturday afternoon the rival teams met and the Plainfield eleven, the Alis team, defeated the Westfield colleagues by a score of 16 to 0. The game was one of the hardest fought of the season, and only the superior team work of the Alis boys won the game for them. The match was played on Martine field.

It was the first game of the season for the Alis team, but showed that they had not forgotten their skill. Expects who witnessed the game from the side lines say that the team work and interference of the Alis eleven was the best ever done on a local gridiron. It was certainly deserving of great praise. The Alis team can no longer be counted among the junior teams of the county but, now that the Plainfield eleven will only play one or two games this season, they will represent Plainfield on the gridiron.

Plainfield had the kickoff toward the western goal and sent the ball well down in the field. From the start it was evident that the teams were pretty well matched. Superior interference by the Alis boys more than overcame the greater weight of their opponents, however. The Alis boys took the offensive at once and forced the play in Westfield's territory. Taylor, at left tackle, did some great work breaking through Westfield's line and spoiling play after play. The Westfield backs showed a tendency to fumble that proved very disastrous to them.

The first half was nearly over when Fred Proctor was seen around the end under strong interference. He covered fifty yards before he was downed on Westfield's five yard line. Harry Cuming then went through guard for the first touchdown. Dumont missed the goal. Score, Alis 5, Westfield 0.

At the opening of the second half, Westfield kicked out of bounds. Another trial sent the ball to Overton who advanced fifteen yards before he was downed. Then Overton, Cuming and Philips made various gains and the ball was advanced into Westfield's territory. The excellent interference made the end plays effective and the advance was steady despite Westfield's desperate struggles. At the fifteen yard line, Woolston circled the left end and dodged over the line for a second touchdown. Dumont kicked a difficult goal. Score, Alis, 11; Westfield, 0.

Again the ball was advanced into Westfield's territory. Cuming ran for forty yards. Then Plainfield lost ten yards in for off-side play. Westfield obtained possession of the ball but failed to gain. The play was then in the vicinity of Westfield's thirty-five yard line. A Westfield back fumbled and Woolston broke through the line, picked up the ball and was going down the field before he was noticed. Another touchdown was the result. Dumont missed the goal in the darkness. Score, Alis, 16; Westfield, 0. The game was then called on account of darkness.

The teams lined up as follows:

ALIS.		WESTFIELD.
Woolston	right end	Kimball
Bedford	right tackle	Jackson
Schuyler	right guard	R. Wight
Yard	centre	Clark
Smith	left guard	VanBrocklen
Taylor	left tackle	Manning
Dumont	quarterback	Lighburn

Philips	fullback	E. Wight

Referee—Leslie Darling, of Plainfield. Umpire—J. W. Voight, of Westfield. Timekeeper—Edgar Wight, of Westfield. Linesmen—Harold Phillips and Claude Edwards. Touchdowns—Cuming, Woolston, (2). Goals from touchdowns—Dumont, (1).

Baptized Seven New Members.

Special services were held all day Sunday in the Mt. Olivo Baptist church, and in the afternoon Pastor Jackson baptized seven new members as a result of the special services that have been held in the church of late. In the morning Pastor Jackson preached an excellent sermon and in the evening he preached again. All of the services were attended largely and a large amount of money was raised for the benefit of the church.

B. F. LaVere favored the Trinity Reformed church people with a cornet solo during the offertory Sunday morning and last evening, using his beautiful silver cornet, which he says is the finest instrument he ever owned. His playing was very much enjoyed by all.

CORNER-STONE OF NEW CHURCH EDIFICE LAID.

An Auspicious Occasion For Calvary Baptist Society.

OWN HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

STONE SQUARE LODGE TOOK AN IMPORTANT PART.

Preliminary Services Held in Reform Hall Where Rev. John Harris Preached a Sermon, and on the Site of the New Edifice Preached the Dedicatory Sermon—Stone Laid by Colored Masons.

The corner-stone of the new Calvary Baptist church was laid yesterday afternoon with appropriate exercises and the affair was attended largely by colored folks from this city and other nearby places. There was also present a delegation from Stone Square Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., and they assisted in the laying of the store.

The services commenced at 2:30 o'clock in Reform Hall and were in charge of Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, and after the devotional exercises, the sermon was preached by Rev. John Harris, pastor of the colored Baptist church at Orange. The sermon was full of good advice and suggestions to those present.

The members were congratulated for their earnest labors, and were told to push forward in the work of saving souls. Following the sermon a collection was taken, and the receipts were most gratifying to the pastor and officers of the church. In the hall the services were assisted with music by a choir of mixed voices.

All adjourned after this meeting to the new church, directly back of the hall, where the corner-stone was laid. At this time Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of this city, read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. Mr. Johnson, pastor of the Filmore Baptist church, offered prayer. There was singing by the choir, and another collection was taken up. This time all present, including the crowd that assembled on the street, were asked to contribute to the cause, and there was a liberal response.

After the collection Rev. John Harris preached the dedication sermon. The corner-stone was then laid by the delegation from Stone Square Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., under the direction of Mr. Douglass, who was in charge of the delegation. Among those who assisted were Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor; Rev. Mr. Groves, pastor of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church; Rev. Mr. Morris, of Belmar, N. J.; Rev. Mr. Matthews, of this city, and several others. A number of interesting and valuable documents were placed in the corner-stone, including the history of the church, deeds, etc. The services throughout were of a most interesting and marked a new era in the history of this body of believers.

THE RIGHT TIME TO STOP.

W. E. ELDRIDGE WILL RETIRE FROM THE BICYCLE BUSINESS.

He Thinks There Is No More Money in It and Will Close His Numerous Stores, One of Which Is in Plainfield.

W. E. Eldridge, president and manager of the Eldridge Bicycle Company, in Newark, has decided to abandon the bicycle business. December 1st he will close up his branch stores located in Paterson, Jersey City, Elizabeth, East Orange and Plainfield, and after closing out the stock of these stores he will start up his fine Newark store and rest on his laurels. Mr. Eldridge, after a careful study of the future of the cycle trade, has decided that it will be more profitable to take this step than remain in the business another year. He thinks that in the future there will be little or no profit in selling bicycles.

After winding up his affairs he will probably make a trip around the world. In the days of the high wheel Mr. Eldridge was one of the most enthusiastic riders in this vicinity. He started in the bicycle business in 1891, the first year after the event of the "safety," as the present style of wheel was then called, and met with success from the start. He is one of the few retailers of bicycles to retire with what is commonly called a "small fortune."

REVIEWED CHURCH WORK.

Rev. J. W. Richardson Sunday Noted the Progress of Christianity.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached an anniversary sermon Sunday mourning to his people in which he went over a part of the history of the church during the past twelve months. The Spiritual work in the church has resulted in the addition of fourteen members by baptism and eleven by letter. The sum of $3,649 was raised for general expenses and $993.93 for benevolences. Only seven out of thirty-two churches in the East New Jersey Association showed a better record than this church. During the year the pastor officiated at four funerals, solemnized six marriages, preached 120 sermons and made 506 pastoral calls.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

WAGON OVERTURNED AND DRIVER THROWN UNDER IT.

Luckily, the Reins Were Dragging Near Him and He Succeeded in Grasping Them so as to Stop the Frightened Horse.

E. D. Barrett, the East Fifth street plumber, is nursing an injured hand and shoulder as a result of an exciting runaway Sunday afternoon. Mr. Barrett was called to a house near Metuchen Sunday to do some work. He had just climbed into his business wagon when the horse, recently clipped and consequently frisky, started off on a run. The reins were out of Mr. Barrett's reach and he was carried off on a run.

The wagon met with some obstacle and was completely overturned. Mr. Barrett fell between the underneath and was dragged along in a moving prison. Luckily the reins were close by and he caught hold of them and finally brought the runaway to a stand. Then Mr. Barrett righted the wagon and climbed out.

The harness was somewhat broken while the wagon was also slightly damaged. The skin and flesh was scraped off of one of Barrett's arms and the bones bruised. His shoulder was also injured while he was generally bruised about the body.

DUNELLEN DEFEATED THE PLAINS.

The Scotch Plains football eleven came to Dunellen Saturday afternoon to meet the local team and was defeated by a score of 5 to 0. Dunellen scored in the first half on a forty yard run by Peters.

In the second half the visitors braced up and forced the contest for a time, then Dunellen recovered and carried the ball back to the Scotch Plains four yard line. Allen, of Scotch Plains, was injured in the play, and as Scotch Plains had no substitute, they gave up the game with ten minutes more to play.

The teams lined up as follows:

DUNELLEN.		SCOTCH PLAINS.
Carpenter	right end	Flannery
D. Richards	right tackle	Meyer
Morgan	right guard	Robison
Bradley	centre	Lee
Craig	left guard	Edwards
Churchill	quarterback	Chase
Peters	right halfback	Cobb
Thomas	left halfback	Allen
Bingham	fullback	McGuire

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Alis third played an exciting game of football with the Bryant School team Saturday morning and carried them to the tune of 6 to 0. Kendall Mason made the touchdown for the victors and Gardner kicked the goal.

The Alis second is now putting up a good game and doing excellent work for a junior team. At first the interference was rather ragged, but under the coaching of Fletcher Hallock, T. U. Smith and several of the big team, it has greatly improved.

Several hundred people gathered at Martine field Friday afternoon to witness a game between the Alis second and the second team from Pingry's School, Elizabeth. It was a return game, the Plainfield boys having defeated their rivals from Elizabeth on the latter's grounds by a score of 6 to 0. The Alis team was there on time, but the Elizabeth boys failed to appear. After waiting most of the afternoon in vain, Captain Harold Phillips, of the Alis second, learned that the Pingly eleven was not coming. The rest of the time was spent in practice.

GOLF.

The delightful weather of last Saturday afternoon attracted a very large number of players to the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club who enjoyed the popular sport exceedingly. The feature of the day was the preliminary play for the Chapman cup for the championship of the club. There were sixteen entries, but only eight of that number qualified as follows: A. R. Fisk, 93; J. H. P. Wharton, 95; W. L. Glenny, 95; C. W. Fisk, 96; W. R. Richards, 96; Reeve Stockton, 98; H. D. West, 98; R. M. Shepard, 100.

The above players will meet on the links tomorrow morning and play the first round for the same cup, and in the afternoon the second round will be played. Next Saturday the finals will come off.

After Saturday's play an informal tea was given in the club house which was largely attended. If the weather is good tomorrow no doubt the course will be crowded all day by members of the club. The grounds are now in fine condition and improving continually under the direction of the greens committee.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Baker, of West Front street, which to extend their thanks to the many kind friends who assisted them during the days of their late bereavement.

MAYOR WILL ADVANCE THE MONEY IF NEEDED

Generous Offer Made by His Honor in the Borough.

TO MACADAMIZE AN AVENUE

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES THE IMPROVEMENT TO BE MADE.

Bill For 243 Loads of Stone That the Mayor Said Was Not to Have Cost the Borough Anything—Easier Time For the Marshals—Mayor Wilson Described the Pavements he Saw in Easton.

Business at the Borough Council meeting was pushed through rapidly Friday, and by 9 o'clock the regular meeting had adjourned and the Council had gone into executive session. Routine business only was transacted, an important item being the ordering of the macadamizing of Summit avenue.

The Mayor and all the members were present. A petition was read from the residents of Coddington avenue asking that an electric light be placed at the corner of Coddington avenue and Somerset street. The petition was referred to the committee on lights.

Mrs. Carrie Boice presented a bill to the Council for $30, which has remained unpaid since 1894, when her property on Somerset street was used for election purposes by the borough. The bill was originally presented in 1894, but escaped payment then because the property had just changed hands. It was referred to the auditing committee and later ordered paid.

Among the bills presented was one from J. H. Cooley for 243 loads of stone. The Mayor declared that this stone was to have cost the borough nothing, so that claim was held over.

William Kernan and Lewis C. Wyckoff were appointed special marshals and Raymond Schenck was appointed janitor of Warren Enginehouse in the place of the old janitor, who has resigned.

Councilman Burtis, in his report, stated that twenty arrests had been made during the past month, of which fourteen were for being drunk and disorderly. Six were committed to jail, and on two sentence was suspended. Sixty one dollars altogether has been collected in fines. Councilman Burtis said that there had been considerable illness among the members of the force last month, and suggested that the men each be given one night a month off after this.

Councilman Woolston reported that $208.74 had been spent upon streets last month as follows: Labor on Rockview avenue, $49.75; repairing Somerset street, $55; general street repairing, $75 49. The balance has been expended for general repairs. Mr. Woolston also reported that $40 of the amount on hand had been subscribed by property holders on Summit avenue for the macadamizing of that street. Councilman MacLaughlin offered a resolution that the work be done as soon as the remaining $19 should be raised. This awoke quite a discussion among the members, some of whom were not sure about the financial condition of the borough, and hesitated about spending the money, but when Mayor Wilson offered to advance what was needed, if necessary, the resolution was passed.

Upon this Councilman Rogers offered a resolution that the chairman of each committee prepare an estimate of the amount of money needed for the balance of the fiscal year, so that the Council could fully understand its financial condition. This, too, was also passed. The committee on taxation had no report to offer.

During an interval in the meeting Mayor Wilson described a visit to Easton last Wednesday, in which he inspected the streets there which are paved with vitrified brick, and told what a satisfactory road-bed they made. The Mayor merely threw the facts out as a suggestion, which may be acted upon at some future time.

The financial report is as follows: Paid to county and State, $2,174.48. Cash balance, $239.95. Total balance, $2,414.43. Since the last report $185.11 has been collected from the following sources: Bertha Saunders, $18.23; T. B. Brooks, $48.02; estate E. R. Pope, $27.75; Walter McGee, $15.76; F. A. Potts, $19.35. Taxes to the amount of $6,750.70 have been collected. Total amount collected, $18,892.17; disbursements, $3,430.31; balance, $9,461.86.

A Little Heroine.

Miss Kittie Albert, of East Fourth street, proved herself quite a heroine Friday afternoon in rescuing a four-year-old child from instant death. The little tot lives on East Third street just over the track. The child got out of the house and crawling upon the railroad track was walking directly in front of a locomotive when Miss Albert ran out and carried the tot off just before the engine reached the spot.

—A telephone has been placed in the residence of A. W. Powell, of East Sixth and Washington streets.

HIGH SCHOOL HONORS.

OLD CUSTOM REVIVED AT THE PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

All Pupils With "Good" or "Excellent" in All Their Studies Are Awarded Special Mention—Roll Read Every Two Months.

After an absence of many years the roll of honor has been revived at the Plainfield High School. Last year Principal Ira W. Travell started an honor roll in attendance which was read every two months. The list contained the names of those who had not been absent any day during that time. This year that plan has been continued, but Principal Travell has added a real roll of honor in scholarship after the method in use ten years ago.

On the roll of honor are placed the names of all the pupils who have had a standing of "good" or better in every subject. According to the method of marking in vogue at the High School at present, E or "excellent" is the highest; G or "good" is next; then comes F, "fair," P, "poor," and V P, "very poor." "Fair" is the standard of promotion.

Principal Travell has now announced the scholarship roll of honor for the month of September and October and a list of the meritorious ones has been posted at the High School. A new list will be announced the first of the year.

Senior Class—Henry A. Pearce, P. G.; William A. Fisher, Robert A. Pruden, Helen L. Hall, Jessie E. Saxton, Bessie M. F. Randolph and Marjorie C. Sterling.

Junior Class—Charles H. Fountain, Dora A. Bennett, Marion D. Woodcock, Edna Burr, Elizabeth E. Cutter, Pauline S. Denton, Clara G. Dunham, Mary Lock, Mary A. Rose, Mary L. Mann, Ruth P. Maxson, Iola Moore and Alice L. Morgan.

Third Class—Kizzie Eager, Ella L. Lounsbury, Lillian Maclay.

DRUNKEN ESCAPADE CAUSES ARREST.

Theodore Wilson Accused of Breaking Into French's Mill.

One Saturday night last August Theodore Wilson was intoxicated. He was so drunk that when he got to French's mill on Somerset street he imagined that it was his house and he tried to get in. Finding the doors all locked Wilson grew angry and broke open a window and climbed in.

When Wilson gained admittance he threw himself upon a pile of soft bags and fell asleep. Here he was found next morning. He was told to get out, which he did, but when P. M. French heard of the occurrence he had a complaint made by Isaac Giles, one of his workmen, and a warrant was sworn out for Wilson's arrest on a charge of breaking in with intent to steal.

But Wilson steered clear of the city. Two or three times he was seen in the borough, but managed to elude the constable. Then he left town and stayed away until Saturday night, when, supposing the matter had blown over, he came back and was arrested at once by Roundsman Fredericksen and Officer Mattox.

Wilson spent Sunday in the lock-up and was arraigned before Justice Nash last Tuesday. There was so little in the complaint that the defendant was released on his own recognizance.

TWO HAPPY COUPLES.

Cupid Still Continues to Make Business For Hymen.

Last Tuesday at the home of the bride, No. 25 Howard street, occurred the marriage of Miss Louisa Sprigg, daughter of Louise Sprigg, to Frank B. Dranke, of Metuchen. The marriage was performed in the presence of just the immediate relatives by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, pastor of the Church of the Holy Cross. After the ceremony an informal reception was held and supper was served to the guests. The happy couple is now enjoying their honeymoon. They will reside at Metuchen.

The marriage of Miss Love, of the borough, to Christopher Wise, also of the borough, took place last Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, who performed the ceremony. The couple were unattended, and after the ceremony they left at once for Brooklyn to spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside at the home of the groom in the borough.

Roll of Honor.

The roll of honor in the Sunday-school of the Church of the Redeemer for the month of October is as follows: Infant Class — Lyman Hibbard, 15; Alice Demarest, 14 2-3; Louisa Demarest, 14 2-3; boy's department—A. E. Moore, 14; W. H. Hepburn, 14; girl's department—Edna Moore, 15; Hattie Edwards, 14½.

—The prize choirister of Grace church for the month of October was Lynn Adams.

HIS STORY A SILLY ONE.

ALLEGED BICYCLE THIEF HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

William Gray Arraigned Before Judge Nash—Received But $10 a Month But Said He Paid $70 for the Bicycle.

William Gray, alias William Broads dale, who is accused of stealing Frank Denckiau's bicycle, two weeks ago, was brought here from New Brunswick Friday and given a hearing before Justice Nash.

One night about two weeks ago Denckiau's Eldridge bicycle was left standing outside of Hall's pharmacy on Watchung avenue. When Denckiau went after it later in the evening it was gone. Denckiau reported the matter to the police and a few days afterwards a man riding a wheel answering to the description of the one Denckiau owned was arrested in New Brunswick upon suspicion and given ten days in the county jail under a charge of disorderly conduct to hold him until the case could be investigated. The man gave his name as William Gray, and said that he lived with a farmer near Metuchen.

The New Brunswick police telephoned here to Chief Grant and the Chief and Denckiau went to New Brunswick the next day where Denckiau identified the wheel as his. So when Gray had served his time in New Brunswick he was re-arrested and brought here.

He told a silly story Friday afternoon when arraigned before Justice Nash. He claimed that he had paid a colored man in Metuchen $70 for the bicycle. He said that he only made $10 a month, yet could afford to pay that fabulous price for the wheel. Gray was an intelligent looking fellow, young, and it surprised the court very much to hear him tangle himself up so in absurd statements.

Appropriation for Improvement is Nearly Exhausted.

The year is rapidly drawing to a close, but the fine weather will last long enough to permit the street committee to do considerable work on the streets yet this year if it wasn't for one thing—the appropriation is about exhausted. A little is left, but only sufficient to pay for the hire of a few men in the repair gang.

The people living in the West End have been complaining to the Council and especially to the street committee because more work has not been done on their streets this year—such as Plainfield avenue and West Third street. Last winter West Front street from Grant avenue out was a genuine bogbole. The street committee promised to repair that street and put it in good shape this year and they have done so. Now they make a similar promise to the people in the West End, and will strongly recommend to the Council that this work be done with next year's money.

MARTIN CYCLE COMPANY TO MOVE.

Their New Headquarters Will be on East Fourth Street Near Park Avenue.

The F. L. G. Martin Cycle Company will change its headquarters with the beginning of the new year. A five-year lease has been signed for the two well-equipped stores on East Fourth street, just off Park avenue. One of the stores will be devoted to the storage department and repair shop and the other will be used as a salesroom. The usual line of wheels, Clevelands and Crescents, will be continued, and, in addition, a complete line of golfing goods will be kept.

Salvationists' Mercy Box.

One of the most prolific means of support for the rescue homes, workingmen's and women's hotels, children's homes, farm colonies, etc., instituted by the Salvation Army throughout the United States within the past few years, is the mercy box. This box is delivered free of charge to sympathizers in the work of the Army, who agree to expend therein at least one cent a week. Anyone desiring to help the army in this way can have a box by making application to the local secretary or the officer of the army.

Another Vicious Dog.

The seven-year old daughter of Geo. Rickert, of the borough, was bitten Thursday in the calf of the leg by a dog owned by Mr. Schroppe, of Jackson avenue. The dog's teeth penetrated the skin to a depth of about a quarter of an inch. The wound was cauterized by Dr. Mattison, of Somerset street, and no ill effects are feared.

A Busy Contractor.

John H. Milligan, the Dunellen contractor, is unusually busy this fall. He has just completed the erection of a house in Metuchen, and has another one there under way. Saturday he began work on a residence in Bound Brook, and this morning started the erection of a new barn for Mahlon Vail, of South Plainfield, whose old barn was recently destroyed by fire.

Theodore Ayres, of Brooklyn, spent Sunday with Walter Bennett, of West Fourth street.

PASSED AWAY WITH END OF CENTURY.

Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock Died in Her 97th Year.

LIFE ONE OF GOOD DEEDS.

TOOK AN ACTIVE PART IN CHURCH AND CHARITABLE WORK.

Witnessed the Great Progress of Civilization in the 19th Century—Wife of a Leading New York Physician—Removed to Plainfield at His Death and Has Made it Her Home Since.

After nearly completing a century of life, Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock, one of the oldest parishioners of Grace P. E. church, passed away quietly Friday evening at her home on East Fifth street surrounded by her children. It was an eventful life that was ended and one that was filled with good and loving deeds, the activity in which was only lessened by her old age.

Mrs. Cock was born September 12th, 1802, at Lancaster, Pa. She was the daughter of William Riehle, of Philadelphia. In 1836 she was married to Thomas Cock, M. D., then one of the distinguished physicians of New York city. They resided in New York, where Mrs. Cock was one of the patronesses of the Marion Street Lying-in Asylum and also prominently associated in the Society for the Relief of Indigent Widows with Small Children, then one of the most important charities in New York.

Dr. Cock died in 1869, and in the spring of 1871 Mrs. Cock removed to this city where she has resided ever since. In Plainfield she joined the Grace P. E. church and soon became one of the most active workers in the parish. She was for a number of years president of the Parish Aid Society. One of the efforts of that organization resulted in the purchase of the present organ now used in the church.

Mrs. Cock's health gradually declined and her activity became lessened. She has been confined to her room for nearly eleven years up to the time of her death. Although one of the oldest parishioners of the church, Mrs. Cock never set foot in side of the new edifice. She was, nevertheless, greatly interested in the work.

Mrs. Cock witnessed the wonderful growth of civilization during the nineteenth century. Her first visit to New York was made when she was a young woman on a stage coach before the time of the steamboat or locomotive. She afterward traveled over the same country on a fast express. Before her ill health confined her to her home, she saw the telephone in practical use and conversed over it.

Mrs. Cock has been growing weaker and weaker during the last few weeks and it was known that her end was at hand. Dr. Endicott attended her.

There was no pain and Friday morning she fell into a deep sleep from which she never awakened. At 7:25 o'clock she passed quietly away. Besides the family, Mrs. William Taylor, formerly of Plainfield, and now of Philadelphia, was present at the last. She was a very dear friend.

Mrs. Cock leaves a daughter, Miss Elizabeth R. Cock, and a son, William R. Cock, with whom she has long resided at 235 East Fifth street. She was in her ninety-seventh year.

The funeral services were held from Grace P. E. church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A Colored W. C. T. U.

Mrs. T. H Tomlinson, of the W. C. T. U., and several other members of the Union addressed a meeting held Thursday afternoon at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. The object of the meeting was for the purpose of organizing a branch of the W. C. T. U. among the colored people, but as there were so few out no organization was effected. Another meeting will be held at an early date.

Crushed His Hand.

Philip DeHart, aged twenty-one years, unmarried, and living at 205 South Second street, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock suffering with a badly crushed hand. The accident happened at the Pond Tool Works, where Mr. DeHart is employed. It was found necessary to amputate one finger, but an effort is being made to save the rest of the hand.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choristers at the Church of the Holy Cross for the month of October were Everett Sherwin, Kenneth Stuart, Louis Gardiner, Henry Kemph and Robert Sherwin. Each has the right to wear a silver medal during services in the month of November. Everitt Sherwin won the silver cross for improvement in singing.

A Farewell Surprise.

A surprise party was tendered to Clarence Rogers, of Central avenue, Thursday evening, by some fifty of his friends, previous to his departure at Mt. Hermit, Del. The surprise was a complete one. The evening was spent with games and music. Refreshments were served during the evening.

THEIR AIM IS TO AID POOR AND DESERVING.

Fifth Anniversary of the Organized Aid Association.

THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

COL. MASON W. TYLER WAS AGAIN CHOSEN PRESIDENT.

Facetious Remarks Made by the President About the Anniversary, Which He Likened Unto a Wooden Wedding Without a Bride—Entertaining and Instructive Address Was Made.

One of the most successful societies ever organized in Plainfield, and one which has a very warm place in the hearts of benevolent Plainfielders, is the Organized Aid Association, which exercises a careful supervision over the city's charities. A deeply interested company gathered Thursday in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the Association, and review the year's work.

Col. Mason W. Tyler, president of the association, presided over the meeting. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Dr D. J. Yerkes, the pastor of the First Baptist church, after which the president delivered his annual address. Mr. Tyler spoke of this occasion as the society's wooden wedding, but added that it might be difficult to discover the the whereabouts of the bride. He spoke with gratitude of the work done during the past year, and was glad to report the finances of the association in good condition. He said that too much must not be expected of the society, as it was still young, and the field of work of scientific almsgiving was itself a new one. He described somewhat the work of the different committees, and referred to the large amount of work done which made no show and so stir in the world, but which accomplished an untold amount of good.

A vocal solo by William H. Holmes, accompanied by Howard Case, was the next thing on the programme. Mr. Tyler then announced that Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, who was to have been the speaker of the evening, was unable to be present, on account of illness, but that his sister, Miss Cornelia Bradford, of Whittier House, Jersey City, the first social settlement in New Jersey, had consented to take his place. Miss Bradford is one of the most enthusiastic settlement workers in this country. As a speaker, she is easy, interesting, and bright, and her clever talk was much enjoyed. She directed the thoughts of her hearers along sociological lines. She spoke of the necessity of realizing that all men, high or low, are brothers, and using every effort for the uplifting and advancement of one's fellows. The influence of environment on heredity, the shamefully low wages paid to women employed in the manufacture of ready-made clothing, etc., the sin of employing women and girls in places in an improper sanitary condition, and of employing children who ought to be at school and at play, were some of the subjects which she touched on briefly. She believes in prevention of crime rather than rescue from a life of crime, where it is possible; she would educate the children and young people, to prevent their becoming criminals. Incidentally, Miss Bradford spoke of the work at Whittier House, and urged the help and interest of Plainfielders in the work there.

After another solo by Mr. Holmes the election of officers was held, resulting as follows: President, Mason W. Tyler; vice-presidents, Alexander Gilbert, Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, David H. Rowland; secretary, John Doull Miller; treasurer, J. Kirtland Myers. The reports of the treasurer and committees were not read, but will be published in pamphlet form at an early date.

New Members Elected.

At the meeting of Columbia Lodge A. O. U. W., Friday the following four members were received: John G. Bicknell, William Clawson, George Giddis and Charles E. Codington.

Children should always increase in weight. Not to grow, not to increase in flesh, belongs to old age.

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.

PENNY FOR EVERY YEAR

BIRTHDAY SOCIABLE HELD IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Each Month Was Represented by an Appropriate Recitation and Children Were Dressed in Novel Costumes.

A birthday sociable was given in Vincent chapel Thursday under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church.

The programme opened with a vocal duet by the Misses Ethel and Mabel Jamison, accompanied by Miss Jessie Utter. The guests rose when their birth month was called and deposited little sacks containing the same number of pennies as they were years old. Earl Lynn, as a drummer boy, was February. Miss Edna Kennedy was dressed for the showers of April. Fred Lynn represented July attired as a farmer. Miss Margarent Demarest, as August, appeared like a little summer fairy.

After a vocal solo by Miss Ethel Jamison, Miss Clyde Doane recited a November selection. Miss Lillian Snodgrass stood for November and Raymond Lyman for December. After another duet by the Misses Jamison, Miss Helen Whitney represented October in an appropriate manner. Miss Peck appeared for September and Miss Gertie Guier for June. May was not represented.

A piano duet by Miss Jessie Utter and Ida Bigelow was followed by a pantomime of January. The story was read by Miss Susie Davies while Miss Bertha Jenkins took the part of the country belle and Clifford A. McGee as her awkward rustic swain. Miss Persia Snodgrass impersonated the vigilant mother of the fair maid.

The receipts of the little bags amounted to about $41.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, chairman, Mrs. J. B. Joy, Miss Bertha Whitney and Miss Susie Davies. The refreshment committee consisted of Mrs. C. B. Boggs, chairman, Miss Jackson and Miss Sharp.

MORE BICYCLES STOLEN.

Two Wheels Fall Into the Hands of Thieves.

The bicycle thief is operating again, and Tuesday night stole a Tacoma wheel belonging to Reginald Chandor, of East Fifth street, from in front of a house on LaGrande avenue, where the young man had stopped to call. The wheel disappeared about 6 o'clock. Chandor went into the house leaving the bicycle leaning against the curb, and when he came out five minutes later the wheel was gone. The theft was reported to the police.

A Lecture on the War.

A lecture will be given in Hope chapel on the evening of November 15th, on the subject "The Spanish-American War." E. O. MacFarland, of Newark, will give the lecture, which will be illustrated with stereopticon views, and will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel.

LAND OF WILLIAM TELL

GARRET P. SERVISS DESCRIBES THE GREAT SWISS PATRIOT.

A Very Interesting Lecture, Finely Illustrated With Pictures of the Alps and Other Scenes in Switzerland.

Those who attended the illustrated lecture at the Casino last night spent a pleasant hour with Garret P. Serviss, of Brooklyn, and visited in imagination the land of the Alps and the birthplace of William Tell. The views thrown on the screens were among the best ever shown and depicted this land of the skies in all its entrancing beauty.

The lecture was the first of a series of three to be given at the Casino by Mr. Serviss during this month. Many of the views shown were taken by Mr. Serviss himself during tours through Switzerland. The snow-clad peak, Mt. Blanc, and the Matterhorn, fertile valleys perched near the top of high mountain ranges, the clear blue lakes of Lucerne and Geneva, little villages nestling close to the mountain's base, glaciers and even types of the natives were all shown as naturally as though the beholder stood upon some vantage ground and swept in the scene from nature itself.

"There is no spot in the world," said the lecturer, "like the country of the Alps, the land of William Tell. I believe in him as fully as I believe in the existence of the Rhine, and although scholars have tried to make us believe that Tell is a myth, and had no substantial part in the freeing of Switzerland, he represents to too truly the aspirations of a people for free dom and its achievement to imagine him a creature of fable and story. We may as well set aside our Washington as the Swiss William Tell."

Tell was born about 600 years ago, when the power of Austria hung like a pall over the land, and the tyranical governors did their best to stir up the Swiss to revolt. Tell's stern upright character, his love of liberty and his refusal to acknowledge the Austrians' power were described.

SNEAK THIEVES AGAIN.

SECOND TIME THEY HAVE BROKEN INTO THE SAME HOUSE.

Home of B. R. Waldron, of Codington Avenue, Looted of a Quantity of Canned Fruit—Broke a Window

For the second time within a week thieves entered the home of B. R. Waldron, on Codington avenue. The second robbery occurred Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock while the family was out. On the first occasion the thieves entered through an unlocked cellar door, but Thursday they broke a window and effected an entrance. The affair happened while all of the neighbors were at home, but still no trace of the thieves can be found.

They carried away with them a large quantity of canned fruit which the family had stored away in the cellar. It looks very much as though the parties are well acquainted in the neighborhood and especially at Mr. Waldron's home. When the first robbery occurred fruit was taken in addition to $8 in money. Mr. Waldron has an idea that he knows who the guilty parties are, and an effort will be made to catch them before long.

AN INCORRIGIBLE YOUTH.

Willie Frey Will Probably be Sent to Reform School.

Willie Frey, the twelve-year-old son of Charles Frey, of Somerset street, seems to be incorrigible. Several times he has run away from home, and refused to come back until sent for by the police, and now he has the paper in the alleged theft of about a dollar from his mother. The last time Willie ran away, his mother tried had to have him committed to the Reform School, but Judge Vail refused to do so. Willie was held for the grand jury last Friday by Justice Nash, on a charge of petty larceny, and it is pretty certain this time that he will be sent away.

The alleged theft was committed Thursday. While Mrs. Frey was out Willie took about a dollar in change from her purse, and spent it. Mrs. Frey missed the money at once, and going before Justice Nash, had the warrant made out for his arrest. Patrolman Flynn caught the lad this morning and locked him up in a cell. He stoutly denied the charge.

SHOT TWO DEER.

Plainfielder's Successful Hunting Trip in the Adirondacks.

Samuel H. Edwards, of LaGrande avenue, returned Friday after a two weeks' vacation spent in the Adirondack woods. He was accompanied by a friend and two guides and they spent most of their time hunting deer. According to the game laws of New York State, each hunter is allowed only one deer a season. When they came out of the woods, they brought four together, the limit allowed by law. Two of them fell before Mr. Edwards' rifle. One of these, Mr. Edwards sent to the Lunch Club, of the Tide Water Oil Company, at Bayonne, the members of which will now enjoy venison for several days.

TENDER THOUGHTS FOR ONES WHO ARE BEREFT

Impressive Funeral Services Over Remains of Mrs. Hegeman.

TRIBUTE OF FINAL WORDS.

REVS. RICHARDS AND SCHENCK OFFICIATED AT OBSEQUIES.

Services Held at Her Late Home on Sycamore Avenue Wednesday Nov. 2d —Strong and Beautiful Testimony to the High Worth and Esteem in Which the Departed Was Held—The Interment.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Catherine E. Hegeman, wife of Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Sr., were held Wednesday Nov. 2d at 3 o'clock from the home 37 Sycamore avenue, Washington Park. The large attendance of friends and neighbors, and many people who were personally acquainted with the deceased, gave strong and beautiful testimony to the high worth and esteem in which the departed was held. The services were very simple and impressive, and in complete harmony with the quiet and unostentatious life lived by Mrs. Hegeman. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which she was a member, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at which church the departed was a faithful and regular attendant, had charge of the services, and both divines paid tributes of love and admiration to the life of Mrs. Hegeman and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones.

Dr. Richards was the first speaker, and after he read the Scripture lesson containing comforting words that point the sorrowful to the Heavenly Master, he made a few remarks, which, in part, are as follows, basing his words partially on the text "In My Father's House are Many Mansions,"

"I suppose that to this day all are well acquainted with these words of the Gospel contained in our Lord's prayer, but it is still true that the name of our Lord is not spoken truly until the Spirit comes and touches our hearts so that we can cry "Abba Father." As Jesus Christ taught his disciples about God, he also taught them about Heaven. Heaven is home for the Christian; the real home. That word 'home' is a dear word even for what it means on earth. Those ties that bind us together with husband and wife, children and sisters. Life is almost not worth the living without it, and there is scarcely any character without it.

"Today our memories call to remembrance the household which has been, and of which our friend as a member, was so closely united. The Church of Christ is little more than home. We remember the large place that she filled in the company's to which she belonged. We learn true values when we lose them. So it is in the home when separation comes. The less painful separation, when members of a family are absent for a time, cannot be considered with those irrevocable sunderings, when death takes some precious member of a family. After one has learned of Christ how to love one another, I do not see how one can be saved from despair when a precious one is removed.

"Home here is only a preparation for the Father's House. Many are here today who share the grief of the loss in this sorrowing circle, but we cannot forget those gone before, who are in that Home permanently established. Sometimes it seems as though the curtains were drawn aside, and that the real treasures can be seen. Our own dear home is not here, but there. I cannot but think of the beautiful words of our dear friend uttered in the morning of her last day among us, when she was feeling so strongly the pains of her illness. She said: 'I must go home today.' She did go home, where she now rests from all pain and illness."

Dr. Schenck spoke next and his words were very impressive, and in harmony with the words of the first speaker. A portion of his remarks follow:

"How true the words of our Lord correspond to the two-fold nature—the Divine and human nature. One is beyond the infinite mind, while the other is in touch with our own feelings. The two-fold nature is expressed in the Gospel of John, fourteenth chapter, 'I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you again,' and 'Let not your hearts be troubled.' These words were spoken to Christ's disciples, and He did come again and bring comfort to them as He promised. He also brought peace to them. Today He speaks these same words to us.

"Six years ago next month we gathered in an adjoining home at the bier of one whose life was dear. Death so unexpectedly and sudden has now come to this home. To husband, sister, kindred and friend these words 'I will not leave you,' come with special significance. Has not our Lord robbed the grave of its terror, ad He comes to us with gracious help; He comes to comfort us.

"This life just gone out filled with generosity, love and sympaty, and the much that she has done shall be a memorial to her. The donations to the Children's Home and kindred societies, the relief to the poor and her efforts to spread the Gospel, shall all be remembered. 'Blessed are those who die in the Lord;' they shall rest from their labors, and their works shall follow them."

In conclusion Dr. Schenck offered a fervert and impressive prayer, in which he frequently mentioned the precious life of the departed. An opportunity was then given all present to view the remains that rested in a handsome casket in the rear parlor. Surrounding it there was a beautiful display of floral tributes consisting of a large cross, pillow and wreaths, all from the immediate members of the bereaved family.

The interment was in the family plot at Hillside, last Thursday, only the immediate family being present. Before leaving the house prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Richards.

The bearers of honor, selected by the family, three from the Crescent Avenue church and three from Trinity Reformed church, were as follows: Hon. Charles Place, Henry C. Squires, Joseph W. Sandford, G. L. VanEmburgh, Robert Clark, Jr., and A. L. Force.

At the grave a short burial service was recited by Dr. Schenck, followed with the benediction by Dr. Richards. The remains were then lowered into mother earth, through a grave heavily-lined with evergreen branches, thus taking away much of the dread of the interment.

A NEW SWEDISH CHURCH

ORGANIZED THURSDAY WITH REV. O. G. TINGLOF AS PASTOR.

Met in The Congregational Church—Address by Rev. C. L. Goodrich—A Charter Membership of Thirty Was Secured.

Since last July there has been a good work going on among the Swedish people of this city who have for some time been holding religious meetings. Those who took the iniative in this movement have felt that there is room in Plainfield for a Swedish church, and their hopes are now soon to be realised. Thursday the Swedish Mission Society met in the Congregational church for the purpose of organizing themselves. The members extended a call to Rev. O. G. Tinglof, of Manchers, N. H., and the call was accepted. He was preached last evening and was most cordially received by his people.

The exercises last evening were in charge of Rev. O. G. Norseen, of Perth Amboy, who has from time to time assisted the Plainfield Swedish people in their meetings. During the evening a short address was made by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, in which he spoke words of encouragement to the new church and bid the members God speed. An additional feature of the programme was a vocal duet by Miss Swedeberg and Miss Erickson.

The new church starts off with a membership of about thirty, and new members are constantly being received. Mr Nord is the present chairman and treasurer of the society. The meetings will be held every Thursday evening in the Congregational church and Sunday evenings in the W. C. T. U. rooms. At present Pastor Tinglof is stopping on Spooner avenue, but he will soon bring his family here.

MERRY BOWLERS.

Netherwood Club Spent Hallow E'en in a Jolly Manner.

The Netherwood Bowling Club gave a Hallow E'en costume party at the Hunnewell Hotel Tuesday evening. There were about thirty present and the costumes were very laughable and original. After bowling in the alleys part of the evening the club repaired to the hotel, which was thrown open to their disposal, where refreshments were served and a good time in general enjoyed. During the evening Ralph Davison took a flashlight picture of the party. Among those present were: Mrs. J. D. Wheeler, F. I. Smith, C. Paton, Mrs. Barton, Mrs. C. Bellows, the Misses N. A. Wheeler, M. N. Wheeler, Alvord, Hand, Thorn, Andrews, Smith, Bostwick, and Messrs. Johnson, Wheeler, Mason, Hunter, Fancher, Henry, Morgan, Maidment, Bellows, Mosher, Eaton and Davison.

Programme for Reception.

At the annual reception Thursday evening to be tendered the Park Avenue Baptist church and congregation, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson will be assisted by Mrs. Udele Smith, of the Women's String Orchestra, of New York, accompanied by Mrs. Chas. Lewis; Miss Rita Pond, elocutionist; Mrs H. E. Rider, soprano, and Mrs. Harry Johnson, solo pianist. Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry will speak on "The Pastor and These Times," and Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes on "The Church and These times."

Lost Two Fingers.

George McGinnis, of Somerset street, lost two fingers in the circular saw at McCullough's steam mill on Steiner place, Thursday.

FIRE LADDIES DANCE.

PLEASURE FOR THE GUESTS AND PROFITS FOR THE FIREMEN.

Cake Walk Was the Feature of the Affair—Won by James McLean and Miss Della Doyle—Those in Charge.

The drivers of the Plainfield Fire Department gave a very successful ball last Thursday in Washington Hall for the benefit of the Firemen's Mutual Benevolent Association, Branch No. 7, of this city. There were about five hundred people present, and everyone had a thoroughly enjoyable time. During the evening Chief Doane and his assistants, as well as several public officials were present and gave encouragement to the affair. The music for the event was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly and his orchestra, and everyone spoke praiseworthy of the selections. Just before the ball came to an end there was a grand cake walk for a cake offered by Eden Boice. The performance was very amusing and was finally won by James McLean and Miss Della Doyle.

The officers of the association are as follows: President, William F. Townley; vice president, William A. Rose; secretary, Fred Breem; treasurer, George Feiring. The committee in charge of last evening's affair consists of James E. Bailey, James H. Daly, Fred Breem, William F. Townley, Harry Bush, George Feiring and William A. Rose. They desire to thank all who in any way assisted in making the dance the success that it was.

Prevent Pneumonia

Prevention is always better than cure, even when cure is possible. But so many times pneumonia is not cured that prevention becomes the natural act of that instinct of self-preservation which is "the first law of nature." Pneumonia can be prevented and is often cured by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Some years ago I had a severe cold and was threatened with pneumonia. I could neither eat nor sleep, and was in a wretched condition. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and took it according to the directions, and was out of the house next day as well and sound as before the attack. I have recommended it in many cases of pneumonia since, and have never known it to fail in effecting a cure."
JOHN HENRY, St. Joseph, La.

"I was attacked with a cold that settled on my lungs, and defied the skill of my physicians so that they considered me incurable. At last I began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was entirely cured after having taken two bottles."
FRANCISCO A. SEVERIANO, Taunton, Mass.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

DEMOCRATS READY FOR ACTIVE WORK.

Permanent Organization Was Effected Nov. 29th.

J. H. HILLMAN PRESIDENT.

REGULATIONS OF OLD DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATION ADOPTED.

Large Attendance of Representative Democrats From All Over the City—A Temporary Finance Committee Appointed to Solicit Funds—Resolutions Adopted Endorsing the Candidates.

The Democratic Association of Plainfield is now a genuine factor in the political world, the permanent organization having been formed at the meeting held in Councilman Moffett's office on North avenue, Nov. 29th. The meeting was attended by a large number of representative party men from all sections of the city.

As chairman of the temporary organization effected by the committees at the previous meeting, John M. Hillman, of the Second ward, called the meeting to order. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved, Mr. Hillman, as one of the committee appointed to draft a suitable constitution and set of by-laws, presented the result of the work. It was the old constitution and by-laws of the Democratic Association of several years ago with a few alterations. The matter of membership fees was stricken out, and instead of three vice-presidents there will be nine—one for each election district. The committee were also charged to conform with the present condition of affairs. After the constitution had been read by the secretary, it was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Then came the question of officers. M. R. Flynn moved that the temporary officers as far as they went be made permanent. This motion was adopted. The rest of the officers were elected by acclamation, and the complete list is as follows: President, John H. Hillman; vice-presidents, to be named for the election districts by the committees participating in the informal conference; treasurer, Elmore D. Moffett; financial and corresponding secretary, W. W. St. John; recording secretary, Michael J. DeCourcy.

President Hillman announced that the committees, which include executive, finance, public meetings, printing, canvassing and naturalization, would be announced at the next meeting of the association. It would be necessary to have considerable consultation about such a matter. As the association would require considerable money to start with, W. W. St. John moved that temporary finance committee of one from each election district be appointed to collect whatever funds they could before the next meeting. The motion was adopted and the following were appointed: Joseph Bimm, William Gloak, Leonard Spangenberg, William H. McClure, Frank Boice, Patrick Trayer, James Davis, V. L. Frazee and Michael Higgins.

The question of securing a complete list of Democrats in the city was then brought up and Councilman Hetfield suggested that the Democratic members of the election boards in the city be appointed the canvassing committee. This was done.

It was decided that when the meeting adjourn it do so to meet November 30th.

After an informal discussion and an impromptu speech by an enthusiastic Democrat about the record of Foster Voorhees, the following resolution was presented by the corresponding secretary:

"Resolved, That the Democratic Association of Plainfield affirms its loyalty and devotion to the principles of the Democratic party at all times, and that we pledge our constant and honest efforts for the election of all regularly nominated candidates of the Democratic party. We especially endorse the candidacy of Elvin W. Crane, the Democratic nominee for Governor, as well as the admirable nominations made by the Democratic Congressional and county conventions. We urge upon all Democrats the necessity of supporting such candidates with their earnest personal efforts as we, the Democrats of Plainfield, will do for the interests of the people and the proper and deserved rebuke of the Republicans who have prostituted for political and personal purposes the National, State, county and city affairs."

The resolution was adopted.

After a large number of those present had signed the enrollment book the meeting adjourned.

The enrollment book will be kept open for charter members till the next meeting of the Association. The book will be open for signatures at the office of Councilman Moffett at any time.

Case was Discharged.

The assault and battery case of Johan Lawrence against "Tony" Marra, both Italians, came up before Justice Mattison Friday evening, and on account of an insufficient amount of evidence the case was thrown out. What little evidence was produced was very conflicting and Justice Mattison could not hold the defendant for the Grand Jury.

OPENED WITH A DEFEAT

Game Witnessed by Large Audience—Visitors Quicker Than Home Team—In Second Half Home Team Went to Pieces.

The basket ball season in Plainfield opened last Monday with a defeat for the team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. The visitors were from the West Young Men's Institute of the Bowery, New York. They played a fine game and defeated the Plainfield boys by a score of 36 to 14. The game was witnessed by several hundred people.

The first half was decidedly interesting. Both teams played well and although the visitors were a trifle quicker than the home team, the latter put up a strong defense. The score stood 6 to 6 at the end of the first half. In the second half, the Plainfield boys went to pieces and the visitors scored rapidly. The local players failed to cover their opponents and seemed to lose heart. Their team play disappeared and the visitors had things pretty much their own way. The final score stood 36 to 14.

The teams were as follows:

PLAINFIELD Y.M.C.A.		YOUNG MEN'S INSTITUTE.
E. Moraller	right forward	Schwartz
Bonny	left forward	Mamoosian
Yeats	centre	Grimm
E. Moraller	right guard	Whimbel

Referee—Plainfield, 1st half, Yeats; 2nd half, Cote. Time—Two 20 minute halves. Goals from the field—E. Moraller, Egan, Smith (2), Schwartz (3), Mamoosian, Grimm (4), Whimbel. Goals on fouls—E. Moraller (3), Smith, Mamoosian (3), Dubner (2). Fouls—Plainfield, 6; Y. M. I., 8.

SCHOOL PROBLEMS.

Board of Education Asked to Submit Them in Plainfield.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held Monday but very little business was transacted. Messrs. Probasco, Jenkins, Abbott and Lounsbury were present, and so was Superintendent Maxson.

A communication from the International Board of Education with headquarters at Chicago was read asking the Plainfield board to appoint a committee of three to submit to the International Board three problems which are met with in their work. The communication was received and placed on file, but no committee appointed.

Mr. Lounsbury reported that the new flag pole had been erected in the Irving school yard, and Superintendent Maxson reported that the school children had contributed $47.30 towards the Lafayette fund which he had forwarded to the committee in Chicago. It was decided that the usual number of financial statements and reports be printed and distributed and that the same be published in the daily papers, then the board went into executive session.

Province of a Newspaper.

The true newspaper is the one which prints all the important news of the world, avoiding that sensationalism which offends all sense of decency and good morals, and whose editorial utterances are honest, fearless, able, and dedicated to the best interests of humanity and a higher civilization. Happily, there are some newspapers left which have not fallen a prey to the recent craze of "yellow journalism." Among them, the New York Evening Post is a shining example of all that a modern, high-class newspaper should be.

DRAGGED IN A PERILOUS POSITION.

Exciting Runaway on North Avenue Last Tuesday.

Patrick Traynor, of Union avenue, had a miraculous escape from either death or serious injuries at 11 o'clock last Tuesday on North avenue.

Mr. Traynor drove a spirited horse, attached to a light road wagon. He stopped in front of Warnick's bakery and when he came out and started to get into the buggy the horse became restless and started to go. Mr. Traynor yelled "whoa" and this apparently frightened the horse. The animal gave a sudden plunge and Mr. Traynor was thrown directly under the buggy, where he was held fast in some manner.

The horse started down towards Park avenue at a terrific gait. People who were on the street held their breath for fear of seeing Traynor's life ended then and there. The runaway rig struck another buggy almost in front of The Press office, and then the frightened horse turned suddenly and came up plumb against the post on the corner of Park and North avenues.

Traynor was in a position so that one of the wheels of the vehicles rested on his back. A. H. Atterbury happened to be near and, together with a number of men, he ran to Traynor's assistance.

The horse was captured and Traynor was rescued from his perilous position, apparently none the worse for the experience.

The buggy was somewhat damaged.

HURT IN A RUNAWAY.

Charles Mundy was thrown out of his wagon last Monday and seriously injured in a runaway. Mr. Mundy lives at Springdale and came to Plainfield Monday on business. It was about 9 o'clock in the evening when he started out Somerset street bound for home. At Lincoln place he met a trolley car and his horse became unmanageable. The frightened animal reared and then started off on a gallop.

The wagon struck the curb and Mundy was thrown from the front seat. He struck his head against a hitching-post and was knocked insensible by the blow. He was carried to his own residence, where he is now. He was badly bruised and cut by the fall. The horse was afterwards caught and brought back to a neighboring stable.

Will Resume Sunday Evening Meetings.

The Sunday evening meetings for men that proved so successful in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last winter will be resumed once more. Sunday evening the men of the congregation held a business meeting in the chapel to talk over the arrangements for the meetings. Henry M. Maxson was chairman of the meeting and Frank Maxson was chosen secretary for the year. It was decided to hold a meeting every Sunday evening as last year and plans for the control of them were inaugurated and will be completed at another meeting.

New Church Members.

Two were admitted to the membership of the Congregational church Sunday morning. One was received by letter and the other by confession of faith.

OUR FLEET'S FIRST ADMIRAL

Interesting and Remarkable Career of Ezekiel Hopkins.

Who was the first commander-in-chief of the American navy? What were the names of our first war ships and when were they built?

Probably not one out of a hundred of the average newspaper readers can answer, without investigation, these questions; yet the knowledge is interesting and valuable and especially timely just now, when the navy and the doings of the naval officials occupy so large a part of the public attention.

The Continental Congress at the outset managed the Revolutionary war through committees, there being at that time no executive. John Adams was chairman of the naval committee, with Stephen Hopkins and three other congressmen as associates. On October 13, 1775 Congress ordered two cruisers built. These were the first war vessels so constructed, the United States; and were followed by others until by January 1, 1776 Congress had ordered the building of fifteen cruisers. This was the navy, and its first commander-in-chief was Esekiel Hopkins, of Rhode Island, a younger brother of Congressman Stephens Hopkins. He was appointed to this high office on December 22, 1775.

At the time of his appointment Esekiel Hopkins was a brigadier-general in command of the Rhode Island troops, acting under commission from the governor. He had spent part of his life on board merchant ships, and had also been a ship builder; consequently he was fitted both by experience and ability to fill the important office given to him. In a short time a fleet of four ships and three sloops were ready, and with these Admiral Hopkins set out to win glory for himself and country. Among his lieutenants was the famous John Paul Jones, who was, probably, the most brilliant and daring naval officer of the wars with England.

The Bahama Islands in the West Indies were then an English colony, with New Providence as their principal seaport, and seat of government; and hither the new Admiral sailed the new navy. He attacked the city, captured the harbor fort and town, and brought back with him to America the English governor as a prisoner, eighty cannons and a very large quantity of ammunition and other military stores. This brilliant achievement was a godsend to the disheartened and impoverished patriots. It renewed their courage and replenished their stores. Admiral Hopkins and most of the officers and men received a vote of thanks from Congress for his great deeds which had redeemed the glory and advantage of his country.

Shortly after his return from the Bahamas he met two English ships off Block Island and captured both of them. Two days later he had an engagement with the English twenty-nine gun ship, Glasgow, but did not succeed in capturing it. The public severely censured his conduct of this battle, and in June, 1776, he was ordered to appear before the congressional committee. After a hearing had been given him, the committee sent a favorable report of his actions to Congress, which the latter body approved, so the Admiral was exonerated from all blame.

He was now placed in charge of a large number of war vessels, which Congress was having built. The task was a difficult one. Money and material were hard to get. A powerful English fleet blockaded the harbors, and prevented the sailing of some of his ships when completed. The people became impatient. The press accused him of slowness, of being a laggard in his country's services. His temper was never of the best, and he emphatically resented the clamor of complaints. Again he was summoned to appear before Congress for investigation. Then the testy old sailor lost his temper entirely, and sent a most blank refusal to Congress, couched in vigorous but undiplomatic English. The result of all this was that he was dismissed from the service January 2, 1777.

Ezekiel Hopkins at once equipped a fast and powerful privateer, and again went to sea. He sailed to the East Indies, where his daring and skill found rich rewards. During one cruise he captured a sufficient number of rich English merchantmen to cause his profits to foot up over $1,000,000. At another time he fell in with a large fleet of English merchantment protected by a man-of-war. He boldly joined the fleet, and every night cut out and captured a vessel, until he had sent ten home and could spare no more men from crew. Because the most successful and daring of all the American privateersmen.

When the war ended he returned to Rhode Island, and became one of her most prominent and busy citizens.

On the outbreak of the Revolutionary war found the patriots without a navy. Congress had to create one. Four merchantmen were first purchased, hastily equipped with guns and sent to sea as cruisers; but their defects as war vessels soon became so apparent that Congress determined at once to set about the building of a navy. On October 13, 1775, Congress ordered two cruisers built; and on December 13, the order was increased to five thirty-two-gun ships, five twenty-eight-gun ships and three twenty-four-gun ships. They were to be ready for the sea by the following April. The names given to the thirteen vessels were: Boston, Congress, Effingham, Delaware, Hancock, Montgomery, Providence, Raleigh, Trumbull, Virginia, Warren, Washington and Randolph. These were the first war vessels constructed in the United States.

A TALE OF GOLD.

Dawson City Miners Are Remarkable For Their Honesty.

Much has been written of the wonders of the Klondike goldfields, a correspondent writes, but practically nothing has been said of the almost phenomenal honesty of the miners. Much amazed me most during my first few days in Dawson City was the reckless way in which miners left thousands of pounds' worth of gold exposed in empty cabins and tents, as if inviting the first comer to help himself. There were millions lying about without anyone looking after them, and so far as one could see, they belonged to nobody.

I explored many of these cabins during their owners' absence, and in the very first cabin I entered I saw a dirty, tattered blanket carelessly thrown over two mackerel kits. I lifted the blanket and found that the kits were almost full to the brim with gold dust and nuggets to the value of at least £5,000. The miner was out prospecting on Bear Creek, and had no more anxiety about his pile than if it were safely housed in the Bank of England.

In the same in nearly every cabin I entered. Gold greeted me everywhere. There were shelves full of oil-cans, meat-tins, fruit-jars, and buckskin and walrus bags packed with the precious metal, all as unprotected as if they were full of potatoes.

One Norwegian miner on Hunker Creek had made a strong-box of a pair of canvas overalls, the legs of which he had sewn up. I lifted the uncanny "safe" and found that it weighed a good 100lb., every ounce of which was virgin gold; and the least value I could place on those dirty overalls was £5,000.

There were five gallon oil-cans full of gold carelessly pushed under the miners' bunks, every one of which held a fortune, for which most men strove a lifetime.

Out on Eldorado Creek there is a settlement of miners who have no fewer than fourteen rich claims, and are washing out gold at the rate of many thousands of pounds a week. Their strong room is a common galvanized washing-tub, and when I was there it was three-quarters full of gold, and much too heavy for two strong men to lift. Had I been inclined I might have plached thousands of pounds' worth. Gold abounded on every side which seemed to belong to nobody.

Even if a miner leaves his cabin for a week or more, he simply leaves a notice to this effect attached to the walls. He never thinks of putting a guard over his pile.

Of course there have been attempts at theft, but the perpetrators have been invariably detected. In one recent case the thief managed to carry his booty a distance of ten miles, when cold and exhaustion compelled him to take shelter at the cabin of one of the miners. His host's suspicion was aroused by the man's conduct and by the bags of gold, for which he could not satisfactorily account.

The miner detained his guest, communicated with some of his fellows; and fifteen of them assembled in the hut and sat in judgment on the thief. He was found guilty, and half-a-dozen bullets put a sudden end to his career.

Such cases, however, are very rare; and it speaks volumes for the honesty of the 40,000 men who are now gathered in Dawson City that they can see hundreds of thousands of pounds' worth of gold lying about, without even thinking of laying hands on it.

To my mind by far the luckiest man in the Klondike is a man you have probably never heard of—Halsey Putnam. Before coming to the Klondike, Halsey had tried and failed in almost every calling a man can follow, from blacksmith to laborer in the Brooklyn parks, and from printer to barman. When he reached Dawson he had not the necessary 50 cents for a shave; and ½lb. of meat at 70 cents a pound would have put him in the "Bankruptcy Court."

Within a few months Halsey had mined and sold £14,000 worth of gold; and to-day, after little more than a year at his last lucky venture, he could write you a cheque for £50,000, and yet retire on a fortune.

TRICKY TRICKS OF THE RAVEN.

As Strategists, These Birds are Something Remarkable.

Many stories are told of the cleverness of the raven, a bird which really seems to have reasoning powers. One of these stories tells how a raven, by a skillful stratagem, got a young hare for his dinner. It had pounced upon the little animal, but the mother hare drove it away.

Then the raven slowly retreated, encouraging the mother to follow him, and even pretending that he was afraid of her. In this fashion he led her to a considerable distance from her young one, and then, suddenly, before the hare had time to realize the meaning of the trick, he rose in the air, flew swiftly back, caught the young hare in his beak and bore it away.

A similar plan was adopted by some ravens that wished to steal food from a dog. They teased him till he grew so angry that he chased them from the spot, but the artful birds turned sharply round, easily reached the dish before him, and carried off the choicest bits in triumph.

As to the raven's power of speech, the following story—which is given on the authority of Capt. Brown, who vouches for its truth—will show how aptly it can talk. A gentleman, while traveling through a wood in the south of England, was startled by hearing a shout of "Fair play, gentlemen; fair play!" uttered in loud tones. The cry being presently repeated, the traveler thought it must proceed from some one in distress, and at once began to search for him. He soon discovered two ravens fiercely attacking a third. He was so struck with the appeal of the oppressed bird that he promptly rescued him.

It turned out that the victim was a tame raven belonging to a house in the neighborhood, and the cry that it had used so opportunely was one of many that it had been taught to utter. —Philadelphia Times.

YOUTHFUL POTENTATES.

Queen Isabella Ascended the Throne When Only Three Years old.

Spain is always the land of the Infante. To-day it is the kingdom of an infant, just as it was sixty-five years ago, when the king's grandmother, Isabella II., ascended the throne at the age of three, assuming the actual government when she was thirteen. If our own Prince Alfred had not declined the crown of Greece in favor of the Dane, he would have been a king at nineteen, and carried on the traditions of the many child-monarchs of Greek annals, including his mother, when she was wakened on that historic night in June at Kensington palace to hear that her uncle, William IV., was dead, and that she reigned in his stead. Henry III. had become King of England at the age of ten; Edward III at the age of fifteen, Richard II at the age of eleven; Henry VI. at the age of eight; Edward IV. when he was twenty, while his son, Edward V., became king at the age of thirteen, which again proved an unlucky number, for he was murdered in the Tower with his only brother, the Duke of York, after he had reigned less than twelve weeks. Henry VIII. was only eighteen when he came to be king; his son Edward VI., was just ten and was dead before he was fifteen, while his would-be successor, the hapless Lady Jane Grey, was proclaimed queen before she was eighteen, and lost her pretty head before she was nineteen.

Pets Travel in Baskets.

Not to be debarred from carrying Fido on railroads where dogs are not allowed, except in baggage cars, the up-to-date woman has adopted an ingenious device. Some of the large stores have been displaying unique wicker baskets of a pattern and finish which immediately attract the attention of the shopper. These baskets are shaped like an ordinary market basket, though finished a little more artistically, and are opened at one end for ventilation, but barred by rattan rails to prevent Fido from escaping. Madam can carry her pet on board a train and, provided the dog or tabby makes no noise, she is free from detection.

Other shops are showing bags for cats, parrots, monkeys and dogs. These bags come in all sizes, are oil-cloth lined, and shield the pet from the conductor's objecting eyes. Each end of the bag has heavy wire gratings, which admit the air, and may be instantly covered by canvas screens in case a railroad official comes uncomfortably near.—Philadelphia Press.

Labouchere's Clever Wooing.

Mr. Labouchere, father of the first Lord Taunton, was employed as a young man in the great mercantile house of Hope. He applied to Sir Francis Baring for leave to pay his addresses to his daughter. Sir Francis demurred, as Labouchere, though a rising young man, had no fortune.

"But if Hope takes me into partnership?" said Labouchere.

"Oh, yes, if Hope takes you into partnership."

Labouchere then went to Hope and intimated his wish for this arrangement. Hope in his turn demurred.

"But if I marry Baring's daughter?"

"Oh, if you marry Baring's daughter—"

So Labouchere married Baring's daughter and became a partner in Hope's.—New York Mail and Express.

"Volume," echoed her husband. "When he gets to telling you what he knows it's a whole library."—Washington Star.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constantly increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found them were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $20 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style packet containing six Ripans Tabules, designed to meet the wants of those who prefer to buy a low priced article in a popular form, has been placed on sale at 10 cents. This low-priced sort is intended for the purpose of affording the benefit of a trial at a small outlay to those who are in the habit of buying cheap medicines. The regular packet of Ripans Tabules, containing a dozen in a paper carton, is sold at 60 cents. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists, or by mail by sending the price to the Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Or a single carton may be sent for 5 cents in stamps to the same address. Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists, general dealers, newsdealers, hotel stands and at some liquor stores and barber shops. One gives relief.

SOCIETY LEADERS WEDDED IN CHURCH.

Grandest Wedding of the Year Held Tuesday Night.

MAGNIFICENT DECORATIONS

MISS GERTRUDE BAKER, DAUGHTER OF J. T. BAKER, THE BRIDE.

Howard Wade Beebe, Prominent in Local Society and Clubs, the Groom—The Ceremony Was Very Elaborate—Many Beautiful Gowns—Church and House Thronged With Guests—The Bridal Party

Magnificent, indeed, was the appearance of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last Tuesday with the towering pyramid of palms in front, the mammoth pink and white chrysanthemums on every side, and a host of finely-gowned women and well-appearing men, the very elite of Plainfield society, all to do honor to the marriage of two of Plainfield's society leaders, Miss Gertrude Baker, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. John Thomas Baker, of Stelle avenue, and Howard Wade Beebe, of Madison avenue.

It was the greatest and most elaborate wedding of the year and, with the reception that followed at the spacious home of Councilman Baker, on Stelle avenue, formed one of the principal events of the season in local society circles. The ceremony was one of the prettiest ever witnessed in the city while the decorations at both church and house were arranged with a beauty and grandeur seldom seen.

Both of the couple have hosts of friends in the city where they have resided for many years. Both were prominent in society where they were general favorites. Mr. Beebe has long been an energetic worker in the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club as well as in the Union County Country Club. Then there were many acquaintances in New York and other cities. Over three thousand invitations were sent out.

A more representative gathering of the families of Plainfield's prominent and influential citizens than the one that filled every bit of available space in the Crescent Avenue church last evening, could hardly be imagined. Society was out in force. The display of beautiful gowns was in itself an event.

Among the men in the vast assemblage were those who have shaped and controlled the city's affairs for many years. As the father of the bride is president of the Common Council, next in rank to the Mayor of the city, the present directors of the city's prosperity were there. All the members of the Common Council were present. Then, too, among the guests were prominent men from New York and other cities, together with their families.

It was a chrysanthemum wedding and master specimens of the national flower of Japan were used in countless profusion in the decoration of the sanctuary. Pink and white were the prevailing colors. Across the entire front of the church and reaching above the gallery was a great pyramid of palms that hid the platform from view. Huge masses of pink and white chrysanthemums, artistically grouped, were placed at either end while other chrysanthemums of the same colors were ranged along the base of the pyramid of green. The railing to the gallery was hidden beneath a profusion of southern smilax on which were hung beautiful garlands of pink and white chrysanthemums. Large palms were placed at intervals along the railing. At the ends of the pews gigantic chrysanthemums nodded their plumed heads.

Long before 8 o'clock, the hour set for the ceremony, the guests began to arrive and rapidly filled the many pews on the main floor and in the gallery. Even before the appointed time every seat was filled and many were standing. During the interval that preceded the arrival of the bridal party, Frank J. Smith, the regular organist of the church, rendered a programme of pleasing selections.

When the hour had come and all was ready, the harmony changed and the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march pealed forth in stately measure. Then the doors to the left centre aisle swung open and the bridal party entered. The ushers, who were William C. Baker, a brother of the bride, Dr. Benjamin Van D. Hedges, Dr. F. C. Ard and J. H. P. Wharton, of this city, Willis D. Wood, of Brooklyn, and Henry W. Evans, a cousin of the groom, of Westfield, entered first. They wore the formal evening dress with white vests. Each wore a boutonniere of white carnations.

After the ushers came one of the maids-of honor, Miss Louise Anderson, of St. Louis, a cousin of the bride. She wore a beautiful gown of white silk mull over yellow taffeta. She carried a bouquet of violets tied with purple ribbon. The six bridesmaids followed two by two. They were Miss Florence Abbott, Miss Mary Bushnell, Miss Katheryn Reinhart and Miss Mary Whiton, of Plainfield, Miss Frances Baker, of New York, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Nancy Lawson, of Salem, Mass. Their gowns were of white silk mull over pink, with bow-knots of pink ribbon applique on the mull. The pink gowns of the second couple were a shade lighter than that of the first couple, and those of the third couple lighter still. Immediately following was the other maid-of-honor, Miss Anne Miller, of Plainfield, who was gowned like the bridesmaids, only in a still lighter shade of pink, with white ribbon trimmings. The result was a gradual shading of color that gave a most charming effect. The maids-of honor wore short veils, caught up by knots of ribbon corresponding in color to their gowns. The bridesmaids had bow-knots of pink ribbon in their hair. The latter carried magnificent bouquets of American Beauty roses, in which the same graduation of color was observed as in the gowns.

The bride, who is at all times one of Plainfield's most beautiful young women, never looked fairer than when she entered after the bridal party, leaning on the arm of her father. She was attired in a princess gown of white satin, entrain, trimmed with point lace and orange blossoms. She wore a tulle veil, fastened with a white aigrette and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of lilies-of the valley and orchids.

While the procession was slowing advancing down the aisle, the groom, accompanied by the best man, R. A. Beebe, of Plainfield, his brother, entered from the side. The officiating clergymen, Rev. Dr. George D. Baker, of Philadelphia, uncle of the bride, and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, advanced from the other side.

They met and the ushers and bridesmaids separated and passed on either side forming a semi-circle about the chief participants. The solemn words of the marriage ceremony were then spoken by Rev. Dr. Baker, while the prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Richards.

As the bridal party reached the front of the sanctuary the grand harmonies of the organ grew fainter until they could scarcely be heard. While the clergyman spoke and the responses were made, low sweet music floated out into the auditorium. Then, when the last words were said and the couple pronounced man and wife, the triumphal tones of the Mendelssohn wedding march resounded through the church and Mr. and Mrs. Beebe marched slowly down the aisle and out of the building with the rest of the bridal party following. Miss Miller was escorted by the best man after whom came the bridesmaids two by two, the other maid of honor and finally the ushers.

After the ceremony a reception followed at the home of the bride. The house was fairly transformed with the floral decorations. All the rooms were profusely decorated with pink and white chrysanthemums and southern smilax, while in the reception room a floral bower was arranged, wherein Mr. and Mrs. Beebe and the others of the bridal party received the guests. A thousand invitations were issued for the reception and fully five hundred were present, including a large number from out of town. An elaborate supper was served by Marcel. The dining table was elaborately decorated in the prevailing colors.

The floral decorations in both church and house were by Mackintosh, of New York, who devoted his personal attention to the work.

Each of the ushers received a handsome pearl stickpin as the gift of the groom. The bridesmaids' gifts from the bride were double hearts of pearl, crowned with a wreath of pearls. The gift of the groom to the bride was a diamond and sapphire ring.

There was a multitude of wedding gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Beebe from their hosts of friends. Silver predominated, and many valuable and dainty articles of that metal were included in the list. Other gifts, while they made no showing in the large room that the presents more than filled, were valuable, indeed.

Mr. Beebe is a trusted employe in the banking house of Wood, Huestis & Company, of Pine street, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Beebe have not yet decided where they will reside on their return from the wedding journey on which they started after remaining at the reception for a time. After their departure from the reception, the remainder of the evening was spent by

KELLEY'S DEATH IS STILL A MYSTERY.

Froelich Tuesday Gave Police Important Evidence.

WENT OVER HIS TRACKS.

TOLD HOW HE AND KELLEY WANDERED INTO HARRISON.

Says Kelley Had a Roll of Money Then—Traces of Paris Green Found By Telegraph Pole—Patrolman Dolan Met Them.—Froelich Says Kelley Was Ill—Left Him and Kelly Disappeared.

Newark, November 16—Mystery still surrounds the circumstances of the death of young James Kelley, the Plainfielder found dead in a freight car at the Waverly yards Friday morning. The police are still at work on the case and are gradually learning more of the facts. It is now evident that young Charles Froelich, who was the last person known to be in Kelley's company that night, is pretty well informed, although it has been rather difficult to draw out what he knows.

Death was caused by paris green, but just under what circumstances it was taken, the police are not yet able to say. It seems certain that Kelley had his roll of bills with him after he took the paris green, and that they were taken from him after that.

Yesterday Froelich was taken by the Newark police over the route he and Kelley traveled Thursday night and he was questioned very closely regarding the happenings on that occasion.

Froelich asserts that when he met Kelley the latter had a small pail in his hand, and that, as they walked down Market street, in Newark, a man accosted them and asked for money, and Kelley drew out a roll of bills and gave the man one.

Kelley appeared to be sick, Froelich said. They went over the Centre street bridge into Harrison. Froelich took Detective Donovan over the ground. In Harrison they met Patrolman Dolan, who, on seeing Froelich, recognized him as one of the two men he encountered Wednesday night. Froelich attempted to deny this, but admitted it later.

He then took the officers over the route as he had described it, and his story of the stay in Harrison agrees with Patrolman Dolan's. At a telegraph pole near the Harrison end of the Jackson street bridge, Dolan encountered Froelich and Kelley. Froelich took the officers to the pole yesterday, and about the base of it were found what are thought to be smudges of paris green. Dolan says when he encountered the men Kelley was lying down and Froelich standing beside him.

Dolan thought they were intoxicated, and on finding they belonged in Newark ordered them across the bridge. He had heard shooting in the vicinity just before encountering the men, and was looking for the shooters when he met the two. Froelich told him his companion was not drunk, but sick. He wanted a hack to take his companion away. Kelley appeared to revive, and accompanied Froelich across the bridge. Froelich says Kelley did not take the poison there.

Froelich, after promising to find a hack, left Donovan to Ferry and Market streets, where he says he left Kelley for a few moments, and when he returned Kelley was gone.

There is one plausible way, the police say, of accounting for the disappearance of the money. If Kelley walked directly from where Froelich claims to have left him to where his body was found, he would not only have passed through the region infested by the Waverly gang, but through a section of the city where a sick or intoxicated man might easily become the prey of footpads.

TO FURNISH TELEGRAPH POLES.

THEY MET ON THE ROAD.

DECAMP AND FRIENDS WANTED IT ALL.

Lambertson Was Run Down and Chased Away—It Happened Election Night—DeCamp Was Called to Account in Court

Scotch Plains, November 16.—The last echo of the excitement of election time was heard in Justice Clark's court last evening, when Lambert DeCamp, a young man from Alton, was brought up to answer for troublous times near Scotch Plains election night.

It so happened that on election day, DeCamp and two friends named Mellick and Tyme, came to Scotch Plains to see what was going to turn up. After the polls were closed and the result announced, the three young men, it is said, went to a local bar room to drown their disappointment in the flowing bowl. Trouble arose and they left some say in a hurry.

Disgusted with town and election, the trio climbed into DeCamp's rig and started for his home. As they passed in front of Peter Frazee's residence, they met Hans Lambertson, overseer for Former Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood. The road was narrow and the DeCamp outfit did not feel the necessity of turning out. Lambertson says that they deliberately ran him down.

Somehow, and idea forced itself into the minds of the disgruntled trio that they were being outwitted. So they speedily started a lively campaign against the driver of the other vehicle. Seeing the array that was determined on his defeat, Lambertson made a mastery retreat. The methods of locomotion on the part of DeCamp and his friends were somewhat wavering and they failed to make a successful pursuit.

Lambertson went before Justice Clark and made a complaint against the three on the charge of assault and disorderly conduct.

Yesterday afternoon, DeCamp was arrested and taken before Justice Clark. Tyme had disappeared in the fastnesses of Middlesex county while Mellick was a prisoner at home with illness.

DeCamp pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct, while the charge of assault was withdrawn as Lambertson says that he was not the one who struck him. DeCamp paid a fine of $5. The two other offenders will be arraigned later.

CYCLISTS IN POLITICS.

WANT RECOGNITION BY REPUBLICAN PARTY IN THIS CITY.

A wheelmen's candidate on the Republican ticket seems a probability in the Second ward at the coming municipal election. In the Second ward there has been comparatively little talk as to who was to be the choice of the Republicans of the ward to run for the Common Council as successor to Wm. N. Runyon. A gathering of wheelmen, mostly L. A. W. members, and several prominent property owners of the ward, was held last Tuesday at the office of Thomas A. Cuming, local consul of the L. A. W.

Everybody decided that, while the large body of cyclists of the city had no particular kick to make, they deserved representation in the Council. It was decided to ask the Republican party for recognition, with the promise of staunch support. Mr. Cuming accepted the invitation to run for the nomination and his name will be presented at the Second ward primary Monday evening.

PORTO RICO WANTS AMERICAN CONTROL.

Dr. H. K. Carroll Tells of His Visit There.

WAS WELL RECEIVED.

PORTO RICANS GAVE HIM EVERY FACILITY POSSIBLE IN HIS WORK.

Dr. Carroll Went as United States Commissioner to the Island—Met Plainfielder on Outward Voyage—Witnessed Evacuation Ceremonies at San Juan—Supplied With Facts by Prominent Citizens.

Tuesday morning at 4 o'clock there appeared at Sandy Hook the steamer Cassard, one of the Red D Line, and on board among the other passengers was Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who holds the position of commissioner to Porto Rico by appointment of President McKinley. A little later Dr. Carroll arrived in New York, and in the afternoon he reached his home in this city. He was not accompanied by his secretary, Charles E. Buell, of Craig place, and Alfred Solomon, of New York, the interpreter. They will remain in Porto Rico until the work of the commission is completed.

A reporter of this paper called at Dr. Carroll's home soon after his arrival and was greeted cordially by the commissioner. The Doctor stated that since his return he had been troubled with dizziness, due to the fact that on the return from Porto Rico their steamer struck the tail-end of a hurricane, and the effect was anything but pleasant. He had enjoyed his trip, and aside from the little unpleasantness of the return voyage, everything passed off without a hitch of any kind. The doctor was glad to tell something of his experiences, but there were many questions put to him which, on account of his position, he could not answer. They will be published later.

The doctor and his party sailed from Newport, R. I., on the steamer Manitoba, Captain Quick, on October 10th, and Saturday, October 15th, arrived at Ponce. Captain Quick was a Plainfielder, although he was born in England. He lived in this city and attended school here. He and Dr. Carroll enjoyed many pleasant chats on the trip, and told many amusing incidents that happened while he went to school here. He is one of the leading captains of the Morgan Line running steamers between New York and New Orleans, and is considered to be one of the most trustworthy men in the business.

The Manitoba is a very large and thorough sea-going vessel. On board of her was the Forty-Seventh New York Volunteers from Brooklyn, together with a number of prominent people including the commission. The steamer reached Ponce, as stated, on Saturday evening, October 15th. The commission was informed that on the following Tuesday ceremonies would be held at San Juan in connection with the evacuation. Dr. Carroll and the rest of his party at once decided that they wanted to be present. Accordingly they got Mr. Solomon, the interpreter, to make arrangements for the trip, a distance of 78 miles over a military road. Mr. Solomon soon learned that all conveyances had been secured and that nothing was left.

Nothing daunted, Dr. Carroll at once met Gen. Henry, who has charge of the southern district of the island, and to him he stated his mission. Gen. Henry called on a well-known resident who conducts a large livery, and told him that he must provide transportation for Dr. Carroll and party to San Juan. The native replied that he had no horses, whereupon Gen. Henry told him he could borrow some. Again, the native replied that he had no driver. The General informed him that he could drive himself. This idea hit the native forcibly and he agreed.

The trip was made in safety, and Dr. Carroll says that at the end of the journey he did not feel at all tired. After a good night's rest the commission prepared to see the celebration on the following day. The doctor says that the ceremonies were very simple, but impressive. There was the arranging of the troops, the hoisting of the American flag on the principal public buildings, the firing of salutes by troops and from the forts, and a salute from one of the U. S. battleships in the harbor.

While the commission was at San Juan a congress of representative men was in session, discussing the future of the island and its needs. They turned over their reports to Dr. Carroll, as did also an association of bankers and merchants in session in Ponce. They sent a valuable document that will greatly aid in making up the report of the commission. An agricultural association held a session about the same time, and they, too, decided unanimously to assist the commission.

Regarding the result thus far of the commission's work the doctor could say but little. He did state that they were very cordially received by all classes of people, including the heads of the Government, the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Interior. They all called on the doctor and assisted him in every possible way to secure the desired information. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court also called and gave his views on all important matters. Representative men from all professions and trades, recognizing the importance of the commission, gladly gave information.

The commission informed the officials of the island that no change could be expected until Congress had taken action. The people on the island do not like the present form of government, the doctor says. They have strongly felt the oppression of Spain, and though they have not been loud in their demonstration, they feel deeply their grievances. They are glad to know that they are to become Americans, and are anxiously awaiting for a change of government of their island.

While the doctor was in Porto Rico he employed the services of Mr. Williams, who was stenographer for the Evacuation Commission at San Juan. Mr. Buell's work has been along the line of ascertaining the needs of the island as regards telephones, telegraph, etc., while Mr. Solomon, the interpreter, was kept constantly busy. The latter is a highly accomplished gentleman, and thoroughly cosmopolitan.

The members of the commission have enjoyed the climate of Porto Rico thoroughly, and Dr. Carroll says that it is a delightful place to live. The temperature in the daytime averages about 82-84 degrees, and at night about 74-76 degrees. Once in ten years has the temperature reached 100 degrees, and there is always a good breeze from the ocean. When the doctor left Mr. Buell and Mr. Solomon were in good health and, in fact, neither of them have been ill while away.

The doctor left San Juan last Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock and reached New York yesterday morning. On the return trip he met a Mr. Randolph, a Jerseyman, employed in the weather department of this Government. He has been assisting Prof. Harrington in establishing a signal service in Porto Rico.

Another pleasant feature on the outward trip was the fact that the pilot that took the Manitoba out for ten miles was Captain Bunker, a resident of Westfield, who inquired with interest after people in this vicinity.

Dr. Carroll will go to Washington today or tomorrow to confer with President McKinley, and if nothing interferes he will again sail for Porto Rico in one month's time. He will then visit all parts of the island and examine into every need of it. He will then return and present his report to the President.

TOLD STORY OF THE WAR.

Successful Illustrated Lecture at Hope Chapel Last Evening.

Last Tuesday Hope chapel was well filled with an appreciative audience that thoroughly enjoyed the illustrated lecture on the late Spanish-American war. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel and the views as shown under the direction of E. O. MacFarland, of Newark, were very fine. The lecturer started with the beginning of the hostilities between this country and Spain and followed every incident closely to the finish. Every picture was good and Mr. MacFarland in an entertaining manner told the story of the war. The money received from the lecture will be devoted to the interest of the chapel. The receipts were gratifying to those in charge.

Case Put Over the Term.

The case of J. A. Blatz against George Billing, for balance due on rent, which was to have come up in the Somerset County Court Tuesday, has gone over for the term. The case is for $56 due on rent, and was first tried before Justice Mattison. The jury disagreed, so it was retried and a verdict rendered for the defendant Mr. Blatz appealed the case, and it was tried before Judge Bartine, when the jury again failed to agree, and another date set for the trial. Murphy & Blatz are for the plaintiff, and Pope & Runyon for the defense.

The Suppression of the South.

Rev. E. E. Jackson, pastor of Mt. Olive Baptist church, has been solicited to speak on the subject "The Best Method to Adopt to Prevent the Suppression of the South" at the Abyssinian Baptist church, New York, Thursday evening next.

THE EARLY WRITERS OF OUR COUNTRY.

The Colonial and Revolutionary Periods Are Discussed.

RAPID GROWTH NOTED.

PROF A. H. SMYTH CONTINUES LECTURES IN EXTENSION COURSE.

Virginia and Boston Were Early Literary Centres of the Colonies—Philadelphia Became Prominent—Benjamin Franklin One of Its Greatest Writers—Revolution Produced Prose Writers and Poets.

Prof. Albert H. Smyth, teacher of English and literature in the Central High School, of Philadelphia, continued his lecture on "American Literature" last Tuesday at the Y. M. C. A., and introduced his hearers to some of the writers and their works of the Colonial and the Revolutionary periods.

Prof. Smyth believes that American literature is but a continuation of English literature, not a sudden, spontaneous growth upon Colonial soil. The first attempts at literature in this country were noticed about 1607, a fortunate time for its beginning, for the language crossed the ocean just when it was richest and most flexible. Virginia and Massachusetts were the two great centres of the English people in America, and each had a literature particularly to itself. While in Virginia it was of a lighter and more joyous strain, in New England the literary men were mostly preachers who stamped whatever they wrote with a taint of religion. A good example of this kind of literature is shown by Jonathan Edwards' writings.

Another centre of literary culture was Philadelphia, half way between Virginia and New England. Here were two elements, the Pennsylvania Dutch and the Scotch-Irish. Both elements were somewhat sterile in their literary productions, although there was a poet or two and one or two prose writers who attained prominence.

Philadelphia was called the Athens of America in those days, although since then the tide has changed, and Boston now claims that distinction. Benjamin Franklin, the most prominent figure in colonial literature, a Bostonian by birth but a Philadelphian by adoption, contributed largely to the literature of the Quaker City.

Franklin's career as a statesman and a writer is remarkable in that he had no education. He acquired a lucid style of prose writing by studying and re-writing "The Spectator." About the middle of the eighteenth century occurred a change in the thoughts of the American people; their attention was directed from polemics to politics. This is called the Revolutionary period. It begins with the persuasive orators and ends with the arguments for the Constitution. Tom Paine's "crises" cut a remarkable figure in this period, and so did "The Federalist," a collection of paper printed at the time in one of the current magazines, a series of arguments for the support of the Union and the establishment of a stable Government. The poets, too, of the Revolution, Trumbull, Barlow, Freheau and Hopkinson, deserve mention.

The next four lectures will be more interesting than the two preceding ones, as they will deal altogether with writers whose names are well-known to every one who pretends to read at all. There are several of the Extension Course tickets still remaining which can be obtained now.

DIDN'T WANT REPORTERS.

Citizen's Movement in First Ward Started Behind Closed Doors.

The dissatisfied citizens of the First ward held a meeting Tuesday night in Thomas J. Howell's house, on Raymond avenue, to take the first steps towards organizing a citizens' movement. The meeting was attended by about 30, but for some unknown reason reporters were vigorously barred, and it has been a difficult thing today to obtain any information in regard to the meeting.

Wm. T. Banks was elected chairman and Irving L. Brady secretary. A resolution was passed to appoint a committee of ten, five Republicans and five Democrats, to confer with the committee appointed in the Fourth ward Monday night. Several of those present made speeches, in which they complained of the acts done by the local officers now in power, and Councilor W. S. Angleman was present to tell what had been done in the Fourth ward the night before, and give them some hints on organizing. Chairman Banks will appoint his committee today.

A WESTERN ROMANCE

The poet to the contrary, notwithstanding, there are occasions when "it might have been" are joyful words. Most men, upon meeting again in after years, realize this, and offer up prayers of thanksgiving.

It was so with Hurlburt.

In the early days of the Pacific coast Hurlburt was stationed at San Diego. It was a picturesque little town. Its streets were not much more than cow paths, and its houses were mostly of the good old pattern—adobes, one story high and built around a patio. In such a house as this lived Manuela Lopez, and in one of the cow path streets Hurlburt first met her. It was upon a Sunday.

She had read no books that could have told her that it was the acceptable thing to do; she had probably never given such subjects a moment's thought; but when the mind of a man becomes the mind of a woman, it is at one bound, not by slow degrees. Inspiration struck full upon Manuela's brain and she dropped her rosary. From which it may be inferred that the love of the father and the wisdom of ages has taught woman nothing new in affairs of the heart. The impulse of the intrigante and of the child of nature are the same.

Hurlburt, of course, was close to Manuela when the rosary dropped. He returned it to her. If she had not been with a servant he might have spoken. As it was, he observed more narrowly what he had been observing for some moments as he approached, that she was graceful and pretty. Then he raised his helmet and passed on.

The same day, after lunch, he said to his host, as they sat smoking under the ramada: "Who lives in the house on the next street, where the two mocking bird cages hang on the wall?"

"You must be more explicit," his host said; "there are a number of houses on the next street, and one and all have mocking birds."

"Yes," said Hurlburt, "but there is a hedge of red and white geraniums in front of it."

"I saw you meet her," the civilian told him. "Her name is Lopes—Manuela, I think."

Hurlburt became very red. When your pneumatic man grows embarrassed, he is badly embarrassed. It was some time before he regained speech and came floundering out of the sea of silence. When he did, he changed the subject.

Not that he abandoned the cause. Far from it. It took him two weeks, but he got himself introduced to Senor Lopez, and had taken care to call upon him. The senor was a well educated man, and the most hospitable of his kind in existence. He made Hurlburt free of the house at once, and showed him everything it contained, save only Manuela.

"You must come again, often," he said, as they parted. Hurlburt replied that he would, and went again in three days. Neither did he see his lady of the rosary upon this occasion. He addressed himself to Senora Lopez, who was handsome and well preserved.

"You have a daughter, have you not, senora?"

Senora Lopez understood just so much English as she chose. She did not choose to understand this. She turned her soft eyes upon her husband and he answered for her.

"We have a daughter," he said, "but she is very young."

Hurlburt understood that he had offended a semi-oriental prejudice.

It having thus been made obvious to him that Manuela would not be produced for her portion, he went to an early mass at the church, met her, and introduced himself. It chanced that she was alone.

"May I walk home with you, senorita?" he said. "I have the pleasure of knowing your father's friend."

"Yes, sir," said Manuela.

It was but a few hundred yards to her home, but he made the most of his time. Manuela answered in monosyllables and allowed her eyes but twice. Hurlburt's infatuation was complete. Senor Lopez was angry. He was civil to the officer, but he sent the girl to her room at once.

"I met the senorita at mass," Hurlburt ejaculated.

"Are you, then, a Catholic?" inquired the Mexican.

"No," said Hurlburt—and determined to pursue the policy that sages who know—nothing of mankind tell us is invariable—"I merely went to church on purpose to meet your daughter. I saw her on the street the other day,"—he refrained in a moment of diplomacy from speaking of the dropped beads—"and I admired her very much. That is why I came to call upon you. I thought I would see her young lady under her own roof. As I did not, I encountered her elsewhere. Now," said Hurlburt, leaping back in his chair in an easy pose that did not meet with the punctilious Mexican's approval, "I should like to ask you to be allowed to pay my court to your daughter."

Senor Lopez had no objection to the officer's suit, but he did object to his fashion of advancing it. He incased himself in perversity.

"My daughter, sir, is too young."

He rose to his feet by way of suggesting that Hurlburt would do well to take his leave. Hurlburt rose, too, but did not go.

"May I ask her age, senor?"

"She is 16 years old."

"You have told me that you married the senora when she was but 15."

"That was in the old times. We do not do so any more."

"But I will be willing to wait for a year, if Senorita Manuela will love me."

"Sir, we will talk no more concerning this. My daughter is too young to be married, and I do not wish to give her to an American"—which was not in the least true. Up to then it had been his plan to do so, but his obstinacy was aroused.

The result was one that anyone, most of all a Mexican, should have foreseen. Hurlburt embarked upon an intrigue. He sent notes to Manuela, and got them from her in return. The meetings were much more than cow paths, and its houses were mostly of the good old pattern—adobes, one story high and built around a patio. In such a house as this lived Manuela Lopez, and in one of the cow path streets Hurlburt first met her. It was upon a Sunday.

BREAKING THE NEWS

"Do you think he'll take it very badly, Nora?"

Nora Helmsley shrugged her shoulders.

"My dear Betty, you ought to know more about Mr. Markham's powers of endurance than I."

"But what do you think he'll do? What do you suppose"——

"Why waste our time in supposition? He'll be here most likely this afternoon, and you will be able to judge for yourself."

Betty Oakhurst sprang to her feet.

"Ted is coming here this afternoon! Why on earth didn't you tell me before?" And she fidgeted nervously with her hat before the glass as she spoke.

"But you knew. Betty, where are you going?"

"Anywhere out of this," cried the girl, laughing nervously as she stooped to kiss her friend.

However Nora caught her arm. "Nonsense, Betty! You'd much better tell him straight out now and get it over. It will be ever so much more awkward for you if the news reaches him from the outside."

"I don't see that at all," returned Betty quietly, as she drew away from her companion. "I am sure that if—if you"——

She paused tentatively.

"You don't mean to say that you expect me to tell Ted Markham that you've jilted him?"

"I certainly don't expect you to put it in that way," replied Miss Oakhurst, with a little laugh; "but I am quite certain that you would explain it to the poor fellow much better than any one else."

"Explain!" exclaimed Nora, impatiently. "I don't know that there's anything to explain, except that you've put yourself and me in a most ridiculous position."

"Nora!"

"I wish I'd never had anything to do with it. I never felt so uncomfortable in my life as I have done since you dragged me into this precious scheme of yours."

"Poor old Nora!" murmured Betty sympathetically, while she cast furtive glances at the clock.

"You came here and shed any number of tears, declared that you adored Ted Markham, that your father wouldn't hear of an engagement, but that if you only had a little time before you, you were sure everything would come right."

"So it has," remarked Betty, softto voce, "it's only a question of point of view."

Nora flashed an indignant look at her.

"I think you might be serious now, and at least pretend that you're ashamed of yourself. You begged me to help you to get my aunt to ask him here, to act as screen in fact, so that your people might imagine it was all over and that you had both changed your minds, and now—now"——

"I'm awfully sorry, Nora. Abuse me as much as you like. Goodby!"

And before Nora could stop her she had darted through the door and was on her way downstairs. She let her go. After all, it never was of any use to argue with Betty; she was one of those delightfully irresponsible creatures who always manage to shift the blame of their shortcomings on to other people's shoulders, and whom no one—no man, at any rate—ever dreams of judging by ordinary standards. Nora wondered as she stood there idly looking into the street, how she could ever have been foolish enough to take Betty's love troubles seriously.

Meantime, that same folly of hers was going to bear some very unpalatable fruit. Less than ten minutes young Markham would be there. He had arranged to call for Miss Helmsley and her aunt, Lady Hewitt, to escort them to an afternoon concert. The elder lady had declared at luncheon that the weather was far too depressing for it not to be madness to risk the probability of a further fall of one's moral barometer by a couple of hours of orchestral music, and that Nora must give him some tea and her excuses.

Nora was conscious that this was a neat pretext for giving the young man the chance of a tete-a-tete with herself. Lady Hewitt was too indolent, naturally, not to be heartily weary of her duties as chaperon to her niece. An attractive heiress was a responsibility little to her taste, and the girl felt that, indelicate as most mothers and responsible people would have termed Ted Markham, with his post in the Foreign Office and his meagre personal fortune, Lady Hewitt would open her arms to him gladly if he would but relieve her of her onerous duties at a moment's notice, and would declare that Nora had money enough for them both.

Nora sighed as she stood at the window. It was a topsy-turvy world, and the wrong people were always being thrown together, and"——

"Am I disturbing you? I was told to come in here."

Nora started, and the color rushed to her face.

"Oh, I didn't hear you come in! Do sit down. Aunt isn't well. I am so sorry you should have had the trouble of calling for nothing, but she hoped to be able to go until the last moment. Won't you let me give you some tea?" She spoke with nervous hurry, scarcely pausing for an answer.

Ted Markham took the chair she offered him, and listened in silence while she rattled on. Suddenly she stopped, conscious of his fixed glance.

"Is anything the matter?" she asked, in a slightly alarmed voice. It was surely not possible that he could already have learned Betty's treachery.

"It isn't fair to you, and besides I—things have changed"——

"You mean that Betty"——

"Miss Oakhurst is going to be married." Nora gasped, but did not speak. "She is engaged to Lord Barthorpe I met him in town just now, and also was overflowing with loving-kindness to the world in general."

"Betty has behaved abominably!" put in Nora, indignantly.

Ted Markham smiled.

"I think, on the contrary, that she has shown remarkably good sense. I am going to leave London; I really came this afternoon to say goodby."

Nora bit her lips.

"I am very sorry," she began hesitatingly. "I am afraid I was rather to blame, but I thought Betty really cared"——

She left the sentence unfinished. Ted Markham's demeanor puzzled her; he was quite white, and there was a look in his eyes which troubled her. What was there in the dry, hard, blue-eyed little friend to move a man so? That her companion had taken some great resolution, and that a singularly difficult one, it was easy enough to perceive.

"Are you going to be away long?" she asked awkwardly. "I mean, are you going far?"

"I think of going to have a look at the antipodes. My father has some interest, and I hope to get sent off to Melbourne."

"But haven't you made up your mind rather hurriedly?" she objected timidly.

"Hurriedly? Why, I put things in train weeks ago!"

"Weeks ago!" she exclaimed. "But Betty's engagement is quite fresh. Did you suspect"——

"I suspected nothing. I knew"——

"You knew!" she exclaimed indignantly. "Then why didn't you speak? Why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you?" She stared at him, his tone was so incoherent. "Oh, about Betty, you mean!"

"Of course. What else could I mean?"

"Nothing, of course"——

"Really, I don't understand you."

He laughed constrainedly as he rose. "No, I must not explain. Goodby."

She looked up at him with startled eyes.

"You are too hard on Betty. She"——

"On Betty? Don't you know that I haven't thought of her for weeks—that I found out long ago that we had made a mistake?"

"Then why are you going?"

She managed to keep her eyes upon his face, though her cheeks burned and she felt almost choked.

"Don't you know that I am almost a pauper?" he said bitterly, as he turned away.

Nora took a step after him. "Are you going," she asked in a trembling voice, "because you want to make your fortune, or because—because I am too rich?"

"Nora!"

She covered her face with her hands.

"Oh, if you were not in love with Betty, didn't you see—didn't you guess weeks ago"——

The voices of the chaperons were loud in condemnation when the engagement was announced, and the mothers of younger sons and ungilt titles declared that Lady Hewitt had allowed her niece to throw herself away; while Betty Oakhurst shook her pretty head and reflected sadly that even the fickle creatures and that feminine friendship was but a broken reed.—London World.

JOE JEFFERSON'S LONG SNOOZE.

There Was No Pretense and the Renowned Actor Was Genuine.

While he was playing "Rip Van Winkle" at Chicago, Jefferson once went to the theatre very much exhausted by a long day's fishing on the lake. As the curtain rose on the third act it disclosed the white haired Rip still deep in his twenty-years' nap. Here, now, was a golden opportunity and he did not awaken. The audience began to get impatient and the prompter uneasy.

The great actor doubtless knew what he was about, but this was carrying the realistic business too far. The fact was that all this time Jefferson was really sleeping the sleep of the just, or rather of the fisherman who had sat eight hours in the sun. Finally the gallery became uproarious, and one of the "gods" wanted to know if there was going to be "nineteen years more of this snooze business."

At this point Jefferson began to snore. This decided the prompter, who opened a small trap beneath the stage and began to call Rip from below. The fagged comedian fumbled in his pocket for an imaginary railway ticket, and muttered drowsily, "Going right through, 'ductor."

At this entirely new reading the audience was treated with amazement, when all at once Jefferson sat up with a loud shriek, evidently in agony. The exasperated prompter had jabbed him with a pin. Consciousness of the situation came to him and the play went on after that with a rush.—Philadelphia Press.

How It Happened.

The house surgeon of a London hospital was bandaging the injuries of a poor woman whose arm had been severely bitten. As he was dressing the wound, he said: "I can not make out what sort of a creature bit you. This is too small for a horse's bite and too large for a dog's." "Oh, sir," replied the patient, "it wasn't an animal: it was another lydy."—Washington Star.

A WOMAN'S MERCY.

He had stopped behind the other callers, and she came late; and Aunt Teresa was wise enough to leave them together.

"It is a long time since we met," said he.

"Is it? I don't remember. It doesn't seem long."

"Only a year."

"Is that all?" She sank languidly upon an ottoman, and he sat down beside her.

"You are not looking well."

"Oh, that's only one style. 'A small, pale, fagged girl who looked interesting to avert criticism from her features,' as you put it in one of your novels."

"That was written long before I knew you."

"Still, it was a useful hint."

"To those who feared the criticism."

"I feared criticism very much—then."

"Oh, no! I've long ceased to care. Besides, the critics haven't been so bad lately. You see, I haven't written anything pretentious enough for notice by you."

"Probably he would now admit that he was mistaken. Time may have taught him that your idea of a woman was truer than he supposed. Time," he sighed, "destroys a good many of our illusions."

"Great critics should be free from illusions."

"My illusion of woman's goodness is not quite gone, nevertheless. I remember my mother sometimes, as well as——" He paused awkwardly.

"Other women?"

"Another woman. Une belle dame sans merci," he corrected, looking hungrily at her.

"I suppose you mean a woman whom you loved badly, and from whom you deserved no mercy?" said she, leaning her elbow on the couch and putting her cheek on her thin hand. There was just the faintest pink flush upon her cheek, and her eyes looked fathomless.

"My God, how pretty she is!" the man groaned to himself.

"I said from the first that you had ability—even in the criticism which you—which hurts you" (she dug her nails passionately into her little white palms) "and for which you have taken the fullest revenge in your power."

"I don't suppose it hurts you much?" she inquired, with a strange wistfulness.

"O, no, not much," said he. "Not enough to spoil my art, such as it is. My latest lady-in-book has caught a touch of me. But even she comes all right in the third volume—at least, what would be the third volume, if they weren't all in one now."

"Yes," said she, thoughtfully. "I understood when I read it. She was much better woman than I."

"I gathered that you hadn't read the book!"

"Oh, that was my—nastiness. Of course I've read it. Every one has read it. Besides, it is part of my business now to read the books of you great people."

"What! You a critic! What for?"

"The Daily Thunderbolt."

He looked at her in mute astonishment. For The Thunderbolt had called his book the greatest work of the youngest writer of the age—which he knew wasn't true.

"You wrote that critique?" said he slowly. "I ought to thank you, I suppose. But I confess I do not understand you."

"No," she answered sadly, "you do not understand me. You never will understand me. I cannot understand myself sometimes. I am full of wretched nerves, the doctors say."

"Did you read 'A Woman's Mercy,' in 'New Magazine?' she asked suddenly.

"No. I'm afraid I didn't. But I will."

"It isn't worth your notice."

"I will be the judge of that. What is it about?"

"Oh!—a man and a woman—the usual thing."

"What man and woman?"

"A critic and a writer." He became alert with interest.

"Tell me about it."

"I—I don't think I can remember." Her face was very pink now.

"I should so much like you to," he pleaded.

"Well, She was a would-be writer, a poor, sensitive, neurotic creature, like me—only not so nasty"—she paused for contradiction, but he was silent.

"She wrote a book once," she continued, "when she was young and fanciful. There was a woman in it—a bitter, hard, cruel woman—borrowed from some yellow-backed novel—not her own creature, really—not even her nasty self——" She paused again and looked piteously, appealingly at him. "Not her true self—her better self," he suggested, gently.

"Not according to my tale. Well, the book went off fairly well for a first venture; but a great critic lashed the heroine mercilessly."

"You own the heroine was bad?" The inquiry seemed forced from him. It was so sudden and vehement.

"Yes—Oh, yes! But the criticism hurt her—the girl who wrote it—the neurotic, passionate girl—terribly. She worried all day over it; she lay awake at night and cried over it; she—she—" Her voice broke, and she brushed away a tear, with an angry little sob. "And so she hated the critic?" ...

"She hated the critic; or she thought she did."

There was a long silence.

"Did she take her revenge upon him envy me because I am the wife of the genius, George Arbuthnot."

"I don't know about that," he said, good temperedly, "but it's the best work I've done yet. And if it's successful, as Agatha, I shall be able to buy you that diamond bangle you coveted the other day."

But even the reference to the diamond bangle failed to move Agatha.

"How long will it take you to finish it?" she asked, slowly, looking down at the sunlit garden.

"I hope to finish it by next week," said Arbuthnot, triumphantly. "I've allowed Lorrimer, The Weekly Review man, to see some parts of it, and he's expressed a very favorable opinion and thinks it's bound to be a success."

Agatha's eyes narrowed at the corners.

"Lorrimer's a fool," she said, angrily.

It was one cold afternoon, ten days later, that Arbuthnot stood on his doorstep in the act of inserting his latchkey, smiling at some pleasing reminiscences of his recent talk with his publisher.

Suddenly a wild, terrified cry broke from the house, followed by scream after scream, reiterated with such intensity of anguish that Arbuthnot himself caught the infection of terror, and fumbled with trembling hands at the latchkey.

At last he managed to open the door and run into the hall. A fearful sight met his eye. From his study door flew something—an object enveloped in writhing flames, and from it there came piercing, agonizing shrieks. As the draught from the open door blew fiercely down the corridor the flames leaped higher and higher round their living prey, until Arbuthnot sickened gaze saw nothing but a brilliant ball of fire.

"God! It was Agatha! Mad with torture, the flaming figure dashed toward him and threw out its arms in agony. Arbuthnot caught it in a tight embrace, and with all his strength hurled himself and the shrieking figure onto the carpeted floor and rolled over and over until at last the flames were beaten out and he knew the fire was conquered.

Three hours later the doctor came softly down stairs. He had used all his skill to bring life back to the disfigured body that lay on the mattress on the bed. It was all in vain. Agatha's injuries were beyond all help, and she had lived only three hours after Arbuthnot had carried her upstairs.

Her husband had never left her side, and, though badly burned about the hands and face, had scarcely realized his own injuries. As he looked at that cruelly disfigured face, now swathed and hidden in bandages, a rush of tears blinded his eyes, and it knew that past differences were swept away, and that Agatha would live henceforth in his memory only as the woman he had once loved with all his heart. Before life flickered out in that suffering body, Agatha opened her eyes once more for her husband's gaze fixed with intense pity and love upon her face. To Arbuthnot it seemed that she pleaded dumbly for forgiveness, but even as he looked the lids closed again, and in a few moments Agatha's spirit had slipped into the great silence.

When all was over, Arbuthnot stooped and kissed the cold, pale lips.

Later in the evening he went down stairs to his study. As he entered the room a shudder passed over his body; he remembered the figure of flame that had leaped into his arms but a few hours ago, and his heart was torn at the thought of Agatha's sufferings.

As yet it was a mystery how she had caught fire. Presumably she had been warming herself in his study, and her thin grenadine dinner dress had swept too near the flames. A few full red embers still glowed in the grate. Arbuthnot lit the lamp and set down mechanically at his desk.

"Thank God for work!" he said, with a deep sigh. "At least I can forget for a time—"

He opened the deep drawer wherein his pile of manuscript had lain ready for the printer's hand. One or two emendations could easily be rectified now, and the work would soothe his weary heart and brain. But—the drawer stood empty. Hastily he pulled out its counterpart. No; that, too, held nothing. Frenziedly he began to rummage each pigeon hole, turned everything out of his bureau, sought on the chairs, the cables. The manuscript had disappeared!

A fearful thought darted into his brain. Only a few days before—his eyes fell on some charred ashes in the fender.—Black and White.

An Honest King.

Whoever reads the following must surely feel a feeling of respect for the honest King. King Frederick VI. of Denmark, while traveling through Jutland, one day entered a village school and found the children lively and intelligent and quite ready to answer his questions.

"Well, youngsters," he said, "what are the names of the greatest kings of Denmark?"

Just then a little girl, to whom the schoolmaster had whispered something, stood up and raised her hand

"Do you know another?" asked the king.

"Yes, Frederick VI."

"What great act did he perform?"

"Be comforted, my child," said the king. "I don't know, either."—The Youth's Companion.

A BAD INSTRUMENT.

By C. A. E. King, U. S. N.

Surveying a tropical ocean in June in a vessel of the old navy, always under steam, is not the lightest duty that naval men are called upon to perform, so it is little wonder that when the sloop of war Alert reached Yokohama after a long tour of this service, several of her officers were down with sickness. So their plans were filled by others, drawn from the ships of the squadron, provisions laid in and preparations made to return south to the scene of her labors, the survey of Britomart Reef.

This reef, reported and placed upon the charts long ago, had been the terror of merchant skippers for years. It lay in the Pacific ocean, somewhere between the Bonin Islands and the Ladrones. Its exact location was in doubt.

There was great bustle of preparation on board the stanch little ship as stores and coal were taken on board

The caterer of the junior officers' mess had told his messmates that a pleasant surprise awaited them when Guam should be reached, for that island, where which our flag now flies, was to be our furthest stopping place, and there under the "blood and gold" of Spain we were to learn the secret of all his smiles and pleasantries. So we cheerfully chipped in our hard earned silver dollars for mess stores, which Uncle Sam, with unappreciative acuteness, thinks his officers better able to buy than himself.

Shortly after we had sailed canned peaches came to be plentiful on the mess table so that when we had them stewed for breakfast, cold for tiffin and baked into pies for dinner. In fact, canned peaches soon came to be our principal diet, until we tore our hair and hurled abusive epithets at our smiling mate, the caterer. His appetite for peaches was unimpaired by all the abuse he would only say—"Wait until we get to Guam" and not as if to say, "When Guam is reached how remorseful you will all be for this treatment of me."

All things come to an end at last, and one night the navigator told us we would see the shores of Guam at sunrise in the morning. What a joyful prospect it was to know that we would touch the green earth once more and learn the mate's tantalizing secret!

The ocean and sky grew ugly that night, and by ten o'clock we were pitching and tossing in a fearful sea that threatened to lay us on our beam ends. The beat was terrible, for it was a "black storm," and there was not a breath of wind, and one part thereof crazed with beat and work, rushed up from below and threw himself into the inky waters. Away went the lifeboat, and into it a fearless crew, but we never saw the man again, and it knew that the great differences were swept away, and that Agatha would live henceforth in his memory only as the woman he had once loved with all his heart. Before life flickered out in that suffering body, Agatha opened her eyes once more for her husband's gaze fixed with intense pity and love upon her face. THE FOOTBALL HERO.

The Leading Players of the Four Most Important College Elevens in the United States and What They Have to Accomplish.

"In the east football will begin this year with three youngsters at the head of three of the most important college elevens in the United States, and a seasoned player as captain of the fourth team of the big four.

Dibblee of Harvard; Outland, of Pennsylvania, and Chamberlin, of Yale, cannot measure their years of experience with those of Kelly, of Princeton. In spite of Kelly's prestige, his knowledge of the game and his great ability as an aggressive player, his task, with that of Dibblee's, is the hardest in the quadrangular group standing for the best of American football.

The reason for this lies in the fact that each man finds it necessary to build up not only a team that can play, but a team that thinks it can play. The spirit of Harvard and Princeton was crushed by the unexpected reverses received at Yale's hands last year, and it will take much first-class missionary work to put the men into the proper humor for winning work.

Outland's task is not entirely an easy one, as he succeeded a winning captain, and at the outset was something of a stranger to the duties that are required of the head of an eleven. One thing in his favor, however, is the hitherto cordial relations between the members of "Pennsy's" football eleven and the harmonious support with which they always "back up" the head of the team. They seem to be keeping up their record this year.

If any one of the four might be said to have comparatively easy sailing, Chamberlin appears to be the man. He is the leader of an eleven that finished the season of 1897 with an overwhelming stock of confidence in its ability to defeat anything in the football line. Criticised, abused, even sneered at when the season was in its infancy, Yale made a finish that startled the sporting world and sent the youngsters of the eleven home with pride beaming from every lineament of their features—and it was pardonable pride, too.

Something about the personal characteristics of the present captains is not amiss.

Dibblee and Kelly belong to the dashing class of players. The latter, particularly, when the sky seems overcast for Princeton in important matches, has evoked the wildest enthusiasm from his college partisans by making

The football team of Princeton University is being coached this year by the finest assortment of ex-football men that ever stepped foot on the Tigers' gridiron. "Biffy" Lee, captain of the Princeton team in 1895, has been selected as head coach. He is assisted by Howard Brokaw, the star end of the 1896 team, whose name is still in the mouths of Princetonians; Moffat, the famous full-back, and George and Balliet, men who have played centre rush. Tyler, who was one of the Princeton representatives at the Olympic games at Athens in 1895, is looking after the work of the tackles. Fine, whose strategy has resounded for Princeton in the ivy yard, is directing the headwork of the team.

THE STAFF OF LIFE IN MEXICO.

Tortillas, the National Bread, Is the Food of All Classes.

A table of various commercial data of the city of Mexico shows that 6,000,000 tortillas are consumed daily in the city. The tortilla, the national bread of Mexico, is made of maize. It is an unleavened bread, the food of rich and poor alike. For common use it is somewhat made quite thick; for the tables of the better class it is small, four or five inches in diameter. It is prepared now as it has been for a thousand years. The maize is parboiled to cleanse and soften the grain, and then left to cool. Afterward it is crushed on a metate, or block of lavastone, about sixteen inches broad and twenty inches long, and mixed with water. The paste is patted by hand until it is as thin as a pancake, and then toasted on a brasero, or native charcoal brazier. Tortillas cost about three cents a dozen, and a family of ordinary size will consume on an average eight dozen a day. There are nine factories in the city of Mexico where the tortillas are turned out by machinery. The importance of the industry is further shown by the number of "maiceras," or maize shops, in the city, which are said to number not less than two hundred. The early part of the meal of the working classes in Mexico, the tortilla is used as a plate, receiving the meat or other edible which forms the principal course. When this is disposed of, it is the turn of the tortilla, which is turned up and eaten with great gusto.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

An inventor has produced an electric cane lamp. The handle of the cane contains an incandescent lamp, the two ends of which are connected with the poles of a battery. Below this is a small chamber to carry the battery fluid. When it is desired to use the lamp the cap is taken off and the cane inclined, so that the liquid it contains comes in contact with the electrodes. A current is thus produced that will, it is asserted, keep the light going for an hour.

IN A JOKE FACTORY.

AN HOUR SPENT WITH MARSHALL P. WILDER.

How Fun Is Prepared For the Laughter-Loving Public. A Few of the Noted Humorist's Latest Jokes. The Repair Department.

Then you pretty well acquainted with Marshall P. Wilder as a humorist and entertainer; but people who have heard him run wild in an evening of miscellaneous funmaking are hardly prepared to be told that he is one of the most methodical and systematic of mortals.

The late William Davidge, the actor, was one of the most systematic men that ever lived. He was constantly keeping books with himself. If he invested five cents in carfare, bought a newspaper, had a shave, shampoo, or haircut, it all went down in his books. When he died it was disclosed that he had kept an itemized account of every penny earned and expended, and a record of every mile traveled during the twenty-five years and more that he was on the stage, up to the very day of his death on board a railroad train, en route to play in San Francisco. By examining this wonderful record one could tell exactly where Davidge was on any given day during his long professional career, and how much it cost him.

Mr. Wilder's system does not include the petty outlays of everyday life, but he has a method of memorizing his business that is hardly less complete than that of Davidge. All the good jokes, stories, and anecdotes, for example, he labels and lays away, as a bugologist would a strange new specimen of beetle or butterfly. It can be said of Wilder that he can put his hand on any particular joke or story at any hour of the night without striking a match. His jokes are classified in his stories and anecdotes, labeled, indexed and cross-indexed, and can turn instantly to any given dog or cat story of any stated breed or color.

The little joker's business system includes the card of every person of prominence he meets, and turning to his books he can tell at a glance just how much he is indebted to any particular individual for contributions to his fund of jokes.

"Harrison—Harrison—Harrison," reiterated Wilder as he ran his twinkling eyes down the long list of H's; "it seems to me I have heard of that name somewhere. Ah, here it is. 'Harrison, Benjamin. President of the United States.' I was almost sure I had heard it somewhere."

Mr. Wilder grew reminiscent for a moment.

"The last time I met Benjamin Harrison was in the White House. I carried a letter from his son. I didn't want an office, had no claim to an office, and of course I was a little out of my atmosphere. 'How do you do, Mr. President?' 'How do you do, Mr. Wilder?' That was all. Not a joke or a funny story. Not a word about the weather. Not a word about anything. I stayed long enough for the President to limber up; he didn't limber. I withdrew with great dignity, pausing only long enough in the waiting room to request Private Secretary Halford to kick me with great severity."

Wilder had a later meeting with President Harrison, some of the particulars of which are best told by another. It occurred when W. J. Arkell was introducing Wilder at the Mt. McGregor. Mr. Wilder was one of the guests. The party was on its way down to the village. "Mr. President," said the little humorist, with mock gravity, "I trust the fact exceedingly, but I feel sure there will be a large concourse of people down here to greet me. I understand they have a brass band and I fear they will raise a great hullabaloo. It is sincerely to be hoped that the cheering and noise generally will not disturb your Excellency."

When the party reached the foot of the mountain there were carriages to receive them, and the inevitable crowd of people on the platform. The band, of course, struck up "Hail to the Chief." By some misunderstanding on the part of the cabby who drove Wilder—or was it by Wilder's own heedless pace?—the crowd was left far in the rear. Hats were swung, handkerchiefs fluttered, and the air was split with cheers. Wilder's quick wit enabled him to seize the situation by the horns. Hat in hand, he bowed to the right and left, and, as they say on the stage, "took the whole scene." The ovation was all his own.

Wilder's joke foundry is an interesting place. The walls of his library in The Alpine, on Broadway, are literally papered with photographs of celebrated men and women, most of which bear the autographs of the originals, with some pleasant greeting in the "professional entertainer," as Mr. Arkell dubbed him—"the entertainer of Princes"—as he dubbed himself. "How are jokes made?"

"Jokes are like poets," said Wilder, "they are born, not made. They develop. They grow. There is a grub and then there is a butterfly. Julius Caesar compiled a book of puns, but he never made a joke, even though he was the victim of a few. Every great event has its jokes, the greater the event, no matter how serious, the more jokes. They drop around and spring up everywhere. The late war with Spain gave birth to more jokes than any event since the flood.

"Here are a few:

"The Madrid Government is trying hard to keep the Bible out of Spain.'

"'Why?'

"'So that the Spanish people will not know the exact strength of Sampson.'

"That's bad, of course; but it's a war joke, and we had to accept it.

"'Why is Courtlandt street in New York, like Cuba?'

"'Because it's between Liberty and Dey.'

"Nothing could be worse than that, but it will. There are about a million things like that, and the spirit of patriotism kept them afloat. Camara's fleet couldn't sink one of them. There are others not so bad:

"'Did you carry the horse this morning, John?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Did you comb out his tail?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Did you remember the Maine?'

"'Here's another on the same lay:

"'Do you remember the great blizzard in New York?'

"'Oh, yes.'

"'Forget it, and remember the Maine.'

"If we have another war," said Wilder, "I intend to propose a war tax on every joke, and make it pay its own war."

The humorist explained the repair department of his factory.

"Sometimes a joke is a little lame. Maybe it has the heaves, mumps, humps, thumps, grumps; or probably the blind staggers. I can generally cooper it up so that it will pass muster.

"Very often one idea serves for a good many jokes. General Sherman once wrote me a seven-page letter about jokes and other solemn things. It was by way of acknowledging a copy of my book, 'People I Have Smiled With.' In that letter he told the story of the Irishman who was too much given to strong drink. 'You must sign the pledge and stop drinking,' said his priest, 'or you will be so saturated with the fluid of liquor that sometime when you try to blow out a candle your breath will take fire and you will burn up.'

"'Then give me the pledge,' said Pat, and he made a very solemn promise never to blow out a candle again.'

"That is General Sherman's story," continued Mr. Wilder, "and here is the way I have it so as to make it fit a particular occasion:

"'You must stop drinking, Pat, or you'll soon be totally blind.'

"'Well,' said Pat, 'I guess I've seen about everything.'

"Here is one of the latest baseballisms:

"'Nonsense,' said his wife, 'I see no feathers.'

"Speaking of Mr. Depew's latest dog story reminds me of another:

"'Rory O'More, there,' said an Irishman, pointing to his canine asleep in the corner, 'Rory O'More is the most intelligent beast I ever saw. That dog understands every blessed word I say to him. Begorra, I'm sending German just to see if I can throw him off.'

"Ever hear the story of the great statesman who resembled Daniel Webster? A politician settled himself in the chair of an old colored barber who had shaved the Massachusetts statesman and orator.

"'They tell me, Uncle, that I resemble Daniel Webster. What do you think of it?'

"'Well, boss, I think myself dat you done resember my ole fren'.'

"'Just in what particular do you see a resemblance between me and the great statesman?'

Tackle Making.

Save shooting, no sport, perhaps, has connected with it more steady-going business in the way of appliances than has angling, and it will rather surprise many to know that there are hundreds of patents—some of them bringing in thousands a year—dealing with fishing appliances.

The trade, too, is notable for the fact that, starting with the humble rod and hooks in the rough, women are the chief workers, almost the whole of the dainty flies and well-secured hooks being tied by girls and women, some of whom can fabricate hundreds of trouties in a day. At least four-fifths of the fishing tackle-making employees are women, many of whom possibly never saw a man fishing in their lives.

Another notable fact in connection with the trade is that many of the manufacturing firms have been established for from fifty to one hundred years. England and America — but chiefly the former—supply the fishing tackle of the whole world, and all the principal manufacturers have special stocks for India, the Australian colonies, and the most remote waters of the globe.

As to patents, one man has made a fortune out of an artificial spinning bait, and another has invented so apparently simple an appliance as a novel kind of rod ring for the line to run through sold the patent for $50,000.

Where Noah Kept His Bees.

Dr. James K. Hosmer, while recently visiting Boston, had occasion to visit the new public library. As he went up the steps he met Edward Everett Hale, who asked the Doctor his errand.

"To consult the archives," was the reply.

"By the way, Hosmer," said Dr. Hale, "do you know where Noah kept his bees?"

"No," answered Hosmer.

"In the ark hives," said the venerable preacher, as he passed out of earshot.—Ladies' Home Journal.

He Knew What He Wanted.

"Do you want my daughter for her money or for herself?" demanded the old gentleman.

"It's this way," stammered the young man, as he tripped backwards over the edge of the rug. "I want her for myself and I want her money for herself, and I want both of them for ourselves, and you certainly must understand."

A GIFTED POETESS.

PORTO RICO'S "NIGHTINGALE OF THE HILLS."

An Interesting Sketch of the Career of Lola Rodriguez de Tio, Whose Songs Have Added Fuel to the Freedom Forging Flames.

Lola Rodrigues de Tio is a woman with three reputations, each of them excellent and extraordinary. She ranks high among the world's conchologists, as a poetess she is read with keen emotion and delight wherever the Spanish language is understood, and as a public speaker she is one of the leaders of Porto Rican thought. A exile from her native island of Porto Rico, and a refugee from Cuba, whence she fled from the wrath of Weyler with her husband, also an exile, some time before the butcher was recalled, she is living in New York city with Signor Tio and their daughter, a graduate in philosophy of the University of Havana. The Tio home is a charming center of the intellectual life of the Spanish colony and affords an admirable illustration of the hospitality for which Porto Rico is so famous. There the poetess holds court, and with her husband, formerly the editor of those two spoken papers, La Razon and La Patria, debates before her friends upon the future of the island they love so fondly.

Signora Tio, "the nightingale of the hills," as the Porto Ricans call her, was born in the "City of the Seven" San Yerman, in September, 1851. Her grandmother had been a writer of distinction and an admirable linguist. Her father was a doctor of laws, a scholar and an ardent advocate of that democratic extending over the whole island. His example was her inheritance. She learned unconsciously from him to speak directly and agreeably and to write agreeably. In the autumn of that time the government of Porto Rico forbade the use of that word by any political party on the island, saying it was only a synonym for Separatist. The daughter took kindly to her father's ideas, and when hardly in her 'teens was an out and out Separatist. She wrote many popular songs and ballads full of the spirit of freedom. These had a wide circulation and were the lullabys of many a Porto Rican household.

Dr. Naiverde, a political exile from San Domingo, and a friend of Signor Rodrigues, took himself in the girl's education, being attracted by her gift of poesy, and instructed her in the Spanish classical style. She was an apt scholar and soon composed verse that attracted attention throughout the Spanish West Indies and even in Spain. In 1873, the year that saw the end of slavery in Porto Rico, Lola Rodrigues, then just 22 year old, made an address at the graduation exercises of the college in Mayagues. She was the first woman in the island to speak publicly before an audience. It was a time of much political excitement. Porto Rican patriots were feeling that they wished Spain to separate the military and civil departments of the government. They were willing, they said, to have a captain general, but let him confine himself to military affairs exclusively and let another man hold the chief civil office. They wished also to elect their own provincial governors, instead of having them sent over by Spain, who appointed them not because of their fitness, but because she wished them out of the way. These worthy Spanish appointees shed tears on leaving their beloved Spain, but swore upon their honor to return again as soon as they had stolen enough to pay their debts. Another thing the native Porto Ricans wished was freedom of the press. The captain general's regulations demanded that at least four hours before any paper was issued the proof sheets should be sent to the censor for approval. His blue pencil was a judgment against which there was no appeal.

The signorita spoke eloquently, though guardedly of all these things. She besought Spain to give a mother's love to her child, far from her, almost hidden in the bosom of the sea, and she prayed that the child should show herself worthy of such love and deserving of perfect trust. The grace of the speaker's manner, the beauty of her language, even to all hearts, and the brave words she spoke wrought her audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. In a day she had added to her fame throughout the island. She was poetess and prophetess in one. Her college address was the beginning of an active propaganda in Porto Rico that ended only when she and her husband were offered their choice between jail and the wide, wide world.

La Razon and La Patria were suppressed but the words of the patriot editor remained in the minds of the people. Even a captain general cannot imprison an idea. Nor could the ballads and songs of freedom be stilled on the hills be exiled. The first volume, "Mes Cantares," appeared in 1876, and soon was in every book stall in Mexico, Central America, South America, the West Indies and Spain. The third and second volume appeared in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1878, followed by "Mis Poesias" in 1880, and "Mi Libro de Cuba" in 1892. In Caracas a warm friendship sprang up between the Tios and Emilio Castelar, who has been at the head of educational affairs in Venezuela. After two years in Caracas a new governor general came from Spain to Porto Rico and the poetess returned to her native island, where she and her husband continued the work they had done so much to promote in earlier years. In the meantime Signora Tio' poems were gaining fame for the authoress. An Italian critic known as Amicis, was adding to his reputation by translating them. Fastcurah was calling them to the attention of the Germans and several French critics, among them Pierre Loti, were putting them into copy for the Parisian publishers. In Spain Mendes Pelayo, a member of the academy, a distinguished critic, called a meeting of his confreres, among whom were Penaranda, Balsayuer, Campillo and Lepoldo Alas, who sent a testimonial of congratulation to Signora Tio and a diamond brooch in the symbolic design of a harp. This is the proudest of her possessions.

In 1887 Porto Rico was again too uncomfortable, owing to official persecutions, and the Tios came to New York, whence they soon went to Cuba. Then the poetess, who for some years had been gathering and classifying the shells of the Antilles as a recreation and diversion from her political and literary work, made the acquaintance of several eminent natural lists, who brought her to the notice of their friends in other parts of the world. She received many contributions from distant lands. One enthusiastic conchologist in the Philippines, no less a personage than the captain general himself, wrote that the interest her exquisite verse had awakened in him had been equaled intensely now that he learned from his esteemed friend, Carlos de la Torre, that the queen of verse had rare knowledge of shells as well as rythm. He begged her to accept a few specimens from the island of the Pacific. With the letter came a complete collection of the shells of the Philippine islands.

While the Tios were in Cuba Signorita Tio entered the University of Havana and in due course was graduated from that famous seat of learning with the degree of doctor of philosophy. Signor Tio was busy with his editorial work and the poetess carried on her propaganda against Spanish oppression. In 1892 her fourth volume of poems appeared and the Spanish speaking world accorded it a hearty welcome. The outbreak of the revolution gave much encouragement to the cause for which the Tios had dedicated their lives, but with the coming of Weyler they soon suffered a persecution compared to which their troubles in Porto Rico were mild indeed, and they were glad to escape with their lives.

POP CORN FOR INSOMNIA.

New are That Have Proved Efficacious Wherever Tried.

A northern business man living in the south has found a most agreeable cure for insomnia. It answered perfectly in his case, and no longer needing it as medicine he continues it as food. It is a most agreeable dish of pop corn. The corn is popped in the usual way, baked, and while hot it is put in a hot bowl. Scalding milk is poured over it, and in two minutes it is soft and ready to be sprinkled with sugar, unless salt and pepper are preferred. The addition of a little vanilla transforms the delicious favorite into a delicate hasty pudding. To keep the corn after gathering, put it (on the cob) in a cool place; if shelled it loses its moisture sooner, and after a while will not pop. The place where other corn is being husked is good for shelling it in. Pop corn hot served in bowls of hot milk is a southern refection at card parties.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Ingrowing Toe Nails.

This is a very common and troublesome affection, and most usually occurs by the side of the big toe. The surrounding soft parts first become swelled and inflamed by constant pressure against the edge of the nail from the use of tight shoes. If this is allowed to continue, an ulcer is formed in which the edge of the nail is imbedded. The pain from this, in some instances, is sufficient to prevent walking. When this condition is arrived at a doctor's treatment becomes necessary.

The first object is to remove the cause, the tight shoe, then proceed to take the irritation and reduce the swelling. After soaking in hot water, the nail should be thinned by scraping, and, if very painful, a linseed poultice will give relief. When the irritation has thoroughly subsided, soft cotton should be pressed between the flesh and the nail, and then, if the skin is not broken, it should be slightly saturated with tincture of iodine. Repeat the treatment for several days, after which the tenderness will disappear.

Notes of Interest.

Among the queen ants captured in and around Buluwayo, for which a prize of half-a-crown is paid by the sanitary board, have been found specimens measuring four and a half inches and as thick as a man's thumb.

The curfew law obtains in Seoul, Korea. When the huge bronze bell of the city proclaims the hour of sunset and the time for closing the gates, every man is obliged to retire to his home, under pain of flogging.

Germany and Austria have about 150 cooking schools. A four years' course is necessary before the student obtains a diploma. Most of the hotel chefs have diplomas from these schools.

The time necessary for the conversion of a forest tree, or a part of it, into a printed paper, in a recent test made in Germany, was two hours and twenty-five minutes.

A proposal has been made by a French chemist to obtain easily assimilable iron tonics from vegetables by feeding the plants judiciously with iron fertilizers.

A Reason For Her Hope.

THE CROSS OF LILIES.

"You shall not go—I would rather see you dead at my feet."

"I shall go, father—some day." And so she went out of his life.

He was an old Puritan—grim, ascetic, dead to all pleasure and amusement. There were but three things for him: his Bible, his sword and his daughter. He had laid aside his sword, for he was growing old; but the Book was always by him, and he loved to interpret it in his own harsh fashion. And then his daughter—but she was gone.

She was young and beautiful, panting for all that makes life sweet and grateful—for love, for triumph, for the applause of thousands. She had resolved to be an actress and to have them all. She was stifled in that ugly, square house in Scotland. So one day she disappeared, and James Gordon was left alone with his Bible.

Meanwhile Ruth Gordon's name was on everyone's lips in London. Her beauty had brought crowds all she had dreamed, more than she could ever have hoped. It was the last night of the burlesque wherein she made herself famous. The house was crowded, and she excelled herself in every way. When the fall of the close of the piece the stage was covered with bouquets from admirers—from men she knew and from men who wished to be known to her.

Then, when the curtain had gone down for the last time, she picked up one or two of the offerings and went off to the dressing room. One she held in her hand had attracted her by its uncommon shape and condition. It was a half-faded cross of white lilies. She threw it contemptuously on her table, and pressed the other—the gift of a young earl—to her lips.

"Who dared send me that shabby thing?" she said to her dresser, and then picked it up, from sheer curiosity to see the name of the man who had ventured to offer it. She dropped it, and uttered a cry of surprise and pleasure, then picked it up again and kissed it passionately. The label read: "To my daughter. Forgiven. I am angry no more." Truly it was the happiest day of her life—a triumph and reconciliation.

She left for Scotland that night. How slowly the train crawled on through the darkness! She could not sleep, and she watched the lighted towns go by one by one until the dawn.

She drew near her home, and the scenery became more familiar. Every spot she passed was bright with memories of childhood. The train slowed down and stopped. She got out, left her luggage at the station, and walked towards her home.

In a few minutes she had reached the house. It looked more cold and grey than ever after the brilliance of London. She hammered at the door, waited for a minute or two, and then knocked again. Presently there shuffling footsteps sounded in the hall, the door opened slowly, and Jeannie, the old servant, confronted her. She threw herself on the old woman's neck and kissed her withered cheeks.

"My father," she cried, "is he well? Oh, I am so happy, Jeannie." And she tried to pass her, but the old woman stood in the way, the tears rolling down her face.

"Jeannie, Jeannie, what is it? Let me by," she cried, and pushing her aside, she rushed into the dark dining-room, where the latter was wont to sit. The oaken chair was empty, but the Bible lay on the table—open at the book of Ruth. One passage was marked with a blue pencil. It was the verse beginning: "Entreat me not to leave thee." The blue pencil had dropped to the floor.

"Where is my father, Jeannie, does he not expect me?"

"Come with me," she said, and turned away.

"Not here?"

"He is not here, I tell ye," shrieked the old woman. "Come awa'," and, clutching hold of the girl, she tried to drag her from the room.

"Where is he? What have you done to him?" she cried.

The old woman moaned to herself, then crept to the window. There was a distant view of the kirkyard on the side of the purple hill. The setting sun fell on the white stones and they glittered like stars. She pointed her skinny finger in silence and then crouched down, moaning to herself.

The girl looked out, straining her eyes to see the beloved form. When the white stones flashed upon her sight, the awful truth began to dawn upon her.

"Yonder," she muttered, almost unconsciously. Then she broke into a wild laugh, and flung herself into a chair. She read the marked passage, and laughed again, still more wildly.

"So I killed him, Jeannie, I killed him, and he—how much did he pay you, Jeannie, to do this thing? All his wealth? It is well. It was not too much for a deed like this."

"Stay, Missie, stay," she whined out, putting her fingers to her ears to shut out the terrible voice. "I's shall have it a'. I am auld, and the money—I couldna' help it."

"Keep it; it is accursed. I would not touch it if I were starving. But the cross, woman, the cross of lilies? It was his order," she whispered. "It was—Oh, the puir bairn, the puir bairn."

"It was what?" the girl said, hoarsely, rising from the chair and gripping the old woman by the arm. "Speak, you old hag, speak."

"It was from his grave."—Black and White.

Aftermath of Election.

In the aftermath of knowledge of exact results and the natural dispelling of gloom that always comes to the defeated party for the moment, the Democrats are looking about and seeing that they have in their hour of general defeat, at least made encouraging gains in some sections. Two complete returns from the twenty-one counties in the State show that Voorhees is elected by a plurality of 5,864. The official figures may change this a few hundred one way or the other, but in a general way the figures are correct.

The returns show that the Democrats have carried six counties for Crane against three for McGill three years ago, and have total pluralities of 16,645 against 7,341 in 1895. From a Republican standpoint, of course, the three years ago is regarded as an extraordinary one and the result of which they do not anticipate will be duplicated under such conditions as prevailed this year.

For the past four years the Republicans have had a solid Congressional delegation from New Jersey, but this time two Democrats were successful. The later returns make no changes in the Legislature as indicated by the earlier calculations. The Republicans elected seven of their eight Senatorial candidates, the one Democrat being Allan L. McDermott, in Hudson county. With the seven hold over Senators the Republicans will have a total of 14 members and the Democrats 7, a Republican majority of 7. In the Assembly the Republicans will have 36 members and the Democrats 24, a Republican majority of 12. This gives a Republican majority on joint ballot of 19, and practically assures the election of John Kean to succeed United States Senator James Smith.

Figures From Union.

The Union County Election Board Saturday afternoon completed the official canvass of the vote of the county at the recent election, except that cast for Coroner, as, owing to the vote of Hanford Cranship for the office being missing, the total vote could not be computed.

The vote for Governor was: Voorhees, 9,973; Crane, 7,032. Voorhees' plurality, 2,940. For Congress: Fowler (Rep.) 9,949; Snyder (Dem.) 6,801. Fowler's plurality, 3,441. For Senator: Cross (Rep.) 9,054; Ford (Dem.) 7,074 Cross's plurality, 1,980. For Assembly: Houston (Rep.) 9,292; Squire (Rep.) 9,050; Murray (Rep.) 9,049; Collins, (Dem.) 6,857; Scudder (Dem.) 6,981; Higgins (Dem.) 6,836.

Returns of the vote of New Jersey are now practically complete. They show that Voorhees' (Rep.) plurality for Governor is 5,510. McKinley had 87,692 in 1896, and Griggs 26,900 in 1895. Voorhees received 57,537 less votes than McKinley, and Crane 14,645 more than Bryan.

In the congressional districts the Republican plurality was 10,424, and in the Assembly districts 9,317.

Now is the time to commence agitating the matter of bringing before the next Legislature the project of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield into one municipality. There is a similar plan on foot to consolidate all the municipalities in Hudson county into one city. It is urged that if such action was taken it would reduce the taxes by the elimination of unnecessary officers and the reduction of other expenses that each town now as to maintain separately. What is true of Hudson county is true of the Plainfields.

Colonel Snyder, the Democratic candidate whom Congressman Fowler defeated, takes the Republican victory cheerfully and philosophically. Col. Snyder takes the following view of the election:

> Naturally I would be more pleased had I been victorious, but I am beaten clean and clear and I heartily congratulate Mr. Fowler on his re-election, and I hope that he will enjoy the fruits of his victory. He is a gentleman and a scholar and he makes a good Congressman. I am a sort of a good loser, however, and I want to say this much, the Democrats will be in the fight again, you know, and we will get there next time.

Fred Bird is said to be an aspirant for the City Collectorship nomination on the Citizens' ticket. Mr. Bird has been very active in trying to get a Citizens' ticket in the field.

Dewey and Schley have both sent hearty greetings to Roosevelt over his election to the Governorship of New York. Politics is nothing between heroes.

The local political situation is slightly mixed just now owing to the movements both for straight Democratic ticket and a Citizens' ticket.

The Commuter Vote.

Among the reasons assigned by Elvin W. Crane for his defeat for the Governorship, he says that the commuter vote was almost wholly against him. His idea of the commuter, of whom there are over 1 000 in Plainfield, is contained in the following:

> These men take no interest in the affairs of the State, and when the time comes to vote they usually can be found with the Republicans, just wherever they think their business interests lie. Instead of voting the ticket of their home State they vote the ticket of the State where they have their business.

The Newark News, which probably did more than any other paper or person to bring about the defeat of Mr. Crane, makes this comment on the defeated candidate's opinion of the commuters:

> All the evidence shows that the men who live in New Jer se and go to their work each day in New York take a very decided interest in State affairs. In the smaller towns and country places their influence has been paralyzed. It has been exerted for good schools, good roads, good government and progress. In New Jersey cities, too, the residents who do their daily work outside the State are not behind other citizens in interest in State and municipal affairs.

The City Election.

While other sections of New Jersey are settling down to the even tenor of their way, leaving politics to those to whom it is of unusual interest, Plainfield is not thus confronted. On the contrary the city is about to undergo a political campaign that will stir up local interest to the fever-heat point. This condition will come about in the canvass leading up to municipal election December 6th, Plainfield being the only municipality in the State that has its local election follow immediately after the county and State election.

This year great interest is centered in the outcome. Formidable opposition is certain to appear against the regular Republican ticket, but whether it will be in the form of a straight Democratic ticket or Citizens' ticket remains to be seen. It is very likely to be the former, however. For years the Democrats have been in a disorganized state in this city, but recently a plan of reorganization was inaugurated and is being carried out quietly and effectively. Though there are some Democrats who feel that a Citizens' ticket will be the surest way of accomplishing Republican defeat in the city, there are many others that look at it in the light that the Democratic party has been a nonentity long enough and should put a straight party ticket in the field.

They urge that the Republican record in city affairs is such that there is every chance of victory for the opposition party, and if the Republicans are determined to run on a "no issue" ticket and make a party movement as under a Citizens'. At any rate, it is felt by many Democrats that even if defeat was met with again in the city election it certainly would show the Democrats to be alive and in this way the party organization would be strengthened and in future campaigns the Democrats would become more of a factor than heretofore in local affairs.

The officers to be elected are a Mayor, City Collector, City Judge, four Councilman and a member of the Board of Education.

The New York Tribune advises the Republican leaders, if they want to have their party organization in good shape for the Presidential campaign, that it would be a good idea to have their State headquarters kept open the year around, for there are several counties where the Republican organization is in wretched shape and the work of getting them into effective order cannot be done in the heat and excitement of a political campaign such as has just ended. What the Tribune advises for the Republicans is equally good admonition for the Democrats. In Union county the Republicans have got a fine working organization, but not so with the Democrats.

Now that Foster M. Voorhees is elected it becomes the duty of the newspapers to fill the offices at his disposal. For the present the Chronicle will content itself with one, and nominates Charles C. McBride, editor of the Elizabeth Daily Journal, as the Governor's private secretary. Mr. McBride is a Bound Brook boy, worked hard for Republican success, and deserves this place.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

We second the nomination. The affable, handsome and brilliant McBride is the man for the position, and he deserves well at the hands of Voorhees, too.

By going to Cuba for garrison duty the Plainfield boys in the Third Regiment are just as big patriots as the men who were in the front rank of assault on San Juan Hill. And they deserve just as much credit, for it's no pleasant job now to go to Cuba with nothing but dull and routine camp duty staring them in the face for the year and a half that they have yet to serve.

A writer who has an eye for details says that some front yards are so correct that they drive a man to set on his back doorstep and admire weeds.

ROCKFELLOW MAY BE REPUBLICAN'S MAYOR.

He is a Prominent Candidate for Nomination.

OTHER MEN SUGGESTED.

REPUBLICANS WANT LOCAL BUSINESS MAN TO HEAD TICKET.

D. E. Titsworth and Capt. J. Frank Hubbard Have Been Mentioned For Nomination—A Strong Fight to Be Made This Year—Mr. Barrows Will Not Run—Candidates For Councilmen.

The Republican party of the city of Plainfield has met with opposition, it has had some of its candidates defeated, but never in its history has it encountered such a situation as exists today. If the Republicans are victorious at the coming municipal election it will be because they put up a strong ticket and work hard in its favor.

The leaders of the G. O. P. in this city are perfectly aware of the state of affairs. They know that there is a large number of voters who are dissatisfied with the past administration Whether that number is sufficient to overcome the regular Republican majority here, no one will know until after election. The most important office to be filled at the election will be that of Mayor. Much opposition has been made against the present administration on the ground that the "common people" were running the city machinery while the local business men had little or nothing to do with it.

It is pretty well understood that it would be folly for the Republicans to nominate a commuter for Mayor this year. The feeling against such a move is too strong right in the party itself to permit such a step. There was considerable talk of Councilman E. T. Barrows as the majority candidate but the principal G. O. P. men said that it could not be. Mr. Barrows, they said, must give up all aspirations in that direction and be content with his present office for a time at least.

The name of David E. Titsworth was mentioned as a desirable man. Very popular as Mr. Titsworth undoubtedly is, combined with the fact that he is employed right in the city, it was thought that he would run well Mr. Titsworth spoke very strongly, however, and declared that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances. Capt. J. Frank Hubbard was also spoken of as a good man for the office, but Capt. Hubbard soon ended the little boom by a firm refusal.

At present, the name of George W. Rockfellow stands well for the choice of the party. He served one term as Mayor, and is one of Plainfield's leading merchants. He has not taken any active part in politics of late, but is considered a good Republican. The leaders have made no definite selection as yet, but those who are well-informed on the subject say that, at present, Mr. Rockfellow seems to stand first in the race for the nomination.

The nomination of the ward Councilman is also attracting much interest. It is conceeded that strong candidates will have to be nominated to give victory to the Republican banner. In the Second ward, C. S. Foote, who has taken an active part of late in Republican affairs in the ward, is mentioned as a candidate. So, too, is Thomas A. Cuming who has the advantage of being a local business man and particularly popular with the wheelmen.

Great pressure is being brought to bear on Councilman John T. Baker, in the Third ward, to have him run for re-election to the Council this fall from the Third ward. The name of Leslie Daniel has been mentioned as a likely candidate should Mr. Baker positively decline to run.

Resolutions Forwarded.

The framed act of resolutions passed by Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W, several weeks ago thanking the members of the lodge at Niagara Falls for the aid they rendered E. E. Marshall, a member of Columbia Lodge, when he was taken ill there last summer, were sent Monday. The resolutions were handsomely framed, packed tightly in a box and sent away by express.

THE DEMOCRATS WILL NOMINATE A TICKET.

Members of the Party Tired of Being Made Catspaws.

TO BE A STRAIGHT TICKET.

WHAT ONE DEMOCRAT THINKS OF THE SITUATION.

Time for the Democrats to Become Something More Than a Nonentity—Only Hope for Success of the Reorganization Plans is to Put Up a Ticket That Democrats Can Go In and Work For.

Notwithstanding the movement of disgruntled Republicans, aided by a few Democrats, to put a Citizens' ticket in the field for the city election an earnest effort will be made to put up a strong Democratic ticket by members of that party who have come to the conclusion that the Democrats have been a nonentity long enough in local affairs.

In discussing the condition that confronts the Democrats, as a party, a prominent Democrat said to a reporter Tuesday:

"It seems to me that the only thing that the Democrats can do, to be honest with themselves and consistent in their actions, is to put forward a straight Democratic ticket. For several years now we have been playing into the hands of every political adventurer simply by not maintaining any sort of an organization and taking only spasmodic action in public affairs. It has been a cause of regret long enough, and if we ever hope to get out of this slough of despond it will have to be done by a party movement, in which disgruntled Republicans do not figure as managers.

"Here and there I meet Democrats who say we can't win with a straight ticket. Democrats that talk that way are looking back ward. Of course we can't win if we are going to put up a lot of men for the sake of seeing them knocked down on election day. Why don't these pessimistic Democrats look forward a little bit. Don't they know that there is an effort being made to reorganize the party machinery and that it is in a fair way to succeed, unless the Democrats abandon their chance of giving the party something tangible to work for in the shape of a party ticket.

"For one, I am tired of seeing the Democrats made catspaws of by Republicans in the hanging the Citizens' ticket principally for the sake that they may land in some public office and 'let the devil take the hindmost.'

"There doesn't seem to be any reason why the Democrats can't go forth into the municipal campaign and make as good a fight, or better, than the Citizens' or Republicans. Some people keep telling you not to put up a ticket this year. Well, when when are we going to do it? If we follow their advice it will never be done and the Democrats may as well get out of the community as a political factor. If the time was ripe to organize it now. The Republican city administration was never so unsatisfactory and if we can't win under these circumstances, and with their own party ranks divided, we never can hope for victory.

"I believe that a Democratic ticket, strong and clean, and backed up by an organization that is effective in working details and will be able to bring out the vulnerable points of the Republican record, will win.

"Just now there are enough Democrats interested in the reorganization of the party to work like beavers to carry a party ticket to success and build up an effective party organization, but if no party ticket is put up the Democrats will revert back to the same worthless position they have been for some time as a party. The Democrats have everything to gain in such a contest, and it is the manifest duty of the party to put up a straight ticket."

NEWARK INSTITUTE LOST TO PLAINFIELD.

A Rough Basket Ball Game Played Monday Night.

A DISGUSTING EXHIBITION.

VISITORS WERE FINALLY OUTPLAYED AT THEIR OWN GAME.

It Did Not Look Like Basket Ball at All—Men Were Upset and Thrown About the Floor—George Proctor Smith Did All the Scoring for Home Team—Not at All Like Usual Games Played Here.

Such exhibitions of basket ball, like the one witnessed in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last Monday, are not all conducive to the elevation of the sport. The team from the Newark Institute came over to play a return game. It wasn't basket ball—such a game as the visitors put up could not be dignified by such a name. To the audience it looked far more like football, and not very gentle football at that. But the visitors were beaten at their own game, and victory went to the home team by a score of 10 to. 5.

Those Plainfielders who witnessed the game in the gymnasium of the Newark Institute say that it was rougher than the game last night. The game last night was enough, however, to disgust the lovers of real basket ball who witnessed it.

From the very start the Newark boys played a rough game. They threw their opponents, held them and batted them if they happened to be in the way.

It was, after all, a decidedly exciting game. In the first half neither side did much scoring. A goal from the field was thrown by each side and the Plainfield team secured a goal on a foul, making the score 3 to 2 in favor of Plainfield at the end of the first half. The half took considerable time as several men were injured and time had to be called to give them a chance to recover.

In the first part of the second half the score remained very close, then the local players braced up and ran the sco e up to 10 points while their opponents could only make half the number.

George Proctor Smith played the game of his life. He was everywhere at once, blocked his man well and did all the scoring for the Plainfield team. A large number of fouls were called on both sides and their official done his duty, the number would have been much greater. The local management says that the game will end any future matches with the Newark Institute.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD Y.M.C.A.		NEWARK INSTITUTE.

Egan	centre	Hil
M. Merolier	right guard	Sullivan

A SAD LOSS.

Little Gertie Williams Died of Diphtheria Last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Williams, Jr., of Warrenville, have the sympathy of neighbors and friends in their sad bereavement occasioned by the death of their daughter, Gertie, aged 7, which occurred Tuesday 15th inst., of diphtheria and membranous croup.

The little one was of a bright sunny disposition and loved by all.

Her classmates and the teacher, Miss Bartle, will procure a suitable floral offering to be placed on her grave as a memento of their love and esteem. An older sister is sick with the same dread disease. It is the earnest prayer of neighbors and friends that the heartbroken parents may not be called upon again to lose another of their little ones.

Gather the beautiful home to her rest,
Strew the pale roses over her breast;
Like her in beauty let them decay,
When the most beautiful passeth away.
Let a sweet fi ur'lovingly bloom
In the bright reenward over her tomb.
Weep for the beautiful; hallow with tears
The grave which the Love of the lei ardears;
Trust to her pillow the beautiful dead.
Angels of glory watch over her bed.
For Gertie is free from all pain and all care.
And will await in heaven to greet us there.

NEW QUARTERS FOR HOPE CHAPEL.

Announcement Made Sunday That a New Church Will Be Started Soon.

Plainfield is to have a new church. Not a new one exactly, only the outgrowth of a chapel. Hope chapel is soon to begin the erection of a permanent structure on West Fourth street in the lot next to its present site.

At the session of the Sunday-school of the chapel, Sunday afternoon, Superintendent H. C. Squires made the announcement that the erection of the new church would soon begin. The chapel has been steadily growing and has long ago filled its present quarters. The need of something larger and better was felt. The bequest recently received has placed the chapel in a better position to begin the work.

FARMERS' CARD IS THE WINNING ONE NOW

It Bears an Inscription Warning City Sports.

TO KEEP OFF POSTED LAND.

FARMERS PROPOSE TO HAVE A CHANCE AT GAME, TOO.

They are Tired of Having a Horde of Modern Nimrods Sweep Down Upon Their Farms and Slaughter all the Best Game Before They Get Their Guns Cleaned—Prepared to Enforce the Law

The modern Nimrods, attired in canvas jackets, shod in high top boots, accompanied with packs of dogs and retinue of servants, equipped with the latest rifles and possessors of all other details of hunting paraphernalia on an elaborate scale, who have in years heretofore invaded this section on the opening days of the hunting season and ruthlessly shot down all game that they came across, are this year eschewed. The farmers hold the winning card this year, on which appears the following in good plain type:

NO TRESPASSING
On these grounds
With dog or gun.
Under penalty
OF THE LAW.

In former years the city sportsmen, both from New York and the larger cities in New Jersey, have invaded the splendid hunting preserves in the Washington and Passaic valleys and along the Watchung range of mountains unhindered, but since Thursday, when the open game season commenced, they have found their hunting expeditions blocked on every side by the above formidable and omnipresent notices. In the open ground these cards can be found posted in great number on fences, and in the woods many trees are covered with them.

The farmers have always complained that city hunters appeared at the opening of the hunting season in such a horde that by the time the agriculturists could get down their guns and have them cleaned the game was pretty well annihilated. Under a recent State law farmers are now authorized to arrest, without a warrant, all trespassers and illegal hunters on their lands, and in this way where the trespass law was virtually a dead letter previously it is now enforced in a vigorous manner. In many sections the farmers have banded together for mutual protection, and sorry be it for the city sportsmen who invades posted ground.

Besides the individual efforts of the farmers the city sportsmen are also confronted with the Union, Somerset and Middlesex Counties' Game Protective Association, which has leased several hundred acres of farm land in the three counties and stocked it with young game during the summer months. The association has fully posted all their preserves and in co-operation with the game wardens and the farmers, who are made members of the association if land is leased of them, trespassers are kept off the preserves in the knowledge that violators will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

This attitude of the farmers and the game association is particularly grievous to the city hunters this year in view of the fact that game is unusually plentiful and fat now.

COLLEGE Y M C.A. WORK

FRED H. ANDREWS DESCRIBES IT AT TRINITY CHURCH.

Opening of the Week of Prayer Inaugurated by the Y. M. C. A.—Mr. Andrews' Talk Was Very Interesting.

An interesting service was held at Trinity Reformed church last Sunday in behalf of the young men and the week of prayer for them as instituted by the Y. M. C. A. This is an annual affair and usually services of a similar nature are held in all of the local churches.

Councilman Fred H. Andrews was present at Trinity church and made a short address along the line of work being carried on for young men in the preparatory schools and colleges of this country. The devotional exercises were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck. Pa. D., and a feature was the special music given by a double male quartette consisting of F. S. Runyon, Thomas A. Cuming, A. J. Moore, H. J. Martin, H. J. Martin, Jr., Nelson Runyon, Charles Hummer and L. A. Hummer. The singing was thoroughly enjoyed as was also an offertory solo by Mr. Cuming.

Pastor Schenck read as the Scripture lesson the parable of the young man and the vineyard, very appropriate to the occasion, and after offering prayer, he made a few remarks on the subject of "Young Men's Ideals," as based on the 16th chapter of Psalms and eighth verse.

Following Mr. Schenck's remarks, Mr. Andrews was introduced. During the past six years Mr. Andrews has held the position of State secretary of the work for college and preparatory school students and is well informed on the subject and work. Today there are between five and six hundred Y. M. C. A. Associations among these colleges and smaller schools from Maine to Washington. Mr. Andrews spoke of the work being carried on in Princeton College, how committees from the Y. M. C. A. would make it a point to see the freshmen that enter college each year and to secure their interest in Christian work. He spoke of the four places in this country where annual conferences are held for college men, namely: Asheville, S. C.; the Pacific slope, Lake Geneva, Wis.; and Northfield, Mass., and he spoke of the great work accomplished at these places every year. He spoke of some young men in the west who rode in a cattle train two days and one night to a tend one of these conferences. In conclusion he spoke of the work being carried on in foreign fields, and how at one conference in India there were 1,300 students present. He spoke of the World's conference at Northfield, when twenty-six countries were represented. In the opinion of Mr. Andrews he thinks the world is getting better, and he made an earnest appeal to the young men present to accept of Jesus Christ as their King and Savior.

FUNERAL OF JACOB LONG.

Attended by Relatives and Friends From All Over the State.

The funeral of the late Jacob Long was held last Monday at 11 o'clock from his late home on Craig place. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Pn.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. Mr. Nelson, a retired clergyman and a personal friend of the deceased. Both clergymen made comforting remarks.

Elmer E. Runyon sang two solos, 'I Would Not Live Alway" and 'Nearer My God to Thee.' The pallbearers were the four sons—William H. Long, J. S. B. Long, Jacob Long, Jr., and Dr. Monroe B. Long. Interment was in Hillside. The services were well attended by relatives and friends from all over the State.

Interesting Prayer Meeting.

A very interesting prayer service was held Monday evening at Warren chapel in connection with the week of prayer meetings. The meeting was in charge of Rev H. W. Hathway, of Elizabeth, and he made a few remarks of great interest and help to all present. A great many of those present took part in the meeting, and altogether it was one of the best services held in sometime. This evening the meeting will be in charge of Rev. G. W. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church.

PRINCETON TIGER DOWNED OLD ELI.

Many Plainfielders Witnessed the Great Game.

SIXTEEN THOUSAND THERE.

THE GREATEST FOOTBALL GAME PLAYED IN JERSEY.

Charles Dupee Was a Substitute on the Yale Team But Did Not Get a Chance to Play—Plainfielders of Both Universities in the Cheering Squads—Princeton Won by a Score of 6 to 0

The Princeton Tiger is purring most melodiously, for did not the stout sons of Old Nassau defeat their old rivals from Yale in the greatest football game of the season Saturday afternoon. All Princeton is jubilant. The game was positively exciting from start to finish and the sixteen thousand people, who witnessed the contest from the great stands that surround Brokaw Field, Princeton, yelled themselves hoarse over it. It was the greatest contest ever fought on the gridiron in Jersey and the deaths of the fight will furnish stories for the Princeton students for many moons.

Plainfield was well represented among the crowd. Among the body of Princeton students, a thousand strong, that cheered and sang all through the game, were Arthur W. Lederer, 1902, and Thomas D. Blair, '99, both of Plainfield. The other students from Plainfield, half a dozen in all, occupied seats in the eastern and southern stands. Orange and black was united in the eastern stand and predominated in the two end stands. The bonny blue of old Eli waved in the western stand with here and there at the ends a standard of Nassau. There was a score of old Princeton students who had come from Plainfield to root for their old college. In addition there were several hundred enthusiasts who wore the orange and black. They came from Plainfield by the way of New York, Elizabeth and New Brunswick.

On the side lines, where the followers of Yale congregated, there was Charles Dupee, of Plainfield, clad in his mole skins and ready to take McBride's place at full back should he be injured. Dupee, however, had no chance as the Yale full back stuck it out for the whole game. Raymond A. McGee, who was forced to give up his chances for left tackle on account of a game knee, was also noticed on the side lines watching the play. He came to Princeton with the 'varsity squad although in no shape to play.

Plainfield has for years sent many of her sons to Yale, and there were a number of them amongst the big crowd of Yale rooters who occupied the cheering section in the west stand. Then there was a goodly delegation of Yale graduates among whom S. St. John McCutchen figured prominently. Senator and Mrs. Charles A. Reed and the Senator's brother occupied seats on that stand. Charles H. Lyman sat near by.

Governor Voorhees sat on the east stand in the midst of a band of bowling Princetonians. Former President Cleveland and his wife were on the same stand, all bedecked in orange and black.

Harry Woltman, 1902, of Princeton, entertained several members of the Bachelors Club, a Plainfield organization of which he was a member. They occupied seats on the south stand near a party of Somerville young people. Another party of young people from Plainfield who were the blue, was chaperoned by Mrs. F. H. Andrews, of Central avenue.

Aside from the Yale men and their families, most of the Plainfield enthusiasts wore the colors of Old Nassau.

The game itself was well worth witnessing. The results were somewhat of a surprise to those who had followed the showing of both teams in other games. The veteran line of Princeton, from which so much was expected, fell before the determined rushes of the Yale backs. The Princeton line, however, held well on the kicks while the Princeton ends were down the field every time, a thing in which the Yale ends were lacking.

The sensational run of Poe's on which the touchdown was made showed that the Princeton coaches had prepared their charges to take advantage of every misplay of Eli's supporters. When Poe went down the field, the crowd broke into the wildest enthusiasm. Dignity was thrown to the winds and the Princeton rooters rose up in a body and let forth a yell, the echoes of which reached even to New Haven.

The day was all that could have been desired. There was a little wind at the start that caused the occupants of the east stand to draw their coats more closely but after that it died away and the afternoon was a very delightful one for players and audience.

The score was 6 to 0 in favor of Princeton, but there were times when it appeared that both sides would score. It was a great game and well worth seeing.

CLIMAX CLUB WINNERS.

Last Contest Held on the Grounds of the Climax Gun Club Saturday. But the Attendance Was Rather Poor

Owing to the open season for game shooting, the attendance at the final tournament of the New Jersey Central Trap Shooters' League Saturday was not at large as the occasion deserves. Only two complete teams put in an appearance at the grounds of the Climax Gun Club, the Reservoir Club of New Brunswick having but three representatives and the Dunellen Club but four. Had either of these clubs put in full teams they would have had a chance to become owners of the handsome loving cup which had been presented for competition by the Peters' Cartridge Co., of Connecticut, through their Eastern representative, T. H. Kellar. Previous to Saturday's shoot the Climax Club had scored three wins for the trophy, the Dunellen Club two and the Reservoir Club two. A win on Saturday for either would have tied the Climax Club and a shoot off would have been necessary. The win of Saturday now makes the Climax Club absolute owners of the trophy. The league did much toward exciting a new interest in trap shooting in this vicinity and has been the means of bringing the sportsmen of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties together and it is hoped after the game season closes that the league will be revived. The first of a series of live bird tournaments will be held December 1st at New Brunswick by the Reservoir Gun Club.

Following is the score:

Peters' Cartridge Company trophy contest.

CLIMAX GUN CLUB, OF PLAINFIELD.

C. Smith	16
Keller, Jr.	16
Goodman	13
Darby	12
Sweet	12
	69

ROUND BROOK GUN CLUB, OF ROUND BROOK.

Tingley	14
V. Voglio	15
Hobart	13
Jackson	7
S. Terry	9
	60

DUNELLEN GUN CLUB, OF DUNELLEN.

Apgar	19
Manning	16
Pratchbard	15
Cramer	10
	61

RESERVOIR GUN CLUB, OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Blewett	17
Bellolf	12
H. B. Smith	18
	60

Regular club shoot of Climax Gun Club: Brattlingham, 25; Keller, 22; C. Smith, 21; Brattlingham, jr., 19; Goodman, 18; Darby, 16; Keller, Jr., 14; O. Terry, 13; C. Smith, 11.

The low scores in the trophy contest are accounted for, as the affair was not ended until it was too dark to see the targets. Consequently the last ten birds shot at by each man was hardly a test of skill.

DEATH OF MRS. SARGEANT.

Died at Her Home in Brooklyn—Was Well-Known in Plainfield.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Sargeant, of 455 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn, aged 71 years, died Saturday morning after a two weeks' illness of pneumonia. Mrs. Sargeant was quite well-known in Plainfield, as she frequently visited the homes of relatives in this city. She was an aunt to Oliver T. O. Doane, also to J. Hervey, Charles E., and John H. Doane. She was also a cousin to Mrs. A. L. Force and a niece to Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw, of the borough. Mrs. Sargeant had been a great sufferer for many years with asthma. She was a devout Christian mother, willing and fully prepared to change her earthly home for the glorious one that awaited her in Heaven.

The funeral services were held on Monday evening from her late residence, the services being conducted by Rev. Dr. Kent, of the Lewis Ave. Congregational church. Dr. Kent was not personally acquainted with deceased, but he spoke beautifully to the bereaved relatives and friends present of her sweet Christian character and of her willingness to submissively bow to the will of her Heavenly Father. Interment was made in the family plot at Greenwood Tuesday morning.

JAMES KELLEY'S DEAD BODY IN A BOX CAR

Mysterious Death of a Plainfield Young Man.

CHAS. FROELICH ARRESTED.

HE HAD POSSESSION OF THE DEAD MAN'S REVOLVER.

Apprised Kelley's Family of the Finding of the Body and was Subsequently Taken Into Custody to Await Developments—Kelley Left Home Wednesday Morning With $60 in His Pockets.

Apparently the victim of a murderous shot, the lifeless body of James J. Kelley, of this city, was found lying face downward in an empty freight car at the Waverley yards of the Pennsylvania railroad early last Friday morning. A further investigation showed that the wound in the head was caused by a fall while a quantity of poison was discovered in the stomach of the dead man. Until late last Friday, the identity of the body remained undiscovered. Then James Kelly, of 602 East Third street, this city, appeared at the morgue in company with Sergeant Kiely of the local police force and identified the body as Mr. Kelley's son, James.

Young Kelley is eighteen years old. Off and on for two years he has been in the employ of the street department of this city. He had charge of a horse and cart, belonging to his father that was used in the street cleaning department. For the services of man, horse and cart, the city paid $2.50 a day.

Early Wednesday morning Kelley went to City Treasurer Arnold and drew the money coming to him. It amounted to about $60. Then he went home and his mother remembers distinctly the fact that he had the money with him. At 10 o'clock young Kelley left home and said he was going to Newark. He did not name any definite purpose for his trip, but his mother supposed that it was for pleasure. That was the last he was seen alive in Plainfield.

There is no clue as to his whereabouts until 4 o'clock that afternoon when Charles Froelich, of 374 Market street, Newark, met him at the corner of Broad and Market streets. Froelich says that he seemed intoxicated at the time. Froelich is a lad of seventeen years. He lives with his father. They formerly lived at 760 East Third street, this city. Six weeks ago they moved to Newark, where the elder Froelich started a machine shop. Froelich and Kelley were well acquainted in Plainfield.

Froelich left Kelley at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. What happened in the interval the police refuse to tell. It is known, however, that Froelich has not told of any important happenings since the young man probably wandered about together.

Froelich's story of his own movements after that hour is rather vague. He says that when he went home he found the door locked and so went back to the rooms of a club that he frequents and spent the night there. The police declare that the regular habitues say that Froelich was not there.

The elder Kelley is sexton of St. Mary's cemetery. He is a faithful, steady worker, and is well known and highly respected by the community in which he lives. Young Kelley had an excellent record in the street department as a hard and reliable worker. Once last summer, however, he went to New York with a friend after having drawn about $60 of his wages, and returned after spending it all.

There was no uneasiness felt in the Kelley family for the son was supposed to be abundantly able to take care of himself. Mrs. Kelley says that her son never became intoxicated although he partook of a friendly glass once in a while. She is certain that he was not intoxicated when Froelich met him.

Friday afternoon Froelich came to Plainfield and went to the home of the Kelley's. There he turned over a revolver that he said he had taken from young Kelley for fear that he might do something desperate. He told the story of meeting with young Kelley and how the latter was drunk. He gave the impression that Kelley was inclined to be violent. He asked if they had heard anything of Kelley since and on receiving a negative reply, produced a newspaper with an account of the finding of the unknown body in the Waverly yards.

The description of the supposed murdered man answered to that of young Kelley and the father immediately prepared to investigate. He also notified the police of the facts.

When Froelich went to the North avenue station at 7 o'clock, he was met by Sergeant Kiely who placed him under arrest and locked him up as a witness in the case. He is still in the city jail awaiting developments in the case. While it is not believed that he was implicated in the death of his friend, the police believe that he can throw some light on the mystery.

Later Friday evening elder Kelley and Sergeant Kiely took the train for Newark where they went to the morgue and identified the body as that of James J. Kelley. No money was found in the dead man's clothes. When Froelich was arrested, he was searched but no money or anything to throw light on the mystery was found about him.

Last Saturday it was learned that last Tuesday morning Kelley and Froelich met at Joseph Carbone's fruit store on North avenue. The former produced a letter which he had, from all appearances, received from a Newark girl. He read it and the two boys laughed at intervals. At this time Kelley told Carbone that he was going to Newark to buy a fruit stand. The next morning, Wednesday, Kelley stopped at Carbone's place about 8 o'clock and purchased a glass of milk. He then told the proprietor that he was going to Newark. He went down town and about 10 o'clock in the same morning Carbone saw Kelley running up North avenue toward the station to catch a trian. That was the last time Carbone saw Kelley.

Thursday morning Mr. Carbone went to the station to take the 7:27 train to New York. At the station he met Froelich. The latter asked him if he had seen Kelley. Carbone replied by telling Froelich that he had gone to Newark. The boy's reply was "Jim is foolish."

When Froelich saw Kelley's parents Friday afternoon he told them that he had left their son at the corner of Broad and Grand streets at about 10 o'clock Wednesday night, but he denied to any what had transpired in the meantime except the incident of his securing control of the revolver.

The elder Kelley was seen by a reporter and the former said that he believed that his son had been murdered for his money. He thought the poison found in his body had been administered while taking a drink.

When the body was discovered by William Terry, a watchman of the railroad company, the right arm was bent at the elbow and the left arm extended, the fingers of that hand being open, as if the man had died in great pain. The left leg was slightly drawn up and the whole body was twisted toward the right.

The clothing consisted of a light brown mixed goods suit, evidently of custom make and good quality; patent leather shoes, and of size "6 F;" blue and white checked negligee shirt, four-in-hand purple necktie, with fine gold polka dots, ready made and having on it the tag "Woodall & Swan, Pittsfield, N. H.;" two new flannel undershirts, with double breasted shield fronts; cotton drawers and grey cotton socks. Near the body in the freight car was found a black alpine hat of good quality, of size 7, but with no identifying mark. The body and everything on it indicated a person who took care of himself.

In the pockets of the clothing were found a cigar, part of a package of cigarettes, a button, a clean white silk handkerchief and a white linen handkerchief, neither of which bears any mark. In fact, there was nothing on the body which could lead to its identification, except, possibly, the necktie.

When Terry, the watchman, saw the body in the car by the light from his lantern he thought it was a man asleep—a not uncommon occurrence. Failing to arouse him Terry climbed into the car and caught hold of him. As he did so he saw blood on the floor and what was apparently a bullet wound in the back of the man's head. The man was dead. Terry promptly notified the Newark police authorities, declaring the case to be another murder. The body was taken to Newark and the police went to work on the case, having in mind the recent murder of Frank Woods, a young Baltimore lad, near the same place by trampe; the later shooting of Thomas Ponder, a Jersey City colored lad, and the even more recent killing of one man and dangerous wounding of another near Trenton by trampe.

Superficial examinations of the head of Kelly by police officials, newspaper men and the attaches of the morgue left no doubt that the wound almost in the middle of the back of the head had been caused by a bullet. In the hat found near the body was a hole, evidently made by a bullet, and corresponding to the location of the wound in the head.

When County Physician Washington began an autopsy Friday afternoon he discovered almost instantly that the wound in the back of the head had not been caused by a bullet. It was only a flesh wound af the scalp, did not penetrate to the skull and was ragged and apparently caused by the man having a hard, backward fall and striking on a nail or sharp edge of something. The skull was not fractured and the brain was in good condition except evidences of concussion, as if from a fall.

When the body was opened, however, the entire aspect was changed by what was revealed. The stomach and intestines were found to contain a quantity of arsenical poison, paris green, sufficient to kill several men. The County Physician at once expressed a belief that Kelley had taken the poison with suicidal intent and had crawled into the freight car to die, sustaining the injury to his head by falling while doing so.

END OF AN ACTIVE LIFE

JACOB LONG DIED AT HIS HOME LAST THURSDAY NIGHT.

He Was Eighty-nine Years of Age and Had Led an Eventful Life—Started Life as a Farmer—Once a Freeholder.

Jacob Long, one of Somerset county's oldest and most active citizens, passed away Thursday at 10:30 o'clock at his residence on Craig place. He was hale and hearty up to within four months of his death, and suffered but little from illness throughout his career.

Mr. Long was born a farm near Martinville, Somerset county, on September 27, 1819. Thrown upon his own resources at an early age, he soon learned the secret of self reliance. When only a lad of seventeen years, he purchased a farm a mile from his birthplace and began work there with great success. There he lived for forty years.

Although he began his career as a farmer, he early began a live stock dealer or "drover" as they were then called. The business was a productive one and extended all through this State, New York and Canada. He formed a partership with Harvey S. Moore, then of Bridgewater, both now residing on West Front street, this city.

The firm met with success and did an extensive business until 1873, when it was dissolved by mutual consent after having lasted thirty years. Then both men retired.

In 1840 Mr. Long was married to Miss Thurza Moore, of Liberty Corner. There were six children, all living, who grew up on the farm and then went out into the world. On Mr Long's retirement from business, he with his wife moved to Rahway, leaving their son, John S. B. Long to run the homestead farm.

Three years after, Mr. Long moved to North Plainfield to be near his son, Dr. Monroe B. Long, who had located in Plainfield, and remained there until the time of his death.

Mr. Long cast his first vote for Gen. William Henry Harrison, the Whig candidate for President. When the Republican party was formed, he voted for their first candidate, John C. Fremont, and has remained a faithful follower of the party ever since.

In 1860-61, he was elected a chosen freeholder from Bridgewater township, Somerset county, on the Republican ticket. He served well and afterwards held several other minor offices in the county. He never took a very active part in politics, however.

Last June his wife died and he was left alone. Since then his health has steadily failed. For the past month he has been nearly helpless and it was known that the end was close at hand. He was conscious to the last and then passed away without pain. His death was caused by exhaustion and old age.

He leaves six children, William H. Long, of Somerville, ex-Surrogate of Somerset county; John S. B. Long, who is living on the old homestead near Martinville; Mrs. George W. VanNest, whose husband owns an adjoining farm; Jacob Long, Jr., of Walden, Orange county, N. Y.; Dr. M. B. Long, of Park avenue, this city and Mrs. S. O Stasts, of West Second street, this city.

AN EXEMPLARY WOMAN.

Christian Character of the Late Mrs M. M. Cock

Many warm and devotedly attached friends have been gathering up recollections of the life and saintly character of Mrs. Cock. They have been spending one to another, of some of the many graces which adorned her walk and conversation. A Christian life, extending over the unusually long period of ninety-six years, must of necessity come to abound in most precious and valuable experience of God's goodness and providential care. As she has so long been sitting at the feet of her Savior, seeking to learn of Him, she had gotten many lessons by heart and has been daily exemplifying them. It has been well said that every Christian should be the personification at least of some one grace of the Holy Spirit of God, of faith, of love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, or patience, so as to fulfill the Apostle's exhortation and be "a living epistle, read of all men."

Mr. Cock manifested many of these graces in her quiet, retired life, which she has been living during the last ten or fifteen years that she has been called to pass in her home and a large part of them in her home. Three things must have struck every one who knew her and they were the unfailing strength of her faith in God, her Father, her patient endurance and determination to do His will, and her heart-felt gratitude for her many blessings. She never spoke of her ailments and infirmities, without quickly adding—"but I have many things to be thankful for," and then would delight to account some of them.

Let us thank God for the grace, given to this, His aged servant, and pray for His help that we may follow the example of her steadfastness in the faith and obedience to God's Holy commandments. R.

CAPTURED GREY FOX AFTER LONG CHASE

Frank E. Woodruff Shot Him Near Metuchen.

STARTED AT NEW MARKET.

FIRST FOX KILLED ABOUT HERE IN FIVE YEARS.

Hunters Report That Rabbits are Remarkably Numerous in This Section This Year—Many Cotton Tails Bagged Already—Friday Saw an Army of Gunners in the Fields—Quail Shot Also.

Sir Reynard has stolen his last chicken. He has had his last glimpse of the meadows of Piscataway town. He may have left relatives behind but the career of Sir Reynard, or "Brer Fox" is over. Friday Frank E. Woodruff of this city, shot and killed the first grey fox to be killed in this vicinity for over five years. It is considered a great event among the local sportsmen.

Early Friday morning, Frank E. Woodruff, of East Second street, and James Stamfield, of Lee place, went out with their guns. They had Stamfield's hound and two others belonging to John Goff, of West Fourth street.

They expected to start some rabbits and quail. While they were tramping out beyond New Market, near the Port Reading Railroad, there was a sudden flash of something grey and the hounds started off in full cry. "Brer Fox" was a veteran and he led the hound a weary chase. It was 9 o'clock when he was first seen and the chase continued for another hour.

Sir Reynard dashed through brier patches, waded through streams and doubled on his trail time after time, but the hounds stuck to it pluckily and followed despite the obstacles thrown in their way. The chase led off in the direction of Metuchen and the hunters followed, guided by the baying of the hounds.

At 1 o'clock they were just back of Metuchen, six miles from where they had started. Woodruff saw a neighboring brier patch through which he thought the chase would soon lead. He had just perched himself on a stump when along came "Brer Fox." There was a flash, a boom, and the hunted animal gave a convulsive spring and all was over.

The fox was a large one with beautiful silver grey fur and a long bushy tail. It was a very handsome specimen. The hunters were well satisfied with their capture and returned home. The fox was exhibited to their friends during the afternoon and excited much interest.

There were scores of hunters out Friday morning and they found the game very plentiful. The rabbits are more numerous, it is said, than they have been for many years.

Former Judge W. A. Coddington and Nelson Giles went out Friday morning at 7 and shot twelve "cottontails" after a two-hours' tramp. Another party captured eleven and three quail in the same length of time. Others of the hunters report having fine sport.

A party composed of Elliodam, Wm. Klein, John Porter, John William and Jack Mowry, of this city, started last Thursday morning on a hunting trip in the vicinity of Flemington. Friday night they returned with seventy "cotton-tails" and three quail.

NOW FOR CITY ELECTION.

REPUBLICANS NAME DATE FOR THEIR PRIMARIES.

Ward Primaries to be Held November 21st, and City Convention Two Days Later—Apportionment of Delegates

A meeting of the Republican city executive committee was held Friday night to wind up the affairs connected with the last campaign. All bill were paid, and plans made for the coming city election.

The committee fixed upon Monday, November 21st, as the date for holding the primaries when delegates will be elected to the city convention to be held the evening of the 23d in the old City National Bank building. The basis of representation for the different wards was fixed as follows: First ward, 5; second ward, 6; Third ward, 7; Fourth ward, 9.

At the primaries three members of the city executive committee will be elected, one Councilman, a justice of peace and a constable from each ward.

Offering for Missions.

The yearly offering for the American Baptist Home Mission Society will be taken at the First Baptist church next Sunday morning. An address will be delivered by Gen. T. J. Morgan, who was associated with ex President Harrison in the Indian affairs when the latter was President.

Terry Is Married Now.

Benjamin Terry, of Bridgeport, Conn., a frequent visitor in Plainfield where he has a number of friends, is now being congratulated on his marriage to one of the belles of that city.

THE THIRD GOES SOUTH

VOLUNTEERS ON THEIR WAY TO GARRISON DUTY IN CUBA.

The Third New Jersey Volunteer regiment started from Pompton Plains Friday for Athens, Ga. When the news reached the men Friday that they were to go South there were many disappointed, for they thought that as the regiment did not move Thursday, the time selected for the departure, it was the intention of the War Department to muster out the command.

Its last night near the powder works in Pompton was a very dismal agreeable one, for the rain came down in torrents and formed pools outside the lines.

The boys were up at daybreak, and at once began the work of taking down their tents and packing up their traps. These were loaded on the trains in waiting, and the section trains, with thirteen hundred men of the regiment started during the forenoon. The command went to Jersey City over the Greenwood Lake railroad, and in Jersey City the trains were switched to the Pennsylvania tracks and the run to Athens was over the Pennsylvania system. The men had fifteen days' rations with them. They expect to do garrison duty in Cuba.

In the Third Regiment are about twenty Plainfielders. The majority of them are young fellows, unmarried, who did not give up lucrative positions to enlist, and it is not considered as great a hardship for them to leave the country for garrison duty as it might be under different circumstances. There were none of them, however, that were anxious to go to Cuba, but as long as they were to be retained in the service they were glad to get away from the camp they have been quartered in since last summer.

A REMARKABLE CHARGE

SPENCER CONWAY IS ACCUSED OF FAST DRIVING.

The Colored Deacon and Politician Was Not on His Ash Cart, But in a Hack on Election Night—Case Laid Over.

Even the Judge was surprised while a suppressed "oh" of astonishment burst out from all the court room. The policemen's clubs rattled as they heard the startling news. Patrolman Jerry Slash, who has been remarkably prominent in police court circles of late, made a charge against the veteran colored deacon and politician, Spencer Conway, for fast driving.

Immediately there flashed across the minds of the reporters a wierd picture of a wild ride by Spencer on the front of his ash cart. Jerry demolished such ideas by explaining that he was passing along Plainfield avenue election night when Spencer Conway went by him driving a hack, the horse to which was going at full gallop. Jerry thought that there was a possibility that Conway might have had too much to drink.

Lawyer Francis J. Blatz, of the law firm of Murphy & Blatz, appeared as counsel for the colored veteran and asked that the case be laid over until next Saturday for trial. Judge DeMeza listened and thought well of the proposition. The prisoner entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of fast and reckless driving.

A THANKSGIVING SOCIABLE

Decorations Were Suitable to the Season of the Year.

Another of those unique sociables given at intervals at the Congregational church was held Friday, and it was called a Thanksgiving sociable. The name was not so odd, but the decorations and the refreshments furnished were the interesting features.

The sociable was held in the Sunday-school room which was decorated in a real old-fashioned way. Pumpkins, peppers, apples, corn, and other autumn fruits and vegetables were placed about the room and bunches of autumn flowers stood on tables, making a homelike appearance. At first the only light was that given by Jack-o-lanterns hung from the ceiling. The gas was turned down very low until Rev. C. L. Goodrich started to read a Thanksgiving story by Hezekiah Butterworth, entitled "The Courting Stick."

The refreshments consisted of pumpkin pies, crullers and coffee, which were served by the young men. The sociable was under the auspices of the Women's Association, the ladies being immediately concerned being Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux and Mrs. E. Messersmith. The fruit and vegetables left, after the sociable was over, were distributed to the poor.

An Illustrated Lecture.

An illustrated lecture entitled "With the Workers in France," will be delivered by Mrs. Mitchell Tyng, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Saturday evening. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the McAll Auxiliary and will tell of the work of that organization.

DEATH OF CARL L. WALZ

WELL-KNOWN AND POPULAR AS TENNIS AND GOLF PLAYER.

The home of Mr and Mrs. Ernest L. Walz, of 302 LaGrande avenue, was saddened Thursday by the death of their son, Carl L. Walz, a young man just past his majority. Young Mr. Walz had been ill since the middle of last month, but his ultimate recovery was fully expected until a few days ago when he suffered a relapse, and the end came Thursday night.

Walz graduated from Leal's School in 1896 and in the fall of that year entered Yale. But his health being so poor he was forced to leave, although he hoped to return later and complete his course. While at Yale Walz entered the intercollegiate tennis championship and made a good showing.

Two years ago Walz played for the State championship at Orange and came out with high honors.

When the Hillside Tennis Club introduced golf, Walz was one of the foremost players, and his enthusiasm led him to play in all weather and was the cause of his illness.

He was out with three friends on the afternoon of October 14th playing golf. It was raining hard that day and Walz took a severe cold which eventually developed into malarial fever and later into typhoid. He was getting along nicely until a few weeks ago, when he suffered a relapse. Although not an invalid, Walz has never been real strong, and it is to this that his long illness and final death can be attributed.

Walz was an ardent lover of all outdoor sports, and was recognized all over the State as an authority on tennis and golf. He was one of the first members of the Hillside Tennis Club, and for several years held one of the championship cups. The first championship cup ever put up was won by him.

Walz was a member of the Crescent Avenue church which he attended regularly, and also belonged to the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. He was numbered among the members of the Bachelors' Club, the members of which remembered him with flowers during his illness. He was also a wheelman, and was popular with the young people of both sexes. His loss will be keenly felt.

DANCE TO BUY UNIFORMS.

Pleasurable and Profitable Time Given by Warren Engine Company.

Considering the disagreeable night, a goodly number of people attended the dance given Thursday in Saengerbund Hall under the auspices of the members of Warren Engine Company. Eugene O'Reilly and his orchestra furnished the music, which was excellent, and while it was raining without the dancers were having a merry time within. The dance was arranged for the purpose of securing money to purchase new uniforms for the firemen, and a great many tickets were sold for the event.

Boroughites have felt a kindly interest in the project and are disposed to assist their fire laddies. The amount received last evening was appreciated by the members and will assist materially in the object for which it was secured. The committee having charge of the affair consisted of David C. Allen, chairman; David Bodine, George H. Fairchild, S. B. Joseph, J. J. Stahl. In the near future another opportunity will be given the people to give to this object.

During the evening there was a cake walk and Miss Mamie DeMise won the cake. The $5 gold piece given as a prize to the one holding the ticket with the lucky number was won by Miss Annie Hart.

THOSE TO BE CHOSEN AT CITY ELECTION.

Mayor, Judge and Collector to be Elected.

ALSO FOUR COUNCILMEN.

EACH WARD WILL SELECT A NEW COUNCILMAN.

On the Result Will Depend the Political Complexion of the New Council—Terms of Three Republicans and Four Citizens Do Not Expire—Term of Dr. Jenkins, Board of Education, Expires.

While the rest of New Jersey has returned to its usual interests, Plainfield is still deeply interested in the subject of politics. The State election is over, but now the eyes of the local voters are turned toward the municipal election which will take place Tuesday, December 6th.

The city election this year will be of more than the usual importance. The highest executive officer of the city, the Mayor, will be elected. The three-year term of Mayor Charles J. Fisk will expire on the first day of January, 1899, and his successor will be chosen at the coming election.

The term of City Judge DeMeza will also expire with the new year, and the citizens will have a chance to select another one. Elias B. Bird was the last city tax collector elected. He resigned last summer to accept the appointment as postmaster. James A. Martin was chosen by the Common Council to fill Mr. Bird's unexpired term. That will expire with this year and a new Collector will be voted for.

All these candidates will be voted upon in the city at-large, and the candidates for them will be chosen at the city conventions of the political parties, or by petition. Then there are four ward Councilmen whose terms expire this year, and the successors to whom will be elected in their respective wards.

In the First ward, C J Newman will be the retiring Councilman. William S. Runyon, of the Second ward has completed his two years' of service. J. T. Baker, president of the Common Council, is the retiring Councilman from the Third ward. Elmore D. Moffett, who was elected last year to fill the remaining year of Isaac Randolph's unexpired term, leaves the Council as the representative of the Fourth ward.

Of the city officials whose terms expire this year and whose successors are to be elected at the coming municipal election all are Republicans, and were elected to office on a straight ticket, except one, Elmore D. Moffett is one of the leading Democrats in the city and was elected last year on the Citizens' ticket.

Of the Councilmen now remaining in the Council whose term of office does not expire until the year following, there are three regular Republicans, Messrs. Barrows, Buckle and Andrews. The other four were elected to the Council on the Citizens' ticket last year. They are Messrs. Heifield, VanHerwerden, Liefke and Homan. The result of the election in the wards will therefore determine the political complexion of the next Council.

There will be one new member of the Board of Education to be chosen by the voters of the city-at-large. The term of Dr. O. L. Jenkins expires this year. The term of office is five years.

NOT AS BAD AS REPORTED.

The Alleged Disappearance of Custer Gast Was Not so.

The recently published reports concerning Mrs. Wedemeyer, formerly of the borough, but now of Newark, are in a great measure untrue, for she has not been duped, neither has her love affair been disturbed. Her intended husband, Augustus Gast, who was reported as missing, is now in Newark conducting a saloon which he purchased for Mrs. Wedemeyer, and the two expect to be married at an early date. Mr. Gast left Plainfield a short time ago for Newark, for the purpose of buying a saloon. He was unable to secure the place he was after, and while away he visited New York and Philadelphia. He had in his possession $350 given to him by Mrs. Wedemeyer, and not $1 500 as stated previously. He returned a few days later and saw Mrs. Wedemeyer. He then returned to Newark and purchased a saloon, which is now being conducted by him for Mrs. Wedemeyer. In a short time an opening will be given, and the couple will be married, after which there will be a wedding reception. Several Plainfielders will be invited to the wedding, which will be a large affair. This statement of facts is made in justice to Mrs Wedemeyer and Mr. Gast.

Annual Meeting of Primary Union.

Next Thursday afternoon and evening the annual meeting of the Plainfield Primary Teachers' Union will be held in the First Baptist church. Miss Harlow, of John Wanamaker's Sunday-school in Philadelphia and will teach the lesson for next Sunday. In the evening she will give an address. All are invited to attend.

RAINY OPENING OF THE HUNTING SEASON.

Jersey Alive With Enthusiastic Sportsmen After Game.

RABBITS ARE PLENTIFUL.

GAME PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION TO OPPOSE METROPOLITAN GUNNERS

Best Hunting Grounds of the State Posted to Keep Out Strangers—Rain Could Not Keep all of the Hunters Home—No Shooting is Allowed in the City Limits—Many Out Friday

The weather man was not kind to the hunters of New Jersey, Thursday, the open season for hare, rabbit, quail and squirrels began and the rain simply came down in torrents. Some of the particularly enthusiastic gunners ventured out despite the rain and the roar of the shot gun was heard all over the land. If poor Bunny, and his friends, the squirrels and quail, had any idea that the pour-down might postpone their troubles until another day, they were grievously disappointed.

Plainfield was not largely represented among the hunters who went forth after the elusive "cotton-tail" There is usually a host of sportsmen who march out of this city early in the morning when the season opens. There were a few turned out Thursday. At an early hour, they found that the rain was not falling heavily and the shooting was fairly good. But the rain increased in force as the morning grew and the wet and bedraggled huntsmen waded through the Jersey mud while their faithful dogs trailed along behind mournfully vowing that such a day was never seen. The hunters returned each with a tale of the quantities that they saw but with few victims.

The gunners watched the clouds with anxious eyes all the morning but there wasn't the slightest suggestion of a cessation of the rain. Reports from this section made before the season opened are to the effect that the "cotton-tail" is numerous.

The absence of any severe floods last spring or any other natural cause to work havoc among the young rabbits has made them numerous. In the Passaic valley and farming lands in the Watchung mountains, always a favorite run for the little rodents, they are unusually prolific and residents of that section have reported seeing many during the summer and fall.

In the past many of the local hunters spent most of the day in the fields just inside the city limits. The rabbits abounded there and the boom of the guns could be heard all over the city. For the past few years, however, the passage of an ordinance prohibiting the shooting of firearms in the city limits has kept them away and poor bunny, who made his home in Plainfield, is nearly free from the troubles that annually come to his race at this season of the year. The police have been instructed to arrest any one hunting in the city limits. Last year there were several arrests. So far this year, however, none have been reported.

The Game and Fish Protective and Propositive Association of Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties has prepared for an active season. One of its chief objects will be to protect the game on the property of its members from the hosts of invading gunners that come out from New York and vicinity. All through Washington and Passaic valleys, one of the best shooting grounds in the State, the lands are posted with notices warning trespassers and hunters off them. The game wardens will be particularly watchful for all violaters of the law that allows property owners to protect their own game. Other parts of the three counties have been posted in a similar manner and the out-of-town hunter will fill countless notices starring him in the face if he wanders through this section. The members and their friends, however, will thus be able to enjoy good shooting.

O'KEEFE WAS FINED $3.

City Judge Decides That the Young Man Was Guilty.

James O'Keefe was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza Saturday for trial on the charge of being drunk and disorderly at Liberty and West Third streets. In the evidence, it came out that his mother was merely trying to take him home and did not attack Patrolman Cash. O'Keefe was fined $3. William Newcorn appeared for him.

Sentence was suspended on the three colored people, Mrs. Clara White, William Green and William Holmes, who were accused of having started the fracas by making insulting remarks about O'Keefe.

Received $1,000 Insurance.

Mrs. Marshall, widow of E. E. Marshall, the wall paper man, who died suddenly at Niagara Falls this fall, has just received her check for $1 000 insurance from Columbia Lodge, A.O. U. W. The other $1,000 goes to Mr. Marshall's father in St. Louis.

CHEERFUL VIEW OF SPAIN

GARRET P. SERVISS CALLS IT THE LAND OF SUNSHINE.

A Description of its Picturesque Scenery Given—What Would Have Happened if France Had Lost a Battle Once

It was a beautiful country that Garret P. Serviss, the lecturer, led his hearers through Thursday at the Casino—picturesque Spain. He called it the land of sunshine, of ruins, of stately palaces and famous cathedrals, a land rich in romance and legend. Above all it is a land of sunshine, for an estimate carefully taken shows that in one year Spain is blessed with 3 000 hours of sunshine against Italy's 2,300; Germany's 1,700, and England's 1,400.

As so much interest has been taken in Spain and everything that pertains to it lately, the audience last night was a good-sized one. The lecture was illustrated with stereopticon views.

Mr. Serviss said that Spain cut no important figure in history until after the fall of Rome, and the lecturer last night confined himself to facts and incidents that occurred after the expulsion of the Moors from Spain. These people conquered Spain and until 1492 were in possession of the land. They poured across the Straits of Gibraltar and rushed in a mighty horde all over Spain, from east and west, climbed the snowy peaks of the Pyrenees, and would have over run France, too, had it not been for a defeat they received at the hand of the French kings.

Mr. Serviss drew a startling picture of what would have been the result of this contemplated victory, and remarked that had the Moors conquered France, they might have continued their work until all of the northern Europe was at their feet. And now instead of the Christian Bible, the Koran would be used in our churches, and instead of praying to God, the prevailing religion would be Mohammedanism.

In the fifteenth century the Christians, who had been driven to the fastnesses in the Asturia range of mountains, grew bold, and organizing for battle, swooped down on the Moorish cities and in a few years had driven the invaders from the land, so that in 1492 Ferdinand and Isabella mounted the Spanish throne.

Mr. Serviss led his listeners from cities in the northern part of the kingdom to the far south. He stopped some time in Ma rid, and took the audience, by aid of pictures, to witness a Spanish bull fight. The fight was well described, and the scenes, from the time the bull entered the arena until he was killed, were realistic.

FUNERAL OF DEACON HAYNES.

The funeral services of Charles A. Haynes were held at his late home on First place Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D. A sextette composed of Mrs. W. L. Lowry, Miss Ada Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Emma V. Fish, William A. Simpson and Thomas A. Cuming sang three favorite hymns during the service.

The interment was Friday in Greenwood. Among the floral offerings was a pillow of pink and white roses and chrysanthemums from the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member.

The Health of the Hair is indicated by its condition. When the natural secretions decrease; when the hair becomes dry, splits at the ends and comes out in combing; when the glossy disappears and the hair becomes gray or faded, the ill health of the hair is indicated. The success of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is due to the fact that it restores the hair-producing organs to their natural vigor. It encourages and promotes the secretions of the hair follicles and thus gray or faded hair regains its original color, new growth begins, and lost lustre is restored.

"I have used

Ayer's Hair Vigor

for fifteen years. It causes the hair to keep its natural color and is a positive cure for baldness."—T. B. WEYANT, Weyant, Pa.

POLITICAL PLUMS FOR VOORHEES TO DROP.

Patronage That Next Governor Will Distribute.

MANY IMPORTANT PLACES.

A Number of Prosecutors and Judges Will be Appointed by Mr. Voorhees, Among Them a Successor to Judge Bartine in Somerset County—High Salaries and Great Power Go With Many of the Selections

The Governor elect Voorhees will have a large number of offices to fill, but not as many as were filled by Governor Griggs in his term of but little over two years.

The appointments to be made by the next Governor will be found below:

In 1901 the term of Chancellor McGill will expire. The Chancellor will then have completed two terms of seven years each as the head of the Court of Chancery. In the same year the fifth term of Supreme Court Justice Depue will expire, and in the year previous, 1900, Justice Lippincott will have finished his first term on the Supreme Court bench. Chancellor McGill is a Democrat, as is also Justice Lippincott. Justice Depue is a Republican. None of the terms of the appointees (so called "lay") Judges of the Court of Errors will expire during the term of the next Governor.

The terms of Circuit Court Judges Child and Miller, both Democrats, will expire in 1900. The names of the outgoing County Judges and Prosecutors, together with the year of their retirements and their politics are as follows:

In 1899: Judges—Joseph H. Garkill, Rep., Burlington; Jas. R. Hoagland, Dem., Cumberland

In 1900: Judges—Robert S. Woodruff, Dem., Mercer; J. Clarence Conover, Dem., Monmouth; John D. Barrine, Dem., Somerset.

In 1901: Judges—Henry S. Douglass, Cape May; H. Burdett Herr, Hunterdon; Woodbridge Strong, Middlesex; Clement H. Sinnickson, Salem; all Republicans.

Prosecutors—Lewis Starr, Gloucester; Walter F. Hayhurst, Hunterdon; John H. Voorhees, Middlesex; Eugene Emley, Passaic; George A. Angle, Warren, all Republicans.

Besides the above judicial appointments the next Governor will have the naming in 1901 of successors to the following named District Court Judges: Jelme, Camden; Wheaton, Elizabeth; Bedle, Jersey City; Guild and McCarter, Newark; Bellstab, Trenton, and Lewis, Paterson. Judges Bedle and Guild are Democrats, appointed by Governor Griggs, and all the others are Republicans.

The term of Chancery Clerk Lewis A Thompson will expire in 1901, as will also the terms of State School Superintendent Charles J. Baxter and State Road Commissioner H. I. Budd. In 1899; Bank and Insurance Commissioner Wm. Bettle, and State Prison Inspector E. J. Anderson, in 1900, and State Factory Inspector John Ward, in 1901; all of these are Republicans.

The next Governor will also have the appointment, in 1899, of successors of the six members of the Board of Prison Inspectors and of the four members of the Riparian Commission These boards are both bi partisan, as is the State Board of Taxation. Of the members of the latter board, the terms of Commissioners Black (Dem.) and Lentz (Rep) will expire in 1901 All of the members of the State Board of Assessors will retire within the next three years; Messrs. Green and Meeker (Dems) in 1900, and Messrs. Spencer and Gibbs in 1901. In the latter year the terms of the four members of the State Board of Arbitration will also expire.

Among the less lucrative offices that will become vacant are: All sixteen of the places on the State Board of Education, five of the eight places on the board of managers of the State Hospital for the Insane at Morristown, and two on the Trenton Asylum Board, six Commissioners of Pilotage, the four places on the Fish and Game Commission and two members of the State Board of Health.

There are also minor places, from a political standpoint, such as on the State Board of Medical Examiners, State Board of Pharmacy and State Board of Dentistry.

Commissioners of Appeal to Meet.

Tuesday, November 23d, the Commissioners of Appeal will meet and consider the objections of dissatisfied property owners who think that their assessments are too high. It is said that an unusually large number of owners will appear before the Commissioners this year.

VAIL CLEARS HIMSELF.

PROVES THAT HE DID NOT STEAL MILK BOTTLES.

It is Alleged That a Norwegian, Employed by Vail, Was the Guilty One, and He Has Left This Section.

Compton Vail, a South Plainfield milkman, who was arrested a couple of weeks ago on a charge of stealing milk bottles from a number of milkmen in town, had a hearing Thursday afternoon before Justice Wm. Newcorn. Through the efforts of his lawyer, Wm. G. DeMeza, who brought evidence enough in court to clear Vail, the prisoner was declared innocent and discharged.

Vail was first arraigned before the City Court, but when the day for trial came, the City Judge decided not to entertain the complaint and so the case was taken to a justice of the peace.

The alleged theft occurred two weeks ago. Witnesses were sworn who declared that they saw Vail go up to Lewis G. Timpson's house, on East Sixth street, and to Mrs. Sterling's, next door, and take away several milk bottles belonging to other milkmen. The complaining witnesses in the case were Milkmen Darty, Highland, Gavin and Mellick.

Vail claimed that his hired man, a Norwegian, who went by the name of "Eick" was the guilty one. He said that Eick took the bottles unknown to him and sold them. Eick left town the night that Vail was first arrested and has not been seen since.

FIRE IN THE CITY HOTEL.

HEROIC EFFORTS OF JAMES LAUGHLIN PREVENTED ITS SPREADING.

A Lamp Left in the Hall was All Afire When He Discovered It Early Friday Morning—His Prompt Action.

James Laughlin, a barkeeper in the City Hotel, proved himself a hero early Friday morning by preventing a serious fire in the City Hotel, which, had it got under headway, might have endangered the lives of the guests in that hostelry.

Laughlin went up to third floor at 6 o'clock to get the key to the barroom, and as he reached the hallway he was startled to see the lamp, left there during the night, afire on the inside, the flames leaping up in a threatening manner.

He grabbed the lamp to throw it out of the window, but before he could accomplish this it exploded. The oil spread over the floor and commenced to blaze fiercely. Laughlin had on a white jacket, and hastily divesting himself of this garment he covered the flames with it, meanwhile calling for help. The guests were not long in responding and he was aided by others in extinguishing the fire.

Laughlin was slightly burned and inhaled considerable smoke. Had it not been for his timely discovery and heroic efforts a serious fire would probably have occurred.

The damage was $50, covered by insurance.

SHOE DEALERS ORGANIZE.

Dealers Get Together to Determine Trade Affairs.

An organization of the local shoe dealers was effected November 9th in the rooms of the Board of Trade. The object of the association is somewhat similar to the Grocers' Protective Association, with some changes to suit the members. All of the dealers were present last evening but Flynn Bros. and A. Willett & Son., but they have signified their willingness to join the association. For good reasons they could not be present at the first meeting.

Those present include Seeley Edsall, J. H. Doane, J. J. Kenney, H. M. Sherwin, M. Abrams, B. R. Force, William Schloss and Morris VanArdale. The following officers were elected: President, Seeley Edsall; secretary and treasurer, Morris VanArsdale. The president appointed J. J. Kenney, Wm. Schloss and H. M. Sherwin a committee to draft a set of resolutions to be presented at the next meeting to be held next week. The resolutions will embody specifically the objects of the association.

During the evening the question of trading stamps and prizes was discussed, but nothing definite was decided in the matter. The association will probably meet quarterly after the organization is thoroughly completed and will from time to time discuss such things as will be of interest to the local trade.

Inspected a Railway Post.

Department Commander William C. Smith, of the G. A. R., together with a delegation from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, went to Rahway last Friday, and inspected the post at that place. The Commander will go to Somerville the evening of Thursday, November 17th.

Put Over the Term.

The case on contract of Woolston & Buckle against Ambrose Male, which was to have come up this term in the Court of Common Pleas, is off this term by consent of counsel.

BATTLED WITH HOBOES IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Fanwood Citizens Captured Them at Graceland Station.

DEFIED W. R. STANBERY.

WHEN HE STOPPED THEM THEY PREPARED TO SHOOT.

Man in United States Army Uniform Promised to Convert Mr. Stanbery Into a Sieve—Mr. Stanbery Reinforced—Hoboes Prepared for Action—The Fanwoodites Retreat—Hoboes Caught.

Wm. R. Stanbery of Fanwood, has again distinguished himself in the eyes of his fellow-townsmen. This time it was chicken thieves that he sought, but when the latter brought their artillery to bear, he beat a retreat and called on a minion of the law to capture them, all of which was accomplished in due time.

At noon Nov. 9th Mr. Stanbery was returning home from Plainfield on his wheel. As he sped along between Scotch Plains and Fanwood his meditations on the result of the election were suddenly interrupted by the hail of Mr. Wright, a resident of that neighborhood, who told the passing Fanwoodite that a number of strange men in the barn of Fred Kelly, near by. Just at that moment three men appeared out of the barn door. One wore the uniform of the United States Army.

As the strangers sighted Stanbery, they growled forth some unseemly remark, and slinging a bag over their shoulders started down Forest avenue. The olfactory organs of Mr. Stanbery scented trouble from afar off, and, mounting his wheel, he followed them. He slipped around Park avenue and met them as they entered Midway avenue, the name now applied to the old railway cut.

"What have you in that bag," remarked Mr. Stanbery as he confronted the strangers.

"None of your —— business," replied the soldier, where upon he promptly drew a revolver and pointing it in the direction of Mr. Stanbery, made some remark about converting him into a sieve. Declining the challenge to single combat, Mr. Stanbery started to retreat when he was reinforced by Fred K. Clark and LeRoy Day who came running across the fields.

Marshalling his uniformed army behind him, the servant of Uncle Sam prepared to do battle. He informed Mr. Clark that they were prepared to fight for their liberty and warned him away unless he and Mr. Stanbery both were anxious to appear as sieves. Then the men departed.

Now a hour before this had happened, Mr. Fraser, of Plainfield, had driven past the farm of Mr. Clark and seen three men chasing chickens and shooting them. He had told Mr. Clark who had hastened to the scene of action just in time to come to Mr. Stanbery's aid.

After the victory of the strangers, the defeated detachment of Fanwoodites hurried to Scotch Plains for aid and artillery. Constables Walpole and Traynor and several other good citizens turned out and the posse went in pursuit of the strangers.

At the old Graceland station, they found the strangers awaiting a coal train to carry them to parts unknown. Each had a dead fowl under his arm. The strangers sprang up at the approach of the posse and warned them to keep away unless they were all prepared to act as targets. The representative of the army flourished his revolver and vowed to shoot the first man who approached.

The representatives of law and order held a short consultation and then closed in on the strangers. The soldier singled out Mr. Clark and prepared to follow out his threat. Mr. Clark closed in at once and had the satisfaction of partially disfiguring the stranger's face with a blow from his fist. Seeing the defeat of their leader and artillery, the other two surrendered after a short struggle and were escorted back to Scotch Plains.

At Scotch Plains, the three men were arrigned before Justice Clark on the charge of killing and stealing Mr. Clark's chickens. The one in the uniform gave his name as Joe Bowers and the other two as Joe Cummings and George Brooks. They lived out of the State, they said. Judge Clark committed them to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The Pivotal Link.

A public hearing will be held November 22d before the borough council of Bound Brook for the right of way from the Middlesex county line through East Main street in Bound Brook, by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company. This link is necessary to complete the line to New Brunswick as originally proposed.

Thompson Store to Be Re-built.

Estimates are being secured by A. D. Thompson for the rebuilding of a structure on North avenue to take the place of the one destroyed by fire a short time ago.

FIREBUG DOES HIS WORK

BARN SET ON FIRE IN THE BOROUGH EARLY THIS MORNING.

Flames Were Discovered by Marshal Campbell, Who Sent in an Alarm—Fire Department Did Good Work.

At 1 o'clock Thursday morning an alarm of fire was sent in from Box 162, corner of Linden avenue and Grove street, by Marshal William Campbel. The fire was in a barn on Grove street near Greenbrook road, owned by Mrs. Rick, of Vine street, and was undoubtedly of incendiary origin. Only a short time before the marshal passed the place and everything was all right. He had not gone far when a bright light appeared and illuminated the sky for a considerable distance. The officer hastened to the fire box and sent the alarm in.

Considering the hour, the department responed quickly and succeeded in saving the greater portion of the barn. In the barn there was a team of horses and a quantity of hay, besides some wagons owned by Chris Luteck, a teamster. Everything was saved, and only the top of the building was burned off. The firemen did good work in protecting the adjoining property which was threatened with destruction.

There was every indication that the barn was set on fire, for Mr. Lubeck left everything all right when he put his horses in for the night, and nothing suspicious was noticed when the officer passed the place only a short time before the fire broke out.

HOOKED BY A COW.

A Washingtonville Boy Seriously Hurt Saturday Morning.

George Smith, eleven years old, a son of a Washingtonville farmer, was seriously hurt Saturday by being hooked by a vicious cow that he was leading to pasture. The boy started to take the cow to a field some distance from the barn at 8 o'clock, and nothing further was seen of him till after 11 o'clock, when Mrs. George Stewart, who is a neighbor of the Smiths, found the boy lying in the yard surrounding her house, with two big gashes in his body—one in the head and the other in the breast. His face was covered with blood and he was unconscious. Mrs. Stewart secured help and carried the injured boy into her house. Dr. Long, of this city, was called. When the boy regained consciousness he said that just as he was about to tie the cow the animal became unruly and hooked him twice. He started for home, but was unable to go further than the spot where he was found. It is feared that besides the wounds, he has sustained internal injuries.

BURGLARS IN THE WEST END.

Burglars got into Fred Endress' meat market on Muhlenberg place Friday night and got away with five fine hams, a gold watch belonging to Miss Carty, the cashier, and about $2 in change from the cash drawer.

The thieves selected a bold plan to get into the shop. When Mr. Endress reached his shop this morning he found the glass in the front door of the shop broken and inside the shop lay a large stone as large as a man's fist which had been thrown through the door, breaking out enough glass to permit a man's body to pass easily through.

The change had been left in the drawer over night for the early morning business, and Miss Carty left her watch there over night. It is strange that no one heard the noise made by the breaking glass, but the matter has been reported to the police and they are making an investigation.

FACILITATED COUNTING.

Use of the Murray Tally Sheets a Success in Some Districts.

Although it was not used through all the election districts, the Roger F. Murray tally sheets were given a good trial election day and its usefulness demonstrated. It was used in the First and Third wards and the third district of the Fourth ward. In the first district of the First ward, the election officers did not quite understand the new sheets and had considerable trouble with them. Even then, however, it was only 1 o'clock when they had completed the third count while it is usually 3 o'clock in the morning before their work is over.

The Third ward, where the count usually lasts until long after midnight, the count was all completed at 9:30 o'clock. The Third district of the Fourth ward was also completed early before the other districts of that ward were half through their labors.

Corie to Resume Business.

C. V. D. Corie, the liveryman, has leased the City Hotel stables and sheds, and will open up a livery stable in connection with the hotel. Mr. Corie will repair the stables and rebuild and enlarge the sheds. The latter will fill a long-felt want, as there are no good sheds in town except those in connection with Blimm's Hotel.

A CORPORATION CAN BUY ITS OWN STOCK.

Important Decision Handed Down by Supreme Court.

MURPHY & BLATZ'S VICTORY

THEY ENFORCED THE CLAIM OF WALTER L. CHAPMAN.

The Plaintiff Secured a Position by Buying $800 Worth of Stock, But When He Was Discharged Declined to Purchase the Stock as Agreed Upon—Supreme Court Declares They Can do so.

The Supreme Court of this State has just rendered a decision in an important case which means a great deal to corporate bodies and their respective. The court has decided that a corporation has a right to purchase shares of its own stock for legitimate purposes.

The decision was rendered in answer to a demurrer filed by Beeson, Stevens & Lewis, a firm of Hoboken lawyers, who represents the Iron Clad Rheostat Company, a Westfield concern. Murphy & Blatz took issue on the demurrer, and the matter was argued before the Supreme Court last summer.

Walter L. Chapman is the plaintiff in the case. He is now operating a bicycle repair shop at Somerville, but two years ago, when the Iron Clad Rheostat Company was incorporated, George Colgate, the president of the company, and a warm friend of Chapman's, induced him to enter the employ of the company. The terms under which he went to work were that he was to receive a stated salary, but must purchase 10 shares of the stock. This stock, however, was to be repurchased by the company at its par value when Chapman was discharged or left their employ.

Soon after this another set of men succeeded Mr. Colgate and others. The new president had no use for Chapman in the office, where he was employed, and sent him out in the shop to work. Chapman refused to go, and resigned his position Through Murphy & Blatz he demanded that the corporation purchase his $800 worth of stock as they had agreed to do. Acting upon the advice of their counsel they refused to do so, so Chapman brought suit in the Supreme Court for $1,000, the extra $200 being for damages.

Murphy & Blatz filed their declaration, and then the defendants' lawyers filed a demurrer to which the plaintiff took issue. The defendants claimed that the contract entered into by their successors was beyond their power to perform. First, because a corporation cannot deal in or agree to purchase its own stock; second, that the corporation had no authority to make an agreement to enter into any such contract as they had made with Chapman.

The argument was made at the June term of court before Justices Ludlow, Collins and Dixon by Clarence L. Murphy for the plaintiff. As there were no decisions on record in such cases it made new law, and the Court took until November 9th to hand down their decision which is in favor of the plaintiff that a corporation has a right to purchase of its own stock when it is to be used for legitimate purposes.

A NOON-DAY WEDDING.

Marriage of Miss Martha E. Cook and Leonard M. Leach.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D, officiated at a wedding Thursday and united in wedlock Leonard Merryfield Leach, of Dunellen, to Miss Martha R. Cook, of North avenue, daughter of Mrs. A. L. Cook. The ceremony took place at the bride's home, in the presence of the members of the immediate families of the two.

The bride wore a handsome traveling dress of cadet blue cloth trimmed with white satin, and a hat to match. She carried white roses and was attended by Miss Anna Tempiln as flower girl, and Harold Thompson Leach, the groom's brother, as page.

The couple left for New York on a wedding trip and when they return will take up their residence in Dunellen. The groom is an electrician, and is in business in Bound Brook.

HORSE CAUSES TROUBLE.

MR. HETFIELD SAYS TEN EYCK DROVE IT TOO HARD.

TenEyck Borrowed Animal to Move Some Household Goods—Went to Irvington and Returned During the Evening.

Oscar TenEyck borrowed a horse belonging to Hetfield & Gallop Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Mr. Hetfield says he only borrowed it for an hour. Twelve hours later Mr. Hetfield saw the horse hitched to a broken truck on East Front street near Casper's Hotel. The driver, he says, was drunk. Last Monday, the driver was held accountable in the City Court.

This morning O car TenEyck was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. William G. DeMeza appeared as his counsel and entered a plea of not guilty. His side of the affair was not heard. Mr. Hetfield, however, related to the court what the trouble was.

According to Mr. Hetfield's story, TenEyck came to him early Saturday morning and asked the loan of a horse for an hour as he wanted to move his goods and chattels. The colored man had been in the employ of the firm. Mr. Hetfield told him that he might have the horse and there would be no charge. At 9 o'clock he came after the horse and put it to one of Carey's trucks. Then, Mr. Hetfield says, he drove clear over to Irvington after some household goods. He returned during the evening and the truck broke down on East Front street blocking the trolley tracks. It was necessary to unhitch the horse and lead him home and run the truck into a neighboring alley.

According to the story of Mr. Hetfield, TenEyck was drunk while the horse was dripping with sweat as if he had been driven very hard. Mr. Hetfield told the circumstances to Patrolman Totten who arrested TenEyck and locked him up in the city jail for the night.

As the witnesses for the complainant were not present, the Judge set the case down for trial Saturday morning.

FUNERAL OF C. F. WALZ.

Six of His Young Companions Acted as Pall Bearers.

The funeral of Charles Francis Walz was held Sunday afternoon at the home of his parents on Leland Avenue. The attendance was large, many of his young friends being present. Rev. Dr. Richards officiated and made the remarks, and Rev. G. Kennedy Newall offered the prayer.

The choir from the Crescent Avenue church rendered two hymns effectively, "O Mother Dear, Jerusalem," and "For All Thy Saints." The pall bearers were six young men, all of whom were intimately acquainted with the deceased. They were Morris Dumont, Carroll L. Benson, Van B. Scoupler, Henry Leal Edward Kline and Stanley Hunter. Interment was in Hillside.

Former Plainfielder to be Married.

An item, recently published in the Elizabeth Journal, announced the coming marriage of George Taylor, of Cranford, to Miss Mabel Voorhees, daughter of John Voorhees, of Morris avenue, Elizabeth, to take place November 29th. Mr. Taylor formerly resided on East Second street, this city, and has a large circle of friends here.

SUSPECT TO NEWARK.

NEWARK DETECTIVES TOOK FROELICH TO HEADQUARTERS SATURDAY.

Police Are Confident That the Young Man Knows More About the Death of His Friend Than He Has Already Told.

The police of both Plainfield and Newark are pretty confident by this time that Charles Froelich knows more about the death of James J. Kelley than he cares to tell. They do not say that Froelich is guilty of any great crime, but the fact that his story does not correspond with the facts ascertained from other sources, certainly gives the appearance that he is concealing something.

The circumstances of Kelley's death still remain a mystery. The theory that he was shot has long since been given up, as the wound found on his head was plainly shown on examination to be caused by striking some pointed object in falling. The autopsy that discovered the Paris green in the dead man's stomach gave rise to the theory of suicide. The mystery that hangs about it and the behavior of young Froelich has aroused the suspicions of the Newark police, and they are now inclined to think that Kelley did not meet death at his own hand.

Saturday afternoon Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely, of the Plainfield force, went to Newark and held a conference with the police authorities there. Chief Grant advised that Froelich be sent for as the Plainfield city jail was a poor place in which to keep him. At Newark, Froelich might be confronted regarding the story he told of his happenings the night of Kelley's death.

Saturday night a member of the detective force of Newark came to this city and took charge of Froelich. Froelich was immediately taken to Newark by train and locked up there.

The remains of young Kelley were brought to Plainfield Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and taken to his home by Undertaker Cole. Yesterday afternoon, the funeral was held from the house at 2 o'clock and from St. Mary's church at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Father Smyth offi iated There was a large number of friends of the deceased present at the services. There were also many floral tributes. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

DEATH OF ISAAC COLTHAR.

One of the Borough's Oldest and Most Respected Citizens Dies of Consumption.

Isaac Colthar, of Grandview avenue, one of Somerset county's oldest and highly respected citizens, died at his home at 4 o'clock Sunday morning in the eighieth year of his age. Death was due to consumption, and Mr. Colthar had been a sufferer for a long time. He was born near Martinville, and for a great many years followed the trade of carpenter. For a number of years past he has lived a life of retirement, partially on account of his illness. He was a Christian man and always was considered upright and fair in all his dealings. He leaves two daughters and one son.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lillian M. Dundon, daughter of John M. Dundon, of Brooklyn, to Robert M. Clark, the well-known young lawyer, residing on Jackson avenue.

QUICKLY PASSED AWAY.

MRS. EDWARD VANDERWEG, OF EAST THIRD STREET, DIES SUDDENLY.

While in the performance of her duties at the home of Charles L. Peterson, of 221 Watchung avenue, Monday morning, Mrs. Vanderweg, wife of Edward Vanderweg, of 221 East Third street, died of apoplexy. For three years past Mrs. Vanderweg has been employed by Mr. Peterson to do washing at his home. She came as usual last Monday and seemed to be in her usual good health.

It was about 11 o'clock that she was standing at the wash-tub, when Miss Peterson noticed that Mrs. Vanderweg acted strangely She spoke to her, but Mrs. Vanderweg made no reply. This excited Miss Peterson's curiosity and she walked to where Mrs. Vanderweg was standing. She found that she was leaning against the window and that she was unconscious. She immediately called her father, and Mrs. Vanderweg was carried to a front room. Dr. J. B. Probasco was sent for at once, and after examination he pronounced the illness apoplexy. He then went for Dr. Murray, and when the two physicians returned Mrs. Vanderweg was dead. During her short illness she had two or three spells, but from all appearances she did not suffer much pain.

As soon as death occurred, word was sent to Patrolman Martin Vanderweg, son of Mrs. Vanderweg, and he in turn went to Roselle, where his father is employed to tell him of the sad news. The body was removed later to the home on East Third street. Mrs. Vanderweg leaves a husband, and three sons. Two of the sons, Martin and William, live in Plainfield, and John, a young er son, lives in Connecticut.

Mrs Vanderweg had lived in this city for many years, where she was respected by all who knew her. She was a good wife and a kind mother. She will be missed very much in the circle in which she moved.

MRS. N. P. ROGERS WON.

Defeated Miss VanBokerck in Close Match on Park Club Links.

There was a goodly number of golf enthusiasts on the links of the Park Golf Club last Saturday, and especially in the morning was the course crowded. There were no special features excepting the contest between Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers and Miss Maude VanBokerck for the lowest score. It will be remembered that on election day Mrs. Rogers made the lowest score for the women and thereby secured the silver loving cup offered as a prize. Miss VanBokerck was second and only one point behind with a score of 135. Mrs. Rogers made a score of 134. Mrs. VanBokerck felt sure that she could lower her score and Mrs. Rogers also felt that she could maintain a low score. The contest took place last Saturday morning, and Mrs. Rogers won. It is quite likely that another friendly contest will be arranged between these two enthusiasts. In the afternoon there was a large number of players on the links and some excellent scores were made. A tea was given in the club house during the afternoon, and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, assisted by Mrs. E. T. Douglass, presided. The tea was well attended and was a decided success. Next Saturday afternoon another tea will be given by some of the lady members.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

H. K. Samuelian Deals in Historical Lore About Constantinople.

H. K. Samuelian gave an illustrated lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday upon Constantinople and the surrounding country. The lecture was largely attended by interested persons who gave the lecturer their attention.

Mr. Samuelian is an Armenian, whose parents came from Constantinople. He speaks English quite well, and is preparing himself at one of the eastern colleges to return to his native land and preach the Gospel to his countrymen. The lecture last night dealt with the great city of Constantinople, its famous buildings and surrounding scenery.

Mr. Samuelian went over the early history of the city from legendary times to recent periods, in a very entertaining manner, so that much dry history was woven into the story without the hearers being aware of it. Views of famous ruins, mosques, temples, palaces and natural scenery were thrown on the screen, and all were explained by Mr. Samuelian in his charming manner. The lecturer, being a native Armenian, the places he accompanied his hearers to were all old to him and he was able to speak intelligently upon them.

Approaching Marriage.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mabel Coard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Coard, of East Ninth street, to Ernest Franke, of Germany, which will take place Monday, November 28th.

HOT SHOT ABOUT THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

Lawyer Angleman Scores the Present Administration.

A CITIZENS' MOVEMENT.

AN INFORMAL MEETING IN FOURTH WARD TUESDAY NIGHT.

Fifty Citizens Gather to Discuss Plans Concerning the Approaching City Election—Lawyer Angleman Made a Speech in Which He Discussed in an Acrimonious Manner the Prevailing Way of G. O. P.

A number of citizens of the Fourth ward, assisted by a few from other wards, met last Monday in a vacant house on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, owned by Mr. Pound. This meeting was an invitation affair and was called for the purpose of taking steps to present a ticket at the city election to be held Dec. 13th. There were about fifty men present. Jacob Kriney called the meeting to order and by a vote of all present he was chosen chairman.

The first business was the selection of two citizens from each district of the Fourth ward as vice presidents. Those selected are as follows: First district—Elmore D. Moffett, W. S. Angleman; Second district—Herman Weber, Arthur T. Gallup; Third district—Charles Randolph, Harry Pound

The meeting was then opened with remarks relative to the condition of affair as they now exist in the city and to the coming city election Councilman Moffett spoke and told the citizens present that his term expired this year. He was in favor of a citizens' ticket this year, the same as last year, and he believed it would win if properly managed.

The next speaker was Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman. This gentleman's remarks were straight from the shoulder. He dwelt at length on the matter of assessments for this year, as to their inequality and unfairness. He stated that the assessor appointed for the Fourth ward had only lived in the ward a few months, and knows very little about the property in that ward. He cited one instance where a property owned by a woman had been assessed double its value plus the value of the house on the lot, but he had not heard of any addition on the Crescent Rink building. He also spoke concerning the manner in which the Council had forced the people to connect with the sewer, even when they hadn't city water in their homes, thus compelling them to put in the water. He dwelt at some length on the city sewage beds, and told how it was possible for Mr. Frost to leave town and thus escape the odium of the beds. He had saddled a large expense on the people and then left town. "What does he care for you?" remarked Mr. Angleman. Mr. Angleman stated that the city is now being run by club-car men, a "ring," who have enough wealth to raise a corruption fund about election time and thus secure votes to place them into power. It is not possible for all of us to spend our winters at the Waldorf Astoria, or to live in elegant homes, remarked the speaker, but what is wanted is a Mayor and Council who will rule for the majority of the people in this city.

Mr. Angleman cited an instance regarding the city primaries one year. He said that a large number of citizens voted in one ward and were then taken to another ward where they voted again. He also cited an instance where a number of Plainfielders were coming home on the "owl" train. Their actions compelled the conductor to telegraph ahead to have a policeman at the Plainfield station to make some arrests. When the train reached this city the officer was there to make arrests, but when he saw the Plainfielders, he decided not to arrest. He was told to go about his business, which he apparently did. The Plainfielders belonged to the gang that helped to form the "ring."

Regarding improvements in the Fourth ward, Mr. Angleman stated that on Third street within a block or two there are three saloons that furnish to the city a yearly revenue of $2,100, yet Third street has never been macadamized, all of which shows, he said, how much attention the Council pays to the ward.

E. A. Laing, of the Third ward, was present, and made a few remarks. He was of the opinion that the assessments this year had been unjustly distributed. He said that there would be an increase this year of about $76,000 in assessments, but yet there is more money spent in the Third ward on the streets than in the Fourth ward. He said that the Mayor is seldom in the city, and the home of the Council is in the club-car or at the Country Club.

Councilman Liefke, who was present, was called on and spoke briefly. He said that if he wanted to know what is going on the Council he has to go outside and learn. He spoke of the committees he is now on, but that he is never consulted as to any work of the Council.

Before the meeting adjourned Mr Moffett moved that a committee of five Democrats and five Republicans be appointed to confer with similar committees from the other wards for the purpose of nominating a citizens' ticket. This motion prevailed and the following were appointed: Republicans—Jacob Kriney, Herman Weber, Henry Leifke, W. S. Angleman, Joe. Chapot; Democrats—E. D Moffett, V. L. Frazee, Michael Higgins, George O. Stevens, Ira Hurlbut.

It was then stated that the next meeting would be held subject to the call of the chair, after which the meeting adjourned.

ROBBERY IN BOROUGH.

HOESTER'S LIQUOR STORE ENTERED DURING THE NIGHT.

The wholesale liquor store of Mrs. Eugene Hoester on Somerset street was burglarized last Monday. The intruders gained an entrance easily and ransacked the place without interruption.

Last evening when Mrs. Hoester closed up the store she took all the money out of the safe and carried it upstairs, leaving the door of the safe wide open. The burglars gained entrance through a cellar window. They went up the cellar stairs and found their way into the room where the safe was. Finding the money gone, they broke open the door to a little compartment in the safe and took from it some receipts and valuable papers belonging to Mrs. Hoester. They then departed by the front door leaving it open.

This morning, the open door and the broken cellar window told of the robbery. Mrs. Hoester carefully examined the room and found the papers missing. She is unable to tell whether the burglars helped themselves to the liquor and cigars until a complete accounting is made of the stock. If they did make themselves at home, they were careful not to disturbe anything that remained.

INSPECTING G. A. R. POSTS.

Commander Smith Visited Lincoln Post in Newark.

William C. Smith, Department Commander of the G. A. R., made an inspection of Lincoln Post, Newark, Monday. He was accompanied by I. H. McVoy, William Day, Edward C. Morse, V. W. Nash and William B. Mattox.

The post made a fine appearance, and were highly complimented by the commander.

An entertainment by professional minstrels was provided, and there were recitations and music. A banquet was served at 10 o'clock to which all did justice, and at 12 o'clock the Plainfield delegation reached home. Tonight Commander Smith and delegation, accompanied by their wives, will visit the post at Bayonne.

Boys' Club First Entertainment.

The first entertainment of the season at the Boys' Club will be held Friday night. There will be vocal and instrumental music and other features.

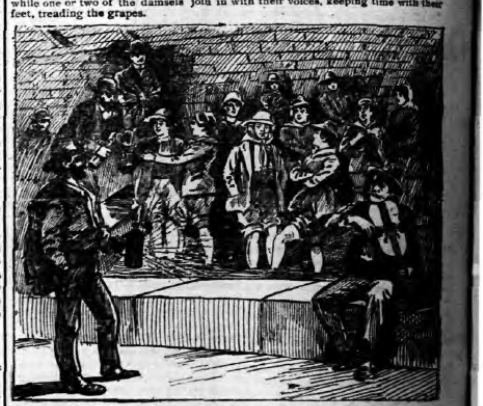
Lovely Women in the Lagar

at the Quinto Celleiros, Portugal.

Girls treading Grapes, to music, wearing short jackets and short linen pants, but a great variety of headgear. A violinist, seated on the edge of the vat, fiddles while one or two of the damsels join in with their voices, keeping time with their feet, treading the grapes.



Rubber Rollers are Used for Crushing the Grapes to Make Speer's Port, Burgundy, Claret and Other Wines,

Which, as is well known, rival the world in excellence, for invalids and aged persons, and are made from the Oporto grape grown on vines imported from Portugal forty years ago. The soil of northern New Jersey, containing iron, is just suited for them. Mr. Speer, however, uses the improved way of mashing the grapes. He employs large rollers of rubber run by an engine which crush grapes at the rate of a barrel a minute. Speer's Wines, especially the Port and Burgundy now in market, are of very old vintage, and have no superior. Physicians far and near prescribe them for weakly females and aged persons. They are blood-making, adding iron to the system, and tend to prolong life. Extensively used at parties, weddings and general family use. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS AND GROCERS WHO DEAL IN WINES.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—the saving of the world help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt liospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due more largely to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think the specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

WHAT'S TO BE DONE ON THE HOLIDAY.

Local Attractions For Thanksgiving Day.

MORNING CHURCH SERVICE.

FOOTBALL GAME AT MARTINE FIELD IN THE MORNING.

Golf Will Have Its Adherents on the Local Links—Matinee in the Afternoon at Music Hall—Star Course Entertainment at Y. M. C. A. Hall—What Will Take Place Tonight.

The veteran turkey gobbler eyed his noble offspring as the latter strutted about the barnyard before the admiring glances of the half-dozen turkey hens who gathered by the new chicken house Johnny had labored on so patiently most of the fall.

"He does not know of the evil in this world," sighed the older bird. "He does not realize what horrid customs abound among those creatures known as men. Thanksgiving, indeed! Here I have mourned year after year the loss of my beloved children which have gone to satisfy the voracious appetite of those beings. And they call it Thanksgiving when we have to weep and sigh at the departure and undignified ending of our dear ones." And a salty tear trickled down the wrinkled face of the aged gobbler.

It all happened in a barn yard not far from this city, early yesterday Now, the once proud young gobbler is being rapidly prepared to send joy to the heart of the writer today when the bird, brown, crisp and most tempting-looking, will be served for his Thanksgiving dinner.

Yes, tomorrow is Thanksgiving, according to the proclamation of William McKinley, our honored president. Plainfield will observe the day in usual fashion. In the morning, union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Trinity Reformed and Seventh-day Baptist churches beginning at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes will speak at the Trinity Reformed church and Rev. Dr. W. R. [illegible] at the Seventh-day Baptist church. A union Christian Endeavor service will be held in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church at 9:30 o'clock.

For lovers of outdoor sports, the football game on Martine Field, Park avenue, at 11 o'clock today morning, will be well worth witnessing. The local eleven will meet their old rivals, the San Remo team of the New York Athletic club, once more and will try hard to defeat them. The visitors are well-known here as a gentlemenly team that will give the Plainfield boys a lively hustle.

The links of both the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the Park Golf Club will attract many of the members and their families, who will take advantage of the holiday for a morning or an afternoon of play.

Aside from the attractions at home in the shape of the Thanksgiving dinner, the matinee of the Burrill Comedy Company at Music Hall will draw many tomorrow afternoon.

The Alls team will probably play in the afternoon on Martine Field against the football team from Scotch Plains.

There are several attractions on the tapis for the evening. The Burrill Comedy Company will give another performance, "The Octoroon," at Music Hall. "An Evening of Song and Story" will be the title of the entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. Hall in the evening. It will be part of the famous Star Course of entertainments that have been so popular. A Thanksgiving sociable and entertainment will be held in the Grace M. E. church during the evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Boy Traveler to be Heard.

Harry Steele Morrison, "the Boy Traveler," of New York, will lecture at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening. November 28th at 8 o'clock. He is only 17 years of age, but has traveled quite extensively in Europe, and has interviewed Queen Victoria, Wm. E. Gladstone, King of Belgium, Emperor William, of Germany, and presidents of Switzerland and France. He had a narrow escape from being kidnapped in Paris and imprisonment in Germany. Of course you will want to hear him. Admission 25c.

Entertained Her Scholars.

Mrs. Powell, of Fairview avenue, entertained her Sunday school class from Grace M.E. church last Tuesday. The full membership was present and the time passed in playing games and in sociability. During the evening refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. Edward White, of the borough, is visiting in Trenton.

A PASTOR'S NEW HOME.

REV. AND MRS. W. C. O'DONNELL OCCUPY THE METHODIST PARSONAGE.

The Event Made the Occasion of a Reception by the Pastor and His Wife—Refreshments Furnished in the Church.

Another notable and pleasant event in the history of Monroe Avenue church was that of last Tuesday when the beautiful and substantial parsonage, recently completed, was opened for the inspection and admiration of all who desired to call.

Rev. William C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue church, and his bride, occupy this beautiful home and last evening they gave a reception to the members of the church and their many friends. During the early part of the evening the home was thronged with people who brought their best wishes and congratulations to the popular couple.

The home is situated on West Fourth street, near the church, and is in every particular an ideal one. The structure from an exterior view is imposing, while the interior is as complete as possible. The rooms are large, well arranged and furnished throughout in a manner that displays rare taste and judgment. The pastor's study on the first floor front off the hallway, is a cozy and well-appointed room. On the opposite side there is the parlor and directly back are situated the dining room, kitchen, etc. On the second floor the bedrooms are located, together with a bathroom and handy closet room. In every room a pleasing arrangement is displayed by way of furnishing, in fact from the cellar to the garret there is not one thing lacking to make the home what it should be.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers, parents of Mrs. O'Donnell, received the guests in the parlor. Mrs. O'Donnell was gowned in her bridal costume, and both she and her husband received all with marked cordiality.

After the guests had arrived and had been received by Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell, they went to the church, where refreshments were served by the ladies of the church. Mrs. Lloyd and Miss Forster presided at the table and poured tea and chocolate. Those who assisted in serving were Miss Manning, Miss Ackerman, Miss Dewey, Miss Allen Fowler, Miss Hannah Forster, Mrs. Eakins, Mrs. Whitely and Miss Stafford, all of who are members of the King's Daughters or the Ladies' Aid Society. After the guests had been served with refreshments they adjourned to Epworth House, where delightful music was furnished by P. Ludwig Conde's orchestra.

Later in the evening a happy diversion was introduced, when short addresses were made by James McGee, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church. The latter brought words of congratulation, while Mr. McGee extended his best wishes to the bride and groom. The pastor, Mr. O'Donnell, replied to the other addresses in his usual happy manner and was fully equal to the occasion.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB AFFAIR.

Second Monthly Entertainment Was a Pleasing Success.

The second monthly entertainment of the Young Women's Club took place last Tuesday at the clubhouse on Madison avenue and was in every way a success. There were twenty girls and young women present and everyone fully enjoyed themselves.

During the evening an interesting programme was presented consisting of vocal solos, by Miss Grace Carroll; instrumental solos, Miss Nellie Valiant; recitations, Miss Elsie Smith; songs, Beulah Rogers and George Rogers, Jr.

After the rendition of the above programme all present joined in a donkey party. This afforded plenty of amusement for all, and Miss Susie Lynch was the successful one to place the tail on the donkey, for which she received a favor of a box of candy.

Those who were in charge of the entertainment were Mrs. Young, Mrs. Valiant, Mrs. J. Everitt Kimball and Mrs. Samuel Kimball. The next entertainment will be held on the fourth Tuesday in December.

Nearly Fell Off the Train.

Seigmund Frucht, the Park avenue bicycle dealer, had a narrow escape from falling off the steps of the Newark train Tuesday morning. He boarded the train after it had got under way, but being handicapped with a big bag, he couldn't get a foot hold on the steps, and hung there, in inimident danger of falling off, while Edward Martin, who had run up from the rear, held him up until he could recover his balance.

Dr. and Mrs. M. S. Simpson have been visiting friends in Plainfield.

MACHINE TICKETS WIN IN ALL WARDS.

Hot Fight in the First and Second Wards.

CUMING'S PLUCKY FIGHT.

The MacMurray Faction in the First Ward was Defeated by a Small Majority — Delegates Elected There Are Unpledged—No Fight in Third Ward—Opposition in Fourth Did Not Appear.

Never in the history of the Republican party in Plainfield was such an interest shown by the voters in ward affairs as Monday The party primaries were held to nominate Councilmen, Justice of the Peace and Constable and to elect delegates to the city convention and members of the city executive committee of the G. O. P. The attendance at all of them was remarkably large, in the Second ward there being ninety more voters out than ever attended a Republican primary in that ward before. All was without incident in the Third and Fourth wards. In the other two, lively contests were closely watched. The result was a victory for the "machine" tickets in every ward.

FIRST WARD

The First ward primary saw three tickets on the field. There was a split among the ward leaders that resulted in a very close fight. City Clerk MacMurray and Postmaster E. H. Bird, and their friends favored a ticket pledged to W. N. Runyon in the race for the City Judgeship. J. Fred MacDonald, J. B. Coward and W. R. Codlington and their supporters advocated a ticket that included unpledged delegates. They also substituted the name of Harry B. MacDonald for that of Councilman C. J. Neuman in the city committee. The third ticket was understood to include delegates who favored William Newcorn for the City Judge nomination.

There were 261 voters out to the primary. The officers of the primary were: W. B. Codington, chairman, and J. B. Coward, secretary. The officers of the election were: George H. Moore, judge; Guillermo Thorn, inspector, and John H. Tier, jr. clerk.

Ralph I. Tolles was the only candidate for the Councilmanic nomination. He received 256 votes. John Gjetlsen received 259 votes for Constable nomination. For the Justice nomination, Henry C. Corsa, of the MacMurray ticket, defeated Dennis E. Carney, of the other faction, 133 to 127. The vote for the three members of the city executive committee was: W. B. Codington, 258; J. B. Coward, 258; Harry B. MacDonald, 147, and C. J. Neuman, 117. The first three were elected.

The vote for the five delegates to the city convention, the first five being elected, was as follows: Thos. Hanna, 135; Alexander D. Mallinson, 133; Fred J. Vieweg, 132; Wm. J. Douglass, 132; Isaiah L. McVoy, 131; D. S. Dunavan, 128; H. H. Corey, 128; W. W. Warnock, 119; Willard Case, 118; John Anthony, 118; Amos Andrews, 118; George W. Moore, 10; E. Apgar, 9, and I. H. McVoy, 9.

The result was a victory for the MacDonald-Coward-Codington faction by a vote of 133 to 118 for the other leaders' ticket, and 9 for the Newcorn ticket. It was nearly midnight before the counting of the ballots was completed.

SECOND WARD.

The primary in the Second ward was a record breaker as far as numbers was concerned. Until last night, the greatest primary was that preceding the last city election when 160 voters came out. Last night there were 251 out. The result was a complete victory for the "machine" ticket which was so arranged as to be very strong. C. S. Foote was withdrawn for the Councilmanic nomination and George P. Mellick, a very popular man, was placed at the head of the ticket. He was supported by a powerful ticket. The faction favoring Thomas A. Cuming for the Councilmanic nomination made a good fight but lacked the excellent organization of the "machine." They had enough votes out to capture an ordinary primary but in the remarkable turnout Cuming was defeated by a majority of 78. He ran six or eight votes ahead of his ticket.

At the business meeting Stephen A. Giana was elected chairman and Chas. C. Lister secretary. The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies. The officers of the election were W. H. Drayton, judge; W. P. Spangenberg, inspector; H. C. Lurar, clerk.

The vote for the Councilmanic nomination was as follows: George P. Mellick, 163; Thomas A. Cuming, 85. For the Justice nomination, J. E. Mosher, 169. For Constable nomination, John Sheehan, 169. For three members of the city executive committee, John B. Dumont, 167; John E. Keeley, 163; Stephen A. Giana, 170; George D. Patten, 85; Robert Guttridge, 81; Edward C. Petrie, 77. For six delegates to the city convention, Stephen A. Giana, 219; Josiah Browne, 169; Charles S. Foote, 163; L. L. Croom, 168; J. B. Dumont, 169; B. VanD. Hedges, 170; L. B. Bromfield, 79; Armstrong Mulford, 68; Fernando Brown, 77; Charles C. Lister, 79; Henry C. Squires, 80.

THIRD WARD.

A rumor of the fight at the Third ward primary that gained credence Monday afternoon, proved entirely without foundation. The "machine" ticket went through with flying colors and without any contest. At the business meeting, W. M. Stillman was chairman and Roger F. Murray secretary. Resolutions were introduced by J. W. Murray, Jr., George J. Tobin and William T. Kirk providing for the signing of the certificates of nomination, for the filling of vacancies by the delegates and the filling of any vacancies in the nominations by the ward members of the executive committee. These were all passed.

The officers of election were J. Caspar Kirkner, judge; A. I. Littell, inspector; Nathan R. Titsworth, clerk. There were 106 ballots cast and one rejected. The vote for Councilmanic nomination was B. Frank Corlell, 103; F. C. Kinsman, 1. For Justice nomination, John Neagle, 105. For Constable nomination, Amos Moffett, 105. For seven delegates to the city convention, Alexander Gilbert, 105; J. W. Murray, Jr., 104; John Cose, 105; J. Evarts Tracy, 104; Frank E. Marsh, 105; I. W. Rushmore, 104; Nathan R Titsworth, 104; Charles F Abbott, 1; Jacob Kirkner, 1. For three members of the city executive committee, Alexander Gilbert, 105; Ernest R. Ackerman, 104; Elliott T. Barrows, 98; Roger F. Murray, 2.

The delegates in the Third ward are all in favor of Councilman William H. Runyon as the candidate for the City Judgeship.

FOURTH WARD.

The reported opposition to the "machine" in the Fourth ward failed to materialize and the "machine" ticket went through without trouble. The delegates on that ticket are all in favor of Judge William Newcorn for City Judge, as Mr. Newcorn is one of the hardest workers in the "machine."

At the business meeting, William Newcorn was elected chairman and Isaac P. Runyon secretary. The delegates were empowered to fill all vacancies.

The election officers were James Huntington, judge; Fred J. Mulf, inspector; William H. Abbott, clerk. There were 230 ballots cast. The vote for the ticket was as follows: Councilman, Frank H. Smith, 230; Justice, W. H. Abbott, 229; Constable, F. Vandervoort, 230. Delegates to the city convention, William A. Westphal, 234; Alonzo T. Ayres, 226; Edward Mosher, 228; James Huntington, 228; Daniel Galbraith, 225; James Porter, 228; Neil Head, 228; Richard Norwood, 226; Charles Sheldon, 226. Members of city executive committee, William A. Westphal, 234; A. T. Ayers, 226; William Newcorn, 216.

His Services Appreciated.

The fifth anniversary of Silas Yerkes' connection as teacher with the women's Bible class in Hope Chapel, was observed Tuesday in a social way. There was a large turn out of the members of the class, fully 180 being present. There was vocal and instrumental music by the ladies, and addresses were made by Superintendent Squires, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, and Mr. Yerkes, in which the speakers touched upon the growth of the class and the harmony that existed between teacher and pupils. A table, to be used in the class room, was presented to Mr. Yerkes as a token of the esteem in which he is held.

A Pleasant Time.

A sociable was given by the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church Saturday afternoon, which was attended by the Juniors and their friends. Among the enjoyments of the afternoon were recitations, singing and readings. Games were played followed by refreshments served by the committee, composed of Miss Minnie Serrell, chairman; Miss Marquerite Serrell, Miss Daisy Bogert, Miss Bessie Flanders, Miss Bessie Wilson.

Laying the Conduits.

Patsy Christmas, the contractor, started work Tuesday placing conduits underground to be used for the electric light wires. The work was started on Park avenue and will be pushed forward to an early completion, if weather permits.

TAXPAYERS COMPLAIN ABOUT ASSESSMENTS.

Commissioners of Appeals Have Plenty to Do.

IN THE BOROUGH AND CITY.

WOMEN EXEMPTED FROM POLL TAX ACROSS THE BROOK.

The Number of Complaints in the City was so Great That it was Necessary to Issue Tickets so That They Could Appear in Rotation—Commissioners Will be in Session Several Days.

The Commissioners of Appeals of this city have their hands full at present. They met for the first Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Council chambers to consider the cases of all who thought they were unjustly taxed. Instead of the usual score of objectors, a great crowd assembled until every seat in the room was filled and many were standing. Little cards were given out bearing numbers, showing the order of the appearance of the objectors before the commissioners.

The three commissioners, J. B. Coward, A. H. Atterbury and W. W. Coriell, were present, as were the four assessors. The objectors came from all over the city, but the Second ward was largely represented. Several objections were represented by their lawyers. Fifty cases were heard Tuesday and this morning the hearing was continued. One hundred and sixty objectors have the little cards denoting the order of their hearing, and others will probably come later.

No action was taken on any of the cases and they were referred for consideration. The morning session closed at noon and the hearing was continued last night at 8 o'clock.

J. P. Emmons, A. B. Thorn and Robert Chance, Commissioners of Appeal in the borough, met Tuesday afternoon, and from 2 o'clock until 11 o'clock last Tuesday they were kept busy treating with dissatisfied property owners. No one made any big kick out of the one hundred and fifty persons before the commissioners. A great many objected to dog tax, claiming they owned no dog, while others claimed exemption from tax on account of being exempt firemen or veterans.

The commissioners learned that heretofore some women had been assessed for poll tax. This was removed. It can be stated that the assessment this year is fair and equitable. The Mayor and Council together with Assessor French spent one whole week examining every tax item, and their work has given satisfaction. Cases were found where the tax was too little, while in other cases it was not enough. These cases were equitably adjusted. Taking everything into consideration the people of the borough are generally satisfied and in almost every case the dissatisfaction was of trivial nature.

The Don't C Club Entertained.

"The Citizens' Don't C" Club, of the borough, was entertained Tuesday by Miss Mary Hoagland, of Linden avenue, and many passers-by were puzzled to see the initials of the club displayed in front of the house with illuminated lanterns, but anyone curious enough to ask was willingly informed and their anxiety was set at rest. The club is composed of young women of the borough, but guests were present from Philadelphia, New York, Somerville, Bound Brook and this city. After the regular routine business was considered, the guests indulged in playing games of all kinds, after which refreshments were served. Before the guests departed each one was presented with a beautiful souvenir. All present pronounced Miss Hoagland the queen of entertainers.

A Dialect Recital.

Polk Miller, who appears in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course Thanksgiving night, is strongly commended by Chauncey M. Depew, Thomas Nelson Page, Ex-Governor Fitzhugh Lee, and other well-known men. Mr. Miller will give his dialect recital, consisting of stories, sketches and songs, illustrative of old times in the south, with the old Virginia plantation negro as a central figure.

Will Not Join Citizens' Ticket.

Despite all rumors to the contrary, Thomas A. Cuming will not be the candidate for Second ward Councilman on the Citizens' ticket this election. To a Press reporter Mr. Cuming stated positively that he was not a candidate and that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances. He will remain with the Republican party.

SOME NOTED NOVELISTS.

EARLY AMERICAN WRITERS TALKED ABOUT BY PROF. SMYTH.

Washington Irving and James Fenimore Cooper, Their Life and Their Abilities, Dwelt Upon Interestingly.

Washington Irving and the New York writers were the subject of Professor Albert H. Smyth's third lecture in the University Extension course Tuesday at the Y. M. C. A. The two most prominent figures were Irving, and James Fenimore Cooper, the novelist.

Irving was born in New York in 1783, and came from good old Orkney Island stock, just as James Russel Lowell's ancestors did. Like a great many later writers, Irving made his first start in literature by writing news letters for the press, the first publications being letters in the morning Chronicle. Washington Irving acted as minister to Spain and was an attache to the court of St. James during his life. He also took some interest in business, enough to represent his brother in Europe, but Irving's pen was the real means of his livlihood, although his books never brought him in anywhere near the sum people used to think they did.

Irving's works became popular both in his own country and in England. He died in 1859, the same year that saw the departure of so many famous men of letters. Irving lived to a ripe old age, and spent the last few years of his life at Sunnyside, near Tarrytown, New York.

Cooper became a novelist by reading a dull book, written by an author of the time, dealing with the courts and the society of England. The book was so dull that Cooper threw it down in disgust remarking, "I could write a better story than that myself." At the suggestion of his wife Cooper did write a book, but it was duller and more common place than the English novel.

When the book was shown to his friends, a good critic urged Cooper to write a book laying his plot in the wilderness, and with backwoodsmen and Indians for his characters. Cooper did so, and turned out the famous "Leather Stocking Tales," which have been read by millions in America, and translated into foreign languages.

Cooper was familiar, too, with the sea, and wrote sea tales of much interest. Cooper had no eye to details, and there are many things about his writings that a critic can easily pick out. But his stories run along in an interesting strain, holding the readers attention until the end.

VAUGHN GETS TWO YEARS.

Love Affairs Will Not Trouble Oscar for Awhile.

Poor Oscar Vaughn! Two months ago the redoubtable Oscar announced that he would be married November 22d, which was Tuesday. But how unkind was fate. Instead Oscar, handcuffed to a horse thief, was escorted to the State prison in Trenton, his hair cropped close to the head, his body covered with a striped suit and he was introduced to the lock-step and other routine affairs of a prison life.

It will be remembered that Vaughn's last escapade was the renting of a room in a boarding house in Bayonne, and after the landlady had got out of his sight he made off with a number of valuables. He was soon after arrested and taken to the Hudson county jail in Jersey City. Monday he was tried, convicted and sentenced to two years in State prison. Tuesday he was taken to prison by Deputy Sheriff Hague, of Jersey City, together with Frank Reim, a horse thief.

Cut His Right Hand.

John Schaeffer, of Dunellen, aged 20 years, an employe at the Climax Bottle Stopper Works, sustained a severe laceration of his right hand yesterday while at work. He was taken to the hospital, where proper treatment was given. It is thought that he may possibly lose one finger, although the injury is not considered serious to any further extent.

A Different Operation.

One of the most different operations ever performed at Muhlenberg Hospital was performed Saturday by the hospital staff on the person of Peter V. Huff, 48 years old, of Somerville. Huff's intestines were removed and placed in position again, and now the patient is doing nicely and is expected to recover.

A Sacred Concert.

The sacred concert to be given in the First Baptist church by the choir will take place Monday evening, December 12th, and the proceeds will be devoted to the Sunday-school of the church.

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA DIES VERY SUDDENLY.

Succumbed Yesterday Morning to a Short Illness.

HIS HEART WAS TOO WEAK.

COULD NOT STAND THE STRAIN IT WAS SUBMITTED TO.

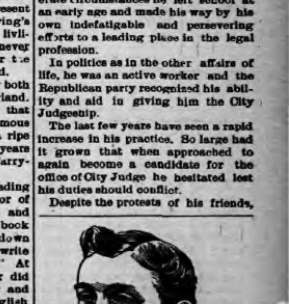
Taken Sick Saturday Afternoon With a Severe Cold, Which Developed Into Pneumonia—His Success in Life Was an Example of What Ambition and Perseverance Will Accomplish.

All Plainfield is now mourning the loss of one of her most efficient public servants, City Judge DeMeza, who passed away after a very brief illness. Most of his youth was spent here and he has grown up making friends on every side. Born of parents in moderate circumstances he left school at an early age and made his way by his own indefatigable and persevering efforts to a leading place in the legal profession.

In politics as in the other affairs of life, he was an active worker and the Republican party recognized his ability and aid in giving him the City Judgeship.

The last few years have seen a rapid increase in his practice. So large had it grown that when approached to again become a candidate for the office of City Judge he hesitated lest his duties should conflict.

Despite the protests of his friends,



THE LATE GEORGE W. DEMEZA.

Judge DeMeza insisted on remaining at his duties summer and winter without a rest or vacation. A day or two was spent at the seaside but he gained little benefit from so short resta. Of late his health has not been of the best.

Saturday afternoon he complained of a heavy cold and went to bed. Sunday he tried to get up but felt so ill that he returned to bed and Dr. Zeglio was summoned. It was soon learned that that the young man was suffering from bronchial pneumonia. He grew rapidly worse and the crisis came Tuesday morning. He rallied and Dr. Zeglio had hopes of his recovery if his heart was strong enough to bear the strain of the illness. He has been suffering from heart trouble for some time. The crisis in the illness was successfully passed but the Judge grew weaker. Yesterday at 8:30 o'clock he quietly passed away after a long period of unconsciousness.

Judge DeMeza was the eldest son of Mrs. Charlotte DeMeza, of 620 West Second street. He leaves a sister, Miss Charlotte DeMeza, and four brothers, William G., John H., Harry G. and Thomas L., all of whom reside at his home on West Second street.

Judge DeMeza was born at Hartford, Conn., on February 26th, 1871. When very young, his family moved to Plainfield, where his father engaged in the furniture business. They afterwards removed to North Plainfield, where young DeMeza attended the public schools until twelve years of age. He then entered the employ of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., where he remained for three years, continuing his studies outside of business hours. He afterward studied for some time at private schools, taking up the higher branches of learning and the foreign languages. His father died when he was fifteen years old and he was thrown on his own resources. He accepted a position with L. M. French where he remained for six months; then he entered the employ of L. L. Codmus for about the same length of time. The study of law was his next choice, and he began to read law in the offices of Jackson & Codington. After he had been there a month he showed a natural taste for it and soon made his appearance in the justices' courts as the representative of Jackson & Cod-

Isaac Shrager Attacked on the Street.

HE HAS BEEN PERSECUTED.

GUMBART OFFENDED SHOP ALONE WITH AN AXE.

Shrager Often Teased and His Sign Upset—Saturday it Was Thrown in Store—He Rushed Out and Was Assaulted—Sam Jackson to the Rescue—Photograph in Coat Gives a Clue.

"Help! Murder! Police!" rang out on the still evening air. It only lasted a few moments, but as a result one young man departed homeward in a hurry, minus his coat, vest and hat, late Saturday evening, and a roughly-handled little Hebrew tailor nursed sundry cuts and bruises.

Madison avenue, between Front and Second streets, has an exciting history. Part of that section, under the sobriquet of "Dusky Flats," once figured prominently in police court annals when Maggie Belle Jackson and her "pink teas" were in their glory. Saturday night it furnished more excitement and incidentally more work for the City Judge.

Isaac Shrager, more familiarly known as "Ikey," is the proprietor of a little tailor shop in the part of the city in question. With him works one Louis Gumbart, an elderly man with flowing white whiskers. For many moons there has been more or less attempt to worry the inoffensive tailor. His sign has been upset; the door to his shop has been opened at night and abusive epithets hurled at him. Of late, this persecution has grown more persistent, and the tailor vowed vengeance if he caught the miscreants.

It was after 11 o'clock Saturday night, and the two men were industriously working in the little shop, when the door was suddenly opened and Shrager's sign thrown in with a crash. Then the proprietor rose up and rushed out.

A few steps away were three young men. It was too dark to recognize them, but Shrager demanded, as well as his wrath would permit, to know why he was thus persecuted. A laugh, an oath, and the three set upon the little tailor and knocked him to the sidewalk. With tooth and nail, he resisted and fought gamely as they picked him up and carried him for the dark alleyway that leads to the back of the Jackson building opposite.

"Help! Murder! Police!" shouted Shrager and a crowd began to gather. Among the crowd were friends of the trio. They pressed about the entrance to the little tailorshop. Gumbart sent two of the intruders out of the door faster than they came. Then seizing an axe, he defied the crowd and promised to decapitate the first one that passed the door. The axe shone bright in the lamp light, and the crowd thought better of it.

Meanwhile, despite his struggles, Shrager was being dragged along. His screams for aid aroused Sam Jackson in his pool room and the stalwart negro came out to take a hand in the chase. His actions were prompt. Two of Shrager's assailants were upset. Shrager was left hugging the other. Then Jackson started after one of the trio who was fleeing down the street. He had posted a colored friend at the corner but when the desperado approached and promised to perforate the friend's person, the runner was allowed to pass unmolested and Jackson had to give up the chase.

Shrager's prisoner began to fight for freedom but the Hebrew tailor hung on despite the blows. The crowd grew threatening but still the tailor clung fast. By a quick turn, his prisoner slipped out of coat and vest, leaving them in the grasp of the astonished tailor and disappeared in the darkness.

A search of the coat revealed the photograph of a young woman. It was shown to the police who quickly recognized it and soon were on the track of the trio whose identity was ascertained.

Funeral of Mrs. Crittenden.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Crittenden were held yesterday afternoon from the home, 50 Grove street, and was largely attended by friends and neighbors. The services were in charge of Rev. Dr. W. R Richards, pastor of the deceased, and he was assisted by T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross. Both divines spoke tender words of sympathy and comfort, and dwelt at length upon the Christian character of the deceased. During the service a Charles L. Lewis, of this city, sang two beautiful solos.

Taxes Not all Paid.

The item that appeared in the News regarding the delinquent taxes of the borough is wholly untrue. All of the 1897 taxes are now due and are unpaid and it is the desire of the Mayor and Council that they be paid as quickly as possible.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

MARTIN HOLMES MUST ANSWER TO THE ASSAULT CHARGE.

Justice Mattison Declined to Dismiss the Case, But on Motion of Holmes' Lawyer Held Him for Grand Jury

Last Friday before Justice Mattison, of the borough, a hearing was given in the case of the State against Martin Holmes, on a charge of assault and battery preferred by John Barrick, an employe of George Wise, of the borough. The hearing was held simply for the purpose of determining whether Holmes could be held for the Grand Jury when he had already served a sentence on a similar charge. Holmes was represented by Lawyer Wm. DeMeza, while Lawyer Frank Blatz represented the State. The witnesses sworn included George Wise, while the plaintiff and defendant were allowed to testify in their own behalf.

At the conclusion of the hearing Mr. DeMeza asked that his client be committed to await the action of the Grand Jury. This Justice Mattison agreed to do. The main point made by the defendant's lawyer was that Justice Mattison had no right to try Holmes, as he had already been tried by Recorder Long. The Justice stated that he was simply giving a hearing, and over-ruled Mr. DeMeza's motion to have the case dismissed. Mr Blatz defended the State in the hearing in able manner.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"The Nancy Hanks," a musical farce comedy by Frank Tannehill, Jr., will soon be seen at Music Hall. Manager Mase Edwards has lately perfected a number of first class attractions.

* * * * *

A majestic revival of D'ennery's great melo-drama, "The Two Orphans," will be the excellent attraction Thanksgiving week at the Star Theater, 14th street and Broadway, New York, commencing tonight. The favorite American actress Kate Claxton will be seen in her version of Louise, the blind girl, a role that has made her famous throughout the length and breath of the civilized world. This romantic drama has lived and will continue to live without the aid of disrobing scenes, explosions, burglars, and other accessories necessary for modern plays to attract attention The story of the "Two Orphans" is too well known to require reciting. Suffice to say it is one of absorbing interest. Miss Claxton will have the support of a specially picked company, the leading heavy role being in the hands of that finished and clever actor, Charles A. Steven son.

Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, the delight of the tired shopper, and home of continuous vaudeville, with attractive bills, keeps up its high reputation with an exceedingly strong bill for the week of November 21st. At great expense Mr. Proctor has arranged for a special holiday production of Charles Dickens' beautiful story, "the Holly Tree Inn," the stage adaptation being by Augustus Thomas, and the principal characters being taken by the clever child actors, Mabel Taliaferro and Master Harold Walsh, supported by a competent company. Special scenery and costumes have been provided, and the little play bids fair to score a big success. Such a thing as a weak or uncentertaining show is unknown at Proctor's, and this fact, combined with the popular prices, which never change, the courteous treatment which Mr Proctor insists shall be extended to all his patrons by every attachee of the house, and the cozy surroundings, have all tended to make the Twenty third Street Theatre the most popular continuous performance house in town.

WEDDED AT ST. JOSEPH'S.

Nuptials of Daniel Sullivan and Agnes Higgins Celebrated Yesterday.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Joseph's church. The contracting parties were Miss Agnes Higgins and Daniel Sullivan, both of this city. The bride wore a suit of mixed goods, trimmed with cream lace and silk, covered with chiffon. The bridemaid was Miss Katie Ladlese. The best man was Michael Higgins a brother of the bride. The church was filled with friends and relatives of both parties. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Brenon of St. Josephs church. The groom has completely furnished a house on West Fourth treet, where a supper was served and the bride and groom received the congratulations of the guests.

Football Accident.

While George Baily, of Westervelt avenue, was playing football last Wednesday afternoon near his home he collided with another boy, with whom he was playing, and sprained he little finger on his right hand.

R. F. MURRAY OPPOSES WATKINS FOR SPEAKER

Gives His Reasons in Interview With Reporter.

MAY CAUSE COMPLICATIONS.

WOULD FAVOR SOME OTHER MAN OF EQUAL ABILITY.

According to Ruling of Attorney General, Mr. Murray Says That Acting Governor Will Hold Office Until Inauguration Whether He is Elected or Not—Would Make Things Decidedly Complicated.

The Jersey Republicans are now quite interested in the question as to who will be the next Speaker of the Assembly. Acting Governor David O Watkins has been talked of prominently but among those who have announced that they are not in favor of him is Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, of this city.

Mr. Murray was interviewed Saturday morning by a reporter on the subject and declared that he did not believe that Mr. Watkins would be the next speaker of the lower House He gave the following as the reasons for his opinion.

The Attorney General in his opinion, said that Mr. Murray, holds that whenever the duties of the Governor fall to the Speaker of the House, he performs those duties until the next Governor is elected and qualifies. If Mr. Watkins had not been re-elected to the Assembly, he would have performed the duties of acting Governor until the third Tuesday in January although his term of office would have expired on the second Tuesday of that month. The facts of his being re elected Speaker would have nothing to do with his retaining the office of Acting Governor.

Should Mr. Watkins be re-elected Speaker, Mr. Murray continued, it would complicate matters very materially. When the Senate and Assembly organize, they will appoint committees to wait on the acting-Governor and notify him of the organization of the Senate and lower House and inform him of the officers elected. How could the committee of the Senate, asked Mr Murray, notify the acting-Governor when he would be in the Speaker's chair in the other branch of the Legislature and how could he appoint a committee to notify himself of the organization and election in the House?

"Then I said Mr. Murray, are enough to convince anyone that it would be useless to thus complicate matters when, by the election of a new man to the Speaker's position, all these complications would be avoided. The reason why the leading Republicans advised Mr. Voorhees to resign at once upon receiving the nomination for Governor, was to avoid complications, and Mr. Murray said that he believed the same argument would hold good in the case of Acting Governor Watkins.

"Mr. Watkins," remarked the Assemblyman, "made one of the best Speakers New Jersey ever had and my only reason for opposing his re-election is that I believe if there is another equally as good man in the House who desires the office, he has a prior claim to Mr. Watkins. If that man does not appear then I am for Mr. Watkins."

Entertained at Euchre.

The Watchung Avenue Euchre Club were entertained Saturday evening at the home of Miss Force, of Dunellen. The entire membership of sixteen was present, and ten games were played. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all, and favors were awarded to Miss Elizabeth DeCamp, a piece of Austrian glassware; Mrs. Dryden, a Persian letter receiver; Mr. Schultz, an oriental tobacco jar, and Mr. Beard an oriental match receiver. Mrs. Beard, of Hillside avenue, will entertain the club Saturday evening, December 3d.,

Has Reported to the President.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, Commissioner to Puerto Rico, has returned from Washington, accompanied by his stenographer, Mr. Williams. The doctor had delightful conferences with President McKinley, the Secretary of State and Secretary of the Treasury. He will remain here about three weeks, when he and Mr. Williams will return to Puerto Rico to resume their labors.

Spencer Conway Exonerated.

Spencer Conway is once more breathing the fresh air without any fear of a visitation to a prison cell, Saturday, in the City Court, he was completely exonerated on the charge of reckless driving, and Patrolman Cash, who made the arrest, was severely censured by City Judge DeMeza.

Released on Bail.

William G. DeMeza went to Newark Saturday and succeeded in getting Augustus Baldwin, a haycarter, living on West Fourth street, this city, out of jail there, on $500 bail. An Orange man signed the bond Baldwin is awaiting trial on a charge of changing hay tickets.

A SWINDLER CAUGHT.

IMPORTANT CAPTURE MADE BY ELIZABETH POLICE.

Dr. Bondy, Who Has Duped Several Plainfielders by His Clever Ways, Taken Into Custody and Now Rests in Jail.

The police of Elizabeth made what they claim is an important arrest last Friday evening in the person of Dr. Bondy, of Bayonne, who is wanted all along the Central and Pennsylvania Railroads from New York to Trenton for swindling various people out of money on worthless checks. Dr. Bondy was arrested about 9 o'clock as he alighted from a Pennsylvania train at the depot by Detectives McGrail and Decker, of Elizabeth, and was later taken to Bayonne by Detective Foley, of Jersey City.

Dr. Bondy is well-know in Plainfield, where he swindled two Plainfielders, Robert Guttridge, the Netherwood butcher, and John Keely, the liveryman, out of money. Guttridge was suckered out of $50 and Keely out of $24 A Mr Allen, of Westfield, also gave up $16.

Bondy's method of working his victims was bold. In each case the party swindled cashed a worthless check. To Keely, for instance, Bondy made himself known one day, and was such an affable, friendly sort of a fellow that the two struck up quite a friendship. A day or two after they became acquainted Bondy came to Keely with a check for $24, which he asked him to cash. The check was drawn on a New York bank and was signed by some one whom Keely had never heard of, but Bondy seemed such a respectable fellow, and the last man in the world to pass off a worthless check, that Keely cashed it. A few days later it came back marked "no good."

Bondy is a small, slight fellow, dark, with a remarkably high forehead, and is a man of education and culture. Before he took to this alleged swindling he had quite a practice in Bayonne, his home.

A SILVER WEDDING.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. ROSS CELEBRATED 25TH ANNIVERSARY.

The Affair was Arranged as a Surprise to Them by Their Children—Held at Their House On Prospect Place—Many Present.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ross, of 45 Prospect place, gathered at their home Friday evening in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The affair was gotten up by their children and proved to be a complete surprise.

In spite of the disagreeable weather about fifty of their relatives and friends gathered at their home, and the evening was spent in a pleasurable manner.

Miss Charlotte Messersmith and Miss Nellie Winckler rendered several beautiful selections. Dancing and games were also features of the evening. About midnight refreshments in abundance were served.

The guests present were from Jersey City, Somerville, South Branch, Willow Grove and this city and borough.

There was a large table filled with beautiful and useful presents of silver and bric-a-brac, the gifts from their relatives and friends.

A Birthday Celebration.

The relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Overland, of West Fourth street, celebrated the birthday anniversary of Mr. Overland's mother last Friday, at their home. Mrs. Overland has reached the age of sixty-eight years, and is hale and hearty. She received a large number of presents from her many friends. The evening was spent in a social manner and Mrs. Overland received hearty congratulations. Among those present were Mrs. Elizabeth Overland, George Overland, C Overland, of Springdale; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Overland, of New Market; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Smith, Mr. and Mrs John Alberts, Mr. and Mrs. William Alberts, Miss Kittie Alberts, Herbert Alberts, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barton, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Overland and family.

A Golf Dance.

On Thanksgiving evening there will be a "Golf Dance" in the Park Club house, and everyone who attends will be supposed to wear a golfing costume of some description. The colors of the Park Golf Club are red and white, and those who attend are urged to bear this in mind in arranging their dress. The patronesses for the affair include Mrs. William L Saunders, Mrs Elwin T. Douglass, Mrs. Chas. A. Reed and Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen.

A Pleasant Social Affair.

Last Friday at the home of W. H Scribner, on Washington street, a pleasant social gathering took place which was arranged by Mrs. Scribner and her daughter There were twenty-five people present, and dancing was the feature of the evening. Eugene O'Reilly furnished the music.

Took the Oath of Office.

Henry DeMott, coroner-elect, took her oath of office Friday, and is now a full-fledged coroner.

DEMOCRATS WILL NOT ASSERT THEMSELVES.

Deemed "Unwise" to Have a Straight Party Ticket.

THINK THEY ARE TOO WEAK.

DECISION ONLY ARRIVED AT AFTER LIVELY DISCUSSION.

Resolutions Introduced Urging a Party Ticket, But it was Defeated by a Large Delegation of Citizens' Movement Men—Councilman Hetfield Spokesman for the Citizens' Party People of Plainfield.

The meeting of the Democratic Association in Councilman Moffett's office on North avenue Thursday was largely attended and typically Democratic in that everyone had his say concerning a straight party ticket, though the result was slightly incongruous in the fact that the Citizens' movement was tacitly endorsed by the decision that it was deemed unwise at this time to put up a straight party ticket

The meeting was called to order by President John H. Hillman, and the routine association business quickly dispensed with. Under the head of new business, W. W. St. John presented the following resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the duty of the Democratic party to lead in the movement for an honest and fair administration of city government and we deem it wise and proper that complete ward and city nominations for the various officers to be elected at the approaching election be made by the Democratic voters of Plainfield, and to that end we urge that the proper authorities issue a call for the holding of ward primaries and the city convention as soon as a favorable date is settled upon."

After the resolutions had been read and seconded, James E. Martine arose and supported them in an enthusiastic speech. Mr. Martine referred to the fact that the Democratic party was the party of the people, and that as the present city government had become distasteful to the people it was the duty of the Democrats to carry on fight successfully against the Republicans. This Mr. Martine thought was possible in view of the fact that a thorough organization had been undertaken and was willing and ready to go into the campaign it would be highly inconsistent for the party to lose their identity and leave the members to affiliate with a movement that had started with a lot of disgruntled Republicans who were unable to get satisfaction from their political associates, but instead were now trying to use the Democrats as catspaws to accomplish their purposes. If the Citizens' win this year, Mr. Martine said, the Republicans who were now pleading for non-partisanship would, when once elected to office, if they should be so fortunate, become the bitter partisans and the Democrats would find little consolation in such an outcome. Mr. Martine said that he was emphatically in favor of a straight Democratic ticket.

F. M. Bacon spoke a few words against the straight Democratic ticket, and then Councilman W. L. Hetfield, as the principal spokesman for the faction that opposed a Democratic ticket, spoke at some length concerning the local situation as he viewed it. He did not think think the Democrats could win alone, and he considered that the Republicans who were in the Citizens' movement were the best element of the party and would act in a perfectly fair and honest spirit with the Democrats. He believed that a Citizens' ticket would sweep the city on election day.

After remarks had been made by a number of others for and against the resolutions, Mr. Hetfield moved as an amendment that the resolutions be made to read that "we deem it unwise at this time to nominate complete ward and city nominations." More discussion of a lively kind ensued on the amendment, and when the question was called W. W. St. John moved that a recess of five minutes be taken for the enrollment of names as members of the Association, and that none but members be allowed to vote. This was declared out of order, and then Mr. St. John moved that the vote be taken by ballot, and when this was also defeated he moved that the roll of members be called on the vote.

Inasmuch as a majority of the Citizens' movement men were not enrolled this motion raised further lively discussion, and after a time it was decided to take the votes by the uplifting of hands. The amendment was carried by about a two-thirds vote and afterwards the resolutions as amended were carried by about the same vote. That ended the attempt of putting up a straight ticket.

A motion was immediately made that a recess of ten minutes be taken for the enrollment of names. This was carried and a large number of Democrats then came forward and enrolled themselves.

After the meeting was called to order again discussion was indulged in and some acrimonious remarks were made by the Democrats, who were disgusted at the outcome. The meeting then adjourned.

DROVE THREE ABREAST

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA SAID THAT WASN'T RIGHT.

So He Fined Wm Baldwin, N. B. Smalley and C. V. D. Corle Guilty of Reckless Driving—Policeman Made the Complaint.

After various delays three prominent horsemen of this city were arraigned last Friday before City Judge Demeza for trial on the charge of fast and reckless driving. They were William Baldwin, Newton B. Smalley and C. V. D. Corle.

The circumstances that led to their arrest occurred October 28th. Chief Grant and Roundsman Flynn were out on their wheels looking over the city. They were riding townward on Park avenue and had just passed the Cedar brook bridge when they met the three horsemen approaching. According to the statements of the officers they were driving three abreast and at a three-minute clip. The Chief and his companion hailed them and notified them to appear before the City Judge.

Friday morning they appeared and protested to the Judge that they were driving at an ordinary gait and were not racing. The Judge held that they should not have been driving three abreast, as they admitted they were, even if they were not speeding their horses. He decided that they were guilty of reckless driving, and reserved his sentence until a week from tomorrow morning.

A New Exhibition.

The New York business man, walking down town to his office this month, finds his steps impeded, at Fifth avenue and Twenty-sixth street, by a crowd of men, women and children in front of two huge show windows at the upper corner, wherein is displayed a striking collection of books, pictures, manuscripts, and mementos of the Spanish American war. One of the windows is given up to the new books issued by The Century Co —Dr. Weir Mitchell's 'Francois," Mrs Burton Harrison's "Good Americans," etc. The other is devoted to The Century, especially the November number, in which is begun a remarkable series of papers on the late war. Here are Miss Cecilia Beaux's portraits, from life, of Admiral Sampson and Lieutenant Hobson, and the original of other illustrations by well-known artists; the flag and pennant of the captain's gig of the Maine, loaned by Captain Sigsbee; a part of the manuscript of Hobson's account of the sinking of the Merrimac; sign-boards, etc., from Porto Rico; and Grasset's "Alexander the Great" magazine cover design. Eight large windows, running along Twenty-sixth street toward Broadway, are given up to different publications of the same house; the first to St. Nicholas; the next to the Century Dictionary, Cyclopedia, and Atlas; the third to Timothy Cole's engravings from the Old Masters, surrounding Wyatt Eaton's oil portrait of the engraver; and the fourth to the Civil War Series, authorized 'Life of Lincoln," "Memoirs" of General Grant, etc., with the bronze death mask of Lincoln, autographs of Grant, McClellan, Meade, etc., and the manuscript of "We are Coming, Father Abraham!" and of Stedman's Lincoln poem. The fifth window is bright with the red morocco covers of Sloane's monumental "Napoleon Bonaparte," flanked by the water-color paintings made to illustrate it. The other windows are filled with children's books, original designs for posters, diplomas from the Paris and Chicago expositions, views of The Century office, etc. To secure the windows alone it was necessary to lease the entire shop at the corner next above Delmonico's Madison Square restaurant; but the general attention it has attracted shows how keenly the public appreciates an exhibition which appeals only to the cultivated." Changes will be made from time to time, during the months of November and December, in the objects displayed in this unique gallery of art and literature.

Divorce Proceedings.

Divorce proceedings have been started by Mrs. Lizzie Wilson, of Plainfield avenue, against her husband, John Wilson, of Raritan, on the ground of desertion. They were married in November, 1894, at Perth Amboy. In July, 1896, Mrs. Wilson claims her husband left her and has since contributed toward her support. The papers were filed at Trenton last Friday by Judge DeMeza, lawer for the petitioner.

Princeton Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Princeton Club of Union county will be held in Elizabeth on the evening of December 15th. It was to be held this evening but the date was changed sometime ago. There will be a number of prominent speakers present, S. St. John McCutchen, of Plainfield, will represent Yale. E S. Paterson will be the only other local speaker.

ROCKEFELLOW STILL REPUBLICAN CHOICE.

Most Prominent Candidate for Mayoralty Nomination.

WAS MAYOR ONCE BEFORE.

ELECTED SUCCESSIVELY ON DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN TICKETS.

It is Understood That he Will Accept the Nomination if Tendered to Him —If Not Gunning for It, However—Marion S. Ackerman Out of It—Councilman Bockle Proposed by His Friends.

Who is going to be Plainfield's next mayor? It is an interesting subject but no one knows the answer as yet. It is not quite as difficult to name the Republican candidate for that office. It is too early in the campaign to make any definite predictions but, from present appearances, the choice of the G. O. P. will probably devolve on George W. Rockfellow. The Daily Press was the first to note his growing popularity for the office and to point him out as a likely candidate. While Mr. Rockfellow is in no sense gunning after the nomination, it is understood by those in power that he will not refuse the nomination if tendered to him. Of that fact, they are quite certain.

Mr. Rockfellow has had experience in that line having been chief executive for two terms. In the early '90's he was elected at the head of the Democratic ticket. His affiliations changed, however, and the next term he ran successfully for Mayor on the Republican ticket. He is in no sense a politician, but has devoted his time to his business and built up a large trade for his grocery at the corner of Park avenue and West Fourth street. A few years ago, he was made a member of the Plainfield Board of Health and was elected president of it. Not believing in all the methods pursued he resigned and has since had nothing to do with city affairs.

Other men have been mentioned for the mayoralty nomination on the Republican side, but none of the booms have shown much strength as yet.

Marion S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, was mentioned for the place but he utterly declined to allow his friends to do anything in his behalf, saying that he would not take it under any circumstances. Councilman J. H. Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, has also been spoken of, but Mr. Buckle not after it and it is doubtful whether his business duties would allow him to take it. He has the advantages of being a local business man who is quite popular with all. Last year he was the only Republican Councilman-at-large elected on the ticket against the Citizens' candidate.

NEW SERIES STARTED.

Plainfield Building and Loan Association is Flourishing.

At the directors meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association thursday evening the matter of issuing a new series was taken up and favorable discussed. Many of Plainfield's citizens have tried National and other associations and are thoroughly dissatisfied with them and their methods of doing business, and would be glad to get their money back.

The Plainfield Building and Loan Association is managed by business men of our own town, economically run, and the investments are made on first mortgage on properties in and about Plainfield. The State reports show that the Plainfield Building and Loan Association is one of the first of the State, the last series which expired having run only ten years and five months. Hence the demand for stock in the association. The directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association are: L. E Barkalew, Henry Liefke, W. R Codington, B. F. Coriell, Louis Klein, Jacob Voehl, James P. Homan, W. A. Woodruff, C. H. Rugg, J. E. Flannery, E. W. Titsworth and John Hickey.

THE DEVIL'S TOAST.

"The Devil in the Box," was the unique subject of the meeting in Reform Hall Thursday. J. H. Sayers was the speaker, and illustrated his talk with different articles which he drew out of the box, and made his address and object lesson.

The first thing was a paper cigarette, which, Mr Sayers said, was the devil's first tool. Then came a clay pipe, a yellow-covered border novel, a pack of cards and what usually accompanies it, so Mr Sayers said, sweet cider, the "Devil's kindling wood." Last of all came a bottle of whiskey, and in this way the speaker illustrated a young man's downfall, beginning with the cigarette and ending a confirmed sot.

Engine Broke Down.

The engine of the train due in this city from New York at 8:16 a. m. broke down last Saturday at Westfield and the train was nearly one hour late in this city.

A "HARVEST HOME" FOR THE HOSPITAL.

Gigantic Donation Party Bringing All Kinds of Articles.

LADIES WERE IN CHARGE.

TEA WAS SERVED AND PLEASANT SOCIAL CHATS ENJOYED.

Notwithstanding the Disagreeable Weather There Was a Large Attendance—A Large Amount of Fruit and Vegetables Were Sent, Besides Much Needlework — Everyone's Services Given.

Thursday afternoon was the time set for holding the harvest home at the Muhlenberg Hospital, and in spite of the rain and disagreeable weather, the affair was more of a success than the ladies had anticipated. The harvest home was nothing more than a gigantic domestic party, at which tea was served, and a good social time enjoyed. As for the donations, they found places in the cellar, in the hallway and all over the building, and were so plentiful that it will take some time to distribute them fully.

The harvest home was held in the nurses' home, which was prettily decorated with autumn products of the fields and gardens. In one room a daily tea table was presided over by the ladies, who served tea, cake and crackers with generous hospitality.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board had charge of the harvest home, and the officers, Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren, president; Miss Elizabeth C. ck, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. George M. Randall, Miss Emilie Schipper, Miss Henrietta Haviland, Mrs. William E. Lowe and Miss Mary Eleanor Tweedy, received the people as they came and acted as personally thank each one for what they brought.

Everybody was supposed to bring a donation of some kind with them, either in the shape of vegetables, fruit, canned goods, provisions, jelly, cloth ing or money, and as they were brought in the officers of the auxiliary, assisted by the associate members, all of whom were distinguished by the absence of their hats and a large white badge, bearing on it a red cross conspicuously in the centre, disposed of them in their proper places.

Ever since early Thursday morning until late at night the expressmen of the city, all of whom gave their services gratuitously, were busy carting goods from this part of the city and the other to the hospital. By 7 o'clock, when the harvest home was over, the cellar was a mass of barrels, boxes and baskets, containing apples, potatoes, sugar, flour, pumpkins, squashes and everything in that line. One room upstairs contained 175 articles of underclothing, linen, towels, etc., given by the members of the City Needle Work Guild.

In another room was a great pile of jellies and canned goods, 200 glasses of which had been given by small children through Mrs. O. T. Waring, who canvassed for it.

The committee in charge of the harvest home consisted of Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, chairman; Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke, chairman of the committee on decorations and private schools; Mrs. Gulon, chairman of the committee to solicit from the churches; Mrs. E. Johnson, public schools, and Mrs. E. T. Barrows and Mrs. W. A. Pinto on the tea table and the refreshments.

The supper rooms were thrown open to inspection and many of the visitors availed themselves of this chance to inspect for the first time the snug apartments of the nurses. Several members of the board of governors were present, as were also Drs. Hodges and Murray. The harvest home proved such a success that it is the intention of the ladies to repeat it annually hereafter.

DEATH OF MRS. CRITTENDEN.

Occurred Last Thursday After an Illness of Two Months.

The death of Mrs. Eliza A. Crittenden, of No. 90 Grove street, mother of Mrs. John H. Carman, of Watchung avenue, occurred Thursday after an illness lasting about two months. She was the widow of the late Joseph H. Crittenden, who was a very prominent leather merchant in Cleveland, O. for nearly forty years. Mrs. Crittenden was a native of New York State. She moved to Plainfield five years ago, where she resided until her death. She was a member of the Crescent Avenue church of this city, and while her health would not permit her being actively engaged in Christian work, she gave largely of her means. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. J. H. Carman, Mrs. Palmer, of this city, and Miss Minnie Crittenden. The funeral services will be held from the late home, No. 90 Grove street, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Plainfield Defeated.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basket ball team was defeated last Friday by the "Rubber Five," of the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A., in the latter's gymnasium. The score was 33 to 14. It was a very clean game.

MAY ABOLISH HANGING.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS PREPARES MEMORIAL FOR LEGISLATURE.

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield Half-Yearly Meeting Held at Watchung Avenue Meeting House Yesterday—Last Attendance.

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield half yearly meeting of the Society of Friends opened in the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue Wednesday afternoon and closed Friday morning. Some eighty-five members of the local Friends were present with a dozen visitors. Most prominent were the members of the visiting committee of the New York yearly meeting. Two members of the meeting in California, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Bartlett, were present. Joel Bunton, of Woodstown, N. J., was the prominent visiting minister.

The meeting began Wednesday afternoon with a gathering of the ministers and deacons at the meeting house for a brief service. In the evening a youth's meeting was held. It was of a religious character.

Thursday morning, a service for worship began at 11 o'clock and continued until after 12 o'clock. Then followed the business session of the meeting. The meeting was under the direction of the clerk, J. Edward Borden, of Eatontown, this State. The clerk, Mr Borden, and the assistant clerk, Margaret F. Vail, were reappointed to their respective offices.

A memorial was prepared by several of the members and presented to the business session. It was decided to bring it before the State Legislature. It asked for the abolition of the death penalty. A greeting was also extended to the general conference of the Young Friends' Association at Westchester, the 12th. At the close of the business meeting luncheon was served to the members on the upper floor of the meeting house. A committee of the local Friends, composed of Marietta V. Adams, Clara S. Bushmore, Catherine R. Webster, Ephraim M. Vail, Adelbert Vail, Edith G. Vail and others, was in charge.

At the meeting in the afternoon, reports were heard from the Friends' conferences held during the past summer at Richmond, Indiana. The work of the philanthropic conference was especially noticed in the reports. The principal speakers were Mr. and Mrs. William M. Jackson, of New York and Phoebe C. Wright, of Manasquan. The meeting was held under the direction of the Philanthropic committee of which Margaret F. Vail is the clerk.

The evening session was in the interest of the work done in the colored schools in South Carolina. The methods of work and something of what has been accomplished in the education of the colored children was interestingly told by Anna M Jackson, of New York. Her remarks were illustrated with views from a stereopticon.

The half-yearly meeting closed Friday with a service for worship which began at 11 o'clock. The attendance at the meetings was very good.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office last week: Catherine A Kenney and husband to Mary R. Loomis, North Plainfield, $1; Mary R. Loomis to David D. Kenney, North Plainfield, $1; Harriet Stafford to Thomas H Stafford, North Plainfield, $; Isaac J. Stites et ux to Baron D. Stites, North Plainfield, $1 600.

A Common Cold

and common carelessness can make a combination strong enough to defy all the healing skill of the physician. Common carelessness lets the cold root and grow. Common carelessness says, between paroxysms of coughing, "It will be all right in a day or two," and the common end is confirmed lung trouble, perhaps consumption. The common-sense treatment of a common cold is a prompt dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most efficient and reliable cure for colds and coughs, and is constantly prescribed by physicians.

S. HAYNES, M. D., Saranac, N. Y., says:—"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice since 1853, and have always found it reliable for the cure of colds, coughs, and all lung diseases."

BEST METHODS FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK

Annual Institute of the Primary Teachers' Union.

MANY VISITING WORKERS.

PAPER READ BY A WORKER IN JOHN WANAMAKER'S SCHOOL.

An Afternoon and Evening Session—Greetings Received From the State and County Unions—Miss Harlow's Address was Full of Original and Practical Ideas and Very Entertaining.

The annual institute and third anniversary of the Plainfield Primary Sunday-school Teachers' Union, was held Thursday afternoon and evening in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, and was very largely attended by members of the union and teachers from many neighboring places, including Westfield, Elizabeth, Somerville, Cranford and Scotch Plains.

The services were opened at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with a song and praise service under the direction of Mrs. Powlison, of the Plainfield union. This was followed with greetings from the unions, city, county and State. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, spoke for the city, and his remarks were full of good cheer and help. The county was represented by Rev. J. S. Braker, of Scotch Plains, president of the Union County Sunday-school Association, and he brought good tidings from all parts of the county. He told of how favorably the work of the Sunday-school was progressing and he bid all God speed. The last greeting was from Rev. E. M. Fergusson, of Trenton, General Secretary of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association. His remarks were along the line of work being accomplished in all parts of the State, and from what he said every Sunday-school worker has reason to feel encouraged.

Miss Nettie Beeching, president of the local union, was in charge of the services, and at this time she introduced Miss Anna S. Harlow, superintendent of the primary department of Bethany Sunday-school, of Philadelphia. Miss Harlow taught the lesson for next Sunday which is "Manasseh's Sin and Repentance." Miss Harlow is an exceedingly interesting and talented speaker, and she held the closest attention of all during her talk. She made use of practical illustrations, and this interested the large number of boys and girls present.

Following the lesson a highly interesting paper was read by Mrs. F. R. Baker, of the local union. The paper was prepared by Miss Himes, and the subject was "Child Study." It was brimful of practical suggestions, and proved very helpful to every teacher present. The afternoon session was closed with prayer, after which supper was served in the rooms connecting with the lecture room. The members of the local union were in charge and bountifully provided for all.

In the evening following the devotional exercises, the large audience had the pleasure of listening to "Echoes from the Summer School," by W. R. Murray. This talk was thoroughly enjoyable and proved interesting as well as helpful. This part of the programme was followed with a solo by Miss Nancy Randolph, after which an intensely interesting address was delivered by Miss Harlow, of Philadelphia, on the subject "As Iron Sharpeneth Iron." The address was a unique one from the fact that so many new and original ideas were presented for consideration. The power of Sunday-school teaching and work was shown in a forcible manner, and every word was listened to with the deepest interest. Following this address the benediction was pronounced and a short time was passed socially by those present.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Mary Esther Labaw Married to Berne Egel.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Labaw in Harlingen, Somerset county, Nov. 16th in the marriage of their daughter, Mary Esther, to Berne Egel, of Bound Brook. The officiating clergyman was Rev. F. M. Kitt.

Mrs. G. W. Saums, of this city, presided at the piano and played the wedding marches. The ushers were E. V. M. Labaw, Alfred Stout, of this city, J. F. Egel, of Bound Brook, and Fred H. Stein, of Somerville.

The bride was attired in a brown traveling suit, trimmed with white lace. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses.

Guests were present from Plainfield, Philadelphia, Roselle, Perth Amboy, Trenton, Elizabeth, Flemington, Somerville and Bound Brook. The couple left on a wedding trip through the south.

The ceremony was performed under a beautiful floral arch, the house throughout being decorated in an elaborate manner.

THEIR WOODEN WEDDING

PLEASANT ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. VANFLEET.

Home Prettily Decorated for the Occasion—Large Number of Friends Gathered Together—Dancing a Feature.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. VanFleet, of 706 West Front street, Nov. 16th was the scene of an enjoyable celebration, when the host and hostess entertained a large number of relatives and friends in honor of the fifth celebration of their marriage. The event was marked with many pleasant features and everyone present joined heartily in the joyous occasion. Outside of the house and surrounding the porch were a number of Japanese and Chinese lanterns, which gave a brilliant illumination about the house. The interior of the home was prettily decorated with choice flowers, while there was a pleasing arrangement of satin ribbon which held the flowers in position about the several rooms.

The festivities began early and continued until early this morning. During the forepart of the evening Miss Kathryn McKeon and Miss Mamie McKeon, of this city, favored the audience with several pleasing piano and vocal selections. Soon after 9 o'clock dancing was started and, under the inspiration of the music as furnished by genial Samuel Frazee, the light fantastic toe was tripped during the balance of the evening.

About midnight the guests sat down to a sumptuous spread as provided by the host and hostess, and all did justice to the good things provided. After the inner man was attended to dancing was resumed and continued till the small hours of the morning.

Mr. and Mrs. VanFleet received a large collection of useful wooden presents, while some of the presents were of more value, and included even cut glass, showing the unmistakable popularity of the celebrants.

Guests were present from Westport and Southport, Conn., Newark, Jersey City, Bayonne, Trenton, North Branch, Somerville, Lebanon, Morristown, Millington, Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Chester, Westfield, Milltown and this city. Before the guests departed they all wished the host and hostess many happy returns of the day.

THE MAKING OF RUSSIA.

GARRETT P. SERVISS TELLS OF PETER THE GREAT'S PART.

He Was a Man Powerful in Body, Mind and Control—One Great Element of His Success Was His Self Control.

A fair-sized audience gathered at the Casino Thursday to attend the third and last illustrated lecture given by Garrett P. Serviss, of New York. Like the other two lectures, this one was superb as to illustration, and the lecture by Mr. Serviss was fully up to the standard of the others. The subject was "Peter the Great and the Making of Russia."

The first part of the lecture was devoted to the land where Peter lived and the people of that country. In those days all Europe had her eyes on Russia, for she was rapidly spreading out and the great effort was to keep her from covering the earth. Peter in shaping the people has trouble with the religion of the country. Many people looked upon the Czar as a God, and he was strongly noted as a land of devotion.

Mr. Serviss devoted a portion of his talk to the dark ages of Russia, when women were slaves, and when people by the hundreds were murdered, and how perfectly crazy certain people acted. It was occasioned by the fact that it was a matter of dispute as to who should rule the country. Peter contested in the political arena, and during his early life he learned the great art of self-control, and later he learned to control a nation. He was great in strength and statue, being nearly seven feet tall. He would often approach his enemies or friends and knock them down, one for hatred and the other as a mark of friendship. He studied persistently all the well-known arts, and especially that of ship building. He also became acquainted with the art of war. In early life he was much opposed to display or title, and he went about the country in the plainest sort of dress. He detested to have people follow him and thereby make him conspicuous.

The last part of the lecture was devoted to a sad part of history in Peter's life, when he practiced such cruelties on his people by having them put to death, when a man had to take out a license to wear a beard, and when the custom of wearing long sleeves and long-coat tails was abolished by Peter.

To Facilitate Work.

The United States Express Company are about to put a speaking tube from their office to the platform outside. This will put the office in direct communication with what is going on outside. The men on the platform can "call off" without coming inside, and when some one on the platform is wanted inside the office, he can be made acquainted with that fact much more easily then than now.

FLIGHT OF A RUNAWAY DOWN PARK AVENUE

Edward Hooley's Horse Made Things Exciting.

PART OF HARNESS MISSING.

CARRIAGE STRUCK HIS HEELS AND FRIGHTENED THE ANIMAL.

Coachman Had Just Driven Mr. Hooley to the Depot—Little Miss Hooley a Prisoner in the Brougham, but She was Not Frightened—The Runaway Collided With Three Other Carriages.

A runaway horse, drawing a handsome brougham, dashed down North Avenue November 17 about 8 o'clock when the streets were crowded with carriages and pedestrians. The horse and carriage belonged to Edward Hooley, of Rockview avenue, and the horse ran from the North Avenue station to Louis Hummer's store on Park avenue before it was caught.

The cause of the horse's running away was said to be the absense of a breeching strap on the harness. The animal was hitched so close to the carriage that his heels struck the crossbar of the shafts. The coachman had driven Mr Hooley to the station, and turned the brougham about to return to the house. When the horse was headed for home he started off on a quick trot. The coachman pulled the horse in, but as there was no breeching the carriage was drawn close to the horse so that the animal's heels struck the cross-bar. This frightened the animal and he bolted.

The coachman on his box dared not pull hard for fear of pulling the carriage on the horse's heels. Everything would have been all right if Park avenue had not been filled with carriages, but when the horse turned the corner and saw the street blocked he turned towards the side walk and made directly for L. A Hummer's store. Mr. Hummer happened to be near the door and caught the horse.

Mr Hooley's little daughter was in the brougham, and as soon as the runaway was stopped she jumped out of the carriage. She was not hurt.

W. W. Howland's carriage stood in front of Hummers's store, and the brougham collided with it and upset it. F. C. Jenning's phaeton which was being driven to the depot was also struck. The damage done to the carriages was slight. A cap was knocked off the wheel and a lamp was broken on Mr. Hooley's carriage. Mr. Howland's carriage lost a mud guard and a spring on Mr. Jenning's phaeton was broken.

Mrs. Howland had just alighted from her carriage and escaped being struck.

A SOLDIER'S SURPRISE.

A surprise party was given last Friday to Corporal John Bowden, of the First Delaware Regiment, who is at present enjoying a thirty days' furlough with relatives in this city. The surprise was complete in every particular. It was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Bowden, on Grant avenue. Although the storm was the means of preventing a goodly number of invited guests from being present, nevertheless those who were in attendance spent a very pleasant evening.

The hours passed away in listening to a few well-rendered Scotch ballads, and now and then the dancing of a few old fashioned Scotch reels, music being furnished by William Wilson. At midnight refreshments were served and it was two o'clock Saturday when all joined in the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and then departed for home, wishing the Corporal many happy returns of the day.

GANGRENE SET IN.

Burn on the Hand Developed Into a Serious Sore.

L. B Woolston, of Fairview avenue, now carries his hand in a sling and is suffering much pain as the result of a little accident that occurred the first of last week. He was caring for the furnace at his home and burned his hand. The injury in itself was not a very severe one, but gangrene has set in and the results may be very unpleasant. The flesh on the fingers has been affected and on had to be cut away. It was feared that Mr. Woolston would loose a finger but the present treatment promises to save it.

Donation Party for Pastor.

A pleasant surprise party, in the shape of a donation, was tendered to Rev. James E. Groves, of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, Thursday. The pastor was invited by one of his church people to accompany him to another member's house to spend the evening. Instead he was taken to the church, where the members awaited him. The donations were large, and will keep the pastor without want for several months. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

HOW ABOUT THE CURFEW

SHALL IT BE RUNG TO SEND THE CHILDREN HOME?

It is Stated That the Town Improvement Association May Make it an Issue in the Approaching City Election

The Newark Sunday Call recently published the following:

"Plainfield has many novel issues raised in its municipal campaigns in years past—such as the rights of the donkey to have a monopoly of carting ashing, the commuters, or 'rooters,' as they are locally nicknamed, ruling the town, etc.—but if the fair members of the Town Improvement Association carry out their present intentions this year will probably see one of the most remarkable agitations brought forth that have yet interested citizens in local government. It is the question:

"Shall Plainfield have the curfew bell inaugurated for the benefit of its rising generation of citizens?"

"A year ago the women of the Town Improvement Association advocated that the curfew bell be made a part of the city ordinances by enactment of the Common Council, but at that time the matter was laughed down by the men. Now, however, the women are again agitating the matter, and right on the eve of the city election campaign, too, as the municipal election takes place in December. At the recent meeting of the Improvement women the curfew idea was brought up and a paper read upon the subject by Mrs. Pierre Mailf, president of the association. Notwithstanding the ridicule of the curfew bell by the sterner sex, the women still persist in their devotion to the idea. They say that many young lives are wrecked by the street education gained at hours of the night when all good little people should be tucked away in bed, and that with a curfew bell warning children under 16 years to vacate the streets at 7 o'clock in the winter and 8 o'clock in the summer, unless accompanied by a guardian, the percentage of crime attributed to street education would be greatly reduced.

"It is the intention of the women to commence an educational campaign by personal advocacy among their gentlemen friends and by the distribution of suitable literature for converts to the curfew bell idea, and in this way to create sufficient sentiment to bring the matter into a municipal campaign. They feel confident that once such an issue is raised no political candidate would dare to affront the women of the city by declining to carry out the idea if elected to office, and in this way they can carry out what they can far proved a difficult undertaking."

FOURTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland Celebrate an Auspicious Event.

The fourth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland, of West Front street, was celebrated last Thursday in a pleasant manner, and in a way that was a surprise to the celebrants. About 8 o'clock, twenty-two intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hoagland called at their home and found them in an unexpected mood. They were wholly unaware of the intended invasion, but in their usual happy manner, they cordially received their guests and made them feel at home.

The evening was marked with many pleasant features, and the guests participated in many amusements to pass the time enjoyably. There was vocal and instrumental music, games, etc., and at a late hour a bountiful supper was served by the host and hostess. Everyone present wished the host and hostess many happy returns of the day, and when the guests d parted for home they all agreed that the evening had been pleasantly and profitably spent.

MUSIC AND STORY TELLING.

An Entertainment Given in the Boys' Club Friday Night.

An entertainment was given last night in the Boys' Club, consisting of an informal programme of vocal and instrumental music and story telling. The boys were out in full force, and there were also several visitors, who braved the storm to give encouragement to the managers by their presence.

Those who took part were Miss Rosa Schroder, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Councilman Will N. Bunyon and Fred VanEps. Miss Schroder sang several times accompanied on the piano by Miss VanBoekirk. Dr. Hedges told some good stories, and Councilman Bunyon kept them all in a roar of laughter with his songs. Mr. VanEps entertained with banjo solos, and all responded to several encores. This was the regular fall entertainment and will be followed in the spring by another.

Sons of Veterans Fair.

The Sons of Veterans held a meeting last week and furthered their arrangements for the fair and bazaar they are going to hold in Washington Hall early next month. The Woman's Relief Corps met with them, and will assist the boys at the fair.

UP TO MIZZEN PEAK BY THE TROLLEY CARS.

Latest Scheme Developed by Silas D. Drake.

SAYS HE HAS THE MONEY.

THE ROAD TO RUN FROM LINCOLN TO TOP OF THE MOUNTAIN.

It is an Independent Enterprise and is Not Controlled by Any of the Existing Traction Companies—A Hotel to be Built and the Peak Made a Great Resort for New York Business Men.

The dashing town promoter, Silas D. Drake, seems to be a never-failing spring of new schemes. His latest is a trolley road to connect Lincoln and Mizzen Peak. It isn't all talk, either, says the undaunted Silas. He says he has all the consents for the proposed line and that the necessary funds are ready to be invested in the road way.

The Lincoln and Mizzen Peak Trolley Company is an independent organization and has nothing to do with the Brunswick Traction Company, the lines of which it will connect with at Lincoln.

Mizzen Peak is a high point in the first ridge of the Watchung Mountains and lies right back of Bound Brook. It is a beautiful place with a magnificent view and gloriously cool mountain breezes in the summer time. It makes an ideal summer stopping place. Heretofore, however, the trouble has been in the method of getting there. It was a hard hilly road to climb and rather expensive to live there. A hotel was erected there and met with fair success which would have been much better had the transportation facilities been better. The hotel afterwards burned down.

Mr. Drake's plan is to run a trolley road up to the side of the mountain and convert Mizzen Peak into a summer home for New York business men, making it easy for them to reach that delightful spot every day. The line will be completed, Mr. Drake says, by May 15th.

LORTON-NAYLOR.

Nuptials Celebrated at the Home of the Bride's Parents.

Eugene Victor Lorton, of West Fifth street, one of the drivers for the United States Express Company, was married Nov. 16th. The bride was Miss Susan E. Naylor, of 235 East Third street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Naylor. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

The bride wore a dark green cloth dress trimmed with white brocade satin. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Naylor stood up with the couple. After the ceremony a short reception was held, and the young couple were congratulated and complimented. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome moonstone pin, and the presents received by the couple were numerous and costly. For the present they will continue to live at the bride's home, but next spring they expect to go to housekeeping.

Among the guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Naylor, Mr. and Mrs. John Naylor, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Naylor, Mrs. Lorton, Samuel Sorensen, Mr. and Mrs. Haberle, Mr. and Mrs. Huff, Edward Towley, of Westfield; Mrs. J. Connelly, Miss Ethel Lorton and Mr. and Mrs. Lee.

Yale Clubs Coming to Plainfield.

The Yale Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs are arranging their Christmas tour through the country. Their first stop will be in Plainfield Wednesday evening, December 21st, when they will give their concert at the Casino. The Yale boys are general favorites with the Plainfield people, and they always present an excellent programme, well-rendered.

Pleaded Guilty.

Frank Hand was arraigned in the City Court Saturday on the charge of striking James White. He pleaded guilty and was held under $300 bail for his appearance Saturday for sentence.

"Probably no single drug is employed in nervous diseases with effects so markedly beneficial as those of cod-liver oil."

These are the words of an eminent medical teacher.

Both these remedies are combined in Scott's Emulsion. Therefore, take it for nervousness, neuralgia, sciatica, insomnia and brain exhaustion.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The sudden death of City Judge George W. DeMeza deprives Plainfield of one of its most successful and honored members of the bar. His career, successful beyond the ordinary point in view of his youth, is an evidence of what American push and pluck can accomplish when guarded and inspired by a sense of the honorable and a desire to occupy a creditable position, socially and professionally, in the community.

Fate of Music Hall.

A place of public amusement is one of the essential institutions of a city the size of Plainfield, and whenever there is a man at the head of a local theatre who strives to give the public the best and cleanest attractions eye the road he ought to be well supported.

Manager Mase Edwards, of Music Hall, is such a man, but his efforts are not appreciated to the extent that they should be. He has had long and valuable experience in catering to the amusement public and in association with the best managerial and dramatic talent in the country. He has given Plainfield the best that such experience and association would naturally bring, but it is a fact that the patronage he has received has been very discouraging for further endeavors on his part.

Mr. Edwards is far from a pessimist or a grumbler, but if the treatment accorded him by the public in the near future is of the same slighting kind that he has been receiving thus far this season, Plainfield will probably lose the best theatrical manager it ever had.

It is an advantage to the city to have a creditably conducted place of amusement such as Music Hall has been under Mr. Edwards' administration, and it is to be hoped that the patronage given the house for the rest of this season will be gratifying enough to induce Mr. Edwards to remain in Plainfield.

A Trying Position.

The position of Editor Bunyon in the approaching municipal campaign reminds one of a picture in a comic paper not long ago, in which a youthful citizen was seen to be walking along the street between two elders, who were deeply engaged in conversation and paying no attention to the youth. The boy's hands were held tightly by the elders, and the little fellow was crying as though his heart would break. When asked what ailed him the little fellow whimpered out between his sobs that he wanted to blow his nose. The point, of course, is obvious.

Editor Bunyon is in the same sort of a pickle. One of his hands is linked to the Republican party by association and a gratitude that is defined by a lively sense of favors to come, and the other hand is secretly tied up to the movement for the Citizens' ticket. With both hands thus employed in a general hub-bub he is unable to say which he is for.

Crane Ahead of Assemblymen.

All the counties in the State have completed their canvass on the vote for Governor and the figures show a plurality for Foster M. Voorhees, the Republican candidate, of 5,573.

While the plurality against Mr. Crane, the Gubernatorial candidate of the Democrats, was 5,573, the plurality in the State against the Democratic Assemblymen, taken on the average vote, was 9,137, a difference of 3 564 in favor of the Gubernatorial candidate. The net Republican majority on the Congressional vote in the State was 10,429.

An opinion just given by the New Jersey Court of Appeals holds that the law giving to trades unions the right to adopt and use a distinctive label for their protection is constitutional. This reverses a Chancery Court decision and is important. The Newark Hatmakers' Association adopted a label and a firm of hatmakers adopted a similar one. The Newark Association sought an injunction and have secured it. The labels of trades unions will now be respected in New Jersey.

Acting Governor Watkins has appointed the State Board of Canvassers to meet at the State House Tuesday, November 29th, and canvass the vote of the recent State election. The board consists of five Senators. Three are Republicans and two Democrats. The Republicans are E. C. Stokes, Cumberland; William M. Johnson, Bergen, and Charles A. Reed, Somerset. The Democrats are James R. VanCleef, Middlesex and Lewis J. Martin, Sussex.

Interesting to Commuters.

Judge Lambert, of Newark, has given a decision in a case that is of great importance to a large part of the population of Plainfield in view of the fact that they are such frequent patrons of railroads. Some time ago two South Orange commuters boarded a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western train, but were unable to obtain seats. Until provided with seats they declined to show their tickets or pay their fares. At the next station an officer "forcibly" ejected them from the train by laying the hands upon their shoulders and piloting them gracefully from the train.

Thereupon they carried their case into court. The commuters maintained that when the railroad company accepted their money they virtually agreed to not only provide transit but also to provide seats for them between the points they had paid to be carried. The Judge disagreed with this contention, however, and declared that the company agreed only to carry them between two points and it was not obliged to furnish seats. Whether the dissatisfied commuters will carry the case to a higher court remains to be seen.

Religious Bigotry.

The outbreaks of religious bigotry which shock attention occasionally, even under the mild and wholesome influence of the modern religious spirit, show what perverse horrors lurk potentially in the human heart. Now it is a modern Abraham who would offer up his son in bloody sacrifice, and, again, a case comes to light which recalls the horrors of Moloch worship. The latest example is that of a Catholic woman in the city of New York who had married a Hebrew and lived a happy life with him for a number of years. Finally her remorse awakens and under the influence of some strange perversity of conscience she is convicted of the sense of deadly sin in having contracted such a union. To expiate the crime she drenches her garments with kerosene and makes herself a living funeral pyre to the presence of shrieking children. Human nature is so constituted that in some cases religious excitement stimulates dangerous traits entirely at odds with the spirit and principles of religion. And so the very light of heaven seems to beget darkness, madness, fanaticism and despair. Many of the most wholesome herbs and fruits can be made to yield the deadliest poisons.

The Nicaragua Canal.

There seems to be no ground or fear that the new Nicaragua canal concession made by President Zelaya on the eve of Nicaragua's absorption into the United States of Central America will seriously complicate canal affairs. Granted to a group of Chicago and New York men, it only becomes good on the lapse of the old concession one year hence. Mr. W. R. Grace, the New York capitalist, who is interested in the project, states that the main purpose was to provide against contingencies and make assurance doubly sure that the waterway would be built in any event. He also says that there is any hidden motive to interfere with the action of congress, and expresses the hearty wish to co-operate with all effective movement toward the desired end.

May Irwin, fair, fat and forty, being a funny woman on the stage, is possessed of the intention to drive ticket speculators away from the theatre in which she appears in New York. She has determined to do this, she says, even if it costs lots of money. We hope that the buxon May has a large-sized bank book to resolutely pursue her intentions. Ticket speculators are the most aggravating nuisance found around the New York playhouses.

Jersey City's last horse car was abandoned yesterday, the trolley substituting the plodding gait of the rawboned equine as motive power. That is practically the end of the horse car in Jersey. And yet New York, with its citizens compelled to use scores of these ancient facilities for transit about the city, has the audacity to try to make Jerseymen appear as laggards as compared with the swiftness of the metropolis.

Miss Kate Lunden, State lecturer for the W. C. T. U., appeared before the Raritan election officials and asked to be registered as a voter, but that privilege was denied her. Now she threatens to carry the matter to the high courts. Her course will be watched with interest in Plainfield where there are lots of women who will applaud her for her stand.

Middlesex county glories over the fact that tramps now give that ballywick a wide berth. The chain gang and the stone cracker is said to have accomplished suddenly what years of diet on homemade cakes and pies failed to do in driving the genus hobo from that section.

There are 30,863 men rendering service on the railroads in New Jersey, and the amount paid them in wages during the last fiscal year was $17,409,098 73. The Pennsylvania heads the list. Of its 12,344 employes rendering service in New Jersey, 10,862 are wholly employed in this State.

Organization of Legislature.

The matter of organizing the next Legislature is now occupying the attention of the big-fry Republicans, and in all the talk Union and Somerset counties figure conspicuously. The interview in The Daily Press last week in which Assemblyman Murray announced his opposition to the re-election of Speaker Watkins aroused a great deal of interest and comment, but thus far Mr. Murray has not secured much support for his ideas in this respect.

A large number of politicians and members of the Legislature gathered at Trenton yesterday and gossiped about probable results. Assemblyman Murray urged as a solution of the problem that Speaker Watkins accept the post of leader and leave that of Speaker for some one else. He urged that the position of leader was the more important of the two, and urged long and earnestly in that direction, but did not appear to make any converts to his view of the situation.

Senators Ketcham and Reed, two of the aspirants for the position of president of the Senate, exchanged congratulations and wished each other success. A number of Senators were on hand, and some had letters received from Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee, urging Essex's claim to recognition in behalf of Senator Lehlbach. It was expected that, while the county has saved the Legislature for the Republicans two years in succession, it has not had the presiding officer of either House in many years, while Somerset had the presidency of the Senate three years ago and Bergen has only been in the Republican column three years.

Senator Reed's friends, on the other hand, claim that he is the proper man to preside over a body with such an aggressive minority as the Senate is expected to have next year. While this is about the only office in doubt, it is attracting as much attention as if the entire Senate slate depended on the disposition of it.

Mr. Voorhees' Good Sense.

Governor-elect Voorhees displays good sense when he urges that his inauguration as the chief officer of the State be accompanied by simple and unostentatious ceremonies. Enthusiastic Republicans and personal friends had been arranging to give the Governor a great send-off on his induction into office, but Mr. Voorhees has put a quietus on such plans by announcing that he does not want any military or spectacular display when he takes his oath of office.

Too often a select coterie of friends, well-meaning enough in their own way, make heroes of men when there is no reason for it. In his everyday life Mr. Voorhees is distinguished by his democratic manners and it would be a slight indication of an enlarged cranium should he countenance the attempt to make his inauguration a grand affair.

Jersey Grows Healthier.

According to the advance sheets of the annual report of the State Board of Health, New Jersey is growing healthier and its past glories as a Gretna Green are gone forever. The total number of marriages in the State during the last twelve months is 13,213, as against 18,171 in 1897. This shrinkage is due to the passage of the Lloyd law, which provides that non-residents of the State who come here to be married must procure a license. The decrease is principally in the number of non-resident marriages. Last year 4,090 couples crossed the State line to wed. This year only 262 couples from other States were made man and wife here. Last year's record shows that the Camden ministers alone married 4,494 couples while this year they have married only 824 couples.

State Superintendent of Schools Baxter has decided that no teacher can withdraw from the retirement fund while holding a position as a teacher. It seems that a number of teachers who signed the agreement to pay one per cent. of their salaries for the benefit of the fund now wish to get out of that duty. Of course, they are willing to forego any of the benefits if allowed to withdraw, but Mr. Baxter decides that they have no right to do. The only way of getting out of the assessment is by resigning their positions. This decision, however, is not considered likely to cause any vacancies among the school teachers.

An Important Bill.

Among the new measures likely to be introduced into the next Legislature is a bill to create the office of Register of Deeds in Union county. The office at present is combined with that of County Clerk, and the argument advanced is that the work is too great and compensation too large for one official. The compensation is said to be about $15,000 a year, and, with the office of Register of Deeds created, the compensation would be about divided in half.

APPLICATION TO COUNCIL.

HEARING ON THE APPLICATION SET DOWN FOR DECEMBER 9TH.

D. C. Ivins is Heard in the Matter of the Sewer Assessments—A Lively Discussion Over the Police Ordinance —Councilman Hetfield Says That Patrolmen Don't Want Ice-Storm Sewer.

The adjourned meeting of the City Council last Monday was a quiet affair, owing to the holding of the Republican primaries. It was after the hour when the meeting was called to order, and there was not a great deal of important business considered. Some of the members came in late, having previously attended the primaries. Mr. Barrows moved, after the reading of the minutes, that the regular order of business be suspended so that the report of the commissioners on assessment for sewage could be received and considered. After Clerk MacMurray read the official notice for such action, President Baker gave all an opportunity to speak for or against the confirmation of the report.

D. C. Ivins was present and had a few words to say regarding the assessment of $25 on the property at 321 Hillside avenue. The assessment was levied in 1896 and on March 4th, 1897, it was paid. The sewer was extended by this property some thirty or forty feet, so as to install a flush tank. As it is at present the sewer is no benefit to the property in question. The sewer was located in Webster place, and Mr. Ivins made a connection to it. He is now assessed $25 for the sewer that has been run through Hillside avenue, which he claims is of no benefit, and he asked the Council to remove the second assessment.

There were no other persons present who desired to be heard, and on Mr. Barrows' motion the commissioners' report was read by the clerk.

At the conclusion of the reading of the report, Mr. Barrows made a few remarks regarding Mr. Ivins' statements. He expressed the opinion that Mr. Ivins is getting off cheap by pay ing the $25 on the Hillside avenue assessment. He said that several residents on that avenue wanted the sewer, and it was granted.

Mr. Ivins took exception to the remarks by Mr. Barrows, and stated that a majority of the owners did not want the sewer on Hillside avenue, in fact several of the property owners desired to remonstrate to the Council against its introduction in the street. He said that he thought it unfair to directly assess twice one piece of property, and it seemed according to Mr. Borrows, that the Council desired to squeeze out of him $25.

Mr. Hetfield, Mr. Buckle and Mr. Runyon thought it unfair to assess Mr. Ivins twice and favored a remittance of the $25, while Mr. VanHerwerden expressing the same opinion, offered a resolution that the whole report of the commissioners be referred to the street committee, for further consideration, and that they report at the next meeting.

Bids for the macadamizing of East Ninth street, East Sixth street and Franklin place, were all in time as received. A. I & N. B Smalley's bid was, East Ninth street, 53 cents; East Sixth street, 54 cents; Franklin place, 50 cents. David Bowden bid 55 cents for East Sixth and Ninth streets and Franklin place. C. M. Meeker bid 55½ cents for Franklin place; 57 cents for East Sixth street, and 59 cents for East Ninth street. Samuel A. Richardson, of Dunellen, bid 63 cents for East Sixth street; 61 cents for East Ninth street, and 60 cents for Franklin place. All bids were according to specifications and were per running foot. They were all referred to the street committee, they to report at the next meeting.

At the request of residents on the south side of Central avenue near Seventh street, a crosswalk was granted. The walk is needed very much.

At this stage of proceeding the Plainfield Street Railway Company, at the request of the Board of Trade and a large number of the leading merchants of the city, petitioned the Council for a franchise to extend their tracks as proposed sometime ago in the east end of the city. The petition was received and referred to the street and sewer committee, and later Mr. Barrows offered a resolution setting Friday evening, December, 9th, as a time when a public hearing will be given for or against the trolley extension.

Mr. Hetfield of the laws and ordinance committee reported on the matter of the county trolley. He stated that the papers referred to the committee were so indefinite that the committee had nothing to report regarding them. On his motion they were received and filed.

At this time the Council engaged in a discussion regarding the police ordinance, which has been laid on the table a number of times. The discussion arose when Mr. Buckle called the ordinance from the table and moved that it be placed on its first reading.

Mr. Hetfield stated that he had seen a number of the members of the police forces, especially the patrolmen, and had learned that it was not at their request that the ordinance was introduced, that they had told him it would be of no benefit to them. He had learned, however, that the officers of the force who belong to another organization, were urging the enforcement of the ordinance. He even went so far as to state that members of the Patrolmen's Benefit Association had requested him to ask the Council to appoint a committee of two to confer with a similar committee from the Association for the purpose of discussing the ordinance, and Mr. Hetfield moved that that committee be the Police Board. In connection with that motion he moved that the ordinance be laid on the table and that the board report on the matter at a future meeting.

This motion was adopted and Mr. Barrows amended the motion so that the report will be received at the first meeting in December, when the ordinance will be taken up again.

Regarding the ordinance, Mr. Buckle spoke. He said that it is his idea to place the police force out of the control of political influence. He thought that during the past year Plainfield had been well governed, not that he wanted to take credit to himself as a member of the police committee, for he thought Mr. Barrows was entitled to the credit. There had been fewer charges against the force, and he was sure that the citizens of Plainfield would approve of the adoption of the ordinance It has nothing to do with police pensions, and there is no political influence about it.

Mr Hetfield agreed with Mr. Buckle in some respects, but he did not believe that there is a man on the police force who feels insecure unless he wants the ordinance passed.

Mr. Hetfield stated that he understood that an offi er of the department had sent patrolmen to Mr. Buckle to urge the adoption of the ordinance, and he was sure that the majority of the patrolmen desired further consideration on the subject.

In conclusion Mr. Hetfield said, by way of explanation, that he had not been holding up the Park avenue storm sewer improvement, as published in the News, and Mr. Barrows vindicated Mr Hetfield by stating that Mr. Hetfield had not worked against it. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

THE ROYAL BLUE LIMITED.

Fine Train S rvice That Now Passes Through Plainfield.

The "Royal Blue Limited," the new train service inaugurated last Sunday by the B and O. R. R. Company, is styled by experts to be the finest train service in the world. The cars and equipment, fresh from the Pullman Company's factory, is thoroughly up-to-date and cannot be excelled. Last Saturday officials of the company received guests and members of the press at Jersey City, where every courtesy was shown. A sumptuous dinner was also served in the dining car.

The train is made up entirely of Pullman chair and dining cars. The first run on Sunday was an ideal one. The trip being made in five hours, as scheduled. The train on both trips was filled with passengers, who seemed to know at once a good thing. One of the train crew is Frank Webster, of Duer street, who is baggagemaster. He makes a trip from Philadelphia to Jersey City.

The new train bids fair to become very popular with a good class of people, who can take advantage of this superior service.

TALKED TO THE JUNIORS

REV. W. C. SNODGRASS PREACHED TO THE J. O. U. A. M.

Discussed the Great National Problems That Now Confront Us—He Is in Favor of National Expansion, He Said

Sunday evening at the First M. E. church, the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C Snodgrass, delivered a strong and interesting sermon to the members of Somerset and Franklin Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., of this city, who were present in a body. The attendance was very large. After the opening exercises, which included the reading of the Scriptures and prayer by the pastor, and special music by the regular choir, the pastor commenced his sermon based on the words found in the prophecy of Joel. During the talk Dr. Snodgrass rehearsed briefly the work of the past year as regards National interests. He stated that he thought it had been one of the most important in our recent history, that there was no reason why industries should remain idle, and that while it is a difficult task to look after seventy millions of people, it had been done in a marvelous manner.

He spoke of the prosperity of the manufacturers, farmers, miners, shippers, and with it all scarcely had one starved out of the bounty of the God Supreme, and for this reason all have great cause for thanksgiving. He spoke of the glorious war, which he hoped was at an end, and how marvelously it had been concluded, and he dwelt at length upon the promotion of a great National spirit and of a unified Government. He introduced the subject of the Nicaragua canal that will at no future day connect two great oceans, which he did not believe was a party measure. He spoke of the annexation question, and that he welcomed the discussion, that the Government and people favored it and he had strong belief in the favorable outcome. He said that he is a devout hereditary American, but is of the opinion that there are things that other nations can teach us.

Dr. Snodgrass spoke about emigration and thought the time would soon arrive when America would receive but little of the bad element. He thought the issues through which we have just passed would tend to draw us closer to the mother country—Great Britain. In conclusion the pastor spoke strongly on the subject of an Anglo-Saxon alliance, and said that there is not enough people in any other country to dispute the proposition. At the close the speaker presented many helpful lessons, and urged all to place their trust in God, and have implicit faith in Him.

PARK BOWLERS LOST.

Bad Start for Home Team in Central Journal League.

Elizabeth, November 22.—The bowlers of the Park Club, of Plainfield, came to Elizabeth last evening to roll their first games in the Central Journal League against the Elizabeth Club. The result was three victories for the home team. The scores of the games were 790-777, 797-680, 847-750. No phenominal scores were made and the visitors were in poor form. Hibbard, who rolled his first championship game, did particularly good work while "Doc" Thiers rolled a very even game. The other Plainfield bowlers were VanBuren, F. H Ball and F. O. Ball. The Elizabeth Club was represented by Morrell, Vanderveer, Keys, Lane and Pope, the well-known combination.

RESIGNATION OF PASTOR.

REV. J. S. BRAKER WILL LEAVE SCOTCH PLAINS BAPTISTS.

He Has Accepted a Call to Waltham, Mass., Where He Goes the First of the New Year—His Work at the Plains.

Rev. J. S. Braker, pastor of the Baptist church, at Scotch Plains, surprised his congregation at the close of his sermon Sunday morning by tendering his resignation as pastor of the church, the resignation to take effect the last Sunday in December. Mr Braker said his decision was final as he felt that his work in the village had been accomplished and he had accepted a call to a larger field in Waltham, Mass., and he felt it his duty to go.

Rev. Mr. Braker's pastorate dates back nearly five years, he having come to the church in April, 1 94. In that time the church work has been built up, new societies formed and the work has been carried on in a progressive manner.

Mr. Braker's work as a Sunday-school worker was also justly recognized in 1897, when he was honored with the presidency of the Union County Sunday-school Association, and at the last county convention was honored with a re election.

Soon after taking charge of the church he formed a Junior Christian Endeavor Society, which has been a success and is a thriving young branch of the church. A home department of the Sunday-school was formed and today numbers over 40 members.

By personal solicitation he has increased the contributions of the church nearly double what they were when he came.

Nearly a year ago he was instrumental in making it possible to have an Italian mission established and services are held every Sunday afternoon in the old school building, the services being in charge of an Italian missionary, who is making this part of the church work a success in every way.

For yearly three years Mr. Braker has been interested in trying to form a Y. M. C. A. for the young men of the village and he has had the pleasure of realizing his hopes before ending his pastorate of the church. Mr. Braker has many friends in the church and village, who regret his resignation.

PICKPOCKET GOT HIS WATCH.

Charles Smith, the Architect, Was the Victim, But He Got It Back.

Charles Smith, of Grove street, an architect doing business in New York, was relieved of a gold watch and chain by a clever pickpocket in New York Thursday. Mr. Smith was riding in an elevated train at the time, and the light fingered gent, who occupied the seat beside him, proved to be the thief.

Mr. Smith was going up town, and sat looking out of the window. Soon after he had taken his seat a well-dressed, fine looking young man took the unoccupied place beside him. Mr. Smith continued to gaze out of the window, but suddenly feeling for his watch, to find out the time of day, he was dismayed to find it was gone.

The man who had been occupying the seat at his side was also gone, and Mr. Smith suspected him immediately. Fortunately Mr. Smith had taken a good look at the man next to him, so leaving the train he hurried to the nearest police station and reported his loss, together with a good description of the man.

With the description, the police were soon on the stranger's track and promptly cornered him. He admitted his guilt, and the watch was found upon his person. Mr. Smith identified the watch and will be able to regain it again as soon as certain formalities are gone through with.

The stranger confessed that al though this was not his first crime of that kind, he was not a professional. But Mr. Smith says that the easy way in which his watch was taken stamps the man as an adept in his trade.

A Grand Sermon.

'Our Thanksgiving" was the subject of Rev. Dr. Schenck's Thanksgiving sermon Sunday morning in Trinity Reformed church, and he received the congratulations of many of his congregation for the exceedingly interesting discourse, which was packed full of useful data, touching the growth of our beloved country, and much interesting information regarding our army and navy in the late war with Spain. While the discourse bristled with patriotic eulogy at the success of our arms yet to God he gave the glory of it all, according to the text selected, "Now, Therefore, Our God, We Thank Thee, and Praise Thy Glorious Name."—1 Ch. 29, 13.

An Endeavor Service.

The Plainfield Local Union of the Christian Endeavor will hold a Thanksgiving service Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the Trinity Reformed church which will be led by L. H. Biglow, Jr., president of the First Baptist Christian Endeavor Society. The service promises to be a helpful one, and a cordial invitation is extended to all, whether Endeavorers or not, to be present.

CITIZENS' LOOKING FOR CANDIDATES

J. M. Hetfield Mentioned for Head of Ticket.

HE HAS MANY FRIENDS.

W. A. CODDINGTON GATHERS STRENGTH FOR JUDGESHIP.

Said to be a Compromise Candidate to Suit Angleman and Hetfield Factions—F. C. Lounsbury May be Candidate for Collector or Mayor—Is Considered a Strong Man on the Ticket.

In the heat of the municipal election that is now close at hand, the usual political affiliations are apparently dropped in a great many instances and it is difficult to tell just where anybody stands. One thing is certain, the regular Republican ticket will appear as usual. There is also little reason to doubt that a Citizens' ticket will make its appearance in time for election. Just at present, the Citizens' movement can be considered a rather uncertain quantity, it's liable to spring up at any moment and sweep things before it. The majority of the independent voters are holding back, however, to see just who is going to be nominated and on that will depend the direction of their support.

There are a host of names that have been mentioned for the various nominations on the Citizens' ticket, and new booms spring up every day. The fewest are, perhaps, for the Mayoralty nomination, as it is clearly recognized that it will take a man of much strength to overcome the usual Republican majority. Just now, the name of Former Postmaster John M. Hetfield comes to the front with suggestive prominence. A staunch Democrat, he has many friends in both parties as well as among the independent voters. He is a Plainfield business man and is well up in municipal affairs.

Out of the dozen names mentioned for the Citizens' nomination for City Judge, that of Former Judge W. A. Coddington seems in the lead. The factions supporting Winfield S. Angleman and Councilman Walter L. Betfield are said to be at a dead-lock, and the candidacy of the ex-Judge will be pushed as a compromise measure. His general popularity and his wonderful run when a candidate before cause a belief among his friends that he can successfully run against Councilman William H. Runyon or Justice Newcorn, which ever happens to come up as the Republican nominee.

The nomination for City Collectorship has been much disputed one and the candidates are decidedly numerous. A "dark horse" has appeared in Fred C Lounsbury. It is yet too early to make any definite predictions but Mr. Lounsbury is thought by the leaders of the Citizens' movement to be a valuable man for the ticket and one that should be used if possible. He has long been talked of for Mayor, but has declared it out of the question. If the choice does not fall on J. M. Hetfield, it may be that Mr Lounsbury can be persuaded to run on Citizens' ticket.

Last year, Eugene M. Laing ran for the office of a member of the Board of Education, but was defeated. This year, his friends want him to try it again, and, they hope, with better success.

The Citizens' movement has not yet reached that stage that aught but hints regarding the ward Councilmanic nominations can be made. In the First ward J C. Blimm has been prominently mentioned. Over in the Second a strong backing comes from the second district in favor of Alfred Cooks, of Woodland avenue. He has been steadily advocating a Citizens' movement for several months, and stands well in his community. He is a large property owner there.

George W. V Moy, the druggist, is suggested as a Citizens' candidate in the Third ward. In the Fourth ward there is a likely prospect that Councilman Elmore D. Moffett will stand for re-election.

Birthday Anniversary.

Monday was W. R. Mattox's sixty-second birthday, and it was made a very pleasant time for him indeed. At the meeting of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, Monday, genial Bob was called upon for a recitation and gave "Pictures on the Floor." After-briated with patriotic eulogy at the success of our arms yet to God he gave the glory of it all, according to the text selected, "Now, Therefore, Our God, We Thank Thee, and Praise Thy Glorious Name."—1 Ch. 29, 13.

New Philadelphia Train.

A new train for Philadelphia has been put on the road. The train leaves here mornings at 8:29 o'clock, and gets into Philadelphia about twenty minutes ahead of train leaving here at 8:14. The new train was put upon the road at the solicitation of several New York and Plainfield business men, who go back and forth between these cities, and who desire to get into Philadelphia earlier in the day.

THE TRADESMEN PLAN

THEY WILL TRY TO HAVE TROLLEY EXTENSION MADE.

To Arrange a Conference Between Street Railway Company and the Council—Report on the New Central Depot

The Board of Trade came near not holding a meeting Monday, for until 9 o'clock a quorum was not present. But at that hour a number of members came in, and a meeting lasting for about half an hour was then held.

Two resignations were asked for and granted, those of Charles A. Reed and William A. Coddington. One application was made for membership, E. D. Barrett.

The committee on transportation, railroads and telegraphs, consisting of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., John D. Runyon and E. M. French, were instructed to arrange a meeting between the trolley representatives and the Council soon so that both the Council and the trolley company can find out on just what terms the spur to the Plains can be laid. The Board of Trade, being anxious to have the extension built, are going to find out exactly where the hitch is, and just what the company will do, and just what the Council will accept.

The committee on the new railroad depot reported that they have arranged for a conference with the Central Railroad officials some day next week. Two or three dates have already been set, but for some reason had to be broken. The committee on stations consists of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., E. M. Laing, E. M. French, Chas. H. Hand, J. F. Hubbard, J. D. Runyon, W. H. Woodruff, D. C. Irvine, George Kyte, A. L. Pope and R A Meeker.

MET BROOKLYN'S BEST

PLAINFIELD BASKET BALL TEAM MADE FINE SHOWING.

When Time Was Called, The Score Was 9 to 8—After Ten Minutes of Play Brooklyn Scored a Goal and Won

The basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., distinguished itself last Monday by playing a tie game with Brooklyn's strongest team in the latter's own gymnasium. The home team was that of the eastern district of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., which is classed only second to the famous Twenty-third street branch, of New York.

At the end of the first half the score stood 4 to 2 in favor of the home team. The Plainfield boys played a wonderful game, guarding their men with remarkable skill and showing a decided improvement in their accuracy at goal throwing. In the second half the visitors braced up and the score stood 9 to 9 when time was called The game was then continued until one side should score. After ten minutes of play, Brooklyn threw a goal from the field, winning it to 9. Ten fouls were called on Plainfield and three on Brooklyn.

Plainfield was represented in the game by E. Moraller, Bonney, Egan, Carroll, M. Moraller and G. P. Smith. Bonney and Carroll alternated as left forward. Fred. G. Smith, of Plainfield, was referee.

On November 3rd, '93, he was admitted to the bar. The motion admitting him was made by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh. He rented a small office in the old First National Bank building. His first case came the next day when he represented Jackson & Codington in the divorce case of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Gable. He met with success. His first case in a high court was in the Supreme Court of New Jersey before Judge Lippincott, where he was also victorious.

He was elected City Judge in 1895, by the Republicans. He received 300 majority over Winfield S. Angleman, the Citizen candidate. He served very acceptably, handling several thousand cases during his term.

He was a member of the First Presbyterian church, where he acted as an usher for several years.

FOR MARGUERITE.

Then you won't marry me, sweetheart? The words were uttered low and pleading, the voice very tender and true, but the girl on whose dainty ears they fell threw the beautiful head a little further back, and laughed out her half-vexed, half-defiant answer.

"When you are on the road to success, Gerard, I'll marry you at once."

The man listened, his handsome face turning white, as if carved in stone.

"Success with you is only another name for—"

"Money," the girl interrupted, with that lovely light laugh again. "I know it, Gerard, and despise me for it if you will, but if you had been brought up in poverty, then you, too, would spell success with an M, a very big M, and call it Money!"

The man sighed heavily. Fate was indeed against him now, and his career, light and hopeful as it looked a short time ago, seemed sadly dull and somber now.

He would say one more thing before they parted, he determined suddenly; he would have at any rate a clear understanding with the woman he loved so madly. And after that, then the venture—to the right, or to the left!

He put out his hand to stay her as she would have risen. "I want to ask you one thing more," he said, so gently that her wandering attention was fixed on him once again.

"If I went into that business, my father's business, which as you know I hate—if I gave up my dreams of the Bar, and a life which I should love, a life which would be poor, perhaps, but full of promise—if I had the prospect of success in the business which you speak so highly, what then?"

She turned to him with a new light sparkling in her beautiful eyes. Had she conquered at last—everything, every hope, every ambition at her feet?

"Then," she said, her voice tender with feeling, and her soft eyelids drooping above the brilliant eyes, "then I should say no more," and her tones trembled into silence, and her fingers made played nervously with the violets at the bosom of her beautiful gown.

"But would you love me, and believe in me, my love?" he urged, his voice strained with passionate love, his hands clasping hers. "Will you love me, darling, will you let me hope again?—will you, darling?—tell me, tell me now." And the soft waltz music rose and fell again, and the air was laden with the scent of lilies and heliotrope, as Marguerite the beautiful bent towards her lover.

* * * * * * *

The snow fell outside very softly, wrapping the sordid City in tenderest mystery, purifying, and transforming it into a kingdom of crystal and pearl. Inside one of the greatest of its many fair houses there was revelry, and the ripple of silvery voices, and the ring of merriest laughter.

One of the land's richest men entertained his guests, and feasted them right royally, so that they spoke increasingly well of Lim and his entertainment, and of the beauty of his peerless wife!

She stood in the great drawingroom in purest white, with diamonds on her snowy neck, and beautiful stars in her golden hair, and around her a little company of the most famous and witticed and cleverest kept her court, and pleased her with their sallies, until her clear laugh rang out above all the gentle badinage around.

Then her hand raised the silver ripple of laughter, and it awoke some of the old thoughts, the old memories that we had striven to lay by, as a child lays by its dear old toys when playing days are over and done with.

And all of a sudden he felt very weary and tired—tired of all the lights and the scent of the great banks of roses that his wife had ordered the skilful florist to arrange—tired of the music, and the faces, and the crowd, and he slipped away, unnoticed, to his quiet study, and sat there awhile to dream.

He had gone into the business that he had heartily disliked—for Marguerite—and it had proved a success in his hands.

How tenderly she had caressed him at the time of the sacrifice—how gently her pretty fingers had smoothed the way! She was so much accustomed to all now, and he had "lived it down," as she once said playfully to him. She was always sweet, and always beautiful, and every one said he was the luckiest man in London! Perhaps it was true!

He got up and sauntered back to the drawingroom—his lovely wife was chatting with a young barrister as he passed.

"My husband would have been just like your to-day," he heard her say, in that exquisite voice of hers, "if he had not taken my advice. He took it, and you see the result."

The younger man looked around. He saw the beautiful rooms, the brilliant crowd, the flashing of countless gems, the peerless beauty of the woman who spoke, he heard the music rising and falling in the distance, and breathed the delicate scents of rarest blossoms.

Again he saw the word "Success" written everywhere—success that he, a beginner, a novice, could never hope to emulate. Suddenly the worn face of the master met his eyes. "I see the result," he said quietly.

THE RING AND GLOVE

I felt like Cortez upon a memorable occasion when the jeweler's glass door swung behind me, and marching up to the counter, I asked for a ring.

"A ring, sir?" said the attendant, a Cockney to his finger tips. "What sort of ring?"

"An engagement ring," said I, valorously.

"What size, sir?" demanded the man, docketing me mentally.

"Five and a half," I replied, thinking of the glove.

I'm not sure that she wants it at all," I murmured, producing the little bag and extracting my handkerchief, which in turn brought to light a sheaf of letters and a memoranda I shook out at her feet like a skilful conjurer. Then I tried the other pocket, but vainly. "It's a glove," I said at length, gathering up my belongings, "one of yours, don't you know."

"I recollect—I missed it," she said coldly.

"But the cab went so quickly," I pleaded; "ah, do sit down until I find it."

She did so. I am in a gentle perspiration.

"Hurrah, I have it!" I cried, and I extracted the wisp of silk from my watch pocket, where I had thrust it on leaving the shop.

"So kind of you," she observed, taking it. Then the powder ran out over her dress.

"How stupid!" I gasped, completely demoralized now and taking the glove I should at vigorously until I had created a miniature dust storm. She sneezed. I devoutly wished that the flying machine was an accomplished fact.

"It's ruined," I muttered woefully, for it certainly represented a piebald appearance.

She smiled. I sat down, saying desperately:

"Would you allow me to keep it—the thing is of no use now?"

"Why?" she answered quietly: but the voice was low.

"To remind me of that happy day," I replied, shying.

"Indeed? I am glad you think of it as a pleasant one," she said graciously. "Mr. Tomkins is declining all the way back in the cab. He seemed prejudiced against you."

"He may be described as a man who means well," I observed severely. "I hope he said something actionable."

"Oh, hardly that!" she answered, laughingly: "but he seems to have changed his opinion lately. Your name happened to come up in conversation to-day, and he said—"

She paused; a sudden flame leaped into her cheeks.

"What did he say?" I demanded, trying to look away.

"He said you were an honorable man," she replied, the point of her parasol tracing a lopsided isosceles triangle in the dust, "but"—

"Ah there is much virtue in that but," I observed bitterly.

"That you were to settle down," she continued, tossing her head and rising.

"So I shall," I cried, "but it depends upon my lady. I have her portrait here in this case. he is the only girl I shall ever care for in my way," I added, because even a little qualification does no harm at even the most exalted moments. "By the way, she is an acquaintance of yours, too," and pressing the spring, I handed the casket to her as the lid flew back. She glanced at me curiously, very pale now. I, weak about the knees, watched a child trundle a hoop past us.

She uttered a little cry that sank into a sobbing laugh. Then she sat down beside me and put one of the hands I hope to hold when Death beckons me down the last dim turning of Life's road, into mine.

"I trust that I shall make you a good wife," she said gravely. And— Well surely man born of woman can guess the rest.

Whose Letters Were Sacred.

To write a letter in the middle ages was no joke—a task which none but a priest or a scribe by profession would willingly encounter.

Letter-writing in early times was resorted to only on occasions of moment; even letters of familiarity frequently took the form of legal instruments. Till a comparatively later period, too, vellum was the substance upon which they were written, and scribes were employed to indite them.

The earliest letter written in England now remaining is probably that of Wuldhan, Bishop of London, to Beretuald, Archbishop of Canterbury, preserved in the Cottonian Manuscripts, desiring his advice as to the time for attending a council, summoned at a place called Cressanford (Brentford), for settling certain differences which had arisen between the king and the said council. Beretuald was Archbishop of Canterbury from A. D. 693 to A. D. 731.

The letter is greatly injured, and altogether too difficult to be perfectly made out; a solitary record of early epistolary intercourse in the Saxon times. No other letter is known of previous to the Norman Conquest.

After the Conquest, letters became more numerous, but all either in French, the tongue of the Norman masters, or in Latin, the then universal language of educated men throughout Europe.

Nearly all of these in the collection in these languages are by priests. The constant turmoil and insecurity in which the laity then lived, made it impossible for them to cultivate writing; and the want of a cheap and good material to write on was to the full, as great a drawback.

Our earliest use of paper in epistolary correspondence cannot be carried farther back than the reign of Edward II., during whose reign, on the latter part of his father's time, it seems to have been brought from the east by way of Italy.

BEATRIX HARCOURT.

"Whom do you think I saw driving with Gerald Morton this morning?" asked Mrs. Morris of her great friend, the doctor's wife, as the two ladies were enjoying 5 o'clock tea and the general gossip of the parish together one afternoon.

"Beatrix Harcourt," Mrs. Maynard answered promptly.

"Ah, you saw her, too, then. I must say I was astonished. It is well known that young Morton bears the character of being the fastest man in the neighborhood."

"I have long ceased to be surprised at anything Beatrix Harcourt does," the other lady answered significantly. "If Mr. Kenrick does not mind, I do not see why any one else should trouble his or their heads about her eccentricities."

"Certainly not," Mrs. Morris agreed. "But, really, Rose, she was laughing and talking in the most giddy manner, and Gerald was bending forward to get all the face nearly touched hers."

"And that is our future vicar's wife! Well, I shall take care my daughters do not see much of her." And Mrs. Maynard drew herself up with a kind of lofty indignation, as some fresh victim of misery came into the room.

Poor Beatrix! Her numerous delinquencies were the subject of many afternoon tea gossips, and had been ever since she came to Hillchester, four years ago. She certainly was a trifle "fast," her fun, in addition to being a "blue stocking," and having taken her degree at Oxford, she had a most unreasonable interest in the working classes—not a mere ladylike interest, which contented itself with calling at the houses with a few words of good advice and a tract. Ah, no! she had always some plan, or "craze," as the good people of Hillchester called it, for their benefit on hand—classes for the young girls, ambulance lectures, cookery—in fact, what not?

For the conventionalities of society she cared not at all. She never attended the afternoon teas, therefore she heard no gossip.

She had been known even to take the broom off the lame old crossing sweeper at the corner of the road and work away in earnest until there was a passage fit for a queen to walk over.

And in spite of all, the vicar of Hillchester had asked her to become his wife. Well, as the leaders of society in Hillchester remarked with ominous sighs, wonders never cease!

Nevertheless, it must be confessed that Rev. John Kenrick was in no very comfortable frame of mind a week later he wended his way somewhat slowly toward his lady love's abode.

The gossip which had begun in Mrs. Maynard's drawing room had spread all over the town. He did, for it should have been an hour later, and Jennie and her mother were quite alone.

"Trix, will you forgive me for letting that horrid scandal trouble me, even for one moment?" he cried, "but, I feel I shall never forgive myself."

"Yes, I will forgive you," Trix answered, gayly, the last shadow gone from her honest blue eyes; "only you must never do it again, as the children say."

The vicar's low-breathed answer sounded like a blessing, and then Beatrix hurried him off to see what further means they could devise for the poor woman's comfort during the night.

A forthright later all Hillchester was thrown into a state of dire consternation by the news that Beatrix Harcourt had scarlet fever, and was, moreover, so dangerously ill that the doctor almost despaired of her life. Truly, a universal calamity might have befallen the town, for Beatrix's illness put a period to the perpetual topic of conversation, both in the homes of the rich and poor.

It happened during one of the worst day's of Beatrix's illness that Mrs. Morris and her friend, Mrs. Maynard, were in the midst of the usual gate lead to Beatrix's home. To their astonishment they saw a large crowd of people waiting just outside the door—women with babies in their arms, girls who had stolen a few minutes out of their dinner hour, even one or two tall youths and laboring men.

In a moment the door opened and a maidservant spoke a few words to the anxious watchers. Evidently it was not good news, for with one accord they slowly and silently turned to go away, but not before the lesson was learned, though it was bitter, for each felt "what would these good people have cared had I been in Beatrix Harcourt's place?"

But Beatrix, dangerous as her illness was, did not die, and six months later Hillchester was the scene of a greater rejoicing than had been known for many a long year, while the wonderful arches, with their various devices, the glad faces of the people, the children with their flower-laden baskets and the church bells ringing out their sweet messages far and wide, all combined to show the love and respect with which their vicar and his bride had so deservedly gained in the hearts of their people.—Ethel Beatrice Wadlow, in Madame.

It was a month later, and Beatrix Harcourt was walking swiftly along the dusty road leading to Castlefields, carrying a small basket containing some delicacy for the sick woman she was going to see. The sound of wheels made her turn her head, and the next moment a deep, musical voice said pleasantly: "Miss Harcourt, are you again bound on the same journey? Now, do let me have the pleasure of giving you a lift."

Beatrix hesitated one moment, then she answered frankly, "Thank you so much. I know Jennie, that poor crippled child I told you about? Well, I have had a note from her this morning to say her mother is very ill and there is no one to do anything for her."

Gerald Morton looked admiringly down at the fair face beside him. It was the young man of Hillchester who had given Beatrix Harcourt the name of "the fair philanthropist," and it spoke well for the girl that even in the fastest circles her name was never mentioned but with respect.

When Beatrix reached the little cottage, which lay close to a wood five miles from Hillchester, she found everything in a state of confusion. One glance at the poor woman showed her to be in the high stage of fever and slightly delirious, while an ominous crimson rash was beginning to make its appearance on her face and neck.

"Why, Jennie, your mother has the fever," Beatrix exclaimed, rapidly. "Haven't you sent for a doctor, child, and is there no neighbor who would come and help to nurse her?"

"I wrote to the doctor, miss, when I sent your note, but he has not been yet, and as to neighbors, miss, there are none for a mile or more."

All the morning Beatrix waited, doing all she could for the poor sick woman, and that afternoon was well on its way when the welcome rap, which surely told of the doctor's appearance, sounded at the door.

Beatrix literally flew to open it, and found herself face to face not with the doctor, but the vicar.

"Your frock will be all right when it is dry; it is good, substantial stuff." "Men don't understand those things." "I assure you—"

"Never mind—I don't care. There's our carriage; I had better hurry. I hope you will call and see us," as she stopped to say good-bye. Then, with a slightly trembling voice, "I don't forget what I have to thank you for. I shall never forget it. Good-bye." And as the last man ever were bidding such an affectionate farewell to?" said Mary Moore, the "bachelor" friend she was touring with.

"Know him, in the vulgar conventional sense I dont, but know him for a gentleman and a brave man who has saved my life."

"You needn't go into such heroics." All the same Mary Moore was more interested in the story than she would condescend to confess.

If we were not prejudiced, and had eyes for anything else but the shops, we should admire Oxford street on a fine day in October. There are some really lovely sunset effects from the Marshall and Snelgrove's. Nevertheless, "How I wish I was back at Tregurrian," thought Mabel.

"That velvet is lovely, I will do up my old hat, the one I wore at Tregurrian, I am fond of that hat," and she went into the shop.

She was conducted to a counter—"Here, Walker, are you serving?"

"No, sir."

A tall fair man came forward. Mabel looked at him, stared hard, and couldn't believe her eyes and he, poor fellow, turned pale. He, too, had had his dreams. But he had nothing to reproach himself with, he had taken no advantage whatever, not even called when invited. He was brave then, he was more brave now.

"What can I do for you, madam?"

"Some velvet, please, something cheap—the very commonest you have is good enough."

But she worried over it, and was hard to please somehow.

With a cool "good-morning" she went.

* * * * * * *

"Mary, Mary, put down that wretched paint brush, what are you working over that thing for? I hate the very sight of pictures, and all that rubbish."

"Why, what is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, nothing is the matter, I am all right, only I am the most vile, ungrateful wretch that ever lived. I have behaved infamously, disgracefully; I wish to goodness I had never been born; I wish we lived on a desert island."

"Do tell me what is the matter?"

"I've seen him again, I've seen him again, and I tell you I have behaved like a cad. Yes," she went on hysterically, "he's in a shop, he served me, called me 'madam,' and his name is Walker."

"Good heavens! you don't say so; how awfully annoying. You took his arm, too, didn't you Mabel?"

"I didn't take his arm," furiously, "for I took his hand; and I will tell you what I am going to do. I am going back to the shop to-morrow, and I shall ask him to come and see my pictures and have tea."

"Please yourself of course; I shall be out."

* * * * * * *

"Jim, dear," said Mrs. Walker, "did you notice that little man with long hair and a velvet coat who just bought a red necktie?"

"Yes; was he a brother of the brush, Mabel?"

"That's Mary Moore's fiance. I can't say I feel inclined to change; donic be conceited; that's my rone. Come and look at my show room: I have made it perfectly lovely."—Golden Penny.

ONLY A CLERK.

"I am sorry to disturb you, but the tide is coming up rapidly, and you have only just time to get round the point."

Mabel Rorke was so engrossed in her sketch she had forgotten everything else. There certainly had been a young man hovering about for the last half hour, but she had a soul above young men, and barely noticed him.

"I am very much obliged to you. I will move in a few minutes."

"Excuse me, you must come immediately," and he snatched up her paint box. "Run, run," he said. "What a fool I have been to leave it so long."

It was terrible work running through the heavy sand, hearts pumping like steam-engines with fear, and when at last knee-deep in water they turned the point the strong-minded young woman was disgracefully near fainting.

"You can rest now," he said kindly; "we are safe."

"I shall be all right in a minute," she panted.

"No hurry, I will be packing the easel and things."

"You are an artist, I see," she said as she saw how neatly he packed up. "I thought you looked like one; don't be too severe on my poor daub."

"I am not an artist," he said, coloring slightly, "and it is not a poor little daub. I ventured to admire it from a distance when I ought to have been watching the tide."

"It is very kind of you to say so. Shall we go on now?"

"If you feel able. Let me carry your things; it is a rough walk. If you will take my hand I can help you over the stones."

"Thank you—there I go again. How abominable slippery the rocks are."

"You must take my hand," and she was not sorry to cling tight.

"What a mess I am in; look at my poor frock."

"Your frock will be all right when it is dry; it is good, substantial stuff."

"Men don't understand those things."

"I assure you—"

"Never mind—I don't care. There's our carriage; I had better hurry. I hope you will call and see us," as she stopped to say good-bye. Then, with a slightly trembling voice, "I don't forget what I have to thank you for. I shall never forget it. Good-bye."

"Now sir, what do you think of this?" asked the shopman patronizingly, as he displayed an opal changeful as the shifting sunlight on a misty sea. It's exactly the lady's else, making allowances, of course, she won't want to wear it over 'er glove.

"Are not opals unlucky?" said I endeavoring to decipher the price.

"Oh, we don't hold with such superstition," replied the jeweller loftily, "but they do say one will keep you from being poisoned."

"Then I shall leave it for the next rich widow," I answered. "But what is the price of this?"

I alluded to an emerald set amid pearls, which I already saw glittering on the loveliest hand in the world. He extracted it with a silent respect he borrowed from my eagerness, and made a measurement while I watched him, my heart beating madly. The size was exactly the size; he price—but this is a detail. I decided upon it. The shopman thanked me courteously, and I leaned against the counter, feeling like one who was receiving a great favor. But when I fumbled in my pockets for the notes and heard their crisp crackle my confidence returned, and then as I watched the splendid thing flashing in its violet bed I believed I must after all be a rich man, unknown to myself, so great was the suggestion of unlimited wealth thus conveyed.

"I should like a piece of glass on the inside of the case lid," I observed carelessly. "Is it usual?"

"That's looking-glass?" queried the lapidary, glancing up from a surreptitious examination of the notes. "Yes, sir."

I nodded. I knew I must be getting red.

"Well," he remarked tolerantly, "it's not exactly usual, but it's a pretty idea—lightens the attraction of the gem, makes the lady see the present from two points of view."

"Hardly an advantage sometimes," I observed; "but can you do it?"

"Well, yes, I should think," he replied condescendingly.

"Then do it, please, and I shall stand the racket!" I answered magnificently.

He hurried away to effect the alteration, his place being taken by a baldheaded gentleman who wore spectacles, and talked to himself somewhat jerkingly, as one would to a person of weak intellect, while I formulated piratical schemes, and asked him possible questions with a gravity equaling his own.

When I left the shop I headed straight for Bloomsbury Square, but remembering that she might be just then occupied with domestic duties, decided to call later in the day. Even the ring in my pocket gave me no additional confidence, and I began to think it was not royal enough. Edging my way to Regent's Park, I hunted out a quiet spot and sat down to examine it at leisure. It was glorious still, but somehow not so glorious as I could have wished, and the everlasting flint would have worn well beneath it. Something more of the intellect than of sense, made me look up, and I saw her.

The sensation of being shot through the heart has not, I believe, received adequate literary expression, those who experienced it being preoccupied at the exact moment with other matters; but I think I know what it means. She stopped, and we gazed at each other. She was in deep black, but the pallor had gone from her oval cheeks. She made me a half-tentative bow. I sprang to my feet.

"I'm so glad to see you," I cried, "because—I want to restore something you forgot in the restaurant yesterday a few weeks ago."

"How kind of you!" she said, coming near.

"Oh, not at all," I replied; "but I hope you were not inconvenienced. I should have sent it, but I—I didn't."

I put my hand in my breast pocket hurriedly, and extracted my handkerchief, which in turn brought to light a sheaf of letters and a memoranda I shook out at her feet like a skilful conjurer. Then I tried the other pocket, but vainly. "It's a glove," I said at length, gathering up my belongings, "one of yours, don't you know."

"I recollect—I missed it," she said coldly.

What Becomes of Beasts That Die a Natural Death.

"What becomes of wild animals that die in the woods?" said the naturalist. "I mean wild animals that are not killed by hunters. I have often seen it said that carry marks of their age shortly as human beings are carried off, but what becomes of their bodies? I have never heard of any one coming across a dead bear or fox or wolf, cat in the woods that had died from natural causes. I have never heard of any one finding even the skeleton of a wild animal in the woods that did not show evidence somewhere that the beast had met its death through violence. But an unimjured skeleton or body of a wild animal without a wound, I have never heard of.

"I found once in the woods of McKean county, Pa., the skeletons of *two enormous bucks with their ant*lers locked together. It was plain that the two animals had been engaged in mortal combat, during which their horns had become entangled, and it being impossible to break the lock thus made, both bucks succumbed to exhaustion and starvation. Another time I found the body of a doe in the woods, and near by lay the mutilated remains of a big rattlesnake. The story of the two bodies was plain to me. The deer, true to its nature, had attacked the snake, but the snake had succeeded in fastening the deer with its fangs before the sharp hoofs of the animal had killed it. I have come upon many other dead bodies and skeletons of wild animals at different times in the woods, but never found one that did not show unquestionable evidence that the beast had died from violence of some kind. So the mystery as from natural causes remains.—New York Sun.

An Irishman's Chivalry.

William Smith O'Brien, the leader of the National party of Ireland, who was transported in 1849, had none of the gifts which attract the multitude. He was not an orator, his manners were not winning, and he made few intimacies.

But his character and his well-poised head put him at the head of the Nationalists, whose purpose was to secure the independence of Ireland. An anecdote related in Sir Charles Gavan Duffy's book of reminiscences, "My Life in Two Hemispheres," shows the chivalry of the man.

He had a duel in the day when that savage method of settling disputes was the custom, and the two men were placed opposite to each other.

"Fire at the signal. One, two, three —fire!" was about to be given, O'Brien cried:

"Stop! No signal, I pray."

His opponent's second stepped forward and said with asperity, "This is very irregular, sir. What do you wish to say?"

"I wish," answered O'Brien, "to call your attention to the fact that the gentleman opposite me has let the cap fall off his pistol."

UNCLE RUSSEL SAGE GIVES ADVICE TO A BOY.

The Sage of Wall Street Thinks There Are As Many Opportunities Today as Ever—Believes Absolute Honesty to Be Necessary to the Accumulation of Wealth.

If there is a man in New York who is competent to give advice on the art of making money it is Russell Sage. He started without worldly advantage, and he has piled up a fortune of forty or fifty million dollars.

He made every penny of it himself, and he is making more right along. Russell Sage has devoted his whole life to making money. He has practically no other pleasure. He does not even care for power, as do most men who have accumulated large fortunes. He looks upon display as a waste.

A boy went to Mr. Sage to get his advice. He was very bright, self-reliant youth, and he honestly wished for Mr. Sage's opinion. The rich man talked to him more openly than it is likely that he would have talked to a man.

The youth first met Mr. Sage coming out of his office, and requested an interview. The financier said that he was very busy that day, and he wasn't sure that he could spare time any day.

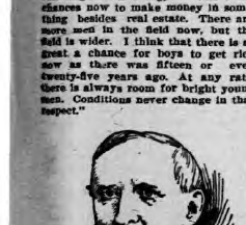
The boy went back to the office again and persuaded the cashier to admit him to Mr. Sage's room. The millionaire was tipped back in a chair his feet resting against a radiator. He was examining the tape of a stock ticker.

"I have come," said the caller, "to ask you about things that are of deep interest to me and to all young men just starting out on their careers. Will you try to answer them as if you were advising your own sons."

"Why, yes; I'll answer them to the best of my ability," he replied.

"What are the opportunities for boys to get on nowadays? Are there as many opportunities as there were fifteen or twenty years ago?"

"Of course there are," responded Mr. Sage with energy. "There are chances now to make money in some thing besides real estate. There are more men in the field now, but the field is wider. I think that there is as great a chance for boys to get rich now as there was fifteen or even twenty-five years ago. At any rate there is always room for bright young men. Conditions never change in that respect."



RUSSELL SAGE.

"Do you think that there is any one business or profession that offers more opportunities than the others? There is a complaint met with everywhere about overcrowding."

"I do not think there is any one special avenue which offers chances better than others. It depends largely upon the man."

"What about your business, Mr Sage? Is there an opening in it for a bright young man?"

The financier chuckled in his peculiar way and took his feet down from the radiator. He was becoming interested. He looked at the quotations which may or may not have meant much to him, before he answered.

"Yes," he said, "I believe that my line still offers opportunities for young men to get wealth. But I won't say that it offers better chances than any other business. You must know that it is not every young man who can make it a success."

Again Mr. Sage looked at the ticker and his thoughts flew away. His questioner asked him how he had started in life, particularly about his boyhood, of which almost nothing has ever been printed.

"Well, I started out very young," replied the man who is worth more than $40,000,000. "I was only fifteen years old when I began as a clerk in a store. I stayed in that store for four years. When I was nineteen I started in business for myself.

"And you have never worked for any one but yourself since?"

"No; I have been my own employer ever since."

There was a suggestion of triumph in Mr. Sage's tone. It was plain that the thought gave him great satisfaction.

"Did you have many hard struggles before you reached the top of the ladder?"

"I had many hard knocks. Every young man must expect that when he starts out."

"How long did you go to school? What kind of an education did you have?"

"I educated myself," was the reply and again that shade of triumph was in his voice. "I used to study at night and got my knowledge at odd times. I belonged to a debating society, too. I used to be one of the best speakers in the club."

This will surprise many people who are familiar only with the later years of Mr. Sage's life. It surprised the boy, who had read a deal about him. He said something about Mr. Sage giving up public speaking.

"No," returned Mr. Sage, "I kept up public speaking for many years, until I became so old that my voice weakened.

"Do you think a boy should have any special training for a business career?"

"No. All knowledge comes in handy when you are in an office. I did a lot of general reading when I was a boy and I have never regretted it."

"Would you advise a young man to go to college if he can?"

"A college education comes in handy in the way that I have mentioned. It adds to the young man's fund of general knowledge. Most young men could spend four years to better advantage, though."

"What would you suggest as a good investment for a young man's savings?" he was asked. "You know that there are thousands of young men who have saved from $50 to $100 who are at a loss to know what to do with it. Is there any way in which so small a sum can be invested?"

"Certainly. There are a number of ways in which a young man can place his money so that it will yield him a good return. I could buy one share in a good railroad stock for him, and of some solid bank would be a good thing. If he hasn't money enough to buy a whole share he can find some companies which sell half and even quarter shares. But he must be very careful. Let him be sure that it is perfectly good stock and that he is in no danger of losing his capital. When he makes a profit on the principal he may be a little more reckless, perhaps. But a young man should never lose his principal, for if he does, he must start all over again."

"Then you don't believe in the axiom, 'Nothing risk, nothing gain?'"

"That's all very well, but you must never risk your principal."

The caller said that he had been sometimes asked to invest a few dollars in speculating in corn and wheat and stock.

"Don't ever do it," said Mr. Sage vigorously. "You would lose everything."

"If a young man saves his money and invests in one or two good shares at a time, there is no reason why he should not be rich, is there?"

"None in the world, but few youths realize that," declared the financier.

There was a point which troubled the young man seeking advice. He asked Mr. Sage if he thought honesty was necessary in order to succeed in business and if most millionaires were honest.

"Why, of course a man must be honest in his dealings, or he would soon cease to be trusted by those with whom he does business," declared Mr. Sage. "The millionaires of today must have been honest or they would not be rich. It is impossible for a dishonest man to stay rich any length of time."

Another thing that bothered the young man was put in the form of a question:

"Do millionaires sometimes feel that their wealth is a burden and that they would rather not have so much money?"

"Do I look as if my money was a burden?" asked Mr. Sage. "Wealth cannot become a burden unless it is foolishly invested. When you have your money in safe hands it cannot help being a comfort. To me, of course, it is a pleasure. I might have been as happy without it, but I would not care to make the experiment."

He laughed heartily at the suggestion and then his face asserted, "I know once what it was to be without it," he said, "and that is why I am not making a show with it now."

When Mr. Sage dismissed his caller he invited the young man to come again, saying: "I will be glad to talk with you. I take a great interest in boys."

It is interesting to know how this man, about whom so many hard things are said in Wall street, impressed the youth who had gone to him for advice.

"I shall always remember him as a kind and fatherly old gentleman," says the boy, "who took a deep and genuine interest in me and in all boys. He gave me time that I am sure was worth a lot of money and out of pure good will and generosity."

There are no boys in Russell Sage's home, no children at all. The lonely old man has long passed the three score and ten allotted to man. Standing in the shadow of declining years, perhaps the sorrow of his childless life makes him feel a tender interest in other people's boys.

How the Brahmin Cleans His Teeth.

When the Brahmin cleans his teeth he must use a small twig cut from one of a number of certain trees, and before he cuts it he must make his act known to the gods of the woods.

He must notice in this cleanly habit every day. He must abstain on the sixth, the eighth, the ninth, the fourteenth, the fifteenth, and the last day of the moon, on the days of new and full moon, on the Tuesday in every week, on the day of the constellation under which he was born, on the day of the week and on the day of the month which correspond with those of his birth, at an eclipse, at the conjunction of the planets, at the equinoxes and other unlucky epochs, and also on the anniversary of the death of his father or mother.

Anyone who cleans his teeth with his bit of stick on any of the above mentioned days will have hell as his portion.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Duke Carlton paced restlessly back and forth on the platform at the station of D——. He was a man twenty-six years of age, upon whom nature had certainly lavished an undue amount of good looks, but whose face was marred at present by a look of contempt for everything upon which his glance might chance to fall. And it was scarcely to be wondered at, for in just nine hours, as time was told by the large, slowly ticking clock in the waiting room at the depot, Duke Carlton was to be married. And here he was forty miles from his destination, and had just been told by the station agent that the trains had changed time, his train having left at precisely twenty minutes before his arrival, and there would not be another before eight that evening! Eight—the hour set for his marriage with sweet Lilla Houghton. What would she, could she, think? What a position to put her in. Already he imagined the crowded church, the sea of eager faces, the waiting bride and Duke. Duke, it must reach the city at E—— in time for the ceremony, but how?

Presently he walked back to the little ticket office, where the agent was laboriously writing.

"Do you know if there is any sort of conveyance around here that I could get to take me to the next village? I would pay well for one, as it is imperative that I should reach E—— before night."

The agent calmly finished the sentence he was writing, pushed the cap he was wearing on the back of his head still further back, and having thoughtfully chewed the end of his pen for about a half a minute, replied:

"I dunno. You might be able to get old Harmon's horse and buggy if 'tain't let. He keeps the tavern 'bout a stone's throw from here, an' sometimes lets his horse; but he wants a tarnation price. You can try him though; that's his chimney you can just over the yeller house there." And he rose lazily and pointed vaguely down the street, where a number of small houses were visible, among which was one of more pretentious, having been recently built and just received its coat of priming.

Duke walked rapidly from the depot and hastened in the direction of the "tavern," keeping the chimney in view as he feared a mistake, and soon found himself before a dirty, illkept, ill-looking place, from which an odor of boiled cabbage and onions was now issuing. To his loud and twice repeated knocking the door was finally opened by an unduly specimen of womankind from which he would at any other time have recoiled in disgust; but his necessity was urgent, so, stepping forward, he raised his hat and courteously asked if he might see the proprietor.

After a prolonged stare, as if mentally digesting the word, she answered with a surly grunt:

"Ain't t' home, but I'm 'is wife 'nd we don't no secrets. What do you want?"

Duke smiled in spite of his perplexity, before he replied.

"I merely came to see if I could engage some one to take me over to the village next door. I must reach E—— tonight; I believe I can get a carriage there."

"There ain't no horse to hum," she said, "but Abe would take you over in the mornin'. Du you want lodgin' for the night?" she added, an eager look in her eyes at the mention of taking the place of the previous vacant stare.

"No, thank you," said Duke; "if I cannot find a vehicle of some description I suppose I must walk, for I must certainly get there to-night. Can you tell me about how far it is to the next village, and which is the nearest way to go?"

"It's four mile an' a half by the railroad an' nigh onto seven if you take the road," was the surly answer, as she saw there was not even a remote chance of "Abe's" making something in the morning. "But 'tain't any use likes to go by the railway, 'count of the narrer tunnel, though it's a deal nearer."

"Thanks. Then if I take to the track here and go straight ahead I shall come out at the village at the end of four miles?"

A nod was his answer, followed, as he turned away, by the words:

"Four an' a half, I said."

So Duke started to walk the four and a half miles, concluding he must take the shortcut, if he could, as he had not a superabundance of time; there might be some little delay even after he arrived at the village. So he began his journey at once, without even stopping for dinner.

He had passed the third mile post when he reached the tunnel.

"Ah!" he said aloud. "Here is the tunnel of which she warned me. I wonder how long it is? What a dismal hole it looks like. It does look like a ticklish place, that's a fact—small, one track affair. I don't half like the idea of going through it. Wonder if I'd have made it if I'd taken the road? Well, it's too late now—I'm in for it."

He then groped along for a short quarter of a mile, feeling his way carefully by the wall. Not a thought of any actual danger had entered his head—so full of his fair bride to be—until suddenly a dull rumble struck his ears, and caused him to wonder from whence the sound proceeded. Another instant and there flashed across his brain the horrible reality. A train was coming, from which direction he could not tell, but certainly coming, and if the tunnel proved much longer, the fact was undeniable that he should be rushed beneath the iron monster there alone in the darkness and no one would know his fate.

He listened, laying his ear to the rail; it was coming in the rear. He quickened his steps—he ran—ran as rapidly as he dared for fear of a misstep which would hinder instead of advance his ends.

Now the roar comes nearer; he can imagine the train as it is tearing along, carrying death to him. His clothing [illegible] hair is standing on end. The sweat pours down his face, and still this darkness, still this louder roar of the engine as it comes steadily nearer and nearer, and his strength is nearly exhausted.

At last a gleam of light greets him at the farther end of the tunnel. Oh, what hope it inspires! He thinks of the races he has won at college, and determines to take a fresh start. Yes, he will run as if running a race, and forget the huge monster behind him, which seems to paralyze his limbs and prevent all motion; he will run, run—he must win—how terrible the result if he does not! He thinks of Lula, his sweetheart, his wife that was to have been. Shall he ever see her again?

The light ahead grows more and more distinct, but his breath is going, and the train behind is rushing on fast; it seems quite close now; he can almost feel its breath upon him; surely, surely another moment and he will have gained or lost—which? He must make that short space! What a thing it is, this being face to face with death! He cannot hold out much longer; he feels he must lose—and what then? Death will come after one more effort. He clears the tunnel, leaps from the track, and falls headlong down the bank on the side, saved—but unconscious, while the heavily loaded freight train passes by.

But the engineer had seen him jump, and not being able to ascertain whether he had been struck by the cowcatcher or not, stopped the train and went back in search of him; and when Duke's attention regained consciousness he was lying on a seat in the depot in the village for which he had started some hours before.

He was not seriously injured. His fall had but stunned him, and in an hour he was quite ready to proceed on his journey, a little pale, it is true, and shaky in the lower extremeties, but otherwise rejoicing that he had succeeded in his quest, and would be in time for his wedding, with thirty minutes to spare.

Duke Carlton does not believe in the theory that a person's hair turns white in a night from sudden fright or sorrow, for his own raven locks show not a trace of silver; and surely no one ever had a more terrible fright or a narrower escape than did he on his wedding day, when he ran a race for his bride.

THE FRENCH HONOR.

In the Army It Is of a Particular Variegated Kind.

"No," said the French artillery officer quoted by the Cleveland Leader, "I have never done a thing that any man should be ashamed of."

"You don't mean to tell me that the advocate demanded.

"Never."

"You have never robbed a chicken coop?"

"Never, as I am a gentleman and a scholar."

"You have never violated the sanctity of an oath?"

"No, I have never thought of doing such a thing."

"You have never gone into your friend's house and abused his hospitality?"

"Of course not."

"You swear that you are guiltless of all those things, do you?"

"I swear it."

"You have never cheated your landlady?"

"Never."

"Now, on your honor as a soldier, tell me are you not guilty of all the crimes that I have mentioned?"

The officer went pale, and replied:

"Ah, monsieur, why have you appealed to my soldierly honor? Why do you compel me to confess that I have lied, robbed hen roops, abused my friends' confidence, perjured myself, and left my board bill unpaid? As a soldier of France I could do these things and still remain unsullied; but on my honor as a soldier I may not deny them. Hand me the six-shooter."

Befo' de War Style.

In these days of crazy fads almost any price will be paid for the gratification of a sense. A novelty is presented by a middle-aged man of wealth who lives in a handsome house near the lower end of Central Park. His father was a slaveholder, and old times are fondly recalled by a return to ante-bellum conditions. Negro servants are employed with the understanding that when there are no visitors in the house they shall call the owner "Master" or "Mars John." It is [illegible] days to hear them. "Here, Sam, you —— black scoundrel, black my boots." "Yas, Mars John," "George you rascal, saddle my horse." "Yas, marster." "Henry, you'll get a thousand lashes if you don't hurry up that fire." "Yas, sah, Mars John, I'is bu'in fas' 's I-kin." In the presence of guests the servants say "Mr. Barcus," "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," while he addresses them with dignity and respect.—New York Press.

Has Its Compensations.

I notice that there's a good deal of ague in this part of the country," said the tourist, who stopped at the farmhouse for a drink of water. "That's a real drawback. It unfits a man for work entirely, does it not?"

"Gener'ly it does," said the sallow woman who handed him a tin cup. "Still, when John has a right hard fit of the shakes we fasten the churn handle to him and he brings the butter inside of fifteen minutes."

A WOMAN'S WILL.

"It's no use trying," said Phemie, "mother hates me, and everything I do is wrong."

"Your mother can't help it, Phemie," said Doctor Jasper. He was the new medical man, in huge favor with Mrs. Albatross, Phemie's mother. "Your mother is highly strung—quite a woman of genius—and allowances must be made for her temperament, my dear young lady. Temperament rules everything."

Indeed, Mrs. Albatross' temperament seemed to rule Doctor Jasper, the parson, the squire, the parish, but it did not rule Phemie.

"Look here," said the girl—she was just past twenty—"you and mother are always croaking about me, I know, but you do nothing to help me. At least I think you would, but you're afraid—"

"Your mother used to take an interest in you, but you did not meet her half way. Is not that so?"

"No, it isn't. When I was sixteen she was fad of dressing me up in last century costume and making a doll of me—not my style at all—just to show off her own cleverness and queerness at my expense. She said I looked delightful dressing could make me fit to be seen."

"Well?" said Doctor Jasper, who was a rising young medico of thirty, as he looked gravely and judiciously at the pretty, much tried girl, who only looked half in his good will.

"Well," said Phemie, "every one laughed, and I showed mother I would not stand it."

"And then?"

"Then she packed me off to school. The interness said I was sort of dazed for a time, as if I had been ill treated—and so I had—and quite neglected, but they were kind to me there, and I was very happy for more than a year except in the holidays, which were always odious. Then you came along."

And Phemie paused and stole a doubtful glance at the doctor.

"What then?" said the doctor, like a person coldly inquiring for ordinary information, yet with a certain little twinkle in his eye which did not escape the aggrieved Phemie.

"Then," said the girl, "I thought you were my friend at first, but I don't now. Are you?"

At this moment Mrs. Albatross entered, and, turning sharply on Phemie, said with a snap:

"I suppose you haven't fed the fowls or sorted the linen or done anything else that you were told to do, you idle girl?"

"I was called when Doctor Jasper came, because you could not be found."

"I'm sick of your excuses. Doctor Jasper does not wish to see you."

There was quite an altered tone, as Phemie shrunk away out of the room: "Do you mind coming up to my sitting room? I want to have a talk with you about those changes at the infirmary. I am sure that you will agree with me and you will be most useful. We can't allow things to go on," et cetera.

Dr. Jasper always did agree with Mrs. Albatross, but somehow he molded her, and she usually came round to his opinion. He listened and she talked. He could wait, and when he had taken her bearings—without ever interrupting or contradicting—she listened and he talked, and out then, but next time, she echoed his opinions and fancied they were all her own.

"It is such a comfort to find a sensible man to talk to in a stupid place like this," said she, sinking down confidingly upon the doctor's as he sat smiling and agreeing with her.

Mrs. Albatross had worried one husband into the grave—she was too clever for him—but intellectual vivacity, imagination and enterprise made her an interesting companion. She was only a little past forty, and very well preserved, and she meant to marry Doctor Jasper.

Whether it was hypnotism or will power, the doctor came again and again and would not send in his bill, and the doctor's bill never was paid. He paid himself.

"Don't speak to me," said Phemie hurriedly, as she met the doctor coming down stairs after a long confab with her mother. "Mother's about. She's out all to-morrow afternoon. I've got to paint the cellar door." Jasper passed out with a sympathetic smile. She knew he would call and advise her about painting the doors. He did call.

"What a deal you know about mixing paints and things! I'm sure I want good advice a great deal more than mother does. But then, I'm not clever like mother," added Phemie, with a little aggrieved pout. "So it's not worth my while talking to me."

"I do feel for you," said the doctor, with an unusual warmth of manner. "I have done all I could to get your mother to be fair to you, Phemie"—he had never called her Phemie before, and she felt her color rise. "What's the matter?" he added hastily, for suddenly Phemie's eyes filled with tears, and she just went off then and there and left the paint pots and things without saying another word.

* * * * * * *

Doctor Jasper's visits became more frequent. Mrs. Albatross was constantly seen about the village with him. They met in cottages. She was devoted, so she said, to nursing the sick. It was certainly a new development. She was never seen with her daughter, nor was Jasper, but he saw her daughter oftener than she knew. Still it seemed less and less possible to do without Mrs. Albatross. Her ability, her cooked foods and port wine in "cases;" her influence with the squire, who disliked and obeyed her; with the parson, whose good will was important to the doctor, and who was afraid of Mrs. Albatross, for she overawed him in the chair at parish meetings, picked holes in his sermons and organized the penny readings, which he disliked, under his very nose and this and a good deal more—for Mrs. Albatross was a woman and not above feminine arts—put Jasper in rather a tight place.

He knew that Mrs. Albatross wanted to marry him, and there were days —yes, whole days—when he really thought he should be obliged to marry Mrs. Albatross.

The moment came. It was in the little sitting room up stairs.

Something had happened. Doctor Jasper saw that plainly enough.

The lady was flushed and excited, and he missed the usual confidential, hand squeeze.

"I—I wanted to see you," she said, and paused. "Nothing has come to your ears, I suppose?"

The doctor looked inquiringly.

"Well, then, I'm dreadfully troubled, annoyed beyond measure, put out. Of course, you know my maid, Susan. She has been with me ten years, and is not a bad girl."

"What on earth do you mean? Do be plain. Surely with me you might be quite plain." And he moved a little nearer, feeling at that moment a curious kind of attraction which almost repelled him to lay his hand upon her arm and force her to be quite honest. "Don't keep me on tenterhooks," he said eagerly. "Tell me."

"I will," said the lady. "I feel I can rely on anything. I don't think I have any one friend in the world—at least, not like you. No one understands me, no one has helped me as you have, and we've got to part. That is all—"

"What on earth?" said Jasper, really shaken and troubled—he had never seen her grow pale like that, or her lips quiver like that, and she was not of the crying sort, and she did not cry now—"what—what has Susan been saying?"

"Only that it's all over the place, and that she thought at last she ought to tell me—"

"You don't mean, you don't mean"—He couldn't quite say it.

"Yes I do," she said. And she rose and walked up and down the room full of a sort of angry vexation, mingled evidently with a conflict of passionate feeling she could neither conceal nor subdue.

"Sit down," he said.

He had risen. He took her arm. She was positively trembling. He led her to the sofa by the fire.

"I shall have to leave this place," she said in a sort of hard voice.

The angry tears came into her eyes He had never seen her weep. This was the nearest approach to it.

"I know what you are going to say. Don't say it. No, you shan't go. You are useful. The people trust you. It is your sphere. I am the marplot Why should you go?" said Jasper, hardly measuring his words. "Why should either of us go? Why not stay —and stay—stay together?"

"You don't mean it?"

Men at such times are more fools than knaves.

"Yes, yes—I do."

Jasper had taken her hand. The woman with the lion will, the keen intellect, naïve, self-contained, which seemed at times as hard as nails, turned toward him, and in another moment fell crying and laughing hysterically into his arms. At that moment, as all luck would have it, Phemie, hearing unusual sounds, and thinking some one needed assistance, entered.

"Go and fetch some sal volatile. Your mother is not very well."

Indeed, at that moment Mrs. Albatross seemed to have really fainted away. Whether she fainted or not no one will ever know. The doctor himself was doubtful.

* * * * * * *

Jasper never entered the house again. He went home, packed up his things, wrote a hurried note in a disguised hand to Phemie, who on the following day would be twenty-one years old, and came into five hundred pounds a year, which had been left her, to the disgust of her mother, by her fond father—and Jasper went to bed.

* * * * * * *

He must have risen early. No one at his lodgings saw him go out. His hot water was brought up at eight o'clock. His boots had not been put out over night.

* * * * * * *

The servant knocked again at nine. The door was not locked. She entered. She saw boxes packed and labeled "Left till called for." The bed was empty.

* * * * * * *

The station was a mile off. There were only two passengers by the early train.

When Mrs. Albatross came down to breakfast she inquired for Phemie. Phemie was gone.

A Beggar's Retort.

An anecdote of Bishop Thomas W. Dudley serves to show his own words the secrets of his success:

When it was first known in the city in which he was settled that he was to go to Kentucky some of his friends were disposed to be critical.

"You are not going to Kentucky, are you?" one said.

"Yes, indeed."

"Do you know what kind of a state that is? I saw in a paper that one man killed another in a Kentucky town for treading on a dog."

The bishop said nothing and the man continued impatiently:

"What are you going to do in a place like that?"

"I'm not going to tread on the dogs," was the calm reply.—Sioux City Journal.

FAMOUS MILITARY POSTS.

Thousands Can be Mustered Ready For Duty at a Moment's Notice.

Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, is again active after the long absence of the troops, and the new structures have their proper setting in the midst of the blue of Uncle Sam's uniforms. Jefferson Barracks has been occupied as a military post ever since the acquisition in 1803 of what was then called Louisiana. It is located on a splendid reservation, 1,400 acres in extent, and was used principally as a cavalry recruiting depot until 1894, when it was turned into a regularly garrisoned post. Since that date practically all the buildings have been remodeled and refurnished.

Fort Meade is another typical army post where many of the regulars will rest. It is located in the Black Hills, a few miles north of Deadwood, N. D. The scenery surrounding it is beautiful, the hills towering above it like an army of giants preparing to make a descent upon a pigmy establishment.

At Fort Sherman, on Lake Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, little will be done, but many a soldier will find a delicious spot for recuperation whenever the southern garrison duty is over with. It is in a delightful location, its foot being washed by the waters of the placid lake which forms a great emerald in a setting of tall mountains. It was at Fort Sherman that ex-Secretary Lamar witnessed the famous barrel incident which he told of in his report as the result of the inspection tour he reached Fort Sherman on the Fourth of July. In telling the story he says: "Americans are nothing if not patriotic, and so it is with the townspeople of Fort Sherman. They had their usual fireworks on the glorious Fourth, and in addition had gotten up a unique feature, which, however, resulted disastrously. It is doubtless true that the townspeople were influenced in their desire to impart novelty to their programme by the presence of the secretary of war, whom they desired to interest. The feature consisted in the descent of a mountain, over the timber slide, into the lake, by a man inside of a barrel. All the preparations were made, and the barrel with its human freight was let go. It rushed down the slide with dizzy velocity, but before it reached the bottom, to the horror of the spectators, it struck an obstruction, and dashed over a precipice for several thousand feet. The man was dead when picked up and the barrel was broken into pieces."

Fort Snelling is again filled with its quota of troops. It stands on a huge limestone bluff, over a hundred feet above the river, commanding a wide sweep of country. It was a formidable fortress in the earlier days of the century, and it would even now, did danger threaten, be a strong point of vantage. For over three-quarters of a century the grim old buildings, now roofed and strong of wall, have stood at the edge of the bluff, while, as the years have passed, new and more modern and more comfortable buildings have formed their rear line of the posts of civilization. It speaks much for the sentiment of the soldier that these picturesque old buildings have been allowed to stand.

In September, 1820, the fort was begun, and finished two years later. It was strongly built of stone, and was intended primarily as a defence from Indian attacks, a refuge for settlers, and a rendezvous for troops, who might have military duty of many kinds in the vast territory of which this was the only governmental fortification.

The fort was laid out on the bluff overlooking the two rivers, in an irregular diamond-shaped form, with stone bastions or towers at each of the four angles of the high stone wall which shut in the fort proper. The towers of the men are still standing, yet, with the round tower, which was located at the extreme western angle of the fortifications. The hexagonal bastion which was erected on the Minnesota side has been used for a period of masonry, looking out from its deep port holes down over the Minnesota valley.

The fort as it now stands is one of the most important in the United States. Certainly there is none more important in the Central West. It has command of a territory a thousand miles in diameter, of which it is the focal point, with such railroad facilities that a full regiment might be thrown into the field or into any one of the large cities in its radius within twelve hours from the time of receiving orders to move. Thousands of men have been massed at this point when there were threatened Indian outbreaks, for distribution to northwestern points, and in case of serious difficulty not a mile more than Chicago or Milwaukee or Omaha, a thousand men could be on board the cars and on their way to the threatened point at any time of the day or night within three-quarters of an hour.

MET THE OLD MEMBERS.

INTERESTING SEAVICES HELD BY TRINITY ENDEAVORERS.

Meeting Led By Mrs. F. E. Woodruff—Number of State and County Officers Present—A Handsome Display.

An interesting and somewhat unique Christian Endeavor meeting was held last Monday in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, when a Thanksgiving service and reunion of the former members of the society since its organization, about thirteen years ago, was held under the direction of the prayer-meeting committee, of which Miss Ella C. Benedict is the chairman.

The service was led by Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, while Mrs. E. E. Anthony presided at the piano. There was a very large attendance, including many former members. From a number of former members who could not be present, letters were read showing that they had not lost interest in the welfare of the society. The meeting throughout was a very helpful one and will long be remembered by everyone present.

Among those present were State, county and local officers of the society, including F. G. Williams, of Rahway, president of the Union County Union; E. E. Anthony, treasurer of the State Union; Miss Florence G. Hawkins, president Plainfield Local Union; A. A. Lake, of Dunellen, second vice president Plainfield Local Union.

One very encouraging feature of the reunion was the handsome display of fruits and vegetables, which were brought in abundance by the young people. Over the pulpit desk there was arranged an arch and a portion of the fruits and vegetables were displayed therefrom. It presented an attractive sight. The members of the society will distribute the gifts among the poor of the church. The arrangement of the fruit and vegetable display was in charge of the flower committee of the society which is composed of Miss Gertrude Tier, Miss Beulah Waters, Miss Lizzie Denckinn, Miss Florence Smalley, Miss Louise Fisher, Miss Nellie McGinnis and Miss Bessie Martin.

GOT THEIR MONEY BACK.

Mr. Bondy's Lawyer Rattled With Plaintiffs Who Were Swindled.

John Keeley, Robert Guttridge and Joseph Blair, who went to Jersey City Monday to have Dr. Bondy brought here to answer to the charge of swindling them out of various sums of money, came back last night without their man, but with something better —their money.

Bondy's lawyer consented to pay their claims in full, if they would not prosecute the man, and this they agreed to do. Keeley's claim was for $24, but he demanded $7 more for trouble and worry it had caused him. He got it. Guttridge claimed $30 and Joseph Blair $65.

Willard Case, of Westervelt avenue, has resigned his position as bookkeeper at A. M. Runyon & Son's place of business.

Miss Amy Gertrude Burt, of West Seventh street, returns from Hackettstown today to spend Thanksgiving at home.

NEW SCHOOL STUDIES.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN NORTH PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

Advanced English and English Commercial Course to be Taken up—Fire Drills Discussed—Winter Course of Lectures.

There was an important meeting of the Borough Board of Education last Monday, and all of the members except Messrs. McCutcheon and Weit, were present. Heretofore there has been three courses in the High School classical, scientific and English. It was decided last Monday to add two courses, that will be of incalculable value to students. The courses are advanced English and an English commercial course. These new courses will be printed in a pamphlet form and distributed at once so that parents and scholars may become thoroughly acquainted with them. There will be a number of options offered in the junior and senior years.

The question of holding fire drills in the school was introduced and discussed somewhat. It was finally laid on the table to be taken up at the next meeting.

It was announced at the meeting that the winter course of lectures had been started, Prof. Metz, of Somerville, having given the first one recently. These lectures will be given about every two weeks by various persons of prominence and learning. Heretofore they have proved a great benefit to the scholars, and no doubt will continue to be beneficial.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff Have Been Married Five Years.

Monday evening a pleasant surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, of Coddington avenue, by a number of their friends. The occasion was the celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Huff's fifth wedding anniversary, and while they were cognizant of the fact, they were wholly unaware of the intended surprise. An evening of sociability, games, music, etc., was enjoyed by all and a bountiful repast was served during the festivities. A feature was the presentation to the host and hostess of a beautiful cut-glass dish, which they accepted with sincere thanks.

Those present to celebrate the happy event were:

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs C. C. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ryno, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haberle, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kitchen, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wooiston, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Waldron, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stryker, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, Mr. and Mrs. W. Williams, Mrs. Amy Lorton, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, the Misses Ella Hedden, Ethel Lorton, Emma Ryno, Ruth Stryker, and Messrs. Robt. Crosson, Arthur Mosher, Samuel Sorensen, W. J. Kitchen.

Sent to Industrial Home.

Kate Morris, colored, for a great many years a servant in the family of Chief T O Doane, has been taken to the Girls' Industrial Home, and it is quite likely that she will be taken to an asylum. Of late her mental condition has been gradually getting worse and Chief Doane was forced to have her taken to the Home.

WAR INDEMNITIES.

The Penalties Imposed By Nations Upon Their Conquered Foes.

Perhaps the most onerous terms ever imposed by a conqueror upon his defeated foe were those to which Germany subjected France in 1871, at the close of the historic conflict that culminated in the capitulation of Paris. They consisted of the cession of the major portion of Alsace and of Lorraine, including the great fortresses of Strasburg and of Metz, and the payment of war indemnity amounting to the colossal sum of $1,000,000,000. The entire civilized world was startled by the magnitude of the sum, and very widespread doubts were expressed as to whether poor France, which was believed to be crushed beyond recovery, would ever be able to pay. But these apprehensions proved to be unfounded, and the billion of dollars was paid with such rapidity and with so little apparent effort that Prince Bismarck and the German authorities, past and present, have never ceased to lament ever since that they did not stipulate for double the amount. This indemnity is worthy of especial notice, for the reason that it greatly exceeded the actual expense to which Germany was put by the war, and was therefore a punitive or "moral and intellectual damage" indemnity, to some extent, such as "Oom" Paul Kruger wanted to collect from England for the Jameson raid. In the war of 1870-71, the time was twenty-eight weeks from the entrance of German troops into French territory to the surrender of Belfort. The German troops engaged may be taken, for practical purposes, as an even million, the official figures of the active forces being 781,000 at the commencement of the war and 937,000 at its close. The total German losses are placed at 128,000, the killed alone numbering 29,000.

Germany therefore received in cash $35 a week for each man's services, or $8,000 for each man lost; on the whole pretty good pay. But Germany—or Prussia—has a habit that way. Only four years before the war with France she took $41,750,000 from Austria and her allies, beside $8,750,000 requisitioned during the campaign. This war lasted only a month. Prussia had 437,000 men in the field, and lost 11,000. The indemnity gave her $25 a week for each man's services, or $4,250 for each man lost. However, it was an enormously expensive war for Prussia, costing her some $115,000,000, so that the indemnity did not make her balance good.

It is thanks to the intervention of Russia that Japan was prevented from exacting an indemnity of colossal proportions at the close of her war with China. She was forced to content herself with a mere bagatelle of $161,000,000, covering in addition thereto the island of Formosa and the Pescadores, neither of which had ever been of any use, either financial or political, to China, and which will doubtless prove a constant source of much treasure and life before Japan can derive any profit therefrom. The war lasted about nine months and 80,000 troops were engaged on Japan's side, the indemnity paid, therefore, $60 a week for each man.

The Turko-Russian war of 1877 came to a close with the treaty of San Stefano, the terms of which were revised in 1878 by the congress of Berlin. They comprised, among other things, the surrender of the sultan's protectorate over Roumania and Servia, the practical abandonment to Austria of Herzegovina and of Bosnia, the grant of independence to Bulgaria and of autonomy to Rumelia, the Prince of Bulgaria remaining, however, subject to the sovereignty of the sultan. The only likewise provided for the cession of a strip of Turkish territory to Greece, but this clause was never enforced, and finally the Sublime Porte was compelled to pay a portion of indemnity to Russia amounting to the sum of $160,000,000. Russia demanded a much larger indemnity than that, however. For costs of the war she demanded $510,000,000, and for losses to Russian subjects and Russian commerce $251,000,000, a total of $701,000,000. The indemnity finally awarded to her in the treaty of Berlin amounted to $6,25 a week for each soldier engaged in the war.

Great Russia has received two indemnities of considerable amount from China. The first was one of $20,000,000 altogether, but part of it went in compensate merchants for opium delivered up to the Chinese government, and the portion specifically claimed on account of the expenses of the expedition just equalled the vote of credit. The second indemnity, of 1860, was about $10,000,000, or less than one-third of the vote of credit for the war. The settlement of Canada's claim for indemnity for the Fenian raids from this country is noteworthy. By the first raid Canada lost six men killed and thirty-one wounded; she had to call 20,000 volunteers to arms; she had to borrow from the treasury with 17,000 regulars and volunteers, as well as several gunboats on the rivers and lakes. Her farmers lost heavily, as the raid occurred at a busy time of the year; and she had to give away a lot of money in pensions and gratuities. Yet the United States did not pay a farthing compensation! When Canada pressed the matter on the home government it was assumed that it was not worth while making a claim, as "the amount of compensation would be so small."

No indemnity was exacted from Denmark at the close of the war of 1864, neither was any money exacted at the close of the war of 1859 between Austria on one side and Italy and France on the other. In fact, the exaction of war indemnities may be regarded as a practice of relatively modern origin, the victors in former times having contented themselves with the surrender of territory on the part of the defeated foe.

GRANT'S CUBAN POLICY.

He Had Seen Walk Terrors and Guided the Nation out of a Renewal.

The action of President Grant in regard to Cuba is so frequently referred to in certain quarters as a correct precedent to follow, that some reference to the circumstances of that time cannot fail to be interesting at the present juncture.

In 1873 the Virginius, an American steamer, was engaged in ordinary commerce between this country and Cuba. She was purchased by some American citizens who were anxious to wrest the "Pearl of the Antilles" from the power of Spain. While engaged in heading with a mixed cargo of passengers and supplies for Cuba, the Virginius was pursued, overtaken and captured off the shores of Jamaica.

Those on board were taken to Havana, being starved and insulted on the voyage back, and then subjected to a mock trial such as Spain mercifully provides for military offenders of the worst sort. Conviction followed without even the show of decorum that accompanies the ordinary drumhead court-martial, and the prisoners were sentenced to be shot. The crew and passengers shared equally the chivalry of Spain. The whole proceeding was carried out with that fierce spirit of brutality, that celerity of despatch which Dante and Torquemada embalm in the pages of European history.

From one end of this country to the other a wave of popular indignation swept when the people heard of the executions and the heroic spirit, which bore up the nation's hopes at Vicksburg and at Lookout Mountain, cried to Washington to have the flag of Castille and Arragon share the fate that had so lately befallen the Empire of Maximilian.

The nation's excitement was quite as intense as in the case of the Maine's bluejackets. Blue and gray alike joined in the demand that the honor of the United States could not be atoned for by an apology and could only be satisfied by prompt and effective measures of retaliation. Caleb Cushing was then the American Minister to Madrid. Hamilton Fish was Secretary of State. Cushing was the son-in-law of the Secretary who did so much to make Grant's second term the prelude to a third. Fish was an able man but in a crisis like this he was a weak man. He was the representative also of New York's interests in the Cabinet, and New York was then the pivotal state of the Union; and in contra-distinction to the great virile and unspoiled West, New York then also represented much the same forces as it does to-day.

Grant with the true instincts of a brave soldier ordered the Navy to be put on a war footing when the Virginius affair had stirred the hearts of the American people. The President made unmistakable preparations to vindicate the honor of the country and to punish Spain. Accordingly Fish was instructed to tell the Dons that they would have to let the Cuban people go, and to open diplomatic and consular correspondence, and meantime the still small voice of Wall street passed the word along to keep cool about the Virginius affair; to do nothing rash and to act with the requisite prudence as well as with the requisite energy. Such was the gawky phrasing of the period. While Grant was a firm and patriotic American he was also the most tender and humane of men. He had quelled the greatest rebellion in all history, and was not anxious to subject a nation which he had raised erect and upon its feet, so soon again to the dread hazard of war. The era of resumption and of reconstruction was in full swing. Fish, under the stress made suitable reparation and compensation to the families of those butchered to make a Spanish holiday it was said to be favoring of cruelty to smash Spain in her distant colony at a time when Serrano and his Spanish Cabinet were earnestly seeking to bring the Spanish Monarchy into the great family of republics. Serrano was represented as the saviour of the Spanish people, and as a great soldier himself, and a Marshal in the Spanish Army he could toady "the tenderest part," the heart of another great soldier, then too the President of a sister republic in that new civilization which Spain had formerly given to the world.

There was a sublime pathos in the situation that was artfully turned to account in the case of a man whose fame was linked with that of Caesar, Cyrus and Napoleon, and who could not do a small, petty or inhuman thing even if he tried to. Grant erred by not punishing Spain then and by listening to the influences to which he was subjected, but he erred on mercy's side. Thus the vacillations and sudden changes of policy of that time furnish a painful precedent if a precedent it be, the memory of which they remind us in 1898. The questions then as now were questions of intervention, of independence and of recognition of the Cubans in arms.

The President's sympathy like that of the hot body of the people was with Cuba. But the casuistry of Spanish diplomacy and the fine hand of Fish provided a wealth and coping of argument on the other side that the straight and simple mind of Grant was unable to resist. Accordingly having actually written a message in favor of Cuba as the dickey birds of the White House say, the President was induced to change it at the last moment, and so the precedent as it stands, is the very reverse of what it might have been had the hero of Appomattox been left to his own instincts and to his unbiased judgment. This is history but history that has yet to be written.

CHANGE IN MAIL DELIVERY.

Delay of One Hour for a Few and Gain of Several Hours by Many.

Postmaster Elias Bird has made a change in the delivery of the morning mail, which it is hoped will please the great majority of people who live just outside of the central business portion of the city. Heretofore there have been two early morning deliveries in the business portion, one at 7 o'clock and the other at 8:30.

But this plan, followed out, makes it impossible for the carriers to deliver the 8:30 mail to those living outside the business portion until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and a great many complaints have been made by these folks. To remedy this Mr. Bird has put off the delivery of the 8:30 morning mail one hour but in this way has made it possible for it to be delivered all over the city. A few of the business men may be disappointed, but the satisfaction which will be expressed by the great majority will more than make it up.

Restricted the Sale.

Deputy Sheriff Hunsbergher, Under a chattel mortgage given by T. Steinberg & Co., grocers, of this place, to Myer Dubinsky, of New York, the latter attempted this morning to sell the stock of the firm.

Lawyer Suydam of this place, representing creditors whose bills will amount to $2,200, stopped the sale by producing an injunction granted by Judge Kirkpatrick, of the Supreme Court, restraining the mortgagee from selling the goods. This is the first case in this State to be tried under the new bankrupt law, and will be watched with interest.

—The many friends of former Mayor B A. Hegeman, Jr., will be pained to learn that he is confined to his home by illness. His condition is not serious, however, and hopes of his speedy recovery are entertained.

FOR SALE BY LEADING DEALERS.

Girls treading Grapes, to music, wearing short jackets and short linen pants, but a great variety of headgear. A violinist, seated on the edge of the vat, fiddles while one or two of the damsels join in with their voices, keeping time with their feet, treading the grapes.

Rubber Rollers are Used for Crushing the Grapes to Make Speer's Port, Burgundy, Claret and Other Wines.

Which, as is well known, rival the world in excellence, for invalids and aged persons, and are made from the Oporto grapes grown on vines imported from Portugal forty years ago. The soil of northern New Jersey, containing iron, is just suited for them. Mr. Speer, however, uses the improved way of mashing the grapes. He employs large rollers of rubber run by an engine which crush grapes at the rate of a barrel a minute. Speer's Wines, especially the Port and Burgundy now in market, are of very old vintage, and have no superior. Physicians far and near prescribe them for weakly females and aged persons. They are blood-making, adding iron to the system, and tend to prolong life. Extensively used at parties, weddings and general family use. ☞ SOLD BY DRUGGISTS AND GROCERS WHO DEAL IN WINES.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription for which it is the boast of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co., on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials we hold in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is brought about by their intrinsic worth, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I took sick, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, having known Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $2 a call.

A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who spoke highly of Ripans Tabules and objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this I overruled, and told them "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style pocket containing FIVE RIPANS TABULES (or packed in a box containing 72 Tabules, sufficient for one year for occasional use), will be sent for FIVE CENTS. This is the cheapest medicine ever offered for sale. One gives relief. Five cents is the price of five Tabules. Twelve packets (60 Tabules) can be had by sending 60 cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL CO., No. 10 Spruce St., New York. Ripans Tabules may also be had of some druggists, who sell the 72 Tabules for 72 cents. Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists everywhere.

HAD TO BURN FRUIT TREES FOR FIREWOOD.

Union Village Farmers Cut Off by the Storm.

ROADS ALL BLOCKED.

COULDN'T REACH THEIR WOOD LOTS TO GET FRESH FUEL.

Aftermath of the Storm—Happenings in Passaic Valley—Road Impassable—Big Drifts at Coontown Just Reported—Some Provisions Already Will Not Be Opened for Several Days.

The Passaic valley is just struggling out of the bondage of the snow storm of Saturday and Sunday. Never since the famous blizzard of 1888 has that section been so thoroughly shut off from the outside world. Ten inches of snow fell there and the wind blew a perfect gale. As a result there were drifts everywhere.

In the Passaic valley road that goes from Newark to Millington, the snow was heaped up in drifts seven and eight feet high and extending along the road for distances of over a mile. Progression was impossible and George Strickfadt, overseer of the roads in Morris county, had a large force of men at work removing the worst of the drifts so that the roads might be passable once more. Yesterday the men were hard at work with the prospect of opening up all the road by tonight.

In one place the road passes through a cut and there the drifts reached the depth of twelve feet. The milkmen flying in that vicinity simply had to stay at home. Their attempts to get to town were fruitless and they had to give up until the road was opened by the county authorities.

In the vicinity of Union Village large drifts are reported. Bazilla French, who lives in that settlement, did not have a large stock of wood when the storm began. He attempted to reach his wood lot Monday to secure a fresh supply, but the drifts were so great that he had to abandon the attempt and cut down an apple tree in his yard to supply him with fuel.

George Herbert, of the same locality, was caught in a similar predicament. He made his way through the snow to a near-by tree and cut off one of the branches that served him as firewood until he could clear a path to the wood lot.

Some of the roads in New Providence township are so solidly blocked that they will not be opened until tonight.

In Warren township the worse drifts were reported in the vicinity of Coontown where they completely blocked the road. The neighbors joined forces and Tuesday a way was cleared so that the people in Mt. Horeb could reach Plainfield.

REMEMBERED THEIR PASTOR.

Big Donation Party at Mt. Horeb M. E. Church Tuesday Night.

Despite the unpleasant weather there was a grand turnout of the good folk at Mt. Horeb last Tuesday. It was the event of the donation party to Rev. Mr. Updyke, pastor of the Mt. Horeb M. E. church. The affair was held at the parsonage and was attended by the members of the congregation and their families. The genial pastor and his wife received a great variety of donations, which consisted mainly of the products of the farms on which most of the church members live.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY OF GERMAN CHURCH GAVE HER A PARTY.

It Was in Honor of Mrs. Joseph Augerbauer's Fifty-second Birthday—The Affair a Complete Surprise—Guests.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church tendered a very pleasant surprise party to Mrs. Joseph Angerbauer, Sr., Tuesday evening, in honor of her fifty-second birthday. Mrs. Angerbauer is president of the society. She was presented with a large birthday cake on which burned fifty-two candles in honor of the event. Many other pretty and useful gifts were received.

The evening passed very enjoyably with games and music, after which refreshments were served in abundance. It was late before the jolly party thought of breaking up. The affair was arranged by Miss Annie Praszinski and Mrs. Henry Bender.

Among those who were present were Rev. Mr. and Mrs Hauser, Mr. and Mrs. Bach, Mrs. Blimm, Miss Katie Blimm, Miss Sadie Blimm, Miss Josie Fritz, Miss Lottie Fritz, Mr. and Mrs Fred Bach, Franz Bach, Mr. and Mrs. Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Schlief, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Angerbauer, Jr., Mrs. Praszinski, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Angerbauer, Henry Angerbauer, Mrs. and Miss Borman, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Gerhard, George Apgar and Miss Kate Betchold.

SOCIAL TEA.

Charming Affair to be Held This Afternoon by Plainfield Exchange.

The Plainfield Exchange will give a social tea in the guild rooms of the Grace P. E. church this afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. There will be no charge for admission. The following ladies will be in charge of the different departments: Mrs. Hugh Hastings, Mrs. Frank Bushnell and Mrs. Thomas Minford will pour tea. The committee on fancy work will consist of Mrs. Howard Tracy, chair man, and her assistants. The department of dainties will be in charge of Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, aided by Miss Yerkes, Miss Bolce and Mrs. Craig Marsh.

The president, Mrs. O. T. Waring, will read a report of the work of the Exchange for the last six months. A report of the recording secretary, Mrs. S. E. Krom, will also be submitted.

VALUE OF SUMMER RESIDENCE.

House of the Late John K. Field on the Raritan to be Sold.

New Brunswick, Nov. 30.—The value of a summer residence was the point at issue yesterday in a case before Judge Strong, of the Middlesex County Orphan's Court at this city.

Isaac N. Field, of Plainfield, executor of the late John K. Field, applied for an order confirming the sale of the decedent's summer home on the Rari tan, near Bound Brook. At the sale the only bid was $4 255

When the application was made for an order confirming the sale Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick, representing some of the heirs, opposed the motion. It was shown that the house, exclusive of the land, had cost more than $15 000. The executor admitted this, but said the sale had been the best he could arrange.

Judge Strong continued the matter for a week.

VOORHEES' PLURALITY 5,499.

Official Canvass of the State Vote Made by Board Appointed for That Purpose.

Trenton, Nov. 30.—The State Board of Canvassers met yesterday after noon and went over the election returns for Governor and Congressmen and officially promulgated the result.

The vote for Governor was as follows: Voorhees, Republican, 164,051; Crane, Democrat, 158 552; Leadon Prohibition, 6,883; McGuire, Socialist Labor, 5 453; Schrayshuen, People's, 491. Voorhees' plurality, 5,499.

The pluralities for Congress were as follows: First District, Loudenslager, Republican, 5 779; Second district, Gardner, Republican, 6,468; Third district, Howell, Republican, 729; Fourth district, Salmon, Democrat, 2,659; Fifth district, Stewart, Republican, 2,025; Sixth district, Parker, Republican, 3,693; Seventh district, Daly, Democrat, 10,108; Eighth district, Fowler, Republican, 4,352.

Address Postponed.

Owing to the fact that there were so few present last Tuesday the address that was to have been given by Rev. J. W. Richardson before the officers and superintendents of the Local Union Christian Endeavor, was postponed to a later date. There was a few persons present and they remained awhile and enjoyed an informal talk about Christian Endeavor work.

Mrs E. H Ladd, Jr., is detained at home by a slight illness.

TRAMP QUESTION IN SOMERSET COUNTY.

Sheriff Tried to Lodge Them in Jail.

FREEHOLDERS OBJECTED.

NOW THEY BREAK THE LAW AND HAVE TO BE JAILED.

They Used to Get Lodging Free at County Jail and Hustle for Their Meals—Freeholders Would Not Allow It—Now They Commit Some Disorderly Act and Have to be Boarded and Lodged.

The tramp question is again coming to the front in Somerset county. For several years the Sheriff of that county has been sheltering all this class of citizens in a most hospitable manner in the county jail at Somerville. That is, the Board of Freeholders allowed the Sheriff to take them in and keep them over night. He gave them no food, but a warm place to sleep, and they had to forage for their provender. For this duty the Sheriff was allowed 25 cents a head.

Last April a resolution was adopted by the Board, which read as follows: "Resolved, That after April 12th, this day, no more tramps shall be allowed in the county jail by the Board at the county's expense."

During the summer months there are few applications for lodgings by tramps, so that this change of policy has caused little inconvenience until he present time. Since the nights have become frosty the number of applicants have increased. The Sheriff has been obliged to refuse all lodgers, but here is where comes in an important question of policy. The tramps are determined to have a night's lodging, and rather than sleep out on the cold ground, they commit some disorderly act whereby they are arrested and committed to jail.

Since Sheriff Schoonmaker was installed no less than ten tramps have thus been committed to jail under the disorderly act. It costs 75 cents to have a tramp committed, and then he must be boarded at the expense of the county after he has been landed in jail. It is estimated that the tramps and a half can be sheltered for a night under the old system for so little expense as one tramp can be committed to jail under the disorderly act. Besides the 75 cents, which goes in fees to the justice and officer committing a tramp, the Sheriff receives six fees and is allowed 70 cents a day for the tramp's board. So a man committed for two days would cost the county about $2 50.

If the tramps succeed in being committed at the rate of the past week, it is a question whether there is any economy in the new plan adopted by the Board.

MRS. LOWE'S SECOND "AT HOME."

Delightful Social Function Held at Home of W. K. Low, Park Avenue.

The hospitable home of Wm. Eberle Lowe, of Park avenue, was a scene of beauty Tuesday afternoon when Mrs Lowe and her daughter, Miss Charlotte Lowe, gave their second "at home." With artistic surroundings, enhanced by palms, flowers and softly shaded lights, many friends and society people were received by Mrs Lowe and her daughter, assisted by Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mrs. Howard Fleming and Mrs. Orville T. Waring. In the dining room Mrs. Henry Stockton and Mrs. Charles Case presided at the table, assisted by the Misses Helen Frances Bushnell, Mary Whiton, Lulu Holly, Miss Lockwood, of Philadelphia; Miss Nancy Lawson, of Salem, and Miss Porter, of Ottawa, Ia.

LOCAL UNION SOCIABLE.

Mrs. Dascot Will Tell of Her Work Among Italians in New York.

Next Thursday, December 8th, a local union sociable will be held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church. Mrs. Dascot, of the Mariner's Temple, New York, will tell of her work among the poor Italians in lower New York, and a programme of music and recitations will be rendered. At the close an offering for the children's Christmas will be taken up.

Reserved His Decision.

In the case of the Plainfield Beef Company against Ruppert, the butcher, which was tried before Justice Mosier Tuesday, the Court reserved its decision. The claim is for meat sold, and amounts to $25. Murphy & Blatz represented the Beef Company, and Codington & Swackhamer Ruppert.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Mary How Miller, daughter of Major and Mrs W. D. W. Miller, of LaGrande avenue, and Harrison King Wright, of Pulaski, N. Y., a student at Union College, Schenectady, is announced.

CLAIMS HE STARVES WITH INCOME DUE

John Mortimer Tries to Compel Its Payment.

THE CREDITORS OBJECT.

THEY WANT HIM TO LIVE ON SMALL INCOME

And Turn the Rest Over to Pay His Debts—Tried That in Plainfield For Awhile—Local Creditors Indorsed His Note For First National Bank—They Lost Very Nearly All of the Money.

John Mortimer, who resided in Plainfield for several years, and has since successively made his home at Asbury Park and the Clarendon Hotel in Brooklyn, claims to be starving to death. He says that he and his wife and children have been through very hard times for the past few months all because the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company has failed to do its duty. There was placed in the hands of that company a trust fund of $51,272, from which Mortimer was supposed to receive an income of $2,400 a year. This was not done since May last, Mr. Mortimer says, and he and his family have been compelled in consequence to live without the bare necessities of life.

The complaints of Mortimer were brought to the attention of Surrogate Fitzgerald in Brooklyn yesterday and he investigated the case. His decision has been reserved.

Mortimer is a son of Frances Russell Mortimer, who died April 24, 1894. She left a large estate, divided into four parts, one of which she left to her son John, in addition to $5 000 in cash. She appointed the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company trustee of his share, directing that the income be paid to him. He lived in Plainfield for a number of years, residing at different times on LaGrande avenue and Putnam avenue, and with his wife's mother, Mrs. W. G. Anderson He can rather deeply in debt, it is said.

In May, 1897, Mortimer was pressed pretty hard by his creditors who insisted upon his paying them what he owed. These were several creditors, each of whose claim reached over $100 in the aggregate, and so agreed to the following plan:

He gave a note to the First National Bank for $6,000. This note was indorsed by these seven principal creditors, William K. McClure, Dr. J. T. Fritts, Louis Hummer, M. Powers, Robert Guttridge, A. D. Mallinson and F. L. C. Martin. The lowest claim, that of A. D. Mallinson, was for $100, the highest for $700.

Backed by these names, the First National Bank consented to discount the note, and Mortimer gave them power-of-attorney to collect his dividends, amounting to $2 40 a year, from the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and retain one-half of them towards liquidating the debts, of which the other half Mortimer said he could manage to live.

This arrangement existed for one year, when in May, 1898, Mortimer cancelled his agreement and revoked his power of attorney. This placed the seven creditors in a bad fix. They have no remedy against Mortimer who is out of the State and away from them. The merchants all had their money to be sure, but when the power of attorney was revoked, the First National Bank came back on the indorsers and they had to repay almost all of it.

Other creditors then united on the ground that Mortimer should be compelled to turn over part of his income to pay his debts as he had been doing, and an injunction was obtained against the Trust Company restraining them from paying him any more.

F. E. Anderson, who appeared for Mortimer yesterday, insisted that his client and family were literally starving for want of the necessaries of life, and that Mortimer had become so desperate that he feared he would commit suicide. Even his trunk had been held at the hotel to satisfy his board bill. He charged that the Trust Company, in the interest of the creditors, was acting without warrant of law in withholding the income, that it exceeded its authority and that the harsh, cruel and insulting treatment Mortimer had received was sufficient to warrant the Court in removing the trustee.

Hoping to meet claims which have been pressing him, Mortimer gave the Trust Company a power of attorney to apply $1 500 annually to the payment of his debts, thinking he might live on $900 a year. He said he found it impossible and cancelled the agree-

TOLD OF LIFE AND WORKS OF EMERSON.

Continuation of Series of University Extension Lectures.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

LECTURE TOOK PLACE IN Y. M. C. A. HALL TUESDAY.

Prof. A. H. Smith Gave a Very Interesting Lecture on American Literature — Emerson Figured the Most Prominently in It—Told His History in Clever Way—Great Farm Destroyed.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, that high spirited, even-tempered New England man of letters, was the most prominent character in the University Extension lecture given last Tuesday in Y. M. C. A. Hall by Prof. A. H. Smith. Emerson's beautiful life was the wonder of all who knew him. Born early in the present century, and coming from a long and illustrious line of ancestors, many of them having been preachers and all of them men of learning and culture, he was fitted for the ministry and occupied a pulpit for a few years.

Then Emerson became convinced that he had another mission in the world, and gave up his work to cross the ocean and seek out Carlyle in Scotland, Coleridge, in England, and Landor, in Italy. He only spent a short time in the company of each of these three, but felt wonderfully benefited by his contact with them, and when he left, left behind him an impression which clung to these men all through their lives.

Emerson's books consist mostly of lectures. One book he published called "Nature," was a marvel of accuracy in the manner of its composition.

About the time that Emerson was growing up the sceptre of literature had been carried from Philadelphia to New York and then on to Boston. There were three epochs in New England intellectual life, which followed one another in regular order. The first was Unitarianism, the second Transcendentalism and the third the Anti-slavery movement.

This last awakened some of the brightest writers, brought forth some of the most eloquent orators, among whom might be mentioned Wendel Phillips, and gave Harriet Beecher Stowe a theme for that novel that has been translated in all languages and been read by nearly as many people as had the Bible, "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Prof. Smith also spent a few moments in describing Brook Farm, the "Seven Years' Day Dream" which was established about 1835 a short distance from Boston, and where 60 or 70 men and women of letters lived together in a happy group, working on the farm during a part of the day, reading Latin and Greek and writing books the other half. Here Emerson lived awhile, so did Hawthorne and Thoreau, and the colony was only disbanded by a fierce fire, which destroyed the farm buildings and burned the colony out of home. They took such a blow to them that Brook Farm was never rebuilt.

Disliked a Fellow Workman.

Elizabeth, Nov. 30.—Frank Lafrank, of New Orange, was lodged in the Union county jail yesterday for stabbing with a knife James Rotonoch, an Italian fellow workman. The affray took place in the boarding house of Joseph Bonomo, at New Orange. The wounded man was badly hurt. Justice Woodruff committed the assailant in default of $1,000 bail.

Lawyers Want Fees.

Justice Mosher has issued summonses in the case of Murphy and others against Ada Cruse, of this city, for $12 the amount of a bill for searching the title for a new property she purchased some time ago. Mrs. Cruse has now refused to pay the lawyers' fees, and they have brought suit to enforce their claims.

Birthday Surprise.

Mrs. J. M. Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue, was tendered a surprise party Tuesday night, it being her birthday. Friends and relatives came in during the evening and took her completely by surprise. The evening was passed in playing games, and having a good social time.

Teachers go to Flemington.

The Borough Public School teachers left yesterday for Flemington to attend the teachers' institute which will be held the rest of this week.

RIGHTS OF THE FAIR SEX

MRS. FLORENCE HOWE HALL TALKS OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Occasion of the Annual Meeting of the State Association—Mrs. Hall's Address Held to Have Been Eloquent.

Camden, Nov. 30—The New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association began its annual session in Taylor's Hall, this city, yesterday, and about fifty delegates from auxiliary associations attended the sessions. The feature of the day was the annual address of the president, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield, who dwelt at length upon the advance of the woman suffrage movement in this country and Great Britain. Her suggestions were principally devoted to the dissemination of information among women as to what rights they now possess in this State under existing laws, and urging them to exercise these rights.

The recent defeat of the school suffrage amendment was referred to as simply an incident in the missionary and educational work necessary to prepare the minds of the people in the State for what is sooner or later to come.

Mrs. Hall's address ended with an eloquent tribute to the self-sacrificing spirit displayed by the women of the cause all over the world, who, undaunted by reverses, are as enthusiastic today as though their work was be strewn with the roses and pearls of incessant success. The association held a meeting in the courthouse tonight at which Miss Mary C. C. Bradford, of Denver, Col., made an address upon the workings of woman suffrage in her State.

STRANGE GROWTH ON FINGER.

Mrs. M. L. McComas is Unable to Use Her Right Hand.

Mrs. Martin L. McComas, of Prescott place, is suffering from a growth on the first finger of her right hand which not only baffles the physicians but cannot be accounted for by Mrs McComas.

It was about four weeks ago that Mrs. McComas noticed a small red spot on the finger. At first she applied home remedies. Continued treatment of this kind failing to do effect, a physician was called to examine the growth. One peculiar feature of it is that the lump can be moved back and forth on the finger at will.

The top portion of the growth is very sore from the fact that the skin is nitrely raw and is intensely painful to the slightest touch. The lump seems to be constantly growing. Mrs. McComas has no use of the hand, and although she is able to get around, she suffers great pain in the hand.

A MEMORABLE EVENT.

Friends of T. W. Keene, Jr., Came to Celebrate His Eighteenth Birthday.

Vincent William Keene, Jr., of Prospect avenue, was eighteen years old Tuesday, and the day was made a memorable one to him by his friends, for a host of them surprised him last night, came upon him in a body, and spent the evening in games and dancing.

Among those present were the Misses Lucy Jennings, Lucy Casper, Nellie Apgar, Florence and Mabel Symons, Grace and Katie Webster, Josie Murphy, Mabel Smith, Jessie and Lillian Thorn, Ida Furman, Charles McCann, Fred Dunavan, Bert Ford, James Pope, Fred VanLew, Edward Baker, Lewis McLaughlin, William and George Pope, Raymond Pool, Albert Usinger, Thomas Keenan, Hillaire Blatz, Fred Sebring, Howard Drake, Irwin Mills and Walter Emmons.

Entertained Departing Friends.

Miss Evelyn Simonson, of Duer street, had the pleasure Tuesday evening of entertaining several of her friends, among whom two were present who are going to return to England, namely, Miss Schenk and Miss Salamanca. A very pleasant evening was passed by playing games and dancing, accompanied by several piano selections.

No Coal Handy to Work With.

It has been learned that the reason the crosswalks in the business part of the city have not been cleaned off is on account of the absence of money to do the work. It has been suggested that a collection be taken among the business men to have the walks cleaned.

Death of Mrs. Staats.

Mrs. Staats, aged forty three years wife of George Staats, died yesterday at her home in Netherwood, of pneumonia. She was ill but a short time.

—A subscription dance will be given at the Casino early in February under the direction of the same committee that had charge of the dance given Thanksgiving Eve.

THE AFFAIR WAS N'T AS STARTLING AS NAME.

Bloomer Social Held by Minerva Temple, Rathbone Sisters.

IT PROVED SUCCESSFUL

COMMITTEE HAD MINIATURE BLOOMERS PINNED TO GOWNS.

A Literary Programme Was Rendered During the Evening—Included Musical Selections and Recitations—A Short Comedy, "No Cure, No Pay," Formed a Good Part of the Entertainment.

Last Tuesday in Knights of Pythias Washington Hall, Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, gave a "Bloomer" social, together with a literary and musical entertainment. Despite the very stormy night there was a large crowd present and the entire programme was given in a manner that pleased all.

The programme opened with an orchestral selection by Miss Laura Radin, Bert Naylor and Carla Sorgenson. This was followed with recitations by Miss Hallard, Miss Bird, Miss Westphal and Mary Radford. There were vocal and instrumental solos by Miss Lillie Duckworth, and violin solos by Miss Hussey and Master Guttman. A feature of the programme was the mandolin and guitar selections by Arthur Sherman and James Hallard. A pleasing number was the piano duet by Miss Kinney and Miss Laura Radin.

The last part of the programme was devoted to a comical sketch entitled, "No Cure, No Pay," which produced a great deal of laughter. Those who took part were Mrs. Westphal, Mrs. Cox, Miss Teller, Miss Try Matico, Miss Bodine and Miss Higgins. Each one took his or her part in a very efficient manner.

At the close of the entertainment there was a drawing for a handsome quilt made by the members of the lodge and bearing their names. The chances were sold for ten cents each and brought in $17 40 net. Miss Lillie Duckworth drew the ticket bearing the lucky number. It was held by Mrs. Wm. Clemens, a member of the lodge.

After this part of the affair all were invited to the banquet room, where refreshments were served by the committee in charge consisting of Mrs. Bowman, Mrs. Bird, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Chamberlain and Mrs. Higgins. Here is where the bloomer part of the event appeared. Each member of the committee had fastened to her dress a miniature pair of bloomers, and it was announced that they would serve refreshments in bloomers.

MURRAY HAS EIGHT ON HIS SIDE.

Plainfield Assemblyman's Contention Not Well Supported.

Trenton, Nov. 30.—The attendance of politicians at the State House was light yesterday. The newly furnished executive chamber was thrown open for public inspection and its rich appearance was much admired.

Acting-Governor Watkins was on hand early, but only matters of minor importance claimed his attention. Assemblyman-elect Murray, of Union, was one of the few members of the next Legislature on hand. It announced that he had eight votes against Watkins' re-election as Speaker of the House, but the statement was scarcely credited as one that would hold good until caucus time.

Assemblyman-elect Wood McKee, of Passaic, was also here. Republicans are urging him for the leadership on the floor of the House. He says his presence at home every night during the session accepting Sunday nights for a journey, or rather to pass Christmas in time to get home at a reasonable hour at night he cannot accept the honor.

Senators Read and Johnson came on to attend the meeting of the State Board of Canvassers. They are both in the race for the presidency of the Senate, but did not discuss their prospects. No representatives of Essex county were seen yesterday. Their acceptance to be present caused a remark to the effect that the county was quite certain that it would get what it was asking for, and that it was needless now to agitate any matters in which the county was interested.

A Plucky Driver.

An unknown young man was thrown out of a sleigh on Somerset street yesterday and was dragged a considerable distance. The driver held fast to the reins and finally managed to get control of the horse. No damage resulted.

Care of Chickens in Cold Weather.

Kerosene is the cheapest of all insecticides. Therefore, don't be afraid to use it liberally on the henroosts to prevent lice. Apply during the winter for lice do linger even in cold weather. As the weather grows colder and the hens have to be confined, it is advisable to place a rusty nail in their water. Cornmeal mush is a most excellent fattener, and especially if fed warm. In case it takes away the fowl's appetite feed some fruit and vegetables, such as apples and cabbage. These will not cause any less of the fattening foods. Construct nests so that hens must get down into them if you don't want them to eat their eggs. A hen rarely attempts to eat eggs unless she can get to them conveniently, and generally she requires lots of room for this purpose. If you cannot obtain meat for your fowls buy them some cottonseed meal. Feed it in the proportion of one part to a mess of soft food sufficeint for 200 hens. Milk also is an excellent substitute for meat, being preferred by some poultry keepers to anything else mentionable. No matter how well balanced it may be, cooked or as much as possible give your hens a change of ration. Be sure to provide a scratching place. Cover the floor with fine dry leaves or chaff to the depth of not less than a foot. Among this scatter daily a handful of wheat (millet seeds are preferable) to each fowl and let the fowls scratch for it. The fact is, the more they are induced to scratch the better they will look, the happier they will be, and the more eggs they will lay. Do not forget to examine your hens now and see if it is in good condition. If there are any cracks stop them at once, for to have wind and rain thus get in is frequently the cause of roup. Also clean out the hen house at least once a week, and sprinkle the floor and roosts with crude carbolic acid, and every fortnight put a few drops in the drinking water. See that the drinking water is kept fresh at all times, and when the weather is quite cold never fail to warm it.—Troy Times.

Storing Roots for Winter.

Roots intended for stock feed, whether beets, turnips, potatoes or artichokes, should be stored close to the feeding place. A barn cellar is undoubtedly the best for this, and if it is a basement barn so much the better, as the feed will then be on a level with the animals, thus requiring a minimum amount of work in feeding. If stored so that the ventilation be good the roots cannot reach the bins, the roots will keep from the autumn until grass comes in spring, furnishing throughout the winter months the succulent feed necessary to secure best results with dairy cows, sheep and hogs.

The chief point to observe is to provide as nearly perfect ventilation as possible. There is much more danger from heat than from cold. After deciding as to the location of the root bins, build them so that the bottom will be at least six inches from the floor and the sides the same distance from the walls of the cellar. If the bin is a large one, provide partitions every six or eight feet. Keep the windows and doors of the basement open until there is danger from freezing. If a warm day, or several of them, should occur, close the windows and doors during the daytime and open them at night. The roots are thus kept cool and in good condition.—American Agriculturist.

Wintering Celery Outdoors.

A writer says: Last autumn I decided on wintering my celery in the garden as here in Essex Co., Ontario, Canada, it is usually mild winter. So instead of lifting it and putting it in the cellar in the usual way, and by which a year ago, owing to the warm weather up to Christmas, I lost a large amount, I continued adding a little more earth to the rows as the nights became frosty, eventually covering it entirely over. Then as the frost increased I put on a layer of coarse litter from the manure heap, which drew out the frost of perhaps one inch which crusted the earth over the rows. From time to time I added more as I thought it was needed. The manure heap being close to the celery bed, a few minutes only was needed at any one time to do the work, and there has not been a time during the winter that I could not spade in a few minutes I could take out for immediate use what was required. It has matured grandly, developing that melting crispness and nutty flavor so much desired and sought after, sometimes in vain, in our winter celery, and today, the 1st of March, it is in autumn, and I have not lost a single root. The labor has been a mere trifle compared with the old method of digging and cellaring.

For Budding Horns.

By the use of a stick of caustic potash moistened and rubbed around the base of the budding horns on a calf when it is about a month old, the growth can be stopped, and if properly done, nothing care not to touch the head with the potash, the operation will be painless. If the potash does touch it will cause but a slight burn, not a severe one. But until this is generally done, there will be use for the dehorning instruments, and where many cattle run together it is cruel not to use them.

Taking Bees from Winter Quarters.

Most writers recommend that bees be kept in winter quarters until soft maples, early willows or some other trees furnish pollen, but after many years of experience I adopted the practice of getting them out early. If the ground is about free from snow and ice and the weather spring-like, so that the bees can fly occasionally, I begin to set out as early as March 10, although they will probably not get any pollen until a month later.

Should the bees in their winter quarters appear to be quiet and not show any signs of so-called dysentery, there would of course be no urgency in getting them out, but while after being confined for about four months the bees get restless, and some colonies begin to spot their hives, especially if they gathered late honey dew. But even good honey will get so thick or more or less granulated that the bees crave water, and reduce their stores to the proper consistency. Considering all, I believe that I gain more than I lose by setting out the bees comparatively early and a few cold spells after setting out will not do them much harm.

In spring time be ready for winter. I take out from each colony two or three combs, which leaves a space at each end of the hive, and after putting in two thin spacing boards or followers, a piece of burlap or heavy sacking is placed over the frames and tucked down to fill out the spaces on ends. This protection seems to be sufficient to guard against cold in the spring. If any weak colonies are found after setting out I unite them at once with some better colony. In doing so I use the queest I wish to preserve and bang the cage for two or three days in center of brood nest of the united colony, destroy other queen and smoke bees well.

To increase my stock of bees by dividing from 30 to 40 per cent. of the number of colonies at a season, which with usually fair wintering gives me a good surplus of colonies. These I use in the following manner: I do not weaken strong colonies to build up weak ones, but keep on uniting the poorest with better ones until all colonies are strong by swarming time, and the number of colonies are reduced as desired. Colonies that are not too weak to hold their own should not be united.—Julius Hoffman in Agriculturist.

Preparing Butter for Market.

In cool weather, if one has customers near at hand, butter may be put into rolls or pats is acceptable, but many people like it packed in jars. The five pound jars are very popular in small families, and in packing butter in these, make the top look as nice as possible. Use a white butter paper to cover the upper surface, as it looks better and is superior in every way to a cloth. The paper may now be bought by the thousand sheets and in convenient sizes to fit certain sizes of jars and butter tubs.

Those who use ships butter regularly in good quantities, to buy the tubs in large numbers. In some cases the outside of the covers are rough and untidy looking, the covers not fitting as they should at all, but there are tubs on the market almost as smooth both outside and in as though made pressed paper instead of wood.

It is always well to line a butter tub with parchment paper. This is not so difficult a matter as it might seem at first attempt. The paper should first be well soaked in cold water in a smooth board kept for this purpose. A wooden roller something like a pastry rolling pin, which is about an inch and a half at one end and tapers down to one inch at the other end, is then used to roll the paper smooth and neat. This motion should be in the direction of right to left. A little practice will enable one to do it neatly and deftly. When the paper is on the pin, place it in the tub and unroll it, unrolling it to the left. It will take but a few moments to line a tub and then the butter will have no chance to taste of the wood, as it will be apt to do if it is packed directly into the unlined tub. A disk of the paper should cover the bottom of the tub.—R. S. Miller in Agriculturist.

Quality Test for Potatoes.

We must learn to grade potatoes according to quality. There is just as much difference between a mealy and a soggy potato as there is between tenderloin and rump steak. The difficulty is to sort out the good ones. Here is the potato test: Wash them and then put them in a tub of water. They will all sink. Add salt and the poorer, lighter ones will rise. Add more salt and others will rise. Those which finally remain at the bottom you may safely plant every time to be prime bakers. Not over 30 to 35 per cent of potatoes will stand the test. For these, your customers will gladly pay extra prices.—Agriculturist.

Planting Raspberries.

Raspberries may be planted in the fall or spring, but unless the ground is in very good condition, and there is natural drainage, fall planting is not generally preferable. As the plants sprout very early in the season, it is well to prepare the ground in the fall and have everything ready for planting as soon as the season permits.

Oats fed to calves tend to develop the dairy type, while corn no. 2 tend to develop the beef type.

JUST MY LUCK.

By Mary F. Haynes.

"It's just my luck!" said Reuben Starbird. "Just my luck! Never knew it to fail. It's always just so."

"What is your luck?" asked Melissa Bird, to whom this speech was addressed. "What do you mean by luck, any way?"

"Why, just what I say," responded Reuben, his chin a trifle less in the air than it had been during his first speech. The crisp, impatient way in which Melissa had spoken was without its influence. Her voice was pleasant, her smile was pleasant; yet they made him feel that she meant a good deal.

"I mean—why, I mean just this," continued Reuben, making another beginning, since the first did not seem to amount to much. "I mean that, whatever I try to do, things seem to go against me, somehow. I don't see why it is, but I never seem to have any luck," he concluded. This seemed, even to himself, to be rather a lame conclusion, but he did not see his way towards making it any better.

He stood rather awkwardly before her yet much inclined to hold his own, even against his sweetheart.

"What have you been trying to do?" Melissa asked, with the most exasperating coolness and precision.

"Well," said Reuben, desperately, after a considerable pause, during which Melissa stood composedly surveying him with her shapely hands quietly folded over each other. "Well, f instance, now, I started this morning to get on that seven-thirty train for New York. There's the whistle, and here'm I, a good half mile away."

"Land, I should think you would!" I think luck had much to do with that. If you had managed to get up half an hour earlier, say, or had walked a little faster"—here she stopped, and blushed in spite of all her efforts.

"If I had not stopped to see you, that is," interposed Reuben, eager to seize the first advantage which he had been able to get in the whole conversation.

"You shouldn't have stopped for anything," retorted Melissa, severely. "If it was really your business to get to that train this morning, you should have been there without any regard to anything else. Did Mr. Travis send you to buy goods?"

"No; I'm going on other business. Fact is, Melissa," he said, endeavoring to put on an air of superior smartness and elevating his chin in air, in that aspiring, ineffectual fashion which characterized Reuben, "fact is, I've got a pretty fair notion that I can make a good surplus of potatoes, and I've got a chance to buy a few bushels of seed potatoes cheap, and I'm going to put in a few acres on shares, and I'm going to—"

"Now look here, hold on, Melissa!" cried Reuben, immensely aggrieved. "Here are you and I, that have been what you may call courting these two years, and the first time you talk to me, just as I'm really starting out to do something at last. And it's for you as much as for myself that I want to try and be somebody, and get money, and all that."

"Then why don't you go back and attend to the business that you have come to do and can do well, if you only choose to give your mind to it, instead of mooning off after things you can never get?"

Melissa's own heart was sore; but she could find no other way to weaken now. She felt that the critical moment had come for both of them. It was now or never.

"If you take that view of it," said Reuben slowly, "perhaps—"

"I'm trying to take a common-sense view of it," returned Melissa, resolutely choking down a rising sob. "Common sense is the surest thing to depend on in this world. You have a good place here, Reuben, and you will not lose it unless you lose it by your own fault. Mr. Travis has a good trade, and he is growing old and getting tired of the business. You might just as well have it as anybody. But who is there that you know in New York? There are plenty to get a place. Do you know anything about the way people do things there?"

"I suppose I'm not such a fool but that I could learn," said Reuben, with much dignity.

He lifted his hat; he turned away. Melissa's heart felt like lead within her breast. But she had done her duty; she had delivered her soul. The issue lay in the hands of Providence. She was a devout believer in Providence; she trusted that "Providence would overrule everything for good." But in spite of all her faith, a horrible secret unbelief kept hinting, "But suppose Reub should be let to go, after all?"

She was very miserable as she sat down on a green bank beside the path through the fields. She could not go any further. The tears began to come thick and fast into the gray eyes. All the life was gone out of them now.

Would Reuben go, or would he not? That was the only thing which made any distinct impression upon her mind.

On that question hung her whole future. She had set her foot down, and she must be firm. Long enough had she endured Reuben's shilly-shallying; either he must change, or she must. Oh, if she could but make him change! Reuben was so kind, so pleasant, so full of fun, so nice, so agreeable; she was so fond of him.

But on the other hand, he was so irresolute, so easily dissatisfied with things about him. If he did not stop pretty soon and turn square round and try back, he would never come to be just nothing at all. He would be just like his father, old Isril Starbird.

Melissa could not bear the prick of that thought. She sprang up and walked on for some little distance into the orchard. She paused to wipe away all traces of her tears before she went up the little path, half hidden in the tall grass, up to the back door. Poor girl! She thought she was all for Reuben that she was crying because he was letting himself down, because he was not going to be the man he might have been. But some of it, too, was for her own pride, for the loss of that secretly longed for position as wife and dignified position as the wife of the village storekeeper who always wore a silk dress on a Sunday, and had her bonnets from the city. She, too, had had her fine little air-castles, though they were built upon more solid foundations than Reuben's. It was greatly for these that she wept; but more—how much!—for her life which was going to be wasted on account of Reuben's folly, for the home and the happiness which she had hoped to find.

Yet she could not yield. She could not even go to him and say, "If you love me, Reuben." No; she must put it on the solid footing of reason and common sense. If these prevailed, there was hope that Reuben might yet be a man worth loving and marrying. But if they failed, why, then, perhaps it was better—

Here she broke down utterly. She could not finish. She closed in a heroine in her way; but heroines are human, after all. She meant to be a heroine; but she suffered just like any other woman.

She stole in noiselessly, and shut herself up in her own room. "She had a headache," and that was the last of her for that day. The night was long and sleepless. Next morning she came down stairs, and tried to take up the burdens of life again.

Reuben was not there, but Melissa knew that he would be. He was not a man

A NEW BATTLESHIP.

THE GREATEST TRIUMPH IN NAVAL CONSTRUCTION.

The Illinois, Which Is the Opinion of Experts Will Be the Most Powerful Fighting-Machine Ever Constructed by a Nation.

The navy department, in designing the plans for the Illinois, showed as great an advance over former designs as previous plans had shown over the types of fighting ships which were supposed to be satisfactory in 1890. The Illinois belongs to the class of designs known as those of 1896, while the Kentucky and Kearsarge belong to the class of 1895. As if the designers had foreseen the conclusion of naval events after the close of our war with Spain upon the efficacy of guns, in the Illinois the 8-inch gun is eliminated and the weight and power of the secondary battery tremendously increased. To add to the value of the seagoing qualities of the battleship, a spar deck has been added to the first three-quarters of the ship's length, and the freeboard increased from thirteen feet in the Kentucky to twenty feet in the Illinois.

The four terrible 13-inch guns will fire an 1,100-pound shell, with a muzzle energy of 33,627 foot tons, equal to the perforation of thirty-four and a half inches of wrought iron. The two 13-inch guns forward are twenty-six and a half feet above the water line, which enables them to be used in battle even when a heavy sea is on and the battle ship is headed at it. The after turret stands above the main deck and is eight feet lower than the forward turret. They are both of the elliptical type. They are lighter than on the other battle ships and provide more room for the handling of the guns and their loading.

The fourteen 6-inch guns of the secondary battery will fire a 100-pound shell. Each one of these will have a muzzle energy of 3,204 tons, with a power of penetrating 15.6 inches of iron. The guns are widely separated, and greater protection is afforded the gunners than on any other of the battle ships. Eight of the guns will be in the central battery on the main deck, protected by a wall of five and one-half inches of steel. Two 6-inch guns on the same deck, but forward, will be protected by a shield only. Four 6-inch guns on the spar deck will have a protection of six inches of steel, and can be fired dead ahead and dead astern, as well as on the broadside. The two smokestacks have been placed abreast of each other.

In calling attention to the superb quality of the Illinois, Alabama and Wisconsin type of battle ships, the Scientific American makes a comparison with the Majestic of the British navy, in which type the navy architects deem here regard as eminently fair. The Majestic has a displacement loaded of about 15,000 tons to 11,625 tons for the Illinois.

Nevertheless, against this seeming defect the Illinois carries four 12-inch guns, as against four 12-inch for the Majestic; she has fourteen 6-inch rapid-fire, as against twelve; she is protected with sixteen inches of side armor, as against fifteen inches; she has a seventeen-inch turret armor, as against six inches, and her speed is only one and one-half knots less. Further, being a smaller ship she presents less target to the enemy, and drawing four feet less water she can navigate shallower waters and channels into which the Majestic dare not enter.

The technical description of the Illinois is: A double-turret battle ship, length 368 feet, and over all 373 feet and 9 inches. Extreme breadth, 72 feet 2½ inches. Mean draught, with 800 tons of coal on, two-thirds of stores and two-thirds of ammunition, is 23 feet and 6 inches. There is seventy-two feet forward at the bow and thirteen feet three inches at the stern.

The armor belt is Harveyized. The central portion of the ship is completely inclosed by armor, extending from the bottom of the second water line to the level of the upper deck, or a height of twenty-three feet. The principle on which the ship was designed is to obtain greater rigidity and strength over other battle ships with use of less material.

She carries a pair of propelling engines with an estimated collective horse power of 10,000 indicated and a corresponding legend speed of sixteen knots. The area of the mid-ship section is 1,613 square feet and of the load water plate 19,900 feet. The propelling machinery weighs 1,128 tons, and the armor and bolts in her 2,719 tons.

What will the Illinois be able to do when in action?

Naval authorities say that she can stand fourteen miles out from any coast city in the world and hurl destructive shells into the center of it. Her speed is so high, with her steering apparatus uninjured and American gunners on board her, she is considered to be more than a match for any battle ship afloat to-day. If pitted against an armored cruiser she will destroy all of the upper works of that magnificent vessel and render her gun shelters untenable by any human being. Matched against vessels of the type of the Cupendre or the Vizcaya at a range of 2,000 yards, she would hurl against either one of them 1,150 pounds more of chilled steel projectiles than their combined broadsides could discharge against her. Weighed alone all the vessels of Admiral Cervera's fleet, as it was when afloat at Santiago, the Illinois would discharge in a double broadside more steel projectiles, in weight, than fired by the combined Spanish fleet. If in contest with such vessels as Dewey fought at Manila, the secondary battery of the Illinois would discharge more missiles in weight in one broadside than the entire fleet of Montejo would fire.

The total muzzle energy of all her guns is greater than the total muzzle energy of Dewey's and Montejo's squadrons combined. Another way of putting it is that if a quantity of dynamite 600 feet in length, two feet in breadth and two feet in height were discharged in the heart of Chicago it would represent the muzzle energy of all the guns of the Illinois when in action.

Greater battle ships will undoubtedly be constructed as naval skill progresses in the future, but for years to come the Illinois will be a type of battle ship to be respected and feared by all foreign nations and to be honored by the people whom she defends.

In one respect the Illinois will materially differ from that "terror of the seas," the Oregon. The battle lines of the Oregon are vicious, mean and ugly. She looks what the word "fight" in every outline that she presents to the eye. The outlines of the Illinois are far more graceful, and while in many ways she is a more terrible vessel than the Oregon she does not show it. Her appearance is softened by lines that will give her a beautiful appearance when afloat and not stripped for action.

FOOTBALL PADS.

What the Players Have To Wear To Protect Themselves.

To the spectator who watches the hard-fought battles on the football field nowadays, it appears as though the players are so well protected from injuries that there are not nearly so many take to the turf as there were twelve years ago. In the old days the members of the big 'varsity teams wore very little so-called armor. A man who wore canvas trousers and jacket, with a jersey underneath, and always put a rubber protector over his mouth before diving into a pile of struggling combatants was considered proof against bruises or broken bones. But with the growth of the game came changes, and at present a football player without all the modern devices to protect him from harm is regarded as foolhardy.

Who would have worn boots of a double thickness and padded with felt twelve years ago? And yet many of the best players to-day wear them to protect the small bones in their feet and to avoid sprained ankles. If the old-timers had been asked what shin guards they would undoubtedly have spurned them, but nobody is without them now. From the light canvas or cloth trousers of former years we have heavily padded moleskins, with bulky knee caps, a foot thick of solid wool over the hips and leather protectors for the stomach and kidneys. Canvas jackets are not very popular now, but heavily padded jerseys are considered the right thing to wear. Chamberlain, last year's Yale team, had perhaps, the most novel looking jersey. Around the wrists were leather bands and on the shoulders and elbows were the size of a loaf of bread. On each shoulder was a leather protector which was half the size of an ordinary saddle and must have weighed three or four pounds. The inside of the jersey was lined with some soft material.

Modern football players believe in protecting their heads. Twelve years ago there were very few "long-haired" experts, but the craze for letting one's hair grow has become universal, so that a football man with short hair is looked down upon. The rubber nose mask, which covers the mouth as well, and the leather helmet are devices that seem almost indispensable. The helmet that is now not only covers the top of the head with a cap of hard leather, but protects the ears with two big muffs made of thick felt, through which are small holes, so that the wearer can hear the instructions of his captain. It is estimated that with all of his football togs on a player can tip the scales at thirty pounds above his actual weight. Something like the armored knights of old, coats of mail, but unfortunately the rules prohibit any such warlike accessories.

It is rather expensive to own a complete outfit, the 'varsity teams having to pay about $40 per man for the various articles needed in a gridiron battle. But as college clevens have plenty of money at their command, nothing is thought of such an outlay.

To Cure Low Spirits.

Take one ounce of the seeds of resolution, properly mixed with the oil of good conscience; infuse into it a large spoonful of the balsam of patience. Distill carefully a composition of cheerful other's woes, which you will find in every part of the garden of life. Gather a handful of the blossoms of hope, sweeten it properly with a syrup made of the balm of Providence; and, if you can get any seeds of true friendship, you will find them the most valuable medicine that can be administered. But you must be careful to get the seeds of true friendship, as there is a weed called false friendship, which, if self-interest, which will spoil the whole composition. These ingredients, well mixed and faithfully taken, soon complete the cure.

Kicking Lore.

Kicking in football may be divided into three branches or departments—punting, drop-kicking, and place-kicking. Of the three the third is by far the easiest to acquire. To one who has mastered in a way the first two, punting offers more opportunities for a display of skill than drop-kicking, and is harder to master. The novice, on the other hand, would class drop-kicking as far the more difficult of the two.

But, easy as place-kicking is, the fact remains that there are more players who can punt better than they can kick goals than the reverse, by a large majority.

OUR NEW COLONIES.

SOME FACTS IN REGARD TO UNCLE SAM'S POSSESSIONS.

If Texas Had Seventy Million People, It Would Have Only the Density of Population of Our New Island Colony, Porto Rico.

While it is undoubtedly true that an enormous amount of development of one sort and another is possible in every one of the island colonies which yesterday were Spain's but to-day are ours, if anybody's, it is also true that there is much misapprehension regarding them.

For instance, there has been a great deal of talk about the undeveloped agricultural resources of Porto Rico, and more than one ordinarily level-headed American has dreamed dreams of fortunes to be made there by raising certain crops. But these dreams are generally regarded as delusive by the well informed, for Porto Rico is already over-cultivated, if anything. Certainly there will be more assiduously tended than that of any State in the Union. There may be some sections in a few of the older states that have reached a grade of agricultural development approaching that of Porto Rico, but they are few and small. And there is no comparison whatever between the high state of cultivation attained there and the agricultural development of the greater part of the available farming land in the United States.

This statement is made primarily on the evidence of travellers in Porto Rico who speak with wonder of the thorough subjugation of the soil there, but need not rest on their evidence alone. It is fully borne out by figures which sometimes lie, but are perfectly trustworthy in this instance. Porto Rico, with an area of only 3,550 square miles, less than one-thirteenth the area of the State of New York, has a population of about 800,000, or 225 to the square mile, and most of this population is agricultural at that. The United States, with an area of 3,600,000 square miles, has a population of about 74,500,000, or only 21 to the square mile, a much larger proportion case in Porto Rico.

There are, in truth, only two states in our Union that support a larger population to the square mile than Porto Rico. These are Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Massachusetts, with an area of 8,315 square miles, has a population of 2,238,943, or 268 to the square mile. Little Rhode Island, with 1,250 square miles, has 345,506, or 276 to the square mile. But neither of these states is chiefly agricultural—in fact the bulk of the population in both is supported by the mills and factories in the cities and towns. The farms of neither Massachusetts nor Rhode Island are cultivated with anything like the care bestowed upon the Porto Rican acres, nor will they be until the United States is desperately crowded, much more desperately, perhaps, than it will be in the lifetime of anyone who reads this article.

No state besides these two approaches Porto Rico in density of population. New Jersey, largely a manufacturing and suburban community, supports 184 persons to the square mile; Connecticut, chiefly by manufactures, supports 108 to the square mile; New York supports 132, vastly more than half by commercial and manufacturing enterprises, and Pennsylvania, with the third largest city in the Union, and her myriads of miners, 116.

These figures are enough to show that the enterprising American, desirous of winning wealth by agricultural pursuits, would find far more room for his ambitions in some of the most thickly populated states of the Union than in Porto Rico, to say nothing of California, with its vast territory, embracing 158,360 square miles, between which and Porto Rico 2,000 acres or eight to the square mile; or Texas, extending over 265,780, with 2,230,000 inhabitants and about the same density. There is, in fact, a better chance for agricultural expansion in Michigan or Missouri, or Illinois or Indiana or any other state in the country except those which are too arid or too mountainous to cultivate profitably.

It is a little different with Cuba, and yet the population of that fair island, though not to be compared as to density with that of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey or Connecticut, is still greater than that of the United States as a whole. Before the beginning of the insurrection, which was followed by the Spanish-American war, Cuba had a population of more than 1,500,000, which was supported on 43,328 square miles, or about 34 to the mile. Allowing for all probable decrease, Cuba must still contain 1,000,000 souls.

Then they shook hands.

"I was scarcely aware of it myself," Blakewell said, awkwardly, "till—till about three days ago. My friend Forrest advised me to take up my paints and go up with, some early work and with—with kind encouragement"—he threw a worshipful eye on Lady Clara—"I—I succeeded."

"The object of my visit," the dutchess interrupted, "is to say that we are unexcelled called to Ringtowers; we leave to-night."

Clara's face, which had partially cleared, became gray with consternation.

"But Mr. Forrest's picture," she cried, tremulously.

"It can be brought down there if he likes."

"Thank you," the artist accepted, uneasily.

"And Mr.—Mr."—Clara began, with big tears magnifying her eyes—"what will he do?"

"Oh, Mr. Forrest is welcome to bring his pupil with him. Mr. Blackwell, will you accept Lady Clara's invitation to Ringtowers?"

The best husband on earth is none too good.

TRAGEDY OR COMEDY

I knew George Arbuthnot pretty well for two years—ever since he had been married, in fact and considered him a rising fellow in the literary world. He had not done anything very great, but his work was distinctly promising, and his name was gradually making itself known. Unluckily, he had married a very wrong woman.

But my friend was not like some men—he did not whine and cry, he made the best of it. He did not go out and search for a "twin soul" to whom he might confide his marital sufferings though Phoebus knows, he had enough to put up with. He was not bad tempter. It was jealousy—bitter, mean, incessant jealousy—that grudged him even his literary fame. Again the dutchess was one of those pale, golden-eyed women, with a spiteful tongue and a narrow heart, who have ruined the career of many a sensitive man. She hated to hear her husband's praises sounded in her ears.

One afternoon Agatha was clanging Arbuthnot because some women who had happened to call the day before had gushed, and told her how fortunate she was to be the wife of such a rising genius. Her face was crimson with anger, and her voice very shrill as she mimicked her guests.

"Dear Mrs. Arbuthnot! How proud you must be of your clever husband! He's quite a genius. How I envy you living with the man who can write such exquisite stories!"

"Clever! Exquisite! A genius! I never in my life heard such rubbish in your silly tales. Beastly rot, I call them. I wish to goodness I'd married Henry Jeckins instead of you. At any rate, people wouldn't have praised him up just in order to run me down. I know what I'm talking of, of course. Your stupid and brainless and silly—not good enough for you to wipe your boots on—"

And then Arbuthnot did the most sensible thing possible. He walked out of the dining room, and locked himself up in his study.

George's den wasn't much of a "study," merely a smoke-begrimed den, furnished with a second-hand bureau, two orthree chairs, and some shelves of books. Agatha called it "George's sulking room," but I knew it was the only haven of refuge Arbuthnot could find in his own house.

"A man must dree his own weird," Arbuthnot said, as he sat down wearily at the bureau and looked at the sheets of paper that littered over his desk. "Agatha's right, I'm afraid. I've found marriage a failure; and after all, I've got a brain as well as a heart. I'll give myself up to work, and waste no time in morbid self-pity. That's a form of cowardice that leads to the cutting of one's throat; and I've exhausted the possibilities of marriage. I'll be hanged if I've exhausted the possibilities of life."

He smiled grimly, and taking from one of the pigeon holes a notebook, drew his desk and began to read its contents.

From that day Arbuthnot progressed swiftly through the book that was to make his name. This was to be his masterpiece, wherein he would show his best of brain and heart; and, as the weeks went by, he found that he neared its end. Arbuthnot realized his work was good, and in that knowledge could afford to live, and did live, without love and sympathy.

In truth, he needed every part of that work to shield him from the bitterness of his home life. Agatha's conduct grew daily more shrewish and violent, and her tongue less fastidious in its choice of words.

"So you've taken to locking yourself up in your sulking room," she cried one day, "as though you were a child. I've been compelled to answer her heavy banging on his study door. "It's a nice thing when a husband comes to lock himself up from his wife! I suppose my society's not good enough for such a genius as you are!"

Arbuthnot saw that she was in one of her paroxysms of rage, and resolved to control his own feelings.

"I wanted to finish some work," he said calmly, looking at the door lest with those sheets of paper. "And this room is handy at for a lady's society. You see, I have scarcely a chair that is unoccupied with books."

"Yes, it's a horrid hole," assented Agatha, curtly; "but you men who write are more like pigs than human beings. Just look at the dust on that desk; it's shameful. And Sarah says you won't let her touch your papers. I'm ashamed to have such a dirty room in my house; I'll come and dust myself to-morrow!"

At these words Arbuthnot lost his philosophical self-control.

"I must ask you not to touch the papers on my desk," he said, hastily. "I allow Sarah to brush and dust everything in the room, but my desk, and that I attend to myself."

"Of course you fly at my throat when I offer to do anything for you," said Agatha, angrily, letting her hand fall on the desk and crumpling several of the loose sheets of paper. "I never speak to you but what I do wrong. That comes of marrying a genius! You're enough to make any woman want to drown herself!"

"If that poor parlour it I spoke hastily," said Arbuthnot, ruefully contemplating the sheets of paper which Agatha was fast crumpling into balls; "but I've nearly finished my book, and these sheets of paper are rather valuable."

Agatha threw the balls onto the table.

"And this book is to make you famous!" she asked, with bitter contempt. "I suppose when it's published, every one will come in and —on your tale?" His voice was chilly with assumed indifference.

"She meant to, but—"

"Tell me."

"When she met him she didn't know that he was the critic."

"And he fell in love with her?"

"He said so."

"Did he like him—Agnes?" His face was still cold, but his voice was almost fierce in its eagerness.

"In the story she did."

"But when he told her that he was the critic?"

"I didn't say that he told her."

"But he did, didn't he?"

"Yes—in the story."

"So she hated him?"

"Y—es—not exactly—I don't know." Her hands kept opening and closing aimlessly.

"Anyhow, she resolved upon revenge?"

"Yes, a sort of revenge."

"A sort of revenge?" She shrunk and quivered at the scorn in his voice. "You should read the story," she pleaded.

"My God!" he cried, "do I not know it?"

"No," she answered firmly, "you do not know it."

"Then I should like to hear." But she knew that he had hardened his heart.

"Well, she resolved to let him go on liking her—"

"A sort of revenge!"

"She made herself as attractive as she could. She wasn't very pretty, you know; merely a 'small, pale, big-eyed'—"

"For God's sake!" he cried, fiercely and hoarsely.

"Well, somehow she made him like her, and she—"

"Hated him all the time!"

"No—s—not altogether—in the tale."

"And he proposed to her?"

"Yes; he proposed to her."

"Lamely enough—but earnestly." There was the rage of a caged animal underneath his quiet voice.

"Oh, no! Not lamely at all; honestly and manfully, and lovingly. He was a splendid character—in the tale." It was strange that he could not read the hero-worship in her tone.

"But she thought he wasn't?"

"No. She thought he was. She knew he was not." She hid her handkerchief trembligly in knots.

"Agnes, you are trying to play with me. I do not understand."

"No," she said passionately, looking up at him with white, drawn face and quivering lips, and eyes full of pain; "you do not understand. He did not understand."

"Did she not refuse him? Did she not tell him that the confession had nearly broken her heart? Did she not tell him that she had come and—could the bitterest revenge that a woman could take? Did she not tell him that she had studied his books to find the ways that attracted him most, to make him care for her? Did she not tell him that she had meant him to propose that she might refuse him? Did she not say that she wanted him to care for her all the rest of his life?" He stood up and towered over her like an accusing angel.

"Yes," she said with a sob. "But—"

"But! There is no 'but' to excuse such conduct as that!"

"Ah, but she had a lot more to say if he would have heard her. But he cursed her and went away—in the tale!"

"Agnes!" She sobbed uncontrollably behind her handkerchief. "Agnes, for mercy's sake tell me what would she have told him if he had not gone." She looked up with a tear-stained face.

"She would have told him," she said, steadily, her voice low and quivering in her fingerstips upon his arm, "that he had conquered her passion and her wickedness; that she had found out how great and strong and kind he was—"

"Agnes, little Agnes! Would she have told him that she loved him?"

"I—I don't know. The—the tale stops."

"But our tale, dear?" There was something in his voice that was past describing.

She also looked up at him, with eyes brimming over, and whispered a word so brokenly that he could scarcely hear. But he took her in his arms and held her as close as could be, and she tried to hide her face.

"O, Aggie, Aggie," he cried; "I ought to have known—a woman's mercy."

She lifted a flushed, happy face and threw a pair of slim, willful arms round his neck. "Oh," she whispered, "my dear, dear boy. A woman's love!"—J. A. Flynn in Black and White.

His Opinion Didn't Fit All Cases.

Hicks—I am opposed to the whole business of tipping. It amounts to, nothing less than bribery, and it is a disgrace to the man who offers the tip and to the man who accepts it. On principle, I never give anything to a waiter.

Wicks—Well, I suppose you are right enough, but everybody hasn't your strength of mind, Hicks. By the way, that's a fine cigar you are smoking. Where did you get it?

Hicks—Oh, this is one that Stillson gave me. When I buy a bottle of liquor from him he always hands me a cigar.—Boston Transcript.

Servant—Lady at the door, mum. She didn't have no card.

Mistress—What does she look like? Servant—Sal's cat, mum; eyes, lips, ugly chin, an' hooked nose. She looks as if she'd bite a body's head off.

Mistress—Tell her I'll be down in a moment. She's probably collecting money for some charity.—New York Weekly.

A MASTER PASSION.

We were sisters, and I was ten years Norah's senior. She was naive, petite, winsome, and tender-hearted; I was a woman of strong impulses, with passions that smouldered and literary ambitions that rusted for the want of an incentive to call them into use. My character was more impressive than my beauty; but Norah had one of the sweetest faces that ever the sun shone on.

Having lost our parents early in life, we lived alone. Norah clung to me for guidance, I cherished her with the solicitude of an elder sister, and mutual devotion lent happiness to our somewhat uneventful lives.

But soon the monotony of our days was strangely disturbed.

* * * * * * *

He was introduced to us by the vicar's wife, and my first impression of Abel Ventome was an impression of the ugliest man I had ever cast my eyes on. He was gaunt and angular, his face was pale, seamed with lines of thought, and his attenuated features gave him an uncanny appearance, in spite of his high forehead and the lustre of his searching grey eyes. After a time, when I knew and understood him, he strangely attracted me.

He and his mother had taken a cottage in the village of D——, where we lived, for the purpose of editing for a well-known publisher a series of books called "The Commercial Orators of the Nineteenth Century."

We soon exchanged visits. And by some chance or other I often found myself in the society of Ventome, whose conversation opened out a new world of thought and suggestion to me.

At last it seemed to me my chance had come. I had now met the strong intelligence to awaken the ambitions which had grown sluggish in the surroundings of a sleepy village.

"I have such happy news for you," said Norah one afternoon to me, in animated tones. "I'm engaged to be married."

At once I instinctively guessed the truth. Nora had robbed me of his love. I looked at her with a stony glare. I could not move. I could not speak. It seemed as if I was paralyzed.

"Gracie, darling, don't look like that; why don't you congratulate me? Did you not want me to be engaged?" and she twined her arms around me and sobbed.

I sullenly freed myself from her embrace. "You had no right to engage yourself without consulting me first," was my frozen reply.

"It was all so sudden," she faltered; "he told me he loved me, and——"

I harshly interrupted her: "Never mind particulars, I will see him myself," and I left her.

I went to my own room, maddened with jealousy and utterly miserable. Later in the day he gave me his confidences.

"Everything has turned out so well," he concluded. "She will make me so happy, and your intellectual sympathy will complete my happiness."

With the hypocrisy which many women can assume I smilingly congratulated him, and actually kissed Norah and wished her happiness.

The thought, however, of another woman ministering to his happiness was gall and wormwood to me. The idea of the sister on whom I had expended a life's devotion winning his love was terrible. Their bliss should no longer mock me. Their love should no longer gloat over me. I resolved to kill them.

* * * * * * *

I had a loaded toy revolver in my pocket, waiting for my time and opportunity. He had just arrived and she had left me to meet him. Stealthily I was about to follow them to carry out my terrible purpose, when my glance fell on an unfinished letter on the table, and curiosity urged me to read it.

"My Own Darling Gracie,

"I know I am not half as clever as you are, but I have been clever enough to have found out your secret. You tried to hide it, dear, but I could not, and I am so glad my knowledge did not come too late. Do you think, darling, that I would ever supplant you, and be happy at the expense of your unhappiness? Never, never. I mean to tell him I have changed my mind and——"

I could read no more. I felt as if the walls of the room were folding around me to overwhelm and stifle me. The strength and beauty of Norah's unselfishness came over me to loathe myself. My darling's self-sacrifice reproached me and stung me, till I reviled myself as one unworthy to live. And in the agony of my shame and despair I drew the revolver out of my pocket and pointed it at myself, when I knew it was suddenly dashed from me and I saw and heard no more.

* * * * * * *

When I had recovered from my ensuing long and painful nervous illness I resolved to travel. A distant relative in Canada who was a superior of a convent gladly welcomed me, and in spite of my sister's entreaties to reflect, I resolved to retire, and had no heart to return; and thus the convent will be my home to the end of my days.

* * * * * * *

"What is the matter?" asked Norah. "You have been groaning in your sleep for at least ten minutes, and I have been shaking you to awaken you."

"I have had such a terrible, vivid dream. Oh, darling! We will never be jealous of one another, and no one will ever part us."

"What a silly you are," replied my sister; "you've been over-tasking your brain, and had a nightmare in consequence."—Golden Penny.

The Nominations.

The Republicans and Citizens' have completed their nominations for the administrative offices of the city government, and it now remains with the voters to determine which is the most worthy, in the view of what they will probably accomplish if elevated to official positions.

The Republicans have changed their usual practice in making nominations by naming a man for Mayor whose business interests are centered in the city, and in this way they hope to secure victory that perhaps another commuter-Mayor nominee might not bring at this time. The views of a large number of influential Republicans were clearly presented by former Mayor Gilbert in his speech nominating Mr. Rockfellow, though at times Mr. Gilbert waxed more sarcastic than good politics would warrant under the circumstances. But leaving aside the feeling of the commuter element, who evidently believe that their efforts to serve the city have been poorly appreciated by the "home" element, the party now appears as having gratified the prevailing sentiment and no doubt think that they have ample claims for enthusiastic support.

The Citizens' have put forward a candidate for Mayor who represents what they assert is in no sense a partisan movement, but one designed to inaugurate reforms which the Republicans have made necessary by their party administration, and which are essential to the welfare of the city. The Citizens' complaints are, so to speak, too numerous to mention. It is on the promise to grapple forcibly and honestly with the municipal problems that they ask for support.

New Jersey to Honor Dead Heroes.

Within a month there is to be erected by the State of New Jersey at Andersonville, Ga., a monument in memory of the New Jersey soldiers buried there. The monument of Quincy granite, twenty three feet high, will stand on two bases ten feet in height of a conglomerate blue stone quarried near Boonton. On the granite capital surmounting the upper part of the monument will be a carved figure of a soldier at "parade rest." On the slightly polished die of the monument will be the following inscription in sunken letters:

"Go, stranger, to New Jersey. Tell her that we lie here in fulfilment of her mandate and our pledge to maintain the proud name of our State unsullied, and place it high on the scroll of honor among the States of this great nation."

Chicago's Foolish Craze.

The antivaccination craze in England, which resulted last summer in some very foolish legislation in parliament and brought out such a flood of bitter protest from medical men, is not confined to the other side of the water. It has organized itself in Chicago as the People's Liberty League. Superintendent Andrews fears that it may compel the board of education to abandon compulsory vaccination in the schools, as there is no law on the statute books enforcing it. It is extraordinary that in this age of the world so bitter a prejudice can exist in the minds of large numbers of people, by no means confined to the ignorant, against a preventive method which has almost eradicated one of the great scourges of the human race. Where 50 deaths by smallpox occurred two centuries ago, not more than one is recorded now.

Winter Has Begun.

The winter of 1898-99 promises to be a memorable one if the great snow storm that swept over this section Saturday and Sunday is any forecast of what it is to be. From every side comes reports of how the storm has held up railroad trains, trolley and cable cars indiscriminately. Traffic was at a standstill for twenty-four hours. Not since the memorable blizzard of 1888 has New Jersey been visited by a storm of such severity. It will probably be a week or more before the State has fully recovered from its effects.

Chief Doane makes a wise suggestion that householders would do well to remove the snow about the fire hydrants in front of their homes. They might be needed.

Mayor Wilson's Methods.

North Plainfield is particularly favored at present with a good Mayor. Not that Mayor Wilson's predecessors were not up to the standard set by the present chief executive of the borough, for North Plainfield has had a number of very satisfactory officers at the head of her government. Mayor Wilson has introduced some new methods, however, that have not hitherto prevailed. His Honor is a great believer in the power of moral suasion, and he often uses it when other men might exert their official power. His methods have, however, met with a wonderful degree of success.

The Mayor's latest achievement is in ridding the borough of several gambling dens. Now it is exceedingly difficult to detect these haunts as the police of every and in the country has found. Evidence, it is next to impossible to secure. Now within the confines of the borough there were three places where the youth of the community gathered and risked their money in an exciting game of chance. The Mayor was positive they were there and yet lacked the necessary proof, if he had wanted to, to bring the offenders to justice. Instead, he tried the strength of moral suasion. He approached the proprietors of the places and placed the case very plainly before them. He also talked to the men that haunted the dens. His persuasion had its effect. Two of the gambling dens were closed up and the usual habitues regarded the Mayor's injunctions. The remaining resort will probably soon follow the example of the others, and the borough will then be free from such disgrace. Under the circumstances, who can say that Mayor Wilson's methods are not a success.

Divided Against Itself.

The Union County Country Club stands divided against itself this year. While the club itself has never taken any stand in politics, most of the members have been Republicans and many were prominent in party politics. This year Mayor Fisk and his friends are working for the interest of the Republican ticket, while the secretary of the club is on the Citizens' ticket as candidate for School Trustee.

Reed's Grip is Strong.

The Trenton correspondent of the Philadelphia Record, one of the most astute of the legislative observers, regards Senator Reed's candidacy for the Presidency of the Senate as quite formidable. The Record says:

The Senator-elect and the holdovers who were present listened patiently to Senator Ketcham, but refused to pledge themselves to Ketcham, however, after the day's work with the declarati n that he had good reason for believing that he would land when the time came for caucus, or to vote.

The consensus of opinion among the leaders and the members of the "third House," who usually keep a pretty sharp eye on the drifting of events, is that Charles A. Reed, of Somerset county, will get the coveted office. This is Senator Reed's la-t year. He is a lawyer of ability, has the friendship of the Governor that is to be, while the canvass he is making is quiet, it is strong and will probably land him in the president's chair.

Nothing would be more gratifying to Plainfield—city and borough—than to see Senator Reed elevated to the position from which Mr. Voorhees stepped into the highest office of the State. Mr. Reed's legislative experience, his ability as a lawyer and his courteous and suave personal manner would make him a popular presiding officer of the upper house of the Legislature. The Senator would be austere enough to lend dignity to the position, but withal that there is plenty of humor in him to keep the Senate in a pleasant frame of mind.

Plainfield was lucky, indeed, not to have a fire Sunday Had one occurred, the department would have been greatly handicapped by the snow. In Newark and New York, much valuable property was destroyed owing to the fact that the fire departments of these cities could not reach the scene of the fire in time.

Of course it's all right to ride a wheel whenever you want to, but it does look rather unseasonable to go spinning along with ten inches of snow on the ground.

The straw ride is as popular as ever this year. There has also been a wonderful demand for tin horns in this city during the last few days.

David McClure, counsel for the Trust Company, said Mortimer had received $700 since October 1st, and the injunction obtained by a creditor prevented the payment of more. He said Mortimer had admitted that he could live on $900 a year and could not now insist that he needed the entire income.

He declared patience and ceased to be a virtue, and the trustee would treat Mortimer as a child, paying only his living expenses and with the balance see that the creditors were protected. Mr. McClure asserted that while the company was anxious to be relieved of the trusteeship, it would not withdraw under fire but would fight the matter to the end.

HONORED THE MEMORY OF THE LATE JUDGE.

Impressive Funeral Service of the Late Judge DeMeza.

VERY LARGE ATTENDANCE.

IT WAS HELD IN THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. Acted as Guard of Honor—Delegations of Red Men, Knights of the A. E. O. and Lawyers Present—Mayor and Council Attend in a Body.

City Judge George W. DeMeza has passed away to another land from whence none return. But the remembrance of him still remains. Sunday afternoon, the last sad rites were held and friends, fraternal comrades, and business associates gathered in the First Presbyterian church to do honor to his memory. It was one of the grandest and most impressive funeral ceremonies ever witnessed in Plainfield, for the young judge had a host of friends who braved the elements to show their regard for the departed one.

Saturday afternoon, from 2 to 6 o'clock, the late City Judge rested in state at his old home on West Second street. The cover of the casket had been removed and the familiar face, so white and still, was gazed at for the last time by the sorrowing friends. Despite the snow storm that raged outside, there were a host of them who came to bid farewell as it were to their once active friend.

The funeral Sunday afternoon began at 2:30 o'clock. The two central sections of seats were reserved for the societies of which Judge DeMeza was a member and the other special guests. The side sections and gallery were filled even before the hour of beginning.

The members of Franklin and Somerset Councils, J. O. U. A. M. marched to the church in a body and acted as guard of honor. The members formed an open aisle leading to the church door and there waited. The members of Miantonomo and Paughcaughnaushaunque tribes of Red Men, in regalia, marched between the rows of attendant Juniors and took seats on the right of the centre aisle. They were followed by a delegation of the members of the Ancient Order, numbering about forty.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold and Sheriff Wilbur T. Kirk were given seats in the front pews. A few minutes later all the members of the Common Council together with several other of the city officials were seated just behind the Mayor on the right. Behind them came the members of the Plainfield Bar. The inclement weather kept many of the out-of-town lawyers away but there was a representation of the Union County Bar outside of Plainfield. The law students were also present seated together.

For sometime preceding the opening of the service soft minor harmonies swept out from the organ. Sorrow seemed to fill the very tones. At last the side door swung quietly open and the black casket, with its silver trimmings, was borne into the auditorium by six of Plainfield's most prominent men in the legal profession, Senator Charles A. Reed, Former Assemblyman W. B. Codington, ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Former Judge W. M. Stillman and Councilman Wm. N. Runyon.

At the same time there entered from the rear of the sanctuary, the bereaved mother leaning on the arm of her now eldest son, William G. DeMeza and the other members of the family. Following were the intimate friends of the late Judge. All were seated on the left of the centre aisle. In the space remaining the members of the Junior Order occupied, filing in behind the mourning ones. Then eleven policemen in full uniform, led by Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely and Roundsmen Frederickson and Flynn, entered and took their place in the rear pews of that section.

The seating of the people was done by the ushers, Francis J. Blatz Charles J. McNaub, Robert M. Clark and Harry C Runyon, co-workers of the late Judge in the legal profession After the arrival of the cortage, the rear of the church was speedily filled by those for whom there were no seats.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the church, officiated at the service. He opened the service by reading the 23d Psalm, after which he led in prayer and made his remarks, which were tender and comforting to the bereaved ones.

Mr. Herring took as his text these words, "He is not dead, but sleeping," and spoke in substance as follows: "I never know our dead brother as so many of you here knew him, as a lawyer, but I knew him as he was on the street, in the home, and in the church. I knew him as a man of push. He was determined to make a way for himself in this world and did it, and made of himself an honored judge of this city.

"George W. Childs, Spencer, John Wanamaker and thousands of others were poor in this world's goods when they were young, but they were determined to make a way in the world and did it, and I rejoice to say that this young friend was doing the same thing. He had a winning way with him, and we recognized that here and asked him to become an usher in the church.

"He was devoted to his home, and we love to think of his spirit. He did not separate himself from the home life. We would all like to see him in his old place, but that cannot be. Let us then accept God's will, knowing that whatever the burden He will share it with us."

After Rev. Mr. Herring had concluded his remarks Past Councillor Bodine, of Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., conducted the funeral service of the order. The ritual was impressive and seemed in touch with the solemnity of the occasion.

Interment was to have been made Sunday afternoon in Hillside cemetery, but the roads being impassable the remains were taken to the parlor of A. M. Runyon & Son until it was possible to remove them to their final resting place.

During the service Charles A. Lewis, the baritone of the Orsent Avenue church choir, rendered two selections, the last one, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," being particularly impressive.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Here was the suburbanite's version of the "Beautiful Snow" on Saturday night:

Snow, more beautiful snow,
I live at Milltown, where trolleys don't go.

South River, Bound Brook or Metuchen may be substituted in the above without destroying the historical accuracy of the verse.—New Brunswick Times.

* * * * *

People who have use for trolley cars are complaining about the wretched condition of the service from Dunellen to Bound Brook, Somerville, New Brunswick, etc. They say that the cars are not heated, and that very poor time and connections are made.—Plainfield Press.

* * * * *

Better stay at home or else travel on the Central. Good service cannot be expected until a power house is built at Bound Brook, and this is not likely to be done for, lo, these many moons. —Somerville Democrat.

* * * * *

The Plainfield Press says: "Neat signs have been placed on the Plainfield trolley cars telling the names of places which can be reached, including Dunellen, Lincoln, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan and New Brunswick." It would be well to add: "If the power holds out." Every few days the power ceases to be a power and the cars between Bound Brook, Somerville and Raritan fails to run, much to the disadvantage of the traveling public. The power gave out last Saturday morning, and horses were drawn into service to haul the cars from the park to where the Milltown current could be caught on East street.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

* * * * *

The city of Plainfield is scarcely out of one election before it is into another. The local election for Mayor, Councilmen, etc., is to be held soon, and Plainfield is growing very hot, politically, over the campaign. A few months ago it was currently reported in Plainfield that the Republican party was in a very bad way; that there was bad blood between factions and that when the opportunity came the "people" would slaughter the "machine," etc., and gore would be liable every trail. It was even intimated that the fury of the factions would not be held in check until after the State election and it was ominously hinted that Voorhees and Fowler and the whole Republican county ticket would suffer. The splendid Republican majorities given in Plainfield proved that these intimations were imaginings, and that they had little foundation. Evidently the Plainfield Republicans believe in slaughtering the enemy but not in killing each other. The local election, soon to take place, is likely to be another Republican victory. A few days ago Democrats seemed determined to run a straight ticket, but they soon found it would not do. Then a Citizens' movement was inaugurated, but it has thus far resulted in bickerings over the selection of candidates. Meanwhile the Republicans have prepared their ticket, picked their flints, and are a solid phalanx, ready for the fray. They have selected excellent men, and that they will win is practically certain.—Elizabeth Journal.

Street Car Jumped the Track.

Car No. 14, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company jumped the track on the Somerset street bridge near French's mill, yesterday and travel was delayed for some time. This is not a new trick of the cars. Several times before cars have jumped at that point, but fortunately no damage has resulted.

Marshal Compton, of the borough, is on the sick list.

HIS DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

AUTOPSY ON THE BODY OF THE LATE ROBERT RANDOLPH.

Made Necessary to Determine Payment of Accident Insurance—His Death was Due to Concussion of the Brain.

Last Tuesday at the undertaking establishment of A. M. Runyon & Son, of Park avenue, an autopsy was performed on the body of Robert Randolph, of Elmwood place, who died so suddenly last Saturday night. The autopsy was performed at the instigation of the insurance company that was carrying an accident insurance for Mr. Randolph. There seemed to be some doubt as to whether Mr. Randolph's death was due to an accident or natural causes, hence the examination. Dr. Tomlinson was in charge of the autopsy, and he was assisted by Dr. E. W. Hedges. A thorough examination was made, and the physicians decided that death was due to concussion of the brain, thereby making the death an accidental one.

In examining the body no dislocation of any kind was discovered and every organ was apparently in a healthy condition. The heart was found to be all right. According to the opinion of the physicians the cause of death is veiled in mystery There was no external evidence of bruise or injury, but so far as the physicians are able to determine, death was caused by concussion of the brain, a disarrangement at the nerve centre.

The funeral services of the late Robert Randolph were held from the home on Elmwood place, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The attendance of friends and neighbors was very large and was strong evidence of the esteem in which the departed was held by all. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, where the deceased attended, conducted the service. He spoke words of comfort and consolation, and his remarks were strongly addressed to the living. He spoke of the domesticity of the deceased and how he loved his home.

The floral display was beautiful and included a large pillow from the employes at the Pond Machine Tool Works, where Mr. Randolph was employed. It bore the words "Our Comrade."

Those who served as pall bearers were James Smith, Daniel Page, Mr Conklin, M. C. Dobbins. The remains were removed to the rooms of A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue, where they were held for burial.

BICYCLE THIEF CONVICTED.

Wm. Grey, Colored, Found Guilty of Stealing Frank Denckiau's Wheel

Elizabeth, November 30th—William Grey, the colored man who was charged with stealing the wheel belonging to Frank Denckiau, was tried in the Union County Court here this morning and found guilty. He will be sentenced by Judge Vail next week.

Grey's defence was rather weak. He claimed that he purchased the wheel from a man named Green residing in Railway. Prosecutor English was able to trip him up in the cross questioning several times.

It will be remembered that Denckiau lent his wheel to a friend one Saturday afternoon and that evening the friend returned it and left it standing in front of Hall's pharmacy where Denckiau was employed. There was no clue to the thief.

A week or so later Grey was arrested in New Brunswick after a lively chase. He had a wheel and acted in such a suspicious manner that a policeman there questioned him.

He broke away from the officer in front of the station house, but was tripped up by a passerby and captured He first said that he bought the wheel in Metuchen.

It is believed that he will be sentenced to the State Prison for a year.

BISHOP LAID THE STONE.

Notable Ministers Take Part in the Exercises at Drew Seminary.

Madison, Nov. 30.—The exercises of the laying of the corner-stone of the new chapel and administration building of Drew Theological Seminary took place yesterday at 11 o'clock in Christ Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. H. A. Butts, president of the seminary, being ill, Rev. Dr. S. E. Upham presided.

The opening prayer was made by Rev. Dr J. M. Buckley, editor of The Christian Advocate. Upon the platform with him was Bishop Andrews and Rev. Dr. Milburn, of Washington, D. C., chaplain of the United States Senate.

After the services in the church the congregation went to the campus, where the corner-stone was laid by Bishop Andrews and addresses were made by Drs. Milburn, Buckley and Upham.

Death of an Aged Fireman.

Elizabeth, November 30th—Charles Randolph, one of the oldest members of the Elizabeth Fire Department, died Monday night in the Elizabeth General Hospital. Mr. Randolph was 74 years old and joined the department in 1845. He is survived by two daughters and a son.

PLAINFIELD BRIDE WAS QUIETLY WEDDED.

Miss Mabel Coard Married at Her Home Monday Night.

VERY PRETTY CEREMONY.

ERNEST FREDERIC GUSTAVE FRANKE, BRESLAU, GERMANY, THE GROOM.

Ceremony Performed by Rev. Charles Dodd, of Newark—House was Handsomely Decorated for the Occasion—Ceremony Took Place in Front of Floral Bower—Couple Sailed for Europe

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Coard, of East Ninth street, was the scene last Monday of a pretty but quiet wedding, when their daughter, Miss Mabel M. Coard, was united in marriage to Ernest Frederic Gustave Franke, of Breslau, Germany. The home was filled with relatives and friends in honor of the occasion

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by Rev. Charles Dodd, pastor of the Peddie Memorial Baptist church, Newark, who is a great friend of the family. The Episcopal service was used throughout.

The wedding took place in the parlor where the floral decorations were exceedingly pretty and unique. On one side of the room opposite the hall door there was a large bank of white chrysanthemums, palms and greens, while there was a pleasing arrangement of white satin ribbon interwining the flowers. It was in front of this floral display that the happy people were united in marriage. They entered the room while the wedding march was executed by Miss Jessie Ulder, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist.

The bride was given away in marriage by her father. She was attended by Miss Laura Kelton, of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Franke was attended by George Coard, brother of the bride. The bride was richly gowned in satin of a cream color, with trimmings of lace and silk. The bridesmaid wore a gown of white organdie trimmed with Valenciennes lace. The bridal party formed a semi-circle and while the ceremony was being performed sweet strains of music were softly rendered. After the couple were united they were the recipients of congratulations from all present. Following the congratulations a wedding supper was served.

The decorations in the other rooms were equally as pretty as those in the parlor. In the front room opposite the parlor the prevailing colors were yellow and green, while in the dining room, in addition to the decorations of flowers, there was a pretty display of the colors of Germany in ribbons, which were arranged about the bow-window. In the background the American colors were displayed. The decorations on the table were very attractive.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Franke left their relatives and friends for New York, and next morning they sailed on the Kaiser Friedrich of the North German Lloyd Steamship Line. They will be absent until January and while abroad will be received by many distinguished people in European cities. They will on their return take up their residence in New York city, where Mr. Franke has engaged in business as a contractor for fire proof flooring. While abroad they will visit Mr. Franke's mother in Breslau.

Mr. and Mrs. Franke have received gifts of great cost, usefulness and beauty, from all parts of the world, and displayed in the room with the presents were a number of letters from distinguished people residing in foreign countries and offering their congratulations.

DONATIONS ACKNOWLEDGED.

Board of Managers of Children's Home Have Received Many Things.

The board of managers of the Children's Home gratefully acknowledge the receipt of three barrels of vegetables and fruit from the officers of Muhlenberg Hospital; of 119 new garments from the Needlework Guild; from the public school of North Plainfield a large donation of groceries and other useful articles; from the Sunday-schools of St. Stephen's church and Mt. Pleasant chapel generous gifts of fruit and vegetables from their harvest home festivals.

Our thanks are also due to the tradesmen and private friends, whose timely gifts made Thanksgiving Day such a happy one for our children.

A YOUTHFUL TRAVELER.

TOLD STORY OF HIS EXPERIENCES TO PLAINFIELD AUDIENCE.

He Worked His Away Abroad and Saw the Diamond Jubilee—Interviewed All the Leading Men of Europe—Large Crowd.

An audience of good size and thoroughly appreciative assembled at the Y. M. C. A. last Monday and for over an hour listened to the story of Harry Steele Morrison, "The Renowned Boy Traveler," of Illinois, who has traveled from his home to London and several foreign countries with a very small amount of money. The young man is 16 years old and is a very entertaining talker. He has not entirely overcome his boyish manner, but his large experience has given him much to talk about.

He told how he started from his small country home and worked in an office in Chicago as an office boy. From there he secured a pass on the B. & O. Railroad to Philadelphia, and with his small earnings was able to buy a ticket from there to New York.

When he arrived in New York he visited the newspaper offices and told them that he was going to London to attend the Queen's Jubilee and to secure an interview with the Queen, also Mr. Gladstone. He was laughed at and while he received slight encouragement, in the main his ideas were thought to be impracticable.

He finally secured passage on a cattle steamer to London and worked his way over by washing dishes in the pantry. In London he worked for his room and board, saw the Diamond Jubilee and the Queen. He later viewed Mr. Gladstone and the prominent men in politics and the world of art and letters.

When he left London for Belgium he had $15 and with that amount he spent five months in Belgium, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and France, and interviewed heads of the Government.

While abroad he contributed to several leading papers, telling his experiences, and in some cases where he was asked for his opinions of English institutions he did not gain favor all together. He also sent articles to New York papers, for which he received a handsome sum on his return to this country. This trip took place last year and he returned home in time to spend Christmas. Mr. Morrison is now doing journalistic work.

As an additional feature of the evening's entertainment Mr. Evans gave two whistling solos, accompanied by Mr. Harold on the piano. After the entertainment many remained to meet Mr. Morrison.

A GAME DINNER.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel Entertained at Their Home Monday Night.

Last Monday at the Crescent Hotel on Somerset street, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel entertained about fifty of their friends at a game dinner. The dinner was given to the members of the German Beneficial Society, the Independent Schwitzen Corps and a few invited guests. The menu was all to be desired and was served in up to date style. Everyone had a good time, and after the inner man was looked after, the rest of the evening was passed in listening to good singing and excellent speeches from those present. Everyone voted the host and hostess to be the best of entertainers, and one and all thanked them heartily for their hospitality and for the good time provided.

DANCED AT CAS NO.

Charming Social Affair in Honor of Miss Helen Frances Bushnell.

Mrs. William E. Lowe, of Park avenue, gave a party in the Casino Saturday night to the debutante, Miss Helen Frances Bushnell, of Central avenue. Miss Bushnell assisted Mrs. Lowe in receiving, and the other ladies assisting were Mrs. John Bushnell and Miss Lotta Lowe.

The Casino was prettily decorated and trimmed with palms and potted plants, patriotic colors, and red and green. Fancy sofa pillows were strewn here and there carelessly, and this made the scene a comfortable one. Dancing was kept up until midnight, music for which was furnished by Rogers.

CITY ADMINISTRATION STRONGLY CONDEMNED

Scathing Criticisms at Citizens' Mass Meeting.

THE CANDIDATES PRESENT.

VOTERS WERE TOLD WHY THEY SHOULD SUPPORT TICKET.

Many of the Speakers Talked Against "Club Car" Rule and Said Time Had Come to Abolish It—Unfair Taxation Claimed—Cadwallader Jones Said He Is Looking Forward to Next Tuesday.

The Citizens' held a mass meeting Monday in a vacant house situated at 1143 West Second street, in the Fourth ward There were about thirty present, including the candidates for office, most of whom were there and spoke, but what the meeting lacked in numbers it made up in interest.

Jacob Kirby was made chairman of the meeting, which came to order soon after 8:30 o'clock. There were present Fred C. Lounsbury, nominee for Mayor; Winfield S Angleman for City Judge; Arthur T Gallup, for Collector; Charles Burnet, for School Trustee; and J. C Blimm, G. W. V. Moy and J. W. Davis, nominees for the Council in the First, Third and Fourth wards. Each one of the candidates had a few remarks to make, and some of them scored the Republican administration soundly.

Mr. Davis was the first speaker and merely announced his intention of doing the square thing if he was elected. He said he was pledged to no one, and wanted the voters always to feel that he was working for their interests.

Mr. Angleman spoke somewhat at length and hit the "club car" politicians. A synopsis of t is remarks are as follows: "Plainfield's business should be transacted here in the Council Chambers, where all can have a voice in it. It is wrong for a set of club men to run it and dry everything and railroad it through. Each member should be fully informed of what is going on, and then each office holder should feel at liberty to talk with anyone and thus give them a voice in the city's government. The Republicans say they have given the Citizens everything they ask for and this shows that they know we are right. This is a spontaneous movement of the whole city."

Mr Burnet said that he had always been Democratic in his ideas as to schools. "They are for the masses," he said, "and we must educate our children. We need schools where everyone stands on a level. If I am elected you can all feel sure that you've got a worker there."

Mike Higgins objected to "club car" men. He said Mayor Fisk was a personal friend of his, and he had nothing against him.

"The men who bled Mayor Fisk for his money were the people who killed him, not I," said Mike. "A portion of his bread comes from the club car men," continued Mike. He also thought a higher license should be paid by out-of-town peddlers, who come to town with truck to sell and then carry the money away with them, than the home merchants ought to pay.

Mr Moy had a grudge against the New Yorkers because instead of patronizing home merchants, he said, they go to New York and let the Plainfield merchant rest

"It is the fault of the voters," said Mr. Moy, "that the New York men are in power. If you don't want them, don't elect them. If you want to keep them out, put Plainfield men to."

Mr. Blimm prophesied that the Citizens' ticket would go through, and Mr. Gallup agreed that if he got elected he would send them all a tax bill.

Cadwallader Jones rose in response to a call for a speech, and said that all are waiting for "evacuation day next Tuesday." He continued, "There's been too much 'club car' rule in this city. If we don't pay to have our streets in the Fourth ward macadamized we must walk in the mud. Taxes, too, are too high. There is a little house near here whose owner gets $7 a month rent, and pays $30 a year taxes. There is the Babcock building worth $250,000, and taxed for $50,000. Is this right? Ought the poor man to pay the whole tax?"

Mr. Lounsbury made the last speech, and proved himself to be an interesting talker He said that the mere fact that a man is independent in politics in Plainfield is enough to condemn him in the eyes of the present administration. Mr. Lounsbury said he didn't want the nomination, but now that it had been offered to him he was going to try his best to get elected.

"The ring in this town," he said, "has been putting men in office who are underneath their thumbs. It has been said to me that the Third ward had the brains, but the Fourth ward had the votes. The School Board has been in favor of extending our school facilities. It is not the poor man who has opposed it, but such rich men as Alexander Gilbert, John M. Whiton, E B Clark and others, who went to Trenton and secured the passage of that bill through the Legislature that prevented Plainfield from building a new school."

Mr Lounsbury here took each one of the nominees in turn and explained why they should be voted for.

"We want a matured man for City Judge," he said. "Young men begin by being lawyers then rise to the dignity of a judge afterwards. The Republicans expect their candidate to begin at the top and work down. If Nelson Runyon has been the Republican's choice, I would not have said a word.

"And our Tax Collector should know how to keep books. Mr. Gallup is a thorough bookkeeper. They had one man in the office once who didn't know how, and as a consequence they wanted to put me for $400 back taxes.

"There has long been an unhealthy sentiment towards putting ministers on the school boards. Nine out of ten ministers are poor business men, and we want a business man, and a man from the people, one more on our level to serve in that capacity."

Mr. Lounsbury said he knew nothing about the sewer system, and had never committed himself one way or the other on the question, whether he approved running it up hill, water or not. He also rehearsed some of the troubles he experienced in getting enough of the citizens interested to fight the Martin Act, and thus saved $20 000 to the taxpayers. Mr. Angleman also explained this good work of Mr. Lounsbury's more at length.

A WRECK PREVENTED.

Why Polk Miller Didn't Entertain Here Thanksgiving Day.

In a letter received from Polk Miller, of Richmond, Va., who was to entertain with a description of the old Virginia plantation negro, at the Y. M. C. A., Thanksgiving night, he states that a wreck prevented him from reaching Washington in time to connect with a Royal Blue Line train stopping at Plainfield Thursday afternoon. He could have reached Plainfield, notwithstanding, if the railroad people would have stopped the new flyer here, but they would not consent. This was only the third time that he had ever disappointed an audience in 600 engagements. The association hopes to bring him to Plainfield on a later date.

PRIZES WON AT DONKEY PARTY.

It Was One of the Features at Sociable at Home of J. B. Higgins Last Monday

An enjoyable sociable was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Higgins, of Lafayette place, last Monday, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Reform Hall.

The time was passed in social intercourse and playing games, among which were the "New Women" and the "Donkey" game. Prizes were awarded to the successful ones in the donkey party. Mrs. J. B. Higgins and Mrs. Bridges, and Mrs. W. J. Ford the second.

During the evening recitations were given by Miss Alice Scribner and Miss Passmore, after which refreshments were served by a committee composed of Miss Scribner, Miss May Thompson and Mrs. Higgins.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

NEW JERSEY STORM BOUND.

TRAFFIC NEARLY SUSPENDED THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE STATE.

Ten Inches of Snow in Plainfield—Streets Blocked—Trolley System in Trouble—Trains all Late—Some Did Not Run at All—Bad Drifts Reported Everywhere.

New Jersey and New York are just recovering from a snow storm, the fiercest and most far-reaching in its effects of any since the memorable blizzard of 1888. It was, in fact, quite a formidable blizzard and New York and all the surrounding country was snow-bound in truth. Railroads, street car lines and elevated tracks were blocked and traffic was practically suspended. The storm began gently Saturday noon and continued slowly increasing in force until it attained its height Saturday night. Early sunday morning the snow stopped falling but a gale from the northeast had set in and carried the snow into huge drifts. On a level there was ten inches of snow but the drifts were, in some places, as many feet deep. Coming as it did so early in the season, the storm caught the country unprepared to meet it.

IN THE CITY.

Church Attendance Slim—Few Ventured Out—Hard Time for the Hackmen.

Sunday found most of Plainfield at home. The situation out of doors was not tempting and those who did not have to go out were glad to remain within doors. Everything was practically at a standstill. There were only a few who braved the storm to venture out to church and the morning services were very slimly attended. Attempts were made to clean sidewalks early in the morning, but in many cases it did no good, as the high wind so drifted the snow over the path. It was somewhat better in the afternoon in the more closely built up sections of the city. The attendance at the sessions of the Sunday-schools was consequently larger. As the wind increased in violence as the full moon came up at nightfall, and most of the evening services were given up.

The Sunday newspaper men had a hard row to hoe. The morning paper trains were nearly three hours late. Then some of the smaller carriers succumbed to the power of the storm and new men had to be substituted. As a result the newspapers were not all delivered until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The liverymen were joyful Saturday night when the promise of sleighing for the morrow was so bright. The high gale, however, made sleighing decidedly uncomfortable Sunday, and there were comparatively few sleighs out.

The hackmen had a hard time of it, for the snow was so deep in places as to make going almost impossible. There was a great demand for hacks, of course, as many did not care to face the storm and wind afoot. Horses slipped and fell and were soon exhausted.

The sleighing was not good, the snow drifting too much. On the outskirts of the city, where the wind had full sweep, the drifts were deep, measuring five and six feet in places. The sidewalks there were impassable, and the few pedestrians were driven to take the middle of the roadway or else wade waist deep in drifts.

FRONT STREET IMPASSABLE.

Street Department Men Opened It Up—Also Did Other Work About City.

Street Commissioner Gavett was on hand early Sunday morning. With the high winds blowing there was little that he and his men could do. A report soon came in that East Front street at Cole's hill was impassable. The snow had formed high sloping drifts that overturned every sleigh that reached them. Several milkmen came to grief there in their efforts to reach the city. The drifts were nearly ten feet in height in places. The city scraper was sent to the scene and managed to clear away some of the snow with difficulty It was necessary to keep at work constantly as the wind filled up the gaps at once.

Park avenue, beyond Randolph road, was reported to be almost impassable. Several upsets were reported there in the deep drifts.

Sunday afternoon the regular gang from the street department was at work removing the snow from the crosswalks. Seeing that his regular force was far too small, Mr. Gavett increased it. The crosswalks in the business section were all cleaned and many in the other parts of the town.

THE TROLLEY TROUBLES.

Local Line Unable to Run Over Its Entire Route—Cars Stopped Awhile.

The storm caught the cars of the Plainfield Street Railway and about 2 o'clock Sunday morning all traffic on the several lines were stopped. Fortunately the cars were able to reach shelter at the car house, and were not obliged to remain outside all night. Under the supervision of Superintendent Adleman the sweeper was kept agoing, but the snow reached such a depth that this work had to be stopped early. It was finally decided that it was useless to continue the work while the snow was falling so fast.

Early Sunday morning the snow plows were started again and at 10 o'clock after a great deal of hard work the tracks were cleared on the main line from Woodland avenue to Grant avenue, and from the car house to Johnston's Drive on the Fourth street and Somerset street line. All day Sunday the cars got no further toward Dunellen than Grant avenue.

The wind blew the snow back as fast as it was removed and all efforts to reach Dunellen were in vain. The employes of the road have kept at their work and the line will soon be opened through to Dunellen.

RAILROADS IN TROUBLE.

Traffic on the Jersey Central Greatly Delayed by the Storm.

All the railroads whose terminals are located in Jersey City felt the severity of the storm. Trains were delayed many hours and some did not run at all. The officials of the Jersey Central Railroad were kept busy all Saturday and Sunday nights. The heavy snowfall of Saturday night combined with the high winds blocked the switches in the Jersey City yard making it very difficult to get any of the trains started. The trains leaving New York at 11:45 and 12:15 Saturday night, did not arrive in Plainfield until 6 o'clock Sunday morning. It took twenty minutes for the trains to go through the Fanwood cut. The wind had drifted the snow in there to a great depth through which the locomotive found great difficulty in making their way. Freight and coal traffic was practically at a standstill. One coal train went through with three engines pulling it.

The newspaper train, due here at 5:45, did not arrive until 8 o'clock. It was then composed of three cars instead of eight as usual. The 2:08 and 5:15 trains never came at all. A snow plow, pushed by two powerful locomotives, passed through here at 7 o'clock. It went on to Somerville and started on the Flemington branch to get stalled in a deep cut near Flagtown.

The Newark-Elizabeth branch was blocked until late Sunday morning. The first train from the west was the Philadelphia express, due at 6:59 o'clock. It arrived after 10 o'clock. Two engines were used on all of the P. & R. trains and on some of the locals.

The snow drifted into a cut near Finderne delaying all the trains from Somerville Sunday. None of the trains were on time either way and all were from half an hour to three hours late.

The wind of the night made things even worse and the Flemington branch was still blockaded. Trains from Phillipsburg and Easton encountered enormous drifts west of Somerville and were unable to get through until late Monday morning. The Fanwood cut still troubled the local traffic and delayed trains. Most of the morning trains that carry the local commuters to New York were almost on time when they left Plainfield. They were late in arriving at Jersey City, however. The 7:55 train, which comes through from Flemington, had to be made up at Somerville as the Flemington train was unable to get through.

WIRES SUFFERED LITTLE.

Only a Few Telephone Wires Went Down Before the Fury of the Big Storm.

There has not been a storm in many months during which so little damage was done to the electric light, telephone and telegraph wires. None of them were down except a few telephone wires on Prospect and Putnam avenues, and the service was not interrupted at all.

The telegraph wires stayed in place, and this kept up communication all along the line. The electric light wires suffered no damage, and the lights shone through the storm. Superintendent McClurg, of the Electric Light Company, says that the storm did no damage to the wires because it was such a dry snow, and blew away before it had time to settle and stick. The leaves being all off the trees, there was less thrashing and whipping, and this also protected the wires.

The storm has put a sudden stop to the work being done on the electric light trenches. Saturday night, fortunately, Patsey Christmas, the contractor, covered them all up as far as he had gone. Monday morning he dug from below Second street to North avenue, to the manhole, and when the pipes are laid there, he will stop work for the season.

THE TROLLEYS BLOCKED.

Lines All Over the State Are Blockaded by the Storm—Cars Stalled.

Outside of this city, the suburban trolley lines were compelled to suspend operations Saturday afternoon and evening, and few have yet resumed. Despite all efforts, communication will not be resumed until some time today. In other neighboring cities, the trolley lines suffered greatly and traffic was suspended almost for twenty-four hours.

In New Brunswick the trolley system of the Brunswick Traction Company, which extends from New Brunswick to the neighboring towns of Milltown, South River, Metuchen and Bound Brook, was the first to suffer from the fierceness of the snow storm. As early as 5 o'clock the trolley officials had the snow sweepers and snow plows out on the line of the road, and a vain effort was made to keep the line opened. Before midnight it was found to be impossible to keep even the city line in operation, and several cars became stalled in heavy snowdrifts outside of the city.

One car of the trolley line became stalled in a deep snowbank on the line from New Brunswick to Metuchen, shortly after 5 o'clock. There were six women among the passengers, and the party of about ten spent several hours in the car before they were able to get out and reach a dwelling.

A car on the line to Bound Brook became stalled in a snowdrift late Saturday night. Several hacks were sent after the passengers and they were taken back to New Brunswick. Several of them wanted to go to Somerville, and some of them did not have sufficient money to pay their car fare or hotel bills, and they had to be sent home by the Brunswick Traction Company.

It was nearly noon Monday before the traction company managed to get the tracks in New Brunswick cleared sufficiently to permit of the moving of the cars.

BLIZZARD AT THE PLAINS.

Town Committee Tried Unsuccessfully to Open Up Sidewalks With Snow Plow.

The blizzard of Saturday and Sunday gave Scotch Plains a deserted look. No one ventured out unless compelled to. The snow plow, under direction of the Town Committee, opened up the sidewalks Sunday morning, but on some of the streets the snow drifted and soon made them impassable again. A few venturesome ones turned out with their sleighs in the afternoon, but were soon glad to return and seek the fireside again.

Entertained His Young Friends.

A pleasant event of Saturday afternoon was the party given by Edwaid Hayman, aged thirteen years, to twenty of his school friends from the Bryant Public School. The affair was given between 2 and 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. Drain, an aunt of the young host, who resides at 73 Leland avenue. During the afternoon the young people had a general good time playing games, etc., after which refreshments, consisting of ice cream and fruit, were served in abundance.

A Strong Argument.

At the First Church of Christ last Sunday Mr. Horton, the adventist, proved by translation of the Bible that it argued against anyone using strong drink. Debates on this subject have been held at Reform Hall for sometime, but it remained for Mr. Horton to give the explanation of the subject.

Twas the Relief Association.

It was not the Organized Aid Association which distributed Thanksgiving dinners among the poor Wednesday, but the Relief Association.

TEN YEARS' HISTORY OF ENDEAVOR LIFE

Society of Park Avenue Baptist Church Celebrate Anniversary.

REV. DR. BRETT PRESENT.

FORMER PRESIDENTS TELL OF THE GROWTH OF THE SOCIETY.

Miss Hawkins Told History of the First Five Years—Miss Myra Runyon Sketched the Happenings of the Last Half of the Decade—Report of Treasurer by Miss Cuming—Dr. Brett's Talk.

The tenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held Friday. The exercises consisted of the reading of reports of the work done during the ten years just passed, an address by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Brett, president of the State Union, and letters from past presidents who were unable to be present.

On the platform of the pulpit at the president, Mrs. W. S Lowry; Rev. J. W. Richardson, Rev. Dr. Brett, R. E. Anthony, Mrs. D. M. Runyon, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Miss Emma V. Fish, the three last former presidents; Miss Anna Wyckoff, vice president, Miss Myra Runyon, secretary, and Miss Henriett Cuming, treasurer.

Mrs. Lowry, the president, had charge of the exercises, which opened with a song service led by a volunteer choir. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, read the lesson, and Mr. Anthony led in prayer.

An interesting part of the exercises was the reading of reports of the ten years' work. Miss Florence G. Hawkins, who was the first to act as the organization of the society, November 23d, 1888, when twelve young people of the Young People's Society got together and concluded that they could do better work as a Christian Endeavor than as a Young People's Society. During the five years the membership increased to 54, a gain of 42 But in the way of prayer and personal testimony they had increased five times as much.

During the first five years the members engaged in all the work of the society, interested themselves in foreign and home missionary work, and supplied two of the barber shops of the city with religious literature.

Miss Myra Runyon told about what had been done during the last five years. The members of the society remain about the same. Several pew ones have been added, but to offset this others have gone away, and at present there are 44 active members and 5 associate members of the society. There are also a few honorary members, consisting of the deacons and a few others.

Four of the past presidents were not able to be present. so sent letters which were read by the secretary, Miss Myra Runyon. These letters were from Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, of North Hampton, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. D. W. C. Skadin, of Minneapolis, Minn., and A. D. VanSciver, who is in New York State.

Miss Cuming, the treasurer, read a financial report extending over a period of eight years, the records of the first two years having been mislaid. The reports showed that $361.29 had been raised through the general fund, $8 8.46 expended, leaving a balance, November 25th, of $3 83. Through the missionary fund $537.46 had been raised, the expenditures were $517.86, balance $19 61.

Dr. Brett's topic was "The Relation of the Christian Endeavor Society to the Local Church," and was a bright, interesting address, full of encouragement to the Endeavorers. Miss Charlotte Messersmith sang a solo during the services, and Arthur Mosher assisted the choir with his violin. The evening closed with a sociable in one of the upper rooms at which refreshments were served.

TWO INSANE CHARACTERS.

Taken to the Morris Plains Asylum Monday Morning by Sergeant Kiely.

Katie Morris, colored, an inmate of the workhouse, and Jacob Bitter, a Hollander, who lived with his brother at 1002 Morris avenue, were taken to Morris Plains Asylum Monday by Sergeant Kiely. Both are insane, Katie is not dangerously so, but Bitter has given his brother and the police quite a little trouble during the past year.

Katie Morris is a well-known character around the streets. She is short and stout, with great eyes that took everyone she passes straight in the face. She used to go out washing for a living, but recently she was taken to the workhouse, where she spent her time singing and talking all night long, becoming such a nuisance that it was decided to send her away.

Jake gets fits of insanity periodically. During one spell he threw a brick through a neighbor's window, narrowly missing him; and another time chased his brother around the house with a carving knife. The police were called in at the time, but when they arrived Jake was as quiet as could be.

MADE HER DEBUT IN SOCIAL WHIRL.

The Coming Out Party of Miss Helen Frances Bushnell.

VERY DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

MISS BUSHNELL WAS ASSISTED BY A NUMBER OF FRIENDS.

Mr. Bushnell's Residence Was Very Handsomely Decorated for the Event—Pink and White the Prevailing Colors—Effect Charming—Jolly House Party Remained for a Few Days.

Friday night Miss Helen Frances Bushnell, daughter of John Bushnell, made her formal debut into Plainfield society at a charming social event held at the handsome residence of her parents on Central avenue. The affair was one of the first of the social events of the season.

The hostess, wearing a gown of white silk, received the guests assisted by Miss Louise Porter, of Ottewa, Illinois; Miss Edith Johnson, of Washington, Miss Mary Whiton, Miss Nancy Lawson, Miss Mary Bushnell, Miss Jessie Bushnell, Miss Lowe, Miss Bushnell, Miss Lulu Holly and Miss Ethel VanBoskerck, all of this city.

The parlors, hall and stairway were prettily decorated with smilax, roses, chrysanthemums and potted plants. In one corner of the reception hall the musicians were hidden behind a green screen of palms and ferns. The front parlor was set off with great bunches of pink and white roses, and the open fire place was hidden by bunches of large yellow and white chrysanthemums. The prevailing colors were pink and white.

Davis, of Newark, was the caterer and also furnished the music. There were about 300 guests present, among them being a number of out of town people. Three college men, Fred Scott, 1900, of Princeton, Bascom Johnson, of Yale, and Ernest Mulford, of Elizabeth, a Harvard man, made up a jolly house party who remained for a few days after the party.

THE HILLSIDE LINKS CLOSED FOR SEASON.

Last Match Played Saturday Morning for Fisk Cup.

A SUCCESSFUL SEASON.

COURSE WILL BE OPENED IN THE SPRING FOR PLAY.

In the Contest for Fisk Junior Handicap Cup, A. G. Fisk Won—Final Ownership of Cup to be Played for Next Spring—Mixed Foursomes for the Gilbert Cup Were Not Played.

After a season of great success the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club were closed Saturday, and will not be used again until next spring. The last event to be played took place last Saturday morning when the Fisk junior handicap cup was contested for by six members. The day was not a pleasant one, but good scores were made. The winner of the cup was A. G. Fisk with a net score of 103. He will hold the cup until next spring when it will be finally contested for permanent ownership by A. G. Fisk, G. H. Richards, Parker Mason, Owen Fleming, Jr., N. P. Rogers, Jr., M. J. Dumont. All of them have won the cup and a great spirit of rivalry has and still exists for the final ownership.

Below will be found the scores for Saturday's play:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
A. G. Fisk	106	3	103
M. J. Dumont	107	3	104
G. H. Richards	106	scratch	106
N. P. Rogers, Jr.	121	3	118
Owen Fleming	123	5	118
H. Dupee Wright	146	18	130

The mixed foursomes for the Gilbert cup were not played in the afternoon on account of the weather. The grounds will now be covered and enclosed and will be kept so until next spring when they will be put in shape for the spring, summer and fall play.

The members of the club feel highly gratified with the success of the past season, and although the links were opened late they were in very good condition. By next year they hope to have the grounds in far better condition, and so on with each succeeding year. The officers of the club deserve much credit for their management of affairs and to them is due much praise.

Spilled From Her Sleigh.

Miss Bloom, of Washingtonville, came to town Monday in a cutter. A trolley car frightened her horse on Somerset street, and she was spilled out into the snow. It took her only a few minutes to get back into the sleigh and drive off, none the worse for her little accident.

The Misses Lulu Bryan and May Bryan, of Orange, have been spending a few days with their grandmother, Mrs. Hallock, of West Fifth street.

DEATH CAME WHILE HE WAS AT WORK.

Sudden Death of Robert F. Randolph Saturday Night.

THERE WAS NO WARNING.

HAD JUST REMOVED THE SNOW FROM THE SIDEWALK.

Mr. Randolph Had Conversed With a Press Reporter a Moment Before—Complained That He Was Getting Weak—Fell by the Back Porch—Wife Heard Him Groan—Died From Rupture of a Vein.

Without a moment's warning death came suddenly and painlessly to Robert F. Randolph, of 119 Elmwood place, last Saturday evening at 5:30, and the community was deeply shocked when the sad news was heard about the city.

Mr. Randolph has been employed at the Pond Tool and Machine Works for nine years, and on Saturday after noon he came home from his work early, as is customary on that day. On arriving home he secured a shovel and proceeded to remove the heavy fall of snow from the front walk and the walks about his house. While he was shovelling the snow from the front walk he conversed with a reporter of The Daily Press, and he remarked about the heavy fall of snow and how difficult it was for him to shovel snow now that he was getting old. He complained a little about his not being strong enough to do the work. As he made these remarks he concluded his work, and these were the last words spoken by him. He then walked around the side of his house to the back porch. Just as he reached the porch he fell suddenly on the board walk and after a few gasps he passed away.

Mr. Randolph's wife was alone in the kitchen and she heard a noise and a groan. She hastened to the back door and there she saw her husband lying out stretched and apparently unconscious. She spoke to him, but no answer came back. Mrs Randolph then called Daniel Page, a neighbor, and with his assistance Mr. Randolph was carried into the house and placed on a couch.

Examination soon proved that life had left the body and Mr. Randolph was dead. His sudden death is supposed to have been caused by his fall as the physician thinks that a blood-vessel was ruptured. At first it was thought that his heart was the trouble, but this theory was not substantiated.

Mr. Randolph was sixty-six years of age, and was one of Plainfield's oldest and most respected citizens. He was the son of the late Joseph Randolph, who was one of the pioneer citizens of this place. Mr. Randolph, by trade, is carpenter, and nine years ago he secured a position at his trade in the Pond Tool and Machine Works under Andrew McCardle. The latter, in speaking about Mr. Randolph, says that he was the hardest worker in his department, and that it will be almost impossible to fill his place. He always worked for his employer's interest and was faithful to the last.

Mr. Randolph lived a very quiet and retired life. Several years ago his dear sister died, leaving his wife and himself. He was a good citizen, a kind neighbor and a faithful and loving husband. His interests were in his home, and there was no place that he preferred to it. Being of domestic habits, he loved to keep his home and property in the best of condition. Outside of business hours, he could almost always be seen working about his place, fixing here and there. His death will cause a severe loss in the home, and in his place of business.

A few years ago his mother and sister died, and there is only one left in the family, his brother, Joseph J. Randolph, who lives on the same street only a few doors away.

Mrs. Randolph, who is left alone, has the sympathy of a host of friends and neighbors. She is the sister of Mrs. William H. Shotwell and Mrs. L. E. Barkalew, both of the borough.

An Unfortunate Game.

Raymond A. McGee, of Orchard avenue, Washington Park, returned from Yale University Wednesday evening to spend Thanksgiving at home and take part in the football game here. He attended the "tank drama" at New Haven as the Yale-Harvard game is suggestively named, and caught a heavy cold standing out in the rain that afternoon. He is now confined to his home with an attack of the grip brought on by the exposure. He will be detained to his home for several days.

Part of Its Fare Returned.

It is reported on excellent authority that J. Harry Green, of the borough, who was recently fined $60 for having rabbits in his possession which he claimed he shot in New York State, where the law was up, has had $40 of the amount refunded to him. It is said that the State authorities have ascertained that the $60 fine was illegal, hence the refunding of a portion of the amount.

TROLLEY TO METUCHEN IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

Necessary Consents Secured For the New Road.

INDEPENDENT CONTROL.

WILL CONNECT WITH BRUNSWICK TRACTION COMPANY.

The Trolley Line Will Start On Prospect Avenue and Pass Out Through Woodland Avenue, Passing the Crescent Oval, the Hillside Golf Links and the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

Several years ago, when the extension of the trolley roads through the suburban districts was first considered and the line connecting New York and Philadelphia suggested, it was said that it would only be a question of a few years before the square formed by Plainfield, Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Metuchen was connected by trolley lines. Part of that prediction has come to pass and the gong of the trolley car can be heard on three sides of the square. The remaining side, from Plainfield to Metuchen, has for some time been considered a good territory, but no active measures have, until recently, been taken to put such a plan through. For over a month, however, there has been a quiet effort to secure the necessary consents for a trolley line between the places mentioned. That has now been practically accomplished.

The necessary capital has been interested in the scheme and all that was lacked was the permission of the Freeholders and local governing bodies to lay the tracks and the permission of the property owners to allow them to pass in front of their property. These latter have been striven for and are now secured from Plainfield to Oak Tree and for a portion of the remainder of the way to Metuchen. F. M. Bacon, of this city, has been working early and late to get the consents and his efforts have met with success.

It is generally conceded that a trolley is much needed in the very section that this company proposes to operate. The line, proposed, will start in this city on Prospect avenue and run east to Woodland avenue. There the line will swing to the south and follow that thoroughfare out by the Crescent Oval, the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the track of the Plainfield Driving Association.

At Avon Park, where Woodland avenue ends, the trolley line will swing to the left and follow the road to Mount Pleasant connecting with the back road to Oak Tree and thence to that settlement. On leaving Oak Tree, the line will take the regular Oak Tree road leading past Pumptown, under the Port Reading railroad and connecting with the lines of the Brunswick Traction Company at Metuchen.

From Metuchen it is the intention of those behind this plan to extend their lines out to Iselin, thence to Woodbridge, there connecting with Boynton Beach, Rahway and so on to Elizabeth, Newark, the Oranges and finally Jersey City and the New York ferries.

No company has yet been incorporated which will control this line. The necessary capital is promised and, if there is no unexpected obstacle, the company will soon be organized. It is claimed that it is an entirely independent organization from the other trolley companies in this vicinity. They claim that there is no alliance, as yet, with the Brunswick Traction Company. It seems likely, however, that a satisfactory agreement will be made with that company, even if it does not pass into their hands altogether.

On Prospect avenue, the single track will be run in the middle of the roadway. The property-owners along Woodland avenue realize that that thoroughfare is narrow and they have all agreed to widen it to the regulation sixty-six feet. There, it is expected, the trolley track will be placed, on one side of the road. Part of the way to Metuchen it may be necessary to purchase a strip of land parallel with the road and run the tracks there.

There is a very strong sentiment in favor of a trolley line through that section, and it will not be difficult for the trolley company and the Common Council to come to terms. While Prospect avenue is some distance out from the centre of the city, it will probably only be a question of a little time before proper connection is made with the centre of the city.

The name of the proposed company will be the Plainfield and Metuchen Street Railway Company.

A Monster Press.

Last week Garret A. Hobart was driven from Plainfield to Paterson by William Hand &Son. This does not refer to the Vice-president but to a $30,000 printing machine made by Walter Scott & Co. for the Paterson Press and named after him by permission.

WHAT MR. LOUNSBURY WILL DO IF ELECTED.

Presents Platform In Letter of Acceptance.

THE CITIZENS' CANDIDATE.

SAYS THERE IS GREAT DISSATISFACTION WITH IPRESENT PARTY.

He Would Govern City In Accordance With Wishes of Majority of people—Says Franchises Should Be Granted Sparingly and With Greatest Care—Says Republicans are Hedging.

Fred C. Lounsbury, Citizens' candidate for Mayor, has written the following letter of acceptance:

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 25, 1898.

Messrs. Geo. O. Stevens, Henry Liefke and Chas. C. Burnett, Committee.

Gentlemen—Referring to my nomination to the office of Mayor, by the General Committee of Citizens' of which you notified me yesterday morning, I beg to say that, after careful consideration of the matter, I have decided to accept the proffered honor.

In reaching this conclusion I have been influenced not only by the desire of the public meeting as expressed through your committee, but also by requests made directly to me by many of our citizens from both political parties.

There can be no doubt but that there is considerable dissatisfaction among our people in regard to municipal affairs, not only with those directly responsible for the management of same but quite as much with the "power behind the throne" which at times in the shape of party policy has brought about results contrary to the will of the people. That those in power have recognized the existence of this dissatisfaction, is evident by their recent efforts to "hedge," so far at least as outside appearances are concerned, but the satisfactory element in the present situation is that even with a different engineer and stoker, the machine will remain practically the same.

From a personal standpoint I would say that, as you are well aware, this nomination has come to me entirely unsolicited, and you have not asked whether I have given, or will give any pledges of any kind which, should I be elected, might hinder in any way the free and unbiased administration of the duties of the office.

It is my contention not only that municipal matters should be handled in accordance with the wishes of the majority of the people but that those in charge should use every available means to satisfy themselves as to what are the actual wishes of the people, and not take their information from any certain set or coterie, no matter how influential that set may be. I am aware that there is a sentiment among certain classes that the people in general do not always know just what is best for them but I am not in sympathy with this view, which belongs to the government by aristocracy, and is contrary to the principles of the Republican form of government under which we as a people enjoy such freedom and prosperity.

The people will undoubtedly make some mistakes, and we all know that rulers do the same, but on the average the people will be found not far out of the way in their views on public matters, and especially is this true in such an enlightened community as that in which we dwell.

Public franchises of all kinds should be granted sparingly and with greatest care, and the interest of the city fully guarded, in making the conditions so onerous as to check the general improvement and growth. Stoppage of growth is stagnation and stagnation is death; we must grow or die and to induce growth must surround ourselves with the elements which make for growth.

Should the majority of the citizens of Plainfield see fit to endorse your action with their votes, it will be my aim to administer the office of Mayor to the best of my ability, in an unbiased and non-partisan spirit and on the broad platform of the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people.

Thanking you and the general committee which you represent, for the honor you have conferred upon me, I remain. Very respectfully yours,

Fred C. Lounsbury.

Mary Anderson in Her English Home

Every American will be interested in a page of photographic reproductions in the Christmas Ladies' Home Journal which presents "Mary Anderson in Her English Home." The pictures were made expressly for The Journal, and show Mary Anderson de Navarro as she is today, her two-year-old son, and the exteriors and interiors of the de Navarros' delightful English home. These pictures will be treasured by the beloved actress' admirers in this country, as they give an interesting glimpse of Mrs de Navarro's daily life and her surroundings.

WEDDING IN COLORED SOCIETY.

Joseph Barrett and Cora Ada Wood United in Holy Wedlock.

Rev. James E. Groves, of the Mt. Zion A. E. church, officiated at a wedding Thursday, and united in matrimony Joseph Barrett and Miss Cora Ada Wood. The wedding took place at the home of David Martin, 305 Arlington avenue, and was attended by about 50 guests.

The bride wore a white satin gown, and carried a bunch of white flowers. The bridesmaid was Miss Lemma Coles, and she was dressed in a white dotted swiss, and carried a bunch of yellow chrysanthemums. William Burton was best man. After the wedding a reception was held, and then the couple took possession of their new apartments at 305 Arlington avenue, where they will reside.

ANNUAL IN PECTION.

Winfield Scott Relief Corps Did Very Satisfactory Work.

The annual inspection of Winfield Scott Relief Corps, No. 10, took place Friday evening in the rooms on East Front street. There was a large attendance of the members. Mrs. McCauley, of Paterson, Department President of the Corps, was present and inspected the corps. The work was performed in a highly commendable manner and Mrs. McCauley commented favorably upon it. After the work and routine business a number of excellent remarks were made by the Deparment President, and Mrs. Jennie Atwood, of Trenton, who is a member of the Corps, also by the officers and members of the corps.

EMINENT DIVINE TO LECTURE HERE.

Rev. Dr. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, Will Talk on "Savonarola."

Rev. Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, is an eminent divine whose reputation for eloquence and profundity of thought has spread from his western home to the uttermost limits of the country. Plainfield is particularly honored in his appearance here and her people will listen with unusual interest to that Italian statesman, "Savonarola," by Dr. Gunsaulus.

The lecture will be given at the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church on the evening of Thursday, December 15th, for the benefit of the Whittier House, a social settlement in Jersey City. The object is a worthy one and the lecture will be particularly interesting. Tickets will be for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy.

Hillier & Co. to Move.

Announcement is made of the removal of Hillier & Co's dyeing and laundry establishment from North avenue to West Front street, to the the store now occupied by William Debele, the dairyman, adjoining the meat market of Fred Endress. The move will take place January 1st, and the many friends of this well-known house are urged to note the fact. The increasing business secured by the local store makes the change necessary, and in the new quarters there will be more room which is an urgent feature. The same care and attention will be given by Miss Mary Brown, the manager, to see that all work is properly and promptly looked after.

NOT ALL HARMONY WITH THE CITIZENS

Former Councilman Spangenberg Bolts the Convention.

WANTED TO NAME JUDGE.

FRED C. LOUNSBURY FINALLY NOMINATED FOR MAYOR.

Mr. Spangenberg Wanted to Force the Selection of Isaac P. Runyon for City Judge—Led to Exciting Argument—W. S. Angleman for Judge, and A. T. Gallup for Tax Collector

For Mayor,
F. C. LOUNSBURY.
For City Judge,
WINFIELD S. ANGLEMAN.
For Tax Collector,
ARTHUR T. GALLUP.
For School Trustee,
CHARLES BURNETT.

This is a portion of the Citizens' ticket that was nominated at a meeting of citizens Wednesday Nov. 23d in Justice Moffett's office on North avenue. It was a meeting of Citizens, that is those present comprised the "committee of forty," selected from the four wards in the city.

The meeting was of the "star chamber" order and was very exclusive. Only members of the committee were admitted to the room, and as far as possible all business was transacted with the utmost secrecy. It was nearly 9 o'clock when W. T. Banks called the meeting to order. Mr.

F. C. LOUNSBURY.
Citizens' Candidate for Mayor.

Banks was chairman and Irving Brady was chosen secretary.

The first business to be considered was the selection of a man to head the ticket for Mayor, and Former Councilman Leonard Spangenberg and School Commissioner F. C. Lounsbury were the two possibilities. The former stated at the outset that he would accept the nomination, provided Lawyer Isaac Runyon would be nominated for City Judge. No other alternative would be accept.

This proviso was not pleasantly received, and Mr. Spangenberg in a flurry of excitement withdrew from the meeting, refusing to have anything more to do with the Citizens' movement. It is also said that Mr. Runyon withdrew his support.

This action on the part of Mr. Spangenberg left only one candidate in the field, Mr. Lounsbury, and he received the nomination for Mayor.

Mr. Spangenberg received 21 votes on the first ballot for Mayor. He states that he could have had the nomination but withdrew because the committee would not pledge themselves to nominate Isaac Runyon for City Judge.

The next nomination, that of City Judge, fell to Winfield S. Angleman There was no contest and he was unanimously chosen for the nomination.

In the contest for Tax Collector there were two aspirants, Arthur T. Gallup and George O. Stevens. It required two ballots to decide the contest and Mr. Gallup won out, he receiving the majority of votes. This nomination was made unanimous.

For School Commissioner, Charles Burnett, of the Third ward, received the unanimous vote of the "committee of forty," and he was declared the nominee.

As regard the ward nominations for Councilmen, this part of the performance has not yet been completed. It is understood, however, that J. C. Blimm will be nominated in the First ward; G. W. V. Moy in the Third ward, and James Davis in the Fourth ward. The Second ward candidate has not yet been selected.

It was nearly 12 o'clock when the meeting adjourned.

Cards of Thanks.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital desires to thank the public for generous donations on the occasion of the Harvest Home Festival, also the Plainfield Daily Press and Courier-News for liberal notices and Messrs. Farley, Hand, Carey and the United States Express Company for gratuitous services.

Corresponding Secretary.

GIRLS PLAY BASKET BALL

JUNIOR CLASS AT HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATS SENIORS.

First Public Games Between the Classes Played in Whittier School Wednesday Afternoon—Victorious Score of 6 to 4

The girls of the Plainfield High School resumed their public exhibitions of basket ball Wednesday afternoon with a game between the teams from the Senior and Junior classes. The match was played in the gymnasium on the upper floor of the Whittier building before a number of spectators.

While the girls have been practicing now for over a month, the first match game was that of Wednesday afternoon. The rivalry between the classes of '99 and 1900 was high last year and was even greater this year. Both teams played well and at no time were the spectators sure as to the outcome. Both sides suffered from nervousness in the first part of the game but as it progressed, they forgot the audience and played their best. As a consequence there was a decided improvement. The first half ended with the score 4 to 4, with no advantage for either side.

In the second half, the Junior guards braced up and prevented their opponents from scoring at all. The Junior forwards were met with better playing, but managed to secure one goal from the field, giving them the game by a score of 6 to 4.

The two teams lined up as follows:

CLASS OF 1900.		CLASS OF 1899.
Pauline Denton	r. f.	Marjorie Sterling
Ewilly Runyon	c.	Jessie Randolph
Ruth Maxson	l. f.	Nellie Demarest
Alice Morgan	r. f.	Alice Conant

Referee—Walter Ling. Umpires—Prof. H. B. Wood and George P. Smith. Goals from the field—Runyon (3), Sterling, Randolph. Goals from foul—None.

THE TWILIGHT BALL.

A Merry Gathering of Masqueraders Thanksgiving Eve.

Nearly one thousand people assembled in the Crescent Rink Wednesday evening to participate in or witness the fourth masquerade ball of the Twilight Social Club.

There was a great variety of costumes, many of which were very handsome. There were plenty with masks to dance, while the sides of the hall were lined with watchers. In the grand march the judges decided that Miss Nellie Parkinson had the most handsome costume.

At midnight there was a grand cakewalk. The couples all did so well that they required another trial before they could decide. The first prize was given to Miss Fitzgerald, of Perth Amboy, and Michael Higgins, of this city. Honorable mention was also given to Miss DeNise and Harry Milligan, and Miss Tunison and J. T. Young.

The judges were F. S. Jones, Clarence E. Teel, J. Blimm, W. W. St. John, Frank Whiteside and Nathan B. Titsworth.

Most of the masks were removed at midnight, but the dancing was continued until 5 o'clock Thursday morning. F. S. Moore acted as floor manager. The committee in charge consisted of F. S. Moore, E. C. Searing and Theo. Smith.

The music was well rendered by Rogers' full orchestra. The next dance of the Twilights will be held in the Crescent Rink on Easter Monday night.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The following resolutions were passed by the members of the Plainfield Bar at a meeting held yesterday afternoon:

Resolved, That in the sudden death of Judge DeMeza the city of Plainfield has sustained the loss of a just Judge and upright citizen, and the Bar of the county an honored member.

Called to preside at the early age of twenty-four years, over a court at whose Bar were often submitted the rights and obligations of the highest, most complex and intricate acquaintances of the Judge, the duties of the office called for the exercise of candor, courage, calmness, disinterested zeal for the public welfare, sound judgment and the strictest integrity. It is simple justice to declare that throughout his public career he was always equal to these requirements. Genial, loyal, kind-hearted, and naturally inclined to temper justice with mercy, especially in cases of the young or unfortunate, he did not hesitate to vote it upon offenders and bring severity of sentence to the full measure of punishment demanded by a just sense of the rights of the public.

By his industry and zeal and natural aptitude for public service, he became in the true sense of the word a self-made man, and the community in which he was reared, in consequence of the duties of this office, watched with pride and satisfaction another and striking illustration in this city of the possibilities of advancement and success attending such efforts.

Resolved, That we offer to his bereaved family the sincere expression of our sorrow and sympathy, and as a last tribute to his memory we attend his funeral in a body and cause an appropriate floral emblem to be placed upon his bier.

Theodore A. Marsh,
William M. Stillman
William N. Runyon.
Committee.

New Firm, Old Address.

Drake & Mundy, 153 West Front street. That is the name of the new firm and address of the up-to-the-minute reliable Plainfield Packing House where all kinds of meat in season can be purchased. This house has always had the reputation of giving satisfaction and the new firm will maintain that reputation to the highest degree. They invite your patronage and they promise to treat you well.

G. O. P. CANDIDATES WERE NOMINATED.

Republican City Convention Held Wednesday Nov. 23d.

ROCKFELLOW FOR MAYOR.

UNANIMOUSLY CHOSEN TO STAND AT HEAD OF TICKET.

William N. Runyon Nominated for City Judge by Vote of 18 to 8—Judge Newcorn Also Named—James A. Martin for Collector—Rev. Dr Richards Defeated Dr. O. L. Jenkins.

For Mayor,
GEORGE W. ROCKFELLOW.
For City Judge,
WILLIAM N. RUNYON.
For Tax Collector,
JAMES A. MARTIN.
For School Trustee,
REV. DR. W. R. RICHARDS.

With that combination, the Republican party will enter the campaign to the coming municipal election with plenty of enthusiasm. It is a strong ticket, composed entirely of Plainfield business men, but it needs to be as the coming election promises to be the most hotly contested on record.

Wednesday Nov. 23d the Republicans held their city convention at which the city ticket was to be nominated. Unlike those of past years the convention saw several contests which were continued right to the very last and showed that all was not peace and quietude in the G. O. P.

The convention was held in the Republican headquarters in the old City National Bank building on East Front street. Besides the delegates, twenty-seven in all, there were several score of well-known Republicans who assembled to see what was to be done.

Some fifteen minutes late the convention was called to order by Former Assemblyman W. S. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee. Councilman E. T. Barrows then nominated Former Councilman John B. Dumont for chairman and he was unanimously chosen. Assemblyman Roger F. Murray was elected secretary.

The call was read and the chairman appointed the following convention officers: Judge, Thomas Hanna; inspector, Chas. S. Foote; clerk, Daniel Galbraith. They were sworn and then the chairman of the delegations made their report. The chairman were I. L. McVoy, of the First ward; Former Councilman S. A. Ginna, of the Second ward; Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of the Third ward and Former Councilman W. A. Westphal, of the Fourth ward.

The only changes in the delegates were Roger F. Murray for F. E. Marsh and E. T. Barrows for I. W. Rushmore in the Third ward delegation and Andrew McCardle for A. T. Ayres in the Fourth ward delegation. The delegations were as follows:

First ward—Thos. Hanna, Alexander D. Mallinson, Fred J. Vlewey, William J. Douglass, Isaiah L. McVoy.

Second ward—Stephen A. Ginna, Josiah Browne, Charles S. Foote, L. L. Croom, J. B. Dumont, B. VanD. Hodges.

Third ward—Alexander Gilbert, J. W. Murray, Jr., John Cose, J. Evarts Tracy, Roger F. Murray, Nathan B. Titsworth, E. T. Barrows.

Fourth ward—William A. Westphal, Andrew McCardle, Edward Mosher, James Huntington, Daniel Galbraith, James Porter, Neil Head, Richard Norwood, Charles Sheldon.

On a motion offered by J. W. Murray, Jr., the convention proceeded to the nominations. Nominations for Mayor were called by wards. Alexander Gilbert, as chairman of the Third ward delegation presented the name of George W. Rockfellow in a short speech. He called attention to the excellence of his candidate, his great popularity through the city and how he had built up a business for himself by thrift and industry. He has served one term as Mayor and his experience would make him all the more a valuable candidate. They, too, Mr. Gilbert explained, he possessed negatively the perquisites required by the opposition in the party. He was not a New York business man, he was not a commuter and he does not ride in "club cars." The opposition, sarcastically observed Mr. Gilbert, considers that such a trinity of vices as being a New York business man, a commuter and a "club-car" man disqualify a man from holding office in Plainfield.

He went on to observe that Mr. Rockfellow possessed all the virtues demanded by the opposition, and had none of the vices they condemn.

He then told of Mr. Rockfellow's connection with the committee of citizens to confer with the Council in securing a sewage system for the city. He was a regular attendant at the meetings and took a deep interest. He knows much about the system in use in Plainfield, said Mr. Gilbert, and knows that it is in successful operation today. He also knows of the serious attention given to the plan to carry the sewage to tide-water and great difficulties and enormous expense in the way. If the time ever comes, remarked Mr. Gilbert, that the candidates of the Citizens' ticket get possession of the Council, and attempt to carry through their wild schemes, they will find a man in the Mayor's chair who will know how to deal with them.

J. W. Murray, Jr., moved that the secretary cast a ballot for Mr. Rockfellow for the Mayoralty nomination and it was done.

There was a little break when it came to the nominations for Tax Collector. The First ward forgot to put up its candidate and so the Fourth ward did it for them, naming James A. Martin, who was unanimously nominated.

S. A. Ginna then presented the name of William N. Runyon for City Judge as the choice of the Second ward. W. A. Westphal, of the Fourth ward named William Newcorn. The delegates then balloted for the candidate and William N. Runyon was nominated by a vote of 18 to 8. The nomination was made unanimous.

The First ward was again in trouble when it came to name the candidate for School Trustee. They had two men for the place and so Chairman McVoy put them both up. They were Dr. Otis L. Jenkins and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards. The Second and Third wards seconded the nomination of Dr. Richards and the Fourth ward that of Dr. Jenkins. The balloting resulted in a victory for Dr. Richards by a vote of 16 to 11.

A short speech was made by Former Councilman W. A. Westphal, telling of the sad loss to the city and the Republican party in the sudden death of City Judge George W. DeMeza. He suggested that a committee of five be appointed to draft suitable resolutions of condolence to be sent to the family and relatives of the late Judge. Mr. Barrows seconded the idea with a few well-chosen words. Chairman Dumont appointed W. A. Westphal, chairman; James Huntington, Roger F. Murray, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and I. L. McVoy as the committee.

A committee composed of the chairman of the meeting and the chairmen of the ward delegations was empowered to fill all vacancies on the ticket. Then the convention adjourned to talk it all over.

MAYOR IN CITY COURT.

DIDN'T FIND ANYTHING STARTLING SATURDAY MORNING.

His Dealt Out Justice With a Lenient Hand to the Four Offenders Arraigned—Reckless Drivers Were Not Fined.

The sessions of the City Court were resumed this morning, Mayor Charles J. Fisk presiding. The Mayor did not find anything particularly startling to cope with. C. V. D Corle, N. B. Smalley and Wm. Baldwin, who were found guilty of reckless driving by Judge DeMeza last Saturday, came up for sentence. His Honor delivered a long lecture on the subject of fast driving. Then he told the trio to go forth and sin no more, that they were forgiven this time.

Patrick Gannon and John Brennon were haled before His Honor on the charge of being disorderly on Liberty street last Sunday. There was nothing very wicked that they had done and the Mayor suspended sentence. They were arrested by Special Officer Martox.

Frank Hand, who was accused of punching the features of one James White, was discharged.

BURGLARS FOILED.

Broke Open Blinds to Lister's Store But Did Not Enter.

An attempt was made to enter the store of C. C. Lister & Brother on North avenue last evening between 6 and 7:30 o'clock. The blinds to the window in the back of the store were forced back at the bottom, the hinges and bolt broken and easy access gained to the window. No attempt was made to open the window. Either the would-be burglars were frightened away or else they did not dare enter the lighted store. Two panes of glass in the window to the little shop in the rear were broken but apparently no other attempt was made to gain entrance there.

Mr. Lister left the store shortly before 6 o'clock, leaving the gas burning. When he returned at 7:30 o'clock he found the blinds broken.

GOOD CHEER FOR THE POOR.

Organized Aid Association Sent Out Sixty-nine Dinners.

The Organized Aid Association spread Thanksgiving cheer among the unfortunate and needy in the city and borough yesterday by distributing 69 Thanksgiving dinners, fifteen of which went to the inmates of the City Industrial Home. Others were sent to poor families in the city and borough who were unable to enjoy from their own resources the usual articles that go to make up a Thanksgiving dinner.

The dinners were delivered Wednesday afternoon through the generosity of A. L. Dunavan, who annually donates his team and services for this purpose. Each dinner consisted of poultry, celery, cranberries, sugar, tea, coffee, potatoes, onions and fruit.

THANKSGIVING PRAISE FROM LOCAL PULPITS.

Union Services Held in Two Churches Thursday.

INSPIRING WORDS HEARD.

SERMONS PREACHED BY DR. YERKES AND DR. RICHARDS.

Both Clergymen Referred to the Great Victories and Blessings the Nation Has Experienced During the Last Year, But We Should Not Forget He Who Led Us to Our Present Proud Place.

Those who braved the storm Thursday morning to attend Thanksgiving services in Trinity Reformed church were well repaid for their efforts, for they had the pleasure of listening to a powerful and interesting discourse by Rev. Dr. D. D. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church.

There was not a large attendance of people, although the main part of the church was well filled. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, opened the devotional exercises by reading the Scripture lesson. This was followed with prayer by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church. During the offertory a beautiful anthem was rendered by Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Etta Rymer, Horace Martin and A. J. Moore.

Dr. Yerkes' discourse had to do with recent events in National affairs. He spoke of the very many things that Americans have reason to be thankful for. He dwelt at length upon the recent war with Spain, and how victorious the American arms were. He spoke of National prosperity, of how marvelously the Lord had preserved this Nation and so signally blessed the people. He also spoke regarding the friendly feeling existing between great Britain and this country, and of the great possibilities in the future. The doctor said that he felt proud of the fact that he was a free born American citizen, and that he was thankful that he was not born in Russia, Turkey or Spain. In conclusion he mentioned the increased responsibilities cast upon this Nation through the addition of new territory, and he expressed the thought that there should be careful consideration on the part of leaders as to the right sort of administration in this new territory.

The service closed with a prayer by Rev. G. W. Smith, of this city, and the singing of "America," by the congregation.

In spite of the stormy day Thursday, the Thanksgiving service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church was so well attended that some of the members of the congregation had to find seats in the Sabbath-school room. Rev. W. B. Richards, D. D., preached the sermon, and Rev. A. E. Main, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., and Rev. M. Chamberlin assisted in the service.

Dr. Richards' text was the first verse of the 115th Psalm, and he likened the United States to the kingdom of Israel. In speaking about the late war Dr. Richards said that we as a nation had much to be thankful for, and hoped we would not be puffed up with pride at our great success, and forget the hand that all the time lead us.

Dr. Richards referred to the Sunday night when rumors reached us of a great victory across the water. He said that he for one could hardly sleep that night and was delighted next morning when the news was read at every breakfast table, and later when the rumors were confirmed. The speaker said he regretted that politics and corruption had drifted into the management of the army, as it seemed it has, and men who had no real claim for their positions, except that they had earned a reward by being good politicians, were placed at the head of the affairs, and regretted that so much illness and death had prevailed in the army as a result.

Several anthems were sung by the choir during the service, Miss Jessie Utter presiding at the organ. The collection taken was a large one.

There are three conditions: When the blood is poor; When more flesh is needed; When there is weakness of the throat or lungs.

There is one cure: that is Scott's Emulsion.

It contains the best cod-liver oil emulsified, or digested, and combined with the hypophosphites and glycerine. It promises more prompt relief and more lasting benefit in these cases than can be obtained from the use of any other remedy.

UPSET IN SNOW DRIFT.

DR. T. S. DAVIS AND DAUGHTER HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

The Sleigh Upset, They Were Thrown Out While the Horse Ran Away—Horse Unhurt—Himself in Harness and Sleigh

A narrow escape from serious injury was experienced by Dr. T. S. Davis and his daughter, of Park avenue, Monday afternoon. The doctor had a call to Mt. Pleasant and he and his daughter made the trip in the sleigh. After they had left the main road and were nearing their destination large drifts of snow were encountered, and it was while attempting to get through one of the drifts that the sleigh upset and the occupants were thrown out into the big drift.

The horse became frightened and ran away with the sleigh. After a run of about a quarter of a mile, the horse became so entangled in the sleigh that he was brought to a standstill. In the meantime the doctor and his daughter had recovered and they started after the rig. They found the horse and sleigh and after a little trouble succeeded in getting things straightened out so that they could return home. Neither the doctor or Miss Davis suffered from their experience.

TOLD ABOUT HIS TRIP.

Dr. Carroll Addressed North Plainfield School on Porto Rico.

The pupils of the North Plainfield Public School had the pleasure Monday of listening to an able address by Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who is U. S. Commissioner to Porto Rico. The doctor spoke about the manners and customs of the people of Porto Rico and told something of the schools there. He said that the scholars are very bright in appearance and filled with ambition and a desire to learn. He related incidents in connection with the evacuation ceremonies at San Juan, which he attended, and how glad everyone seemed to be that the island has been annexed to this country. The address throughout was one of great pleasure and the scholars listened attentively to it.

Gone to Join His Regiment.

Frank Voseller, of this city, left Plainfield last Tuesday to join his regiment, the Twelfth New York Volunteers, which is stationed at Athens, Ga. Frank has had an unusually long furlough, 110 days, but this was due to illness, from which he has now entirely recovered. The Twelfth Regiment will in all probability go to Cuba at an early day to do garrison duty.

A Neat Sum Realized.

The fair committee of the German Reformed church met at the home of Rev. George Hauser on Duer street Monday afternoon to ascertain the result of their recent fair, and found after all bill were paid a neat sum remained to swell the treasury. They wish to extend their thanks to all donators and others who so kindly assisted in making the fair a success.

Had to Walk.

While Joseph Sandford, of the borough, was out sleigh riding Monday afternoon, his sleigh broke down and he was obliged to walk a short distance home. There was no other damage.

BEQUESTS FOR CHARITY.

WILL OF MRS. B. A. HEGEMAN, SR., ADMITTED TO PROBATE.

Among the Items of the Will Were a Number in Favor of Plainfield Charities—Trinity Reformed Church Got $5,000.

The will of the late Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of Sycamore avenue, was admitted to probate in Somerville last week. Beside the bequests to her husband and near relatives, there are several important ones that show that, even at the last, Mrs. Hegeman did not forget the many good works she had aided while alive and dealt generously with Plainfield's prominent charities.

The bequests included the following: Trinity Reformed church, $5,000; Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church of America, $2,500; Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church of America, $2,500; Muhlenberg Hospital, $1,000; Young Men's Christian Association, $1,000; Children's Home, $1 000; Plainfield Relief Association, $500; Salvation Army, of which Ballington Booth is now the manager, $1,000.

In the last item mentioned it is evident that Mrs Hegeman intended the American Volunteers, which is now commanded by Ballington Booth. Her husband was made sole executor of her estate.

THAT HEIFER AGAIN.

Neighbors Quarrel About It and the Judge Considers the Matter.

Justice Mosher had another try Monday afternoon with the freaky heifer on Webster place that won't stay home but keeps wandering all over Mary Coughlan's place. James McCarthy, who is charged by her with assault and battery, was present and pushed his charge. The alleged assault occurred early last week and arose over the trespassing of McCarthy's cow on the other's lawn. As there is a counter charge, Justice Mosher withheld his decision until next Monday.

BROKE HIS NECK.

Such Was the Cause of the Sudden Death of Robert Randolph.

It has been learned that the cause of Robert Randolph's death last Saturday evening was due to a broken neck caused by the fall near the back porch at his home. County Physician Westcott has made an examination and discovered the cause of death. Mr. Randolph, in falling, struck his chest and face, and it is believed that the peculiar manner in which he fell resulted in breaking his neck.

Honored the Departed Judge.

Justice Mosher has placed upon the minutes of his court a set of resolutions bearing the evidence of the high regard in which Judge DeMeza was held. Justice Mosher's court was one of the first that Judge DeMeza presided in, and Judge DeMeza argued the first case in Justice Mosher's court, after the latter had become a justice.

Taken His Late Brush r's Business.

Attorney William G. DeMez opened up the law offices of the late Judge Monday morning and will continue the business. Mr. DeMez will endeavor to take up the legal matters where the Judge laid them down and hopes to have the same attention shown him as was shown his brother.

FEATS OF THE CAVALRY HORSE.

Douglas' Plucky Ride Through Rain and Mud to General Ewell.

The one sad feature about the war is that the cavalry horse was not used. In fact the muddy roads, the long distances required for transportation made this almost impossible. Yet some wonderful feats have been performed by our horsemen to train them for the campaigns of actual warfare. General King tells of a plucky ride made in the campaign by Lieut. James F. Bell, of the Seventh, just to show what our mounted soldiers could have done had the campaign developed. Bell was ordered to Medora, a little town at the crossing of the Little Missouri by the Northern Pacific railway, where he found important dispatches for his brother officer, Lieutenant Garrington, then in the field, and, all alone, Bell rode away from Medora at sunrise on an August morning, covered fifty to fifty-five miles through the roughest country in the Northwest by noon, got a fresh mount in Captain Varnum's camp, and just after sunset reached Darlington. The distance covered was at least one hundred miles, and the gait was trot or gallop all the way.

The records of the cavalry regiments on duty in Arizona or Wyoming during the Indian campaigns of the last twenty years furnishes numerous instances of long rides of this character.

The annals of the great war have many more—perhaps the most remarkable being that of Henry Kyd Douglas, now Adjutant-General of Maryland, but at the time a young officer selected to bear despatches for Stonewall Jackson, through pitchy darkness, over river and mountain, from Harrisonburg in the Shenandoah valley, around Massanutten mountain, over the Blue Ridge through Swift Run gap, then by way of Stannardsville, Madison Court-House, Culpeper, and Brandy Station, to General Ewell, then "in the field." Douglas started just after sundown of an April evening, and in a pouring rain splashed through mud and mire and the blackness of Erebus over the mountain trail; exchanged his gallant blooded mare for a big, raw-boned racer some forty miles from the starting point; used up mount No. 2 in a fifteen-mile spurt to Madison C. H., where he swapped him for a little gray which stumbled in the mire and darkness after a run of barely a mile, and could not be induced to rise. The magic of Jackson's name won him mount No. 4, who carried him nine miles and gave place to a gaunt roan. The next stage was the "seven-mile dash to Culpeper, where, in the faint, cold glimmer of dawn, the young officer reached General Dick Taylor, who steered him on to Brandy Station and beyond. Just twenty hours from the start, Douglas found General Ewell and delivered his rain-soaked despatches. He had covered the entire distance of one hundred and five miles in less than twenty hours.

NEWS READINGS IN DAWSON.

Enterprising Man Makes $200 Reading to the Miners.

A novel story is told by the Portland Oregonian about the way the news of the blowing up of the Maine was received in Dawson City. An enterprising Yankee got hold of the first copy of the paper containing the account. He made arrangements for getting the news abroad in this business like fashion:

Renting a vacant saloon building, he caused bulletins to be issued giving an abstract of the character of the news that had been received, most judiciously worded, and announcing that the full account would be read in public in the evening in the same story log edifice next the Bine Ruin dive. Advertisements of admission two pennyweights of gold, ranging in value from $1.50 to $1.75.

At the appointed time the miners gathered to hear the news, and two hundred or more of them tossed the gold dust into the door keeper's scales and crowded inside. The reading was satisfactory, if the news was not, and there was no grumbling about the investment. No less than $300 and probably much more, was realized from the show. The reader was a liberal sort of chap, and he read the other news in the paper merely as a courtesy to the assembly.

This practice grew as the nation neared war and after the war began, and it is a frequent occurrence for a public reading of important news to be given in Dawson at so much per head for permission. And the cooped up men pay for nothing more cheerfully than war news. Their liberality in this matter is sometimes taken advantage of, and stale stuff palmed off for news, and even the Dawson City public is discriminating in this particular, and is strongly disposed to resent the swindle.

Sacred Fires of India.

The sacrid fires of India have not all been extinguished. The most ancient, which still exists, was consecrated 13 centuries ago in commemoration of the voyage made by the Parsees when they emigrated from Persia to India. The fire is fed five times every twenty-four hours with sandalwood and other fragrant materials, combined with very dry fuel. This fire, in the village of Oodwada, near Bulsar, is visited by Parsees in large numbers during the months alloted to the presiding genius of fire.

Mr. Gotrox—But you are a poor man, and my daughter has been accustomed to every conceivable luxury. Do you think she could stand such a change?

PETTY ECONOMIES IN GERMANY.

Racks for Cigar Stumps Where Smoking Is Not Allowed.

An American in Munich writes to a New York paper concerning "German thrift," with examples of petty economies he has seen in Germany, and that strike Americans as extraordinary. He tells of a stout German gentleman who came into the lobby of one of the picture-galleries of Munich one day last summer, puffing a cigar. After depositing his hat and umbrella, he looked around uneasily. Big signs on the entrance doors to the gallery warned him that no smoking was allowed. Finally his face lighted up as he strode over to one corner and deposited his half-finished cigar in a sort of metal rack fastened to the wall. "So!" he exclaimed with a sigh of relief, and marched in to see the pictures. Almost at the same moment another German, having "done" the pictures, approached the rack in question, and, having scrutinised its contents, selected a stump of a cigar as his particular property, and proceeded to light it before getting on his hat and coat. This provision for saving the stumps of cigars was a novelty to the American, and he examined it with some curiosity. A sign, "Cigarre Ablage," placed above it in large letters, announced its purpose—a "leaving-place" or "depositing-place" for cigars. The rack was of metal, and fashioned something like a miniature wirerack; there was a special groove for each cigar, but no particular mark or number by which each could identify one stump from another, and no particular reason why the first-comer should not help himself to the best and biggest cigar of the lot. These cigar repositories are common all over Germany in galleries, museums, and other places where smoking is not allowed.

NECKLACE OF BLACK DIAMONDS.

The Only One Known in Existence Rudely Valued at $65,000.

The only black diamond necklace known to exist in this country or Europe is that owned by Mrs. Cella Wallace of the Auditorium. Mrs. Wallace has been fifteen years collecting them and has searched for the perfect stones in every jewel market of the world. They are found more often in the diamond mines of South Africa and in rare instances in South America.

The black diamond, as its name signifies, is as jetty as a piece of coal, perfectly transparent and with all the lustre and glitsten and brilliant rays of its white sister. It is used as the mourning stone of the Russian court. The necklace is composed of fourteen pendants, hung on a fine platinum chain. Each one has a black diamond center, set closely around with a row of steel white diamonds from the Jaeger mine, South Africa.

The black stones in this larger pendant and in the two on each side of it are eight karats each. The rest are a little smaller. Pendant to pendant, hanging like a pierced dewdrop, is a single white diamond, while directly above the larger pendant is a nine-karat white Indian diamond of unusual beauty. For this single stone Mrs. Wallace paid the neat sum of $6,000.

It is almost impossible to estimate the value of the necklace, as no two stones were bought at the same time and none of them sold, but it is rudely estimated at $65,000.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

He Would Not Be Insulted.

Jim O'Brien, a patrolman in one of the downtown police districts, stepped into Stanley's shoe store on Christian street to buy a pair of shoes. He was a regular customer and wore a very heavy style of shoe. Stanley was busy at the time, but there was a new salesman formed to wait upon O'Brien. The latter picked out a pair that suited him and prepared to try them on. It was a rainy day, and the customer's socks were a trifle damp. The clerk accordingly proceeded to sprinkle the insides of the new shoes rather generously with powdered soapstone that they might slip on more easily. O'Brien suddenly changed his mind about the shoes. He didn't want them, he said, and proceeded to draw on his old pair. As he was walking out the proprietor said: "Well, Jim, did you get suited?" Jim turned upon him a face red with anger. "No, Ol did not git suited, Mr. Stanley," he said in his brogue, Jim?" "Well, sor, Ol loike ye purty well, an' Ol loiked yer shoes afore this, an' mebbe Ol'd kape on loikin' ye an' yer shoes, but Ol didn't come in here fur teh be insulted. Post-Mortem Weddings in China.

A Shansi missionary who went to conduct a funeral of the other day narrowly escaped being present at a marriage. The dead man was a bachelor of 50, and fearing that his spirit would wander companionless in the world of shades, relatives had scoured the country side for a dead maiden to marry to him and bury with him. A desirable bride had been found some seven miles away and was encoffined and prepared for the double ceremony of marriage and burial. As soon as the Christian service was concluded, and the missionary and his friend had left, the other ceremonies began. Marriages of the dead by interested friends are common in Shansi.—North China Herald.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE DISCUSSED IN PULPIT.

Rev. Chas. E. Herring Preached on That Subject.

SAYS THEORY IS FALSE.

IT CLAIMS SIN, SICKNESS AND DEATH NOT REAL.

Rev. Mr. Herring Preached a Straight Sermon Sunday Night—Claimed That Christian Science Could Not Agree With the Unchangeable Facts—Discussed the Alleged Wonderful Healings.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, chose "Christian Science" as the subject of his evening sermon and spoke as follows:

"Is a belief in Christian science consistent with a belief in historic Christianity?—I answer: no—Christian science is neither scientific nor Christian—we are especially interested in the religious phase of it.

"It denies the incarnation of our Lord. God cannot become finite. It also therefore a distinction between Jesus and Christ.—Jesus was a godlike man. The Christ is the divinity of the man Jesus. There is nothing of this in the New Testament. The creed says he son which is the word of the father begotten from everlasting of the father and of one substance with the father took man's nature, etc. Godhead and manhood were joined together in one person never to be divided.

"The Jesus of Christian science was only a man, the Christ is God's spiritual eternal ideas, undistinguishable from God.

"Christian science offends in its theory of sin. There is no atonement, for there is no sin—man is the reflection of God, and is capable of sin inasmuch as he derives his essence from God.

"The only reality of sin, sickness or death is the awful fact that unrealities seem real to human belief until God strips them of their disguise.

"Scripture asserts that sin is the result of disobedience, a transgression of law. Christian science asserts that it is not a reality, but simply a result of inverted thinking—a phantom. The experience of a dream seems real. This is the only reality of sin.

"The theory denies the Scripture and the intuitions of men. Such doctrine, if believed extensively, would have a disastrous effect. If sin is only a phantom, if God is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, what an opportunity for sinful man to plunge into the wildest excesses. Mind has a tremendous power over bodily ailments. At the grotto of Lourdes cures are achieved whose hospitals have failed. Hindoo fakirs and Indian medicine men have accomplished similar results. The ordinary physician seeks the patient's co-operation; scientific men parallel those cures by scientific methods through mental suggestion; and there is no need of such religious theories as deprive us of the father hood of God and of the atonement of prayer to a personal God, for Mrs Eddy says 'audible prayer cannot change the unalterable truth or give us an understanding of it.'"

BROKE HIS NOSE.

F. E. Marsh Met With an Accident at Perth Amboy Thanksgiving Day.

Former Councilman F. E Marsh, of Madison avenue, met with a very painful accident on Thanksgiving Day which resulted in the fracture of his nose. The accident happened at Perth Amboy. Mr. Marsh was attempting to board a train to come to Plainfield. In doing so he slipped on some snow and ice and fell on his face, striking his nose. He suffered greatly with pain, and as soon as possible he sought a physician. The examination proved that the bone in the nose was broken, and proper treatment was given. Now Mr. Marsh is obliged to go about with his nose bandaged.

ENTERTAINED EUCHRE CLUB.

Members of Monday Evening Euchre Club Met at House of Geo. A. Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman, of Stelle avenue, entertained the Monday Evening Euchre Club Monday. The hospitality of the host and hostess was proverbial. In all there were seven tables and the playing throughout was close and exciting, with the result that Mrs. I. Edgar Corlies and Mrs. Charles Abbott were the winners of the first and second prizes for the ladies, while Charles Case and H. M. Stockton were winners of the first and second prizes for the men. Progressive euchre was played. At the close of the play a delightful repast was served.

Death of Miss Anna Wiley.

Miss Anna Wiley, daughter of the late Alexander Wiley, Sr., died Sunday, Nov. 20th, at the home of her nephew, Franklin Baldwin Wiley, in Waban, Mass. The oldest residents of Plainfield will readily recall the family as prominent in Fanwood some yea s ago, and later in Plainfield, where they moved. Miss Wiley was in the fifty sixth year of her age. Interment was made in Plainfield.

Rubber Rollers are Used for Crushing the Grapes to Make Speer's Port, Burgundy, Claret and Other Wines,

Which, as is well known, rival the world in excellence, for invalids and aged persons, and are made from the Oporto grape grown on vines imported from Portugal forty years ago. The soil of northern New Jersey, containing iron, is just suited for them. Mr. Speer, however, uses the improved way of mashing the grapes. He employs large rollers of rubber run by an engine which crush grapes at the rate of a barrel a minute. Speer's Wines, especially the Port and Burgundy now in market, are of very old vintage, and have no superior. Physicians far and near prescribe them for weakly females and aged persons. They are blood-making, adding iron to the system, and tend to prolong life. Extensively used at parties, weddings and general family use. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS AND GROCERS WHO DEAL IN WINES.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D., said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital physician, who is at the head of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is the one of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have to call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are bought I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a strong advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to reporter who called for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had more than at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules highly spoken of very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $2 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their names appearing in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There are many who suffer as I have done, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my cases in the newspapers of some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, however, were overruled, and I think they also felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

A new style of carton containing five packages (forty Tabules) has been placed on the market, and can be had of most druggists for five cents. This low-priced sample is for the accommodation of those who do not wish to pay the higher price for the regular family bottle. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists everywhere, or by sending the price to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton will be sent for five cents. Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists everywhere, even in small towns. Some druggists, however, have agreed not to handle them because they cut into the profits on other preparations, which they make and sell at higher prices. Our great object

THE ELECTION.

REPUBLICANS CARRY THE CITY BY 300 MAJORITY.

Citizens Utterly Failed in the City Election Which Was Held Tuesday.

MAYOR ELECTED BY 306 AND CITY JUDGE BY 517.

CITIZENS ELECTED A CONSTABLE AND A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE IN THE FOURTH WARD.

The Vote Was Large Enough to Show that the Result Was the Will of the People—Next Council Will Consist of Seven Republicans and Four Citizens.

The Citizens' movement failed in the accomplishment of its purpose. The municipal election was held Tuesday and the Independent Citizens' did not wrest the control of the city government from the hands of the Republicans who have been in power for so many years. Instead, the Republicans swept the city and elected every one of their candidates except Justice of the Peace and Constable in the Fourth ward. The vote was a large one, but not sensational. It was large enough to show that the result was undoubtedly the will of the people of the city.

The Republican ticket was carried to victory by over 300 majority. George W. Rockfellow was elected Mayor by 306 majority. Councilman William N. Runyon's majority for the City Judgeship was 517. James A. Martin was made City Collector with 401 votes over A. T. Gallup. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was elected a School Trustee with a majority of 215.

The Common Council for 1899 will be Republican. All the four Republican candidates for the ward Councilmen, Ralph I. Tolles, George P. Mellick, B Frank Coriell and Frank H. Smith, were elected by majorities varying from 138 to 56. The coming Council will, therefore, be composed of seven Republicans and four Citizens'.

STORY OF THE ELECTION.

The Citizens Failed to Show up Their Expected Strength and Were Defeated.

It was admitted early in the campaign that the Fourth ward would be the fiercest struggle and so it was. The Citizens' were confident of carrying it and hoped for a big majority from there with which to overcome the Republican lead. They carried it, but by so small a margin as to do little in offsetting the Republican majorities in other wards.

The Third ward was considered the Republican stronghold and the Citizens' efforts were directed toward cutting down the majority there as low as possible. Their efforts did not meet with any great success, and a majority of practically 200 was given to the Republican ticket.

Last year the Citizens' elected their Councilman in the Second ward and they were hoping for another success this time. It failed to materialize and the Republicans carried the ward by a majority of over 125.

The First ward was somewhat doubtful, but it fell into line and gave the Republican candidates a small majority of in the neighborhood of fifty votes.

The big majorities in the Second and Third wards insured the election of the G. O. P. men. As soon as the returns made it evident that both those wards were strongly Republican, it was only a question of how high up the majorities would run. The close finishes in both First and Fourth wards kept up the only hopes of the Citizens for victory.

Outside of the Fourth ward the Republican broom swept clean. In that ward the Citizens' made a strong fight over Justice of the Peace and Constable, and the Citizens' candidates for the two offices, Adam Young and Peter V. Weaver, were elected by majorities of 17 and 62 respectively.

Particular stress was laid in all the wards on the contests for the seates in the Common Council. R. I. Tolles, a former Councilman, was the Republican candidate in the First ward, and J. C. Blimm, candidate for Councilman-at-large on the Citizens' ticket last year, was the choice of that party. Tolles made an exceptionally good run and ran way ahead of his ticket in both districts.

In the Second ward George P. Mellick was somewhat behind the Republican ticket on which he was the candidate. Most of the faction that worked against his nomination at the primary turned out and supported him loyally despite the efforts of the Citizens.

There was little doubt in the Third ward about the candidacy of B. Frank Coriell. He was a little behind his ticket, but ha la comfortable majority of 158.

The Republicans centred their strength in the Fourth ward on Frank H Smith, their candidate for the Council. He left his ticket far behind and defeated his opponent, James Davis, a Democrat, in every district in the ward.

George W. Rockfellow made a good run for Mayor. While he was cut in some instances, he did not fail far behind his ticket. Councilman William N. Runyon made the greatest run of the day. He was the only Republican candidate, beside Councilman elect Smith, who carried the Fourth ward, where his majority was 31. In all, he ran nearly 100 ahead of his ticket James A. Martin, Republican candidate for Collector, made a good showing, keeping a little in advance of his ticket.

It was was recognized that the weakest point on the Republican ticket was in the candidacy for School Trustee. While nobody questioned the integrity and ability of Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, there were many that opposed him on the ground that clergymen should not enter politics. While his name was scratched all over the city, the result was only to reduce his majority some 100 votes.

AT HEADQUARTERS.

Republican Leaders Were Confident of the Result From the Start.

The Republicans were undoubtedly better organized in Tuesday's election than the opposition. The experience of past years served the G O. P. machine in good stead and its workers conducted the campaign in great shape The Citizens' had workers and carriages but lacked the systematic methods of their Republican rivals.

While campaign headquarters were established in every election district by the Republicans, the headquarters for the leaders was in the City Clerk's office. The Citizens' met wherever they happened to be although the store of F. M. Living on Park avenue and the law offices of W. S. Angleman were leading congregating places.

The Republicans were confident from the start. The day before, the conservative leaders had placed their majority at 300 and predicted victory. The Citizens' were not quite so sure but were of the opinion that they would divide the honors.

As the Roger Murray system of tallying was used in most of the wards the returns came in far earlier than usual. 9:30 o'clock it was evident that the Citizens would have to roll up a big majority in the Fourth ward to win. When the returns from the Second and Third wards were received and the way in which the tickets were running at the First ward polls, the election of all the city ticket was conceded by all. That was by 11 o'clock. Until the returns were all in however, the Citizens were loath to believe that they had not captured the Fourth ward Councilman.

There were great times up in the City Clerk's office as the evening wore away. Faces began to expand into smiles and everybody shook the hand of his neighbor. Then John Keeley started a subscription to get out the drum corps. All joined in and soon after Assemblyman Roger F. Murray marshalled the long line of politicians who participated, leaving the City Clerk's office to the waiting reporters.

FIRST WARD, 1ST DISTRICT.

Two Ballots Less Than Number Reported at the State Election.

A quiet election was reported in the First District of the First Ward. The vote was 421, 2 less than the vote at the state election last month. Eight of the ballots were rejected. The Republican ticket ran very even with a slight increase for Mr. Tolles for Councilman.

FIRST WARD, 2d DISTRICT.

Pasters Were Freely Used and a General Mixup was the Result.

Although the vote was not quite as was expected, the Second district of the First ward had a good turnout, was greater than at the State election last month. Everything was quiet and orderly about the polling place on East Second street, beyond Richmond street. Both parties had workers at the polls all day, but the Republicans were the more numerous.

Pasters were freely used, and the result was a general mixup in the ticket. Rockfellow was cut on the Republican ticket in many cases. It was expected that the district would give him a small majority. Instead, it gave Lounsbury a majority of 25. The Citizens' were not quite so sure but were of the opinion that they would divide the honors.

Dr. Richards, although a resident of the district, was scratched and ran behind his ticket. R. I. Tolles gained 6 over J. C. Blimm for ward Councilman.

SECOND WARD, 1st DISTRICT.

Trouble Between Special Officer and a Citizen Worker at the Polls

The First District of the Second Ward had a little excitement to break the monotony of the election. Special Officer Dennis Carney was the officer detailed to the polling place, and he had all sorts of adventures with several of the workers for the Citizen's Ticket. First he cautioned J. B. Mills he said he was giving out tickets inside the hundred yard line. Next he ran afoul of John Venable, a colored worker for the Citizens' ticket. Carney claimed that Venable was working inside the very room where the booths were. He ordered him outand then tried to prevent him from working inside the hundred foot limit. Venable pushed the officer back and Carney lifted his club to strike. A fight seemed imminent but the cooler heads prevailed and trouble was averted. Carney was advised to have Venable arrested, but finally did nothing about it.

The Citizens' leaders had looked to the district to make the showing that it did last year for their ticket. The G. O. P. men were pretty confident, however, and early predicted a handsome majority for the Republican ticket. The colored vote was unusually light this year, but the Republicans polled most of those who did come.

There were 435 ballots cast, of which 5 were rejected. Of the number 233 were Republican tickets. W N. Runyon ran 15 ahead of his ticket, while Dr. Richards was 6 behind. Mr. Mellick in the fight for Councilman lost 19 of the Republican votes. Mr. Mills gained correspondingly, but not enough to make any appreciable difference in the final result in the ward.

Mr. Mellick went to New York and was not seen around the polling place until evening and then only for a short time. W. N. Runyon made his headquarters in the office of the Crescent Rink. Mr. Mills was at the polls nearly all day.

SECOND WARD, 2d DISTRICT

C. H. Hand Objected to Councilman VanHerwerden's Vote on Ground He Was No Citizen.

Open hostilities between Councilman John Van Herwerden and Assessor Charles H. Hand marked the election in the Second District of the Second Ward. A letter was sent to election officers of that district by Mr. Hand stating that Cornelius Van Herwerden and son, Councilman John Van Herwerden, of South avenue, had been born in an European country and that it was Mr. Hand's belief that they had never been naturalized. He therefore protested against the voting and said that he thought that they should be required to prove their reliability to vote.

When the elder VanHerwerden came to vote, the letter was brought up and Mr. VanHerwerden swore in his vote without comment. The Councilman by that name went to the polling place in the afternoon at 4 o'clock. He asked if the election officers believed the charge and all but one said no. Nobody could tell whether a vote could be challenged by letter or not. While it was being discussed, Hezikiah Hand, one of the Committee of Forty in the Citizens' party, announced that he would challenge Mr. Van Herwerden had not been naturalized, he said. Councilman VanHerwerden's vote was then sworn in.

The vote in the district was not particularly large, only 149 votes being cast. Of these, 74 were Republican and 66 Citizen. Comparatively few pasters were used. Runyon ran ahead of his ticket and Mr. Mellick gained 2. There was no disposition to cut the name of Dr. Richards.

Hezikiah Hand challenged several colored voters on account of their age but there was little else happening in the district.

THIRD WARD, 1ST DISTRICT.

Republican Efforts Gave Their Ticket a Large Majority—One Man Challenged.

The election in the First district of the Third ward passed off without incident. The vote was heavy and the Republicans banked up a large majority for their ticket. There were 425 ballots cast. The Republican ticket ran well together, with the exception

PLIGHT OF POOR WOMAN.

WITHOUT A HOME AND CANNOT SPEAK ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Through an Interpreter it is Learned That Her Husband Died While on Their Way Across Ocean—Mother of Baby

A few days ago, as will be remembered by our readers, a Syrian woman and baby was found in this city in a helpless condition, and unable to talk any language but her own. Persons interested in charity met her and she and her little one were soon objects of pity. Every effort to secure an interpreter was made, but without success until yesterday, when through the efforts of Mayor Fisk and his wife a Syrian from the Syrian mission in Philadelphia, who is known to Mr. and Mrs. Fisk, was induced to come to Plainfield and talk with the woman. When the woman met the native of her country her face lighted up and she expressed joy beyond measure. The two talked together and a sad and interesting story was learned.

It appears that her name is Mrs. Mary Abraham, and that she and her husband left their native country to come here and make a sufficient amount of money to assist aged parents at home. When four days out on the water the husband died, leaving the wife alone and among entire strangers. When she arrived in this country she wandered about and finally reached Elizabeth. From there she walked to Fanwood, she says, and having 10 cents she rode from there to this city. During her stay here she has been stopping at the Industrial Home. She says that her husband was buried at sea. Since her arrival in this country the baby was born.

When considering the advisabity of sending the woman and her baby home it was decided that it would be inexpedient. She would be imprisoned for debt, according to the customs of her country, for not taking care of her parents, and life would be made a drudge for her. According to another custom of the country when a woman's husband dies she takes his first name for her last name. In this case her name would be Mary George. She is a highly intelligent woman and appreciates thoroughly all that has been done for her. Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, the agent of the Organized Aid Association, has made every effort to make things as comfortable as possible for the woman and her child and to secure assistance for them. Further inquiry will be made into Mrs. Abraham's history.

MORE POWER FOR THE PRESS.

An Electric Motor to be Established in That Office.

Patsy Christmas, the contractor, started work yesterday digging a trench from The Daily Press office to Park avenue, in which will be placed conduits for electric light wires. These wires will be run into the press room of The Press office for the purpose of furnishing motive power to run the press which prints this paper. This improvement is one that will be greatly appreciated for it will place the large and increasing edition of The Press in the hands of every patron at an early hour.

Board of Health Bills.

At the meeting of the Board of Health Tuesday several bills incurred during the time contagious disease was prevalent here were ordered paid. A request was received from the North Plainfield Board of Health that the city board join them in an effort to purify Green and Stoney brooks, and prevent those who live along both banks of the brook from polluting the waters

New School of Shorthand.

Professors W. E. VanWert and J. B Rutherford, who are conducting a successful school of shorthand in Somerville, will open a permanent school in the Babcock building December 15th. They are instructing in a rapid, modern system which can be mastered in three months. Quite a large class have already taken advantage of the reduced rate offered to those who register before January 1st.

Played Whist and Danced.

Misses Lena and Minnie Smalley, of Somerset street, entertained a few friends at their home Monday evening. The evening was passed in playing whist and in dancing. Supper was served before the guests departed. Among those present were: Miss Lottie Mossman, Miss Jessie Coddington, Frank Blair, Fred Ross, Edward Clark and Edward Smalley.

Only a few more days before Christmas and as it draws nearer the great store of White's grows livelier, there the question of what to buy is easily answered as such an arrary of holiday goods has never before been shown in Plainfield.

STOLE WHILE HIS KIND BENEFACTOR WAS AWAY

Wm. Brokaw Met With Sad Experience.

LIVES AT SOUTH STERLING.

CLAIMS WM. DARBY DEPARTED WITH HIS PROPERTY.

Overcoat, Pair of Boots, Watch and Cash Said to be Missing—County Authorities Have Tried to Keep the Case Quiet—Warrant Out for Darby—Accused of Having Robbed Mr. Wisnack.

Nearly a month ago William Brokaw claims to have been victimized by the man he attempted to befriend. It happened near South Sterling. The county authorities tried to keep it quiet, but the facts have leaked out and are now being discussed by many of the Somerset county farmers.

William Brokaw lives in a lit le hut near South Sterling. He is a bachelor and looks after himself in his tiny abode. He is a farm hand and finds work wherever he can without having any steady employer. He has known William Darby for several years. They have worked together many times. It was about a month ago when Darby came to Brokaw and told him how he couldn't find work and was without a place to lay his head. Brokaw offered to share his own quarters with the man in hard luck and the offer was accepted.

Darby had been partaking of Brokaw's humble store for nearly a week, the latter says, when Brokaw went off one day to a distant farm. Darby remained at the hut. When the proprietor returned his guest had disappeared and so had an overcoat, a pair of boots, a silver watch and chain and $5 in cash. Then Brokaw railed at the falsity of human nature in general and Darby in particular.

Darby wasn't seen in that neighborhood since. A warrant was immediately issued by Justice Austin, of Warrenville, for the apprehension of the departed Darby and the constables have been looking for the missing man but in vain. Meanwhile, Brokaw says that he is not going to play the good Samaritan again.

Several years ago, Darby was in Washingtonville and was sent by Silas Winans to collect a bill of $15 for him. Both Darby and the money, it is said, disappeared and were seen no more for a year, then Darby, minus the $15, returned.

ENDEAVOR SOCIABLE

Games and Music Furnished a Very Pleasant Evening.

Last Tuesday at Hope chapel the members of the Christian Endeavor Society and their friends enjoyed a sociable and entertainment at the chapel. The affair was arranged by Miss Mabel Firstbrook, Alex. Muir, Miss Concert, Miss Mason, Miss Young, Miss Mamie Porter, Miss Maggie Porter, Mr. Myers, John Evans and Wm Hanzliter, the social committee from the society. There was a large attendance of members and friends and a profitable evening was passed in playing all sorts of games, and in listening to several pleasing piano selections by Miss Laura Ayres. During the evening the committee served refreshment and after a social time the happy affair terminated.

HARDSHIPS OF SOLDIERING.

Charles Peterson Home on a Furlough—He Loses Them.

Charles Peterson, of Watchung avenue, who is a member of Co. C, Battalion of Engineers of the Regular Army, is home on a thirty-day furlough. Mr. Peterson has been ill with typhoid fever for nearly four months, being taken five months ago with another form of the disease. He was at Porto Rico, and was then sent back. Since his illness with typhoid fever, he has been confined in the general hospital at Fortress Monroe, Va. He says that coming home on the boat from the south he was obliged to work while he was so ill. He has lost considerable flesh, but hopes to regain his former health very soon.

Sunday-School Officers Elected.

The officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school met last Tuesday in annual session and elected officers for the ensuing year with the following result: Superintendent, E. E. Anthony; assistant superintendent, F. E. Smith. treasurer, A. K. Willett; secretary, E. H. Bird; librarian, H. O VanEmburgh; assistants, James A. Love and Will Crawford. This was the only business transacted. The yearly reports will be presented for consideration the first of the year.

A TELESCOPIC VIEW

The cub having gone off to Switzerland to look for Mounte (and to propose to her), I informed William that it was my intention to return to town without delay.

So William said,—

"Then I shall come and stay with you."

I let him come. I knew why he wanted to come. He wanted to come because he wanted to pay calls at the Jungle and see Miss Ethel Mainwaring. William, therefore, accompanied me, and it soon became clear to me that his visit was to be one of some duration. However, as he spent most of his time hovering between Lord's and the Jungle—partaking of meals at the latter address—his stay did not put me to much expense which was gratifying, as my income though quite sufficient for one single gentleman, will not stand being divided between two single gentlemen. I have often remarked to the cashier of the London-German that it is strange how badly off most writers on finance are—the irony of fate, I presume—but his sole reply is, "I must bosse it," he begs they bragtics not the breach," and a pathetic regard to insure young married men against twins when there came two slow knocks at the door—two lifeless knocks, two abjectly miserable knocks. Mr. Charles Johnson, the clerk, knew who it was. He is in love himself with a young lady in a Fleet Street tea shop and sympathises with the cub. Ai gently, therefore, as a trained nurse did Mr. Johnson open the door, and I was with and air of the deepest condolence that he ushered Master John Mainwaring into my presence.

"Oh, how are you?" I cried cheerfully.

"Ripping; thanks," he replied, in a tone such as condemned murderers would use in reply to Mr. Billington's greeting.

Then he flung himself into a chair and laughed bitterly.

"I wish I were dead—dead!" he then remarked.

This was getting serious. Here was a young gentleman, aged twenty-three possessed of independent means, splendid health and all those other things which make life worth living, don't you know, wishing he were no more—wishing he were a cold corpse.

I knew, of course. Getting up, I marched into Charles Johnson's sanctum office to find him absorbed deep in a penny booklet, entitled "Wooed, Won and Wed; or, True Love Triumphs O'er All." I gave Mr. Johnson some directions, and presently he came in with two steaks, a mountain of vegetables and a large bottle of Lord Bass.

"Now, Mainwaring," I said, "I'll say grace to save time, and you see to."

He demurred at first, but finally allowed himself to be persuaded. When the cub had finished, I said, as he lit his pipe,—

"So she won't have you?"

To my surprise, he did not do or say anything violent, but went on lighting his pipe. I was inwardly congratulating myself on the success of the measures I had taken in order to disperse the cub's funeral ideas when he suddenly remarked,—

"This is my last pipe."

"Going to train for something then?"

"This is the last pipe I shall ever smoke."

"You'll find it difficult to give up tobacco so suddenly."

He puffed solemnly for a few moments, and then, pointing with the stem of his brier to the cleared decks he said,—

"I have eaten my last meal."

It now struck me that there was something more than mere training in the cub's self-abnegation. There was that in his cold-blooded speeches which chilled me, which produced a curious sensation in my scalp, which would doubtless have caused my hair to stand on end had the quantity there been sufficient to undergo the process. I gazed at him with a pale ing face.

For quite three minutes he said nothing, but smoked steadily. Feeling thoroughly uncomfortable, I took up my pen and began to write. I had hardly covered a line, however, when the cub observed in an off-handed tone,—

"In short, I am going to kill myself."

"Nonsense!"

I was determined not to take him seriously, you see.

"Yes," he continued. "Either with this"—drawing a little white bottle labelled poison from his waistcoat pocket—"this"—producing a razor from the depths of the inside breast pocket of his coat—"or this"—whipping, with a dexterity that would have done credit to Mr. Maskelyne, a tiny revolver out of some other part of his apparel.

"You are well provided," I said charmingly, although I felt nervous at being in such propinity to so deadly an outfit.

"Yes," he said, toying with the revolver. "I am going to make sure of it. I shall first swallow the poison, then cut my throat and then shoot myself through the brain."

"Myself through the brain," I flung, and, uncorking the bottle, emptied at its contents with an evident relish.

I turned cold to my finger tips. Great Heaven! Was it all a dream? I rubbed my eyes and gazed at the cub. No it was grim reality, every bit of it. The girl had refused him, and so he had concluded that the best way out of his misery was to commit suicide.

The tobacco began to hiss and burn in the bottom of his pipe bowl. His last smoke was drawing to a close. And then—

I threw him my pouch.

"More 'bacy?"

He placed it politely on the edge of the desk.

"No, thanks—finished now." And he rose from his chair and walked to the window. "I should just like to take a last look at the sun shining on the trees."

I suppose I moved, for he wheeled around like lightning.

"If you attempt to interfere with me," he said, with the same unnatural calm in his voice and manner, "I'll shoot you first, Worm, and myself afterward. So pray be careful."

"Put it off for a few minutes," I begged him. "I want to talk to you. Just tell me what has happened."

"I'm not in any particular hurry," he answered, reseating himself, "and I have no objection to telling you what has happened. But nothing you can say will alter my determination. This thing must be—I say must be." And he patted the pocket which contained the poison.

"Well, go ahead," I urged him. "Just tell me what you did after you left us so suddenly in the Doone valley."

"No need to detail the journey," he muttered; "just a sheep walk—every one goes the same way. I made tracks for Southampton, caught the night boat for Havre, went on to Rouen thence to Paris, Paris to Geneva, and there I was."

"And then, of course, you took Mounte—I beg pardon, the Rathbone—by surprise, proposed to her all in a heap, and got rejected, as was quite natural. You can't rush a thing like that."

"I did not meet Miss Rathbone," said the cub coldly, "and I did not propose to her. Getting to Geneva was one thing, but finding her was quite another. People go to Geneva and make excursions all round the shops. I found out the hotel at which she was stopping, and tried to get rooms there—full, but in a top full up. This was why I constantly missed her—she was always going on somewhere, and whenever I followed her she always caught the train or boat that I just missed. So, although I dodged her all fortnight, I didn't meet her once. The amount of money I spent chasing about and making inquiries and tipping people was something appalling, but of course I didn't mind that."

"Well," I said, "I don't see why you should kill yourself because you missed her in Switzerland."

"Let me go on," said the cub sternly, "and then you'll understand why. Just as I was thinking of giving it up and coming home I heard that she and her party had gone to Chamouni, with the intention of ascending Mount Blanc. Of course—just my luck—I was a train and a coach behind, as you go to Cluses by train and then coach on to Chamouni. When I finally got there I was told that the party I was in search of had started up some hours before. I asked whether it wouldn't be possible to catch them up, but the great fool of a guide I was talking to just laughed and made a face. Then he told me that could watch them through a telescope, but as for catching them up that was impossible. "Well," continued the cub, "I paid my money and the telescope chap put me on to them at once. He said they were nearly four thousand feet above the valley, but I could see them as plainly as if they were only fifty yards away. There were five or six people. Just as I had got my eyes on Mounte a great fat Johnnie who was walking a few yards behind her actually put up, and—and——"

The cub paused.

"Go on," I said. "What did he do?"

"Why"—with heaving chest and glaring eyes—"he put his arm inside hers and began talking and laughing as if he'd known her all her life!"

"And what did she do?"

"Talked and laughed back."

"Well?"

"Well, isn't that enough? She's engaged to him—slap home and here I am. It's all over. In five minutes I shall be dead!"

I started from my chair.

"There must be some mistake," I exclaimed. "The man you saw was evidently a relative."

"I know all the members of her family," said the cub, "and there's no man like that in it. No; she's out gaged. I don't care to live any longer."

"Look here, Jack," I said desperately "let me make some inquiries. I give you my solemn word of honor that I won't say anything about your—intentions. Let me go to your place and try to find out the truth of the matter. Trust me not to give you away."

The sun shone out gayly just then. Perhaps the cub thought it a pity to leave it so suddenly. At any rate he said,—

"I won't do anything until you come back—I swear it. Now go!"

So off I went post haste to the Jungle, and when I returned with the news that a relative the cub had never heard of had suddenly returned he was willing to live long enough to try his luck, and succeeded.

POLITE NESS IN CHINA.

It Savors of Much Insincerity and Untruthfulness.

Europeans regard politeness as an expression of those qualities of the heart which render the person who desires to be polite agreeable to those with whom he is thrown. The Chinese look upon the matter from an entirely different standpoint. The same sentiment which accords importance to the preservation of dignity regulates his actions as regards politeness. Here is an example of their politeness:

A Chinese, arrayed in his most beautiful costume, who presented himself at a house, disturbed a rat which was enjoying himself in a jar of oil. The rat in his flight overturned the jar upon the visitor, whose dress was ruined. While the unfortunate visitor was still pale with rage, his host entered the apartment, and after the usual salutation the visitor explained his misadventure. As I entered your honorable apartment I had the misfortune to alarm your honorable rat, which, in taking flight, overturned your honorable jar of oil upon my miserable and insignificant clothing, which explains the contemptible condition in which you find me in your honorable presence."

To determine your conduct when a Chinese offers you a present, is the most difficult thing in the world. Certain things are not offered to be accepted, and others may not be returned peremptorily. In a general manner, nevertheless, one may accept, understanding perfectly that the gift must be returned a hundred fold.—St., Louis be Democrat.

RARE AND EXPENSIVE DRUGS.

Extract from 70,000 Flowers Contained in a Single Ounce.

Saffron would strike an ordinary observer as decidedly expensive at 56 shillings a pound until told that it is composed of the central small portions only of the flowers of a crocus, 70,000 of which it takes to yield the material for one pound. Otto of roses sells at 2 pounds odd per pound and it takes ten thousand pounds—or nearly five tons—of roses to obtain one pound of the oil. Acuitine, extracted from the root of monkshood, is said to be the very strongest poison extant, the dose being one six-hundredth of a grain. It is sold at the rate of 27 pounds per ounce.

Turning from the vegetable to the animal world in search of rare drugs, the writer finds that the musk of the Asiatic deer, which at six to seven pounds an ounce must be a prize to the wily hunter. In some of the tropical seas a floating, sweet smelling mass of ambergris is met with, worth 6 pounds or 7 pounds 10 shillings per ounce, or eighty-eight pounds per pound in the market. This ambergris is said to be the "diseased biliary product" of the whale. Another peculiar animal product to use as a drug is a solution of the poison of the rattlesnake, given occasionally in malignant scarlet fever; while less strong, if perhaps hardly less repulsive, is powdered cockroach, which in six-grain doses has been prescribed, with good effect, for the cough, for dropsy.—Chambers Journal.

The Boy and His Cap.

"I can't find my cap anywhere." is a sentence more or less familiar in the hurried, fussy home when the boy says, looking for his cap, when his wants to go out to play. Early in the search he enlists his mother, and that may make a serious business of it. She has to drop her dusting or whatever she is doing, and may be engaged in, and the search may take a long time.

"Where did you put it when you came in?" is a question sure to be asked, early or later, but all the boy can answer is,

"I don't know."

And then the search goes on. Everywhere, over and under, in all sorts of places, all at a great loss of time, if not of temper. It is found at last, as most things are, in time, and in some simple easy place, which makes the finding of it all the more exasperating.

The boy takes it and goes out to play, and straightway forgets all about it, but it may take quite a little time to restore the normal calm in the house.

It is a mystery how the boy manages to lose his cap as often as he does, but it appears to be a boy's way, and common to almost all.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"Always do right and your friends will stand by you."

"Yes, but the time a man needs friends to stand by him is when he does wrong."—Chicago Record.

"I guess I'm willin' to go," said the farmer, when they told him that his hours would be but few. "It is just a change from havin' my nose to the grindstone to havin' it to the tombstone."—Indianapolis Journal.

He—You will some day regret refusing me.

She—Really?

He—Really. If you live to be an old maid you will regret this chance, and if you marry some fellow you will feel sure that I would have been a better husband.—Indianapolis Journal.

Little Clarence (who reads and ponders)—"Pa, I have just been reading a paragraph which says there are various reasons why a man who talks in his sleep should not marry; what are some of those reasons, pa?"

Mr. Callipers—"The best reason, my son is because he talks in his sleep." —Puck.

SPEEDY THREE-YEAR-OLDS.

They Promise to Make New Records During This Year.

There is an unusual amount of enthusiasm in the racing field this year, and those who believe that the $50,000 youngster, Hamburg, is not in condition, will probably find themselves mistaken. The season will, in fact, bring out the greatest lot of three year olds known in years. Plaudit, Madden's fine animal, will be heard from very early in the season and Handball and Previous promise much, for they have wintered well and are in prime condition.

As far as consistency goes Handball deserves to be classed as one of the greatest of last season's 3-year-olds, the best, perhaps, except Hamburg. He made his first appearance in the Juvenile Stakes on the opening day at Morris Park in the spring, and he was a member of the field which struggled for the Westchester Handicap prize on the last day. He has had all kinds of weather and over every kind of a track with admirable consistency, and was always there or thereabouts at the finish. Previous was not so consistent. He ran splendid races occasionally, but was not to be depended upon at all times. He is a splendidly gaited horse, however, and, like Handball, appears to be able to go over any distance. The Huguenot, who loomed up most prominently during the Saratoga meeting, but who went back again after he was brought back to New York, has done some splendid work at the old Monmouth Park track this spring, and Jimmie Rowe predicts that he will make a great 4-year-old. He is a colt of splendid size and fine proportions, and as a 2-year-old was much more forward than his full brother, Henry of Navarre. The Huguenot will race in Mr. Rowe's colors.

Another colt which went wrong in midsummer, but which has improved vastly recently, is J. G. Follansbee's Murillo. Of the Morello colts Mr. Follansbee was so confident that Murillo could win the Futurity that he came all the way from Europe to see him do it. It was a bitter disappointment to him to learn, when he arrived, that Murillo had been stricken with catarrhal fever and could not start. It required the most careful nursing to bring Murillo through that siege unscathed, but Dr. Shepard succeeded in doing it, and Murillo is to-day in as good shape as he was when he first appeared in the East early last spring. He has grown a lot since his recovery and is a big, strapping youngster now.

August Belmont has two Dixon d'Or youngsters in his stable in Firearm and Lady Marian, who will undoubtedly be fast as 3-year-olds and do some wonderful things at times, just as they did some wonderful things as 2-year-olds.

Tennis Courts Will be Livelier.

The outdoor tennis season will begin with the University intercollegiate championships on April 20, followed on May 17 by the Southern championships, at Washington and May 24 by the New England championships, at New Haven Ever since last season ended there has been a determined effort under way to have the rules regarding "foot faults" amended so that the duties of the baseline umpires would be less difficult and the players would make fewer foot faults. At the recent annual meeting of the association, the matter was referred to the Executive Committee for action, but the delegates were unable to agree on a new rule and the matter went over. Another meeting will have to be held before the season opens, or a small vote will be taken. It is noticeable that the Tuxedo events are once more omitted from the official list, while there are several other tournaments revived. The New York State championships will be held at

R. D. WRENN.

MISS JULIATTE ATKINSON.

Syracuse this year, although it has not been held at all for the last four seasons. The West Newton Club, that held the big international event four seasons ago, when Pim and Mahony played in America, are scheduled for another invitation tournament this spring, and it is rumored that they have some plans for getting two or three of the English cracks to come over for it.

PORTO RICAN'S LIKE SAGASTA.

He Is a Faithful Friend to the Queen and Her King.

Porto Ricans have a liking for Sagasta, though they detest the government of which he is the head. All things considered they have got along better under him than under any other Spanish premier. He granted them a large measure of the reforms they asked for and they are grateful, though they admit the granting was by no means voluntary, but was done reluctantly and under protest. Still a aged statesman has met many of the islanders, and all of them agree that personally he is charming. He is jolly and interesting and speaks frankly.

In this he differs from all other Spaniards in Madrid. There is nothing of the rhetorician about him; no flourishes of speech; no elaborate and ornate periods about the honor and dignity of the nation. He knows all about these two Spanish attributes; and he would rejoice to find they existed elsewhere than in the imaginations of the orators in the Cortes. As he does not find anything tangible about this honor and dignity, he accepts the condition and does the best he can. He worships the god of things as they are and does not attempt to instil practical, hopeful common sense into minds unfitted to receive it. He does not urge the rhetoricians to move forward toward high ideals but he lets them talk and manages them. That is the Porto Rican view.

Sagasta has done well for himself, but he has done more for Spain than any other minister of recent times. He has lived among pitterers and possibly is a pitterer himself, but his simple life and the commonplace lodgings he occupies on the first floor of an ordinary apartment house on the Plaza Colenque do not indicate that he has amassed great wealth.

He is almost the only Spaniard in official life that uses the word "steal." The others say "interfitration," or "percolation." He will have none of the elaborate euphonistic vocabulary of the official class. He is as frank as Dean Swift and as keen in wit, but he has a suavity the Dean sorely lacked. He believes in himself and is sure he can do as well by Spain as any other man, consequently, as he loves power, he accepts office. When he is out he does not worry. Indeed, he has stepped out voluntarily several times. He used to see saw gracefully with Canovas, and apparently was on the best understanding with his political opponent. The two and dean," as they were called on with courteous consideration.

Although Sagasta is a Grand Master of the order of Masons, he is the intimate friend of the high functionaries of the Roman Catholic church in Spain. This speaks volumes for his urbanity and tact. He has been a sort of grandpa to the boy king, and has won the confidence of the queen regent so that she trusts him implicitly. He was minister of state under Alfonso XII, under Marshal Serrano during his regency (1868-70), under Amadeus of Aosta, the second son of Victor Emanuel, who resigned in 1873, and under Castelar, who, in 1896, was president of the council, minister of war and commander-in-chief of the army, with the rank of marshal. Something in this reminds one of Talleyrand, who took care to stand well with whoever was in power, saying, as explanation that by so doing he could best serve France.

Best Time for a Bath.

The best time for taking a bath is just before going to bed. There is no practice, more objectionable than to go to bed closely wrapped up in the dust and dirt that accumulate on the surface of the body during the day; nor is there anything I know of so conducive to sound sleep as a tepid douche just before getting into bed. I have many times known bad sleepers become the best of sleepers from the adoption of this simple rule.

A MOTHERS SOLICITUDE.

How She Wanted Her Son to Qualify for a Pension.

"The interest my parents in their soldier sons is exhibited in various ways," said a clerk in the Adjutant General's office to a Star reporter, "and while some of these exhibitions are grand and beautiful, some are other wise, and I am sorry to say that the otherwise kind are painfully frequent. A recent case will explain what I am getting at. A young soldier applied to the War Department for a discharge. He, like thousands of others, had seen no service, except camp service, and, tiring of this, there being no immediate prospect of service in the field, he applied for a discharge. The fond parent, in this particular case a widowed mother, hearing of the son's application for a discharge, came to this city and objected to the discharge giving a half a dozen good reasons for doing so. One, which, boiled down, meant that the son was a ne'er-do-well and that the only job her boy ever held was his job in the Army, since May last. When told that the War Department was not particularly anxious to keep soldiers in the service who only stayed in it as a means of livelihood, where they could get their food and clothing, and that there was a strong chance that the discharge would be granted, she begged that the son be kept in the service on account of his hospital record, and that, while he was not sick now, and had not been, she had every reason to suppose that he would be, for lots of stronger men had succumbed to camp diseases, and in that event the mother of events her son would share the same fate it his exposure continued, though she did not expect or desire that he would be seriously affected, as he had never made effort enough in his life even to get a serious illness. Disclosing, as it did, to the mother, when he has not been in the hospital an hour and therefore has no hospital record, and it will be almost out of the question for him ever to get a pension." At this the official she addressed closed the interview by saying that the son would undoubtedly be discharged, and that the government was not engaged in making hospital records for the accommodation of worthless soldiers or speculative parents."—Washington Star.

PITS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

A Fondness for the Rooster Which Takes the Place of Dogs and Cats.

Speaking of roosters, they are the native dog in the Philippines. The inhabitants pet and coddle them, smoth down their plumage, clean their claws or pull out the tail feathers to make them fight, to their heart's content, and it is a fact that these cackling glass-eaters really seem to show affection for their proprietors in a great measure as they exhibit hatred for their brothers. Every native has his fighting cock, which is reared with the greatest care until he has shown sufficient prowess to entitle him to an entrance in to the cockpit. In case of fire, the rooster is the first thing rescued and removed to a place of safety, for babies—common luxuries in the Philippines—are a secondary consideration and more easily duplicated than the feathered bipeds.

It is almost impossible to walk along any street in the suburban part of the town without seeing dozens of natives trudging along with roosters under their arms, which are being talked to and petted to distraction. At every other little roadside hut an impromptu battle will be going on between two birds of equal or unequal merit, the two proprietors holding their respective roosters by the tails in order that they may not come into too close quarters. The cockpits, where gatherings are held on Thursdays and Sundays, are large enclosures covered with a roof of thatch sewed into a frame-work of bamboo; they are open on all sides, and banked up with earth, which seats those surround a sawdust ring in the center. Outside the gates to the flimsy structure sit a motley crowd of women, young and old, selling eatables whose dark, greasy texture beggars description, while here and there in the open spaces a couple of natives will be giving their respective roosters a preliminary trial with each other. As the show goes on inside, shouts and applause resound at every opportunity, and at the close of the performance a multitude of two-wheeled gigs carry off the victors with their spoils, while the losers trudge home through the dust on foot.—Chicago News.

The Catcher Caught.

A clergyman addressing those who go to church to stare about and then complain that others stare at them, lately said:

"When I was a boy we had a schoolmaster who had odd ways of catching idle boys. Says he, one day: 'Boys, I must have closer attention to books; the first one of you that sees another boy idle I want you to inform me and I will attend to the case.' 'Ah,' thought I, 'myself excepted.' 'There's Joe Timmons, that I don't like; I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book I'll tell on him.' It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master. 'Indeed' said he, 'how did you know he was idle?' 'I saw him,' was the reply. 'You did; and were your eyes on your book when you saw him?'

"I was caught, but I didn't watch for the boys again."—Chicago Times Herald.

THE MAKING OF A MAN

It had been a great game. Because of its sensational finish, it would occupy a place in its own in college history. The older men were all talking of Sargent, the flips of beauty were busy with Mr. Sargent, while the throng of students gathered around the dressing-room to await the appearance of their idol, could find no other theme than his Baby part the prime of life. His dress was that of a gentleman, and when he spoke, it was as an educated man. Yet in the hard, cold glint of his eyes and in the lines of the mouth, there was something that belied the tone and the speech. Looking from one to the other, an observer would have said that the older man was the younger with the ideals of youth gone from him, and with the knowledge that they were gone forever.

"May I ask what you want?" said Baby, rather stiffly.

"Why, of course," said the stranger. "I forgot. You can't be expected to know me. Sit down and I will tell you."

The manner was one of singular politeness, but there was a ring in the voice that evidently grated on the sensibilities of Baby. He obeyed, and the stranger looked him up and down very carefully. Finally he spoke.

"I knew you as soon as I saw you," he said. "It was at the game to-day. You were capable of the feeling. I should be proud. Did you ever hear of your father? Yes, he's dead. I thought so." This last as if to himself. "When a gentleman signs another man's name to a cheque he is dead, and I suppose he had better stay dead."

Baby sat with white, drawn face and the man continued as if in soliloquy:

"Yes, I have been dead and in hell for twenty-two years. And what is more, the ghost of my dead self has always stood before my face. Outside. I am as when I married your mother, a gentleman. Inside, I look upon myself as a corpse, and know that I am dead to honor and to manhood; what is worse, I have no desire to recover my lost manhood. This, too, I comprehend. I have lost my self-respect, and I know it. There-fore, I say I am in hell."

The voice ceased, leaving with the weight of unalterable judgment. In Baby's eyes the horror of the thing was written plain. Now, like a hunted animal, he turned instinctively towards the mantel, on which stood an old picture of his father in the uniform of a cavalry officer. He looked back to the face before him, and the certainty of it was overwhelming.

There was silence between them for some time, and then the man spoke again.

"My welcome is not cordial, but my dead self does not feel. The rest of me, however, must live, and there is no life except at the gaming table. For that I gave my soul, for that I took your mother's name. I am here. She has come into some property, I am told. Well, I shall return to my family. My dead self will be easier in its coffin if I am able to move in the circles where I belong. As long as I am supplied with money I shall not injure your prospects. I shall not disgrace your mother's name. But money I must and will have. Come, let us go home now at once."

The voice had grown fierce, and the eyes shot a red glare as the demon of his passion for gambling laid hold of the man.

At the mention of his mother's name, Baby was transformed. He rose and stood before his father, his lips were shut like a vice, and his eyes gleamed as steel gleams in the moonlight. He took some bills from his pocket, and threw them on the table with a powerful gesture. Then the words came deep and sternly from between the clinched teeth.

"What you want," said he, "is money. Take it. When you want more, come here and get it. But if ever you show yourself to my mother, I will most certainly kill you. Now go!"

Without a trace of feeling, the man took up the bills and left the room.

* * * * * * * *

That night the students celebrated their victory. They cheered for Sargent, they sought him high and low. They rushed to his room, but it was dark, and repeated poundings on the door brought no answer. Yet inside Roy Sargent (Baby no longer) was alternately kissing the pictures of his family idols around him. From the wreckage he was gathering materials wherewith to build new gods. In the anguish of his soul he was working out the salvation of his manhood.

Without, his name was borne high upon the midnight air. Within, a portrait in his hand, he sat in the darkness, staring at a face he could not see.

The following letter, written by Big Heart, a Sioux at the Rosebud Agency, to the United States Marshal, seems to be capable of two interpretations: "I want to make complaint against my brother for shooting at my mother. He missed her at least a foot."

"I have tried to make Monsieur le Americaine's apartments as homelike as possible," said the French landlord.

"Yes?" queried the American.

"Oui, monsieur. See, here ees ze compteur."—Philadelphia North American.

AT THE ARMY POSTS.

MIMIC WARFARE AT CAMP RILEY IS A GOOD SCHOOL FOR SOLDIERS.

The Blues and Browns Fight Lively Battles With Blank Cartridges. No More Formality Could Be Observed In Actual Warfare.

The army posts are filling up again and from one after another come reports that the old routine of soldier life has again begun. But there will be one omission this year which many volunteers will regret, for the maneuvres at Camp Riley from October to December of each year had become almost an institution, and were annually visited by thousands.

This mimic warfare it was that made possible the brilliant record of the regulars at El Caney and San Juan, for it was real hard fighting and proved the best kind of a school for the soldier.

The surface of the reservation is particularly fitted for the work, having rolling hills, timber patches, bluffs and gulches. These make admirable hiding and camping places, while out on the prairies and meadow lands are the hand-to-hand engagements with plenty of room to deploy, march and charge without conflicting with any natural barriers.

The theory of the school is two-fold, embracing defense and attack. "A brigade of troops is designated by the colonel commanding, with its cavalry and artillery, known as the "Blues," wearing blue uniforms and forage caps, to remain at the fort and defend it. Another brigade, whose members wear brown canvas, with campaign hats, is designated as the "Brown," being in camp far down the Kaw valley toward Manhattan, may appear at any time, seeking to reconnoitre the Blues' position and to give them battle.

All troops march fully armed and equipped and carry ten blank cartridge cartridges. Topographical and road sketches are made by the engineers with as much care as if entering an enemy's country, and are on a scale of four inches to the mile. A topographical officer is detailed to accompany each command and submit a hasty sketch and report to the commander of the forces to which he is attached.

To guard against accidents all cartridges are inspected before the soldiers go out, and again before action, and by officers. Strict orders are issued that every man must act as much as possible as though such conditions existed in such shape as it is pretended they do, and umpires, spectators and inspectors see that this rule is carried out. When a part of a force is exposed necessarily, double-quick time is made. Exhaustive reports, criticisms and comments are submitted to the commander of the post after each engagement. It will thus be seen that the work is meant to accomplish something, and it does.

If actual war were in progress more formality could scarcely be observed. Regular orders are issued to the troops with the utmost precision, not exceeded even in the prosecution of a campaign. For instance, here is a typical order issued to the Blues:

"Order No. 121. November 10.—The enemy has appeared in force north of the camp. The brigade will be held in readiness to march to-morrow morning.

"Two troops of the First and two of the Second cavalry, and one battery of artillery, under command of Major W. A. Rafferty, Second cavalry, are hereby detailed as the advance guard, and will, at 8.45 a. m. to-morrow, proceed along the Milk Ranch road.

"In case any of the enemy are met, the advance guard will push them back as far as possible. A medical officer and detachment of the hospital and signal corps will accompany the command. By order of Colonel Arnold.

"W. S. SCOTT.

"Acting Adjutant General."

The advance was begun on Fort Riley with a formality that the brigade went into camp as regularly as though a thousand miles away from headquarters. Tents, accouterments, all the paraphernalia of camp life, were used, and videttes, outpost and scouts did their work carefully and well. Then, on November 14, came an order dated "In camp, near Riley Center, November 14," and saying:

"The Blue brigade will, at break of day to-morrow, begin the continued march on Fort Riley. Two troops of cavalry are detailed as rear guards. The rear guards slowly retiring on Fort Riley, will, by stubborn resistance, delay the advance of the enemy as much as possible. Commander of rear guard will, however, take care that troops are withdrawn before they become engaged in any serious conflict. Signal men will be furnished with mounts, and men will be detailed to act as scouts. One section of cavalry with hospital corps detachment will be detailed to follow the command."

The issuing of such orders means much to the boys on duty. They see in the order war something more than the mere learning of drills and tactics, and are awakened to a hearty enthusiasm which makes the work a pleasure rather than a duty regretfully performed. Most of the men stationed at the fort as privates are young, and the constant changes to bring in new troops from the surrounding posts all over the West makes the work decidedly interesting, and the rivalry by no means slight. This spirit is so that one makes of the regulars so conspicuous in Cuba, the Philippines and Porto Rico.

The location of umpires on the field to pass upon the accuracy of all movements insures immunity from any home thrusts, and as the artillery and cavalry alone are engaged, there is a valuable drill in every day's proceedings. Many visitors go out from the surrounding counties of Central Kansas to see the fun, and really they see about as much of warfare as any layman can see, even at a campaign is going on in his own vicinity.

To follow the Blues or Browns for a day is a revelation to anyone. The ground is so rolling that the whole army might well be concealed in a ravine, and it requires shrewd generalship to keep full command of the brigade. As the enemy steadily advances on the fort, throwing out flanking lines of men who represented whole troops in themselves. These are the flag bearers, each flag standing for a troop of men. They are recognized in the contest, and it is a rule that when two flags flank a single one, the latter is to consider himself captured and retreat or surrender.

The approach of the two lines means a battle, and soon the cavalry is seen coming on from behind a hill on the Milk Ranch road, ready to charge a battery of light artillery on the plain. Cantering forward, they are met by a destructive fire that threatens to wipe them from the earth. One-after the manner of invaders drops from his horse in mock injury.

Then the batteries rally and make a charge themselves. Up the hill they go, and hurry pell mell to the crest, where, in an instant, they whirl into place and the guns belch forth a warning and a menace. The invading Browns are, however, too numerous, and have other parties of cavalry and flagmen on the flanks, and the umpires declare that the Blues are whipped in the battle.

Sometimes the campaign lasts several days, and anxious councils of war are held by the young lieutenants to make the best possible showing for their side. And they know that it will all be reviewed afterward, and they do not want to be found wanting. The conduct of the campaigns, sham though they be, is a good index of the actual stuff that is in an officer, young or old.

The commanding officer, when a campaign is over, issues an exhaustive comment on the merits of the various troops' work, thus pointing out the strong and weak points in extended order, artillery and cavalry practice. A topographical officer is detailed to accompany each command and submit a hasty sketch and report to the commander of the forces to which he is attached.

To guard against accidents all cartridges are inspected before the soldiers go out, and again before action, and by officers. Strict orders are issued that every man must act as much as possible as though such conditions existed in such shape as it is pretended they do, and umpires, spectators and inspectors see that this rule is carried out. MONEY IN OLD CHIPS.

Experts Who Make Good Violins From Odds and Ends.

People in Chicago who pass the windows of a large music store are attracted by the display of baskets full of chips and fragments of the old fiddle family. These unattractive bits of wood have large money value, however, as they can be skillfully joined and reassembled to make violins that have the genuine, rich tonal qualities of age. Chicago is the only city in America where such an artistic relief is afforded to violin makers. These chips and fragments of former musical glory are not mere flotsam and jetsam carelessly accumulated and cast up in this show window as a mournful memento, for they represent long travel, patience, shrewdness and diplomacy. Most of the old violins or parts thereof have been collected in Italy. They had a lower pitch, and when a century ago the fad came in for instruments of high pitch the shrewd Yankee peddlers bought up graduate them by gouging out the backs. This vandal process not only weakened the instrument, but the tone was soon correspondingly repressed, and then the instrument was cast aside. Nearly the back of these old instruments show this gouging, and the first task is to level up this hardwood surface.

The top of the violin being of soft wood usually has its edges worn down by handling and rubbing in the case. The corners are generally broken and the S holes are frequently split or frayed. This necessitates what is technically called "redoubling." This consists in matching the parts, building up by gluing in pieces, the ruined parts remaining in the clamps for weeks in order to set them firmly. Cracks are filled with tiny strips; small pieces are matched in so adroitly that their presence can barely be detected on the finished instrument. Now that the cracked and frayed top has been bent up after long continued pressure to its original shape, the gouged back restored to its former thickness; the seamed sides filled and blocked and even the old varnish revealed in its former richness.

These important parts have been artfully restored, indeed; but the assembling of them is, after all, the matter of most vital importance, for this means a retention or revival of the tone which the instrument possessed. No matter how beautifully the patchwork is done, the violin is comparatively valueless unless it has the tone to soothe the sensitive ear of the connoisseur. The sound post must be adjusted to hold the bridge in the right position, and the strings bring a pressure of sixty-five pounds upon the breast of the violin, quite a weight to rest upon a thin, vibrant slab of wood.

Even more important than this pillar is the sound post, this piece of tempered spruce that runs two-thirds the length of the breast between the S holes. This not only serves to help in carrying the weight mentioned, but is the bone of the violin's nervous system. It must neither be too stiff nor too flabby, and must be so adjusted that it will sympathetically sustain the vibrations that come from every touch of the bow. In course in all violins, these chances are taken, but fortune generally favors art, science and skill where materials have been wisely selected.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

NO DOCTORS' BILLS IN SWEDEN.

It's a Case of "Write Your Own Ticket" With Your Physician.

Do you pay your doctors" bills? some persons don't. Do you have an idea that the medicine men are in the same category with street railway companies and therefore to be "beaten" in something or other? Then you object to getting a bill from your physician, and object on general principles? Then go to Sweden. That's the place for you. That's the place where the doctors cease from troubling and their patients get rest. The doctors' bills go in Sweden. Who wouldn't be a Swede?

When you are ill in Sweden and require the services of a physician, all you have to do is to send for him. He is likely to be an efficient man and courteous to a degree. Your needs will be ministered to and between the times of feeling your pulse and taking your temperature he won't slip one of his professional cards in your hand and remind you that he charges $10 for nothing in sight of consequent, and your doctor looks after you faithfully until you have recovered. When you feel like liquidating the obligation you'll find that it is a case of write your own ticket.

If you have been holding an office under Tammany prior to your trip to Sweden, or have struck it rich in Sugar, you may fill out your check for a handsome sum. The money will be accepted and no comment made. If you have been writing on space for some years or have picked the horse races wrong end first, you may send a small donation to the doctor, and it will be just as unemotionally received.

The Swedish doctor on his native heath tends the sick and makes no rates. His wealthy patients pay him handsomely, his poorer patients give what they can afford, and the extremely poor give nothing at all. All get the same treatment.—New York Herald.

TO ABOLISH ANARCHY

GOVERNMENTS UNITE TO PUT AN END TO THE EVIL.

An International Police System To Be Perfected In the Near Future. The Anarchist Movement Has Assumed Alarming Proportions.

Lucchent, though an Italian, owes his Anarchistic education to the German press and the Paris communes, which, though often suppressed, still breeds its vipers for all of the European capitals. The German anarchist is above all things a thinker. He it is who writes the burning literature which incites the bombshell Italian and French to action. There are exceptions, of course, for it is currently understood that it was a German, Schnaubelt, who threw the Hayymarket bomb, and for this crime Parsons, Spies, Engel, Fischer, Fielden, Lingg, Neebe and Schwab, all but two of them Germans, suffered death or imprisonment.

True it is that the anarchist prates of Proudhon as the father of the cause, but in the development they cast aside the milder logic of the Frenchman and gorge themselves on the economic theories of Carl Marx, who put the problem tersely for these anarchists when he defined the communists of the time, which he classified into the anarchists of to-day, as "on the one hand, practically, the most advanced and resolute section of the working class parties of every country, that section which pushes forward all others; on the other hand, theoretically, they have over the great mass of the proletariat the advantage of clearly understanding the line of march, the conditions, and the ultimate general results of the proletarian movement. The immediate aim of the Communists is the same as that of all the other proletarian parties; formation of the proletariat into a class, overthrow of the bourgeois supremacy, conquest of political power by the proletariat."

And here again is a typical Marx sentiment: "The Communists disdain to conceal their views and aims. They openly declare that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions. Let the ruling classes tremble at a Communistic revolution. The proletarians have nothing to lose but their chains. They have a world to win."

It was Orsini, in 1858, who began the war which militant anarchy has since waged on society. He it was who threw the bomb at Napoleon III, and, with his companion, Pieri, was executed. There was a queer blending of the anarchist and the liberator in Orsini, and he has been to thousands a martyr of a still bleeding cause.

Since the night of November 7, 1893, when bombs were thrown into the Liceo theatre at Barcelona, where hundreds were killed, European society, royal and bourgeois, has been in constant dread of attack, although the work of Ravachol in 1892 caused no consternation in the Powers. Who six bombs he on different occasions blew up the house of the Princess de Sagan; the residence of Judge Benoit, who was unusually severe on anarchists; a store in the corner of Rue de Clichy and Rue de Berlin, wherein twenty persons were killed or wounded; the Cafe Very, where two young people dining were hurled to eternity, and finally a portion of the Palais de Justice.

All these exploits were performed in the first months of 1892. Two juries brought Ravachol in "not guilty," frankly admitting that they were afraid of their lives to condemn him, although they clearly recognized he had committed the crimes attributed to him. Mothers in France at this day frighten their restive or unruly children by threatening to hand them over to Ravachol.

The murderous act of the Parisian anarchist Vaillant, who threw a bomb among the French deputies, aroused the whole civilized world to the necessity of concerted measures to check the wave of violence and social outlawry. Vaillant's cowardly attempt to assassinate the legislative representatives of the French people probably marked the turning point in the history of anarchy. Hitherto the war on society had engaged only one army—the army of the aggressors. Now the army of the defence took a hand in the active hostilities.

Within forty-eight hours after the Vaillin incident the governments of the different states of Europe were conferring with one another, either by telegraph or through their accredited representatives, regarding the measures to be taken for the general protection against anarchistic foes.

It was settled in short order that no more toleration should be extended to the publication of incitements to the wholesale destruction of life and life was declared to be the consideration had hitherto been shown to what seemed mere noise and bluster. The time had come when society must resist even an academical propagation of the knife and bomb.

But the work of the stiletto went on. Still the deed of Vaillant differed much from that of Santo or of Luccheni.

The chief fact to be borne in mind in the consideration of the Vaillant incident is that the outlaw's murderous design was directed not against a monarch or anyone presuming to enjoy hereditary rights over the people, but against the people themselves as represented by their elected officials. The civilized world can readily understand an attack like Vaillant's when directed against a tyrant. When, however, anarchy presumes to attack a republic—the most perfect and equitable form of government as yet devised by the human mind—it is plain that the general system of anarchy means simply indiscriminate warfare on all law and order.

These men are pretty nearly all alike. Of Luccheni little is known beyond his more recent life, but like Vaillant, he was notorious for rank physical cowardice, and nothing could have evidenced this better than his selection of a woman as his victim.

Santo, poisoned but not his anarchist has yet had the courage to attack even one man where the individual had an opportunity to defend himself. To say that popular feeling against the anarchists is extremely bitter is to assume a very mildly, and the popular demand for suppressive measures is certain to force the governments to adopt far more stringent precautions than any that have yet marked the counter revolution against lawlessness.

For a long time the individual cowardice of anarchists had one marked and peculiar effect; it led society into the great blunder of vastly underestimating the danger of the anarchist to the community. A foreign commentator on the subject remarks that it had become the fashion in government regions to think that the danger from anarchists was a mere figment of the police authorities. A French minister of state is quoted as saying: "Of every ten anarchists, there are seven who are in the employ of the police, and three who are arrant cowards." It was this sentiment, however, that has prevented hitherto the adoption of well considered and effective measures for suppression of anarchists. It is pointed out that even in the perpetration of the outrages by Ravachol, the people and governmeent of France insisted that the episode really was nothing; that it was the act of a mad man who had no accomplice, while about all the precaution that the prefecture of police took was to request the Scotland Yard officials to send over descriptions of the lineaments and goings of certain inhabitants of the French quarter of London.

Santo Caserio, in open day, on June 24, 1894, had no trouble in plunging his stiletto into the heart of President Carnot, although the latter was being feted by the whole city of Lyons, and his carriage was surrounded by officers of the Republican Guard.

It was by the veriest accident that King Humbert of Italy's life was not cut off by an anarchist in April of last year, as he drove in the Campabelle races. Giovanni Acciarito's foot slipped as he stepped on the king's carriage, and all nerve was thus taken from the blow which he aimed at the monarch's breast.

Angiolillo, another Italian anarchist, was more successful in the attempt which he made on the virtual ruler of another nation. The steel which he held in readiness escaped the eyes of the police and of the special detectives, and on a quiet bunday afternoon, some thirteen months ago, he let out the life blood of Spain's prime minister, Senor Canovas del Castillo.

The present year has been fertile enough in anarchistical exploits. On the evening of February 26 a murderous attack was made on the life of the King of Greece. Successively attempts were made on Nicholas II of Russia, and on Wilhelmina, the young queen of Holland, in which the latter, however, as if the Luccheni episode had changed all this. The governments of Europe are in negotiation for the adoption of measures for concerted action by the united powers against anarchy. This step is positively necessary in order to meet the anarchists on equal grounds, for it has been proved beyond doubt that there is one and powerful connection between the anarchists of different countries. They have a magnificent organization for the prompt and secret interchange of news and for furnishing each other all forms of protection and help. To fight such an elaborately organized system of evil, governments throughout the world must adopt a scheme of mutual aid.

Among the essential details of such a scheme are the establishment of a permanent international police commission against the anarchists, as well as special national commissions. The persons whose names get on the list of suspects will be under police surveillance in all countries.

International legislation will also be adopted in regard to the sale and manufacture of explosives, and an attempt will be made to secure uniform legislation in all countries for the repression of anarchism. It will be difficult to obtain this, but it is hoped that the sense of self-preservation in the presence of the danger which menaces society will prove stronger than all the selfish cautions, and will facilitate the tasks of the governments when they come to propose such legislation to their respective parliaments.

Germany will perhaps begin the great work by the enactment of the Umsturz bill, which caused so little consternation when first proposed several years ago in the ranks of the Socialists.

Husband: "It seems to me that you come to my office a good deal more than there is any necessity for." Wife: "I cannot help it, dear; your manners in the office are so much nicer than they are at home that I like to enjoy the contrast."

"I wish I was a girl," said Bobbie. "Why do you wish that?" asked his father.

"Oh, then I wouldn't have to bother about thinking what I'll be when I'm a man."

Cora: "Pauline is smarter than you, my dear. She can accompany the new tenor on the piano."

Perdita: "Yes, but I can accompany him on my bicycle."

SNAKES AS DECORATIONS.

Samoan Maidens Wreathe Themselves With Reptiles of Flaming Red.

For the most part the Pacific islands are destitute of snakes. That is absolutely the fact in Hawaii. New Zealand is equally free of these reptiles. All the eastern islands of Polynesia between these two outposts are snakeless. Westward from Hawaii, down among the Gilberts and the Marshalls and the Carolines, the square-bodied water snake begins to make its appearance in the lagoons and harbors. By the time the Philippines are reached the water snake becomes both common and deadly, and the jungles of those islands are abundantly supplied with snakes. From the Philippines as one follows down the chain of islands snakes are found both abundant and venomous. In the wild lands of the western Pacific the reptiles are frequently objects of worship, and in some legends are credited with the creation of the world.

Samoa seems to lie just on the boundary line of snakes in the Pacific. In Savaii, one of the largest of the archipelago no snakes are to be found; in Upolu a few are seen at rare intervals. In Savaii, only a few miles to the westward, they are common and attain great size, in the case of some kinds at least. None of them is venomous and the islanders neither fear them nor exhibit that repugnance to their presence which is commonly called instinctive.

This indifference to the reptiles is most strikingly manifest at the hamlet of Iva on the northeast coast of Savaii. Here are to be found small snakes of a most brilliant red color. They are so common that a basketful may be easily picked up in any bunch of grass. The young girls of this town are in the habit of employing these gaudy snakes for personal adornment in their dances. They tie them about their necks, their ankles and their wrists, festoon them in their hair, and sometimes wear them as sashes in the belt in readiness to replace such as escape in the dance. At their best these sivas danced by the Samoans are either dull, or revolting shows of savagery. It can easily be imagined that they are made far more attractive when the taupou or village maid and her crew of attendant girls go careering about with an assortment of writhing red snakes. Still, the Samoans, who have no stock of snake prejudices, look upon this as one of the most successful and artistic dances in their islands.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

FORTY YEARS SHE WAITED.

When She Recovers Her Husband's Body From the Alps.

A married couple were crossing one of the great glaciers of the Alpine region, when a fatal accident occurred. The husband fell down one of the huge crevasses which abound on all glaciers—the rope broke, and the depth of the chasm was so great that no help could be rendered, nor could the body be recovered. Over the wife's anguish at her loss we must draw the veil of silence. Forty years afterward saw her, with the guide who had accompanied them at the time of the accident, staying at the village of Meiringen, which is close to the glacier, waiting for the sea to give up its dead; for, by the well-known law of glacier-progression, the form of her long-lost husband might be expected to appear, expelled from the mouth of the torrent, about that date. Patiently, and with unfailing constancy, they watched and waited, and their hopes were at last rewarded.

One day the body was released from its prison in the ice, and the wife looked again on the features of him who had been so long parted from her! But the pathos of the story lay in the fact that she was then an old woman, while the newly-rescued body was that of only a young and robust man, so faithfully had the crystal casket preserved the jewel which it held so long. The forty years had left no wrinkles on that marble brow. Time's wandering fingers could not touch him in his icy tomb. For a few brief moments, the aged lady saw the husband of her youth, as he was in the days which were gone forever!—In C. H. Spurgeon's Autobiography.

Regarding the Burmese.

The Burmese will sacrifice any prospect of money making to go to a feast. These are called pives, and often the entertainment is elaborate. The writer remembers going to one in Upper Burmah. There was good food and dancing, but neither the host nor his guests danced; that would have been undignified. The dancers were paid, and they twirled lazily or jumped excitedly as occasion required. Most of the men present were smoking cheroot and smoking. Smoking is the only thing at which the Burmese are industrious. They start smoking at the early age of three, and they smoke incessantly into the next world. Even smoke quite as arduously as the men, and as the cigars are very big, many a pretty mouth is strained to accommodate a giant cheroot.—Pall Mall Magazine.

The Reward of Generosity.

"General Archie Williams," says the Kansas City Journal, "was on a train going up Pike's Peak one day last summer. At the half way house he got off and purchased a big basket of violets at an expense of $10. Returning to the train he presented each woman with a beautiful bouquet, though all of the women were strangers. By and by the husband of one of the women came back from the smoking car and she said to him: 'I think this is the nicest railroad I ever rode on. That brakeman over there gave every one of us a lovely bouquet."

STALKING BIG GAME.

How the Four Day Hunting Season Is Spent on Long Island.

The Long Island deer season is a peculiar affair. It is but four days long, covering the four Wednesdays in November. Although the country in which the deer are found in the interior of the island is heavily wooded, it presents no difficulties to the stalking of the game from cover to cover with bounds. As the south shore which skirts the so-called wilderness is thickly settled, a host of sportsmen is on the hunting ground by dawn of the first day of hunting. There are a hundred men with guns ready to pour a hail of buckshot in the direction of the fleeing deer. Rifles are not used, because the hunter could not pull a trigger without bringing down some fellow sportsman within range of the bullet. On Tuesday night before the first Wednesday in November, Sayville, Patchogue, Bay Shore, Smithtown and other places on the south shore and to the north of the Ronkonkoma Woods are in a feverish state of preparation for the opening of the deer season with the first light. The sun has just dipped the horizon in the "wilderness," the tracks of the Long Island railroad running through it and the roads bounding it resound with the report of shotguns. The battle is on.

The Long Island chase has developed a peculiar kind of deerslayer, the like of whom is not known in other countries. He is called a track hunter, because he has his stand on the line of the Long Island railroad where the run through the woods. The bay of hounds at once calls the track-hunters by hundreds to the steel rails. Often they are to be seen as thick as mosquitoes in Jersey. The hounds, fed and washed for the track to escape the hounds. Then a mighty fusilade wakes the echoes. The shrouds within sight of the animal have filled the air with lead. Sometimes a deer falls, and the sports men swarm around its dying form like crows about a carcass. The question of who shall have the antlers if it be a buck, who shall have the hide, and among how many the meat shall be divided are rarely settled except after a riot. Any one who can aquire along a barrel and press a trigger may be a track-hunt. The utmost woodcraft is required to locate the Long Island railroad in the "wilderness."

All the Long Island deer hunters are not of the grotesque type described, however. Fair sport may be had on any of the preserves of some of the clubs sport that requires a good eye and a quick hand and some degree of skill. It is not to be compared with deer hunting in the Adirondacks or the Maine wilderness, but it gives the city sportsman a chance to get out and men may engage in it without any loss of self-respect.

From Waverly on the south, nearly to Wading River on the north and east, and Smithtown on the west, the country is dotted with deer parks. The territory embraces Lake Ronkonkoma, where the Indians used to lie in wait for their game. The country is flat, and covered with scrub oak and underbrush, through which the deer glide so sometimes have trouble in gaining their way.

From Oakdale north, and embracing a strip about two miles wide and five miles long, is the preserve of the Southside club, an organization of wealthy gentlemen, who, by observing the law themselves and compelling its enforcement by others, have succeeded in increasing the number of deer to such an extent that there is no good cause for complaint. The latter argue the injustice of allowing the deer to destroy their crops while the law protects the deer from being shot.

The change in the game laws distributing the season over four weeks is generally regarded by sportsmen as a wise move. Previously four consecutive days were set aside, and then the woods fairly broke loose into a pandemonium.

For four days there would be a scene of carnage, not limited alone to the deer. Stray shots found resting places in human targets. The list for the fifth day became awful. It is not forgotten. Private preserves were invaded and despoiled.

The game keepers were in open warfare with the less scrupulous hunters, who respected neither the law nor the proprietors of the preserves. But in great change has been wrought. Last year the gunning was followed with equal zest, but the one day of each week set apart and the six days intervening had a tendency to check the slaughter of innocents.

And the game that was killed! On the opening day of the season it was estimated that no less than 150 deer succumbed to the hunters' prowess. Next Monday the Long Island railroad fairly groaned under their weight of venison. Others of the sportsmen carried their trophies away by wagon, and still others found the deer ducks at Great South Bay, had recourse to boats.

To Keep Flowers Fresh.

Flowers trailing singly over the cloth is one form of decoration in more or less use at special functions. Hostesses find frequently, however, that the roses and other blossoms do not last through a long meal, and every one knows that trailing faded flowers are not an attractive sight. To obviate this, a florist says that if a bit of moss is dipped in water and then shaken nearly free of it, the cut end of the rose may be wrapped in this and tied on with a bit of sewing silk, and this will keep the flowers fresh. It is easy to conceal such treatment by bending a leaf over the end.

Will Senator Reed Get It?

The fact that United States Senator Sewell has expressed casual preference for Senator Ketcham, of Essex county, as the next president of the State Senate, is regarded by the political wiseacres as a blackeye to the candidacy of the other aspirants, and especially to Senator Reed. Senator Sewell, who is the biggest gun of the G. O. P. in New Jersey, is always looked upon as deciding the success of any candidate or policy dependable upon the action of Republican officeholders.

"If Essex county wants the position," the Senator was quoted as saying, "she ought to have it, and judging from the earnestness of the canvass being made by Senator Ketcham, and the support he is receiving from Franklin Murphy, Major Lentz and other influential Republicans in the county, there appears to be little doubt of the attitude of the county."

The editor of the Jersey City News comments upon this affair in a humorous vein by saying:

When this remarkable utterance reached the ears of Mr. Reed, who was in the State House in Trenton, he gave vent to his smile each other, and cold chills ran up and down his spinal column. He soon pulled himself together, however, and hurried to General Sewell's room, where the Governor's mom was suiting with the Acting Executive. He asked the General if he had declared himself in favor of Senator Ketcham.

Now mark the foxy old campaigner. He said that he had not exactly said he was for Mr. Ketcham, as he did not consider the office of great importance to the State as a part of the patronage to be given to the county or the. It was a position of honor to be filled by the majority of the Senate and neither he nor any of his friends would attempt to influence the selection of any of the aspirants for the offices.

"But," and here is where the General signed the death warrants of Messrs. Johnson and Reed—"even if I am the Senate," he went on, "I would vote for Mr. Ketcham."

Mr. Reed, it is said, went away satisfied that the General had no choice and his chances were as fair as ever, and if Mr. Reed really feels that way, he is not the wide-awake, astute man his career in the Legislature has led many to believe he is. The Senator from Hudson, Jersey, where a great part of his power lies, will make no mistake. They will understand that Senator Sewell favors Mr. Ketcham and will vote for him.

In this manner the General tells his followers what to do without directly ordering them, and at the same time ostensibly keeps his word to Mr. Reed that he will not influence any one in favor of Mr. Ketcham. For was it that are dark and tricks that succeed Camden's big boss is peculiar.

It is a long ways off, but if Senator Reed is selected as president of the State Senate at the approaching legislative session he will be in direct line for the O. P. Gubernatorial nomination three years hence; providing, of course, that he is re-elected to the Upper House next year and again chosen presiding officer, which he probably would be if he is successful in his present aspiration.

Primary Reform.

Inasmuch as the Republicans of Plainfield have been trying a new system of conducting primaries originated by Assemblyman Murray, the plan for primary reform designed by George L. Record, of Jersey City, is of contemporaneous interest in this city. In some respects it resembles the ideas of Mr. Murray, but it is much more sweeping and general in its details.

Mr. Record's plan does away with the party primaries and conventions, and provides for a joint primary of all political parties, to be held on the first registry day, and to be conducted by the regular registry officers during all the hours of registry, with the voting booths, ballot-boxes and official ballots exactly as on election day.

The details of the plan are as follows: Any person can have his name printed upon the official primary ballot of the political party to which he belongs, by causing a petition to that effect, signed by fifty voters belonging to said party, to be filed with the City Clerk. The City Clerk, from all of such petitions, so filed in his office, makes up and prints the official primary ballot of each political party, arranging the names of candidates in alphabetical order. The said clerk sends these official ballots to the different registry boards on the morning of the first registry day. The voter goes to the place of registry, has his name entered upon the registry list, announces his party affiliations, obtains from the registry board the official ballot of his political party, enters the voting booth, indicates by a cross upon the official ballot the persons for whom he wishes to cast his vote, deposits his ballot so marked in the regular ballot box, and departs. He has registered and he has participated in the primary of his party. At night the registry board counts the votes of all parties and certifies the result to the City Clerk, who from such returns ascertains which candidates in each party have received a plurality or a majority of the votes cast, and the persons so elected become the regular candidates of their respective political parties at the ensuing election.

Helping the Cubans.

There passes not a day in this country but what the people are appealed to and urged to aid and succor the unfortunate of other climes, and let it be said to the credit of Americans they are among the most liberal and sympathetic of the world's people to respond to such requests. In the grand volume of this charitable work the poor Cubans should not be forgotten at this time. At present there is a movement on foot for the relief of the starving Cubans, by means of carefully administered industrial enterprise, which the American people are asked to further.

The prime object of the recent war with Spain was to conquer the Dons principally that we might restore the Cuban people to a state of peace and industry and afford them opportunities to pursue the avocations which a cruel war had deprived them of. The condition of the non combatants, known popularly as the reconcentrados, before the war is too well-known to need to be dwelt on here, but in the excitement of the conflict and the aftermath of incidents we seem to have lost sight of the abject want and other horrors of the poor Cuban.

The Cubans have been relieved of their merciless masters, but that is not enough. The end of the war found the great majority of the Cubans filled with hope and courage to commence the battle for a livelihood, but they are badly handicapped in the fact that they have returned to what were their homes to find tools, houses and all other essentials of making a living absolutely wiped off the face of the earth. Their land is fertile and ready to respond to the hand of the tiller. But bare hands and good intentions are not enough to succeed under such circumstances as prevail.

Tools, for one thing, are imperative to the Cubans in their efforts to again become self-supporting. But without money themselves they are unable to secure such things.

The plan proposed by William Willard Howard seems to recommend itself as efficient and practical for accomplishing the necessary object. Mr. Howard's plan, which has been taken up by an association formed for the purpose—the Cuban Industrial Relief Fund—is based on his two years' experience in relief work for the Armenians of Eastern Turkey. The plan in outline is as follows:

1. To secure good farming land where the need of the poor is the more pressing.

2. To station there a capable American superintendent, with implements, seeds and funds sufficient to employ a considerable number of men.

3. To set at work all the able-bodied poor and pay them full market rates for their labor.

4. To raise common food crops, sell them in the best available market, and with the proceeds continue the employment as long only as funds may warrant, using the same money over and over again.

5. To return the farmers to their own former homes as soon as they are physically able to work and financially able to re-establish their plantations.

While inspired by charitable motives, the whole plan is to be operated purely as a business transaction, in which the laborer will feel that he has rendered service for all he has received, and that he has not been robbed of his manhood by being treated like a beggar. The money thus invested (and it will be invested, not spent) will save the United States millions that would otherwise be used to clothe and feed an idle, though suffering population.

The County Trolley Safe.

Those citizens of Union county who could see no good in the Bergen county trolley scheme have had all their fond hopes dashed to pieces by the Supreme Court of New Jersey, which yesterday, in a decision rendered, declared the Squire law, in which the ideas of Mr. Bergen found legal form, to be perfectly constitutional. All the technical points raised by the objectors in their plea for a certiorari proceeding have been dismissed by the learned judges, who give plain, straightforward opinions for such action. The interesting parts of the opinion are given in the news columns of this paper today.

As one of the towns that is directly to be benefitted or damaged, when ever it may be as decided by future developments, the project proposed under the law, the decision is of great importance to Plainfield. Coming at this time, when an application is pending before the Common Council for a trolley franchise for a company of capitalists whose interests are jeopardized by the existence of this law—which, by the way, has encountered their strongest opposition at every point—the decision obtains special significance for this city.

Many well meaning citizens of Plainfield have urged in strong terms the granting of an extension to the Plainfield Street Railway Company in the efforts to get an eastern trolley outlet on the plea that it was only through the local company that Plainfield could ever hope to secure the benefits of an electric street railway in the direction of Elizabeth. This stand was based on the rather confident assumption that the Bergen scheme would fail of success when brought into the courts. The Supreme court action, therefore, puts this class of citizens hors de combat, so to speak.

The decision should have a healthy effect upon the Common Council in dealing with the Plainfield Street Railway Company. The action of the court assures that, unless great unforseen obstacles arise, that Plainfield will secure the benefits of an eastern extension through Mr. Kean's road, and in such an event there will be no need of the rights of the city being sacrificed to the capitalists behind the street railway company.

The Result of Election.

A wave of Republicanism swept over Plainfield yesterday. It extinguished the struggling Citizens who were trying for municipal office and buried them out of sight. While a Republican victory was generally predicted, the size and completeness of the one that appeared had only been anticipated by the most sanguine. When the battle came, the strength of the opposition to the Republican machine did not prove as formidable as was expected.

After the municipal election last year when the Citizens made such an excellent showing without organization and unity of it, it was predicted that this winter would see the complete and utter downfall of the Republican party from power in municipal affairs. So the campaign that is now at an end was watched for with unusual interest. Early in the fall, the rumblings of the storm that was threatening the Republican party began to be heard and it was said that this election would see the Citizens in the race more able to cope with their rivals than ever before.

Then came the movement looking toward the reorganization of the Democratic party and the putting of a Democratic ticket in the field for the municipal election. The plan was defeated by some of the party leaders, but there can be no doubt that it figured in the causes of the Republican victory. When election day came, there were many Democrats who refused to vote at all and others who voted the straight Republican ticket believing it preferable to give their support to an organization rather than to a ticket not accountable to any one.

The campaign that closed yesterday has been an exciting one. Most of the work was one of a personal nature although the Citizens held several mass meetings in the Fourth ward and published a little campaign newspaper, the Plainfield Citizen, which was distributed broadcast through the city. Two issues appeared, the last one Monday afternoon. Criticism there was plenty of by both parties. A little metaphorical "mud" was slung. It was, however, a pretty orderly campaign in which both sides took a clean part. It was the first time in several years that the Republican machine was called to buck up against anything like organized opposition.

Senator Reed's Chances Good.

The political fates seem to be looking kindly upon the aspirations of Senator Reed with respect to the Presidency of the State Senate. Yesterday the G. O. P. politicians gathered at Trenton to see how things were going, and it was the general sentiment that the Tall Sycamore of Somerset was practically sure of gaining the honor of being the second officer of the State.

The boom for Senator Ketcham for President of the Senate has fallen flat. The great majority of the Senators are pledged to either Senator Reed or Senator Johnson, of Bergen, and the declaration of United States Senator Sewell, and State Chairman Murphy in Mr. Ketcham's favor has not changed any Senator's preference. The fact that the South Jersey Senators are sticking to Senator Reed gives color to the statement that Senator Sewell is not seeking to force Ketcham's election. The friends of Senator Johnson are not forcing the fight. He has simply announced himself as a candidate and is leaving the results to the Senators themselves.

Senator Reed and his friends have been more aggressive, and claim pledges enough to win. It operates in Senator Reed's favor that Senator Johnson has three years to serve, having just been re-elected, and that he can be made President another year, while this is Senator Reed's last year of his term, and Somerset is a very close county politically. If Senator Reed is made President Senator Johnson will be urged to take the leadership on the floor.

It is a matter of interest to all Plainfielders that when the business of the local post-office increases the postal facilities also increase. It is well for residents to bear this fact in mind when they feel like finding fault, and make their stamp purchases in town instead of New York.

Council Passes Tenure of Position Ordinance.

IT CAUSED LIVELY TALK.

COUNCILMAN HETFIELD OPPOSED IT VIGOROUSLY.

Mr. Hetfield Claimed That The Police Force Was Not an Ideal as It Ought to be and That The Members Should Not be Given Life Positions—Much Acrimonious Talk—Other Business Transacted.

The police ordinance that has been struggling for the past six months to find the light of day and get through the Council, finally succeeded in its efforts Monday evening at the regular meeting. It was called up by Mr. Buckle and a heated discussion followed before its adoption on the second reading. Mr. Buckle stated that he had consulted with the Mayor, the police board and members of the police department, and all were desirous of having the ordinance go through. Mr. Buckle also presented a petition from the policemen in which they asked the Council to adopt the ordinance.

Mr Hetfield asked Mr. Buckle if the police board had met with a committee from the Patrolmen's Benefit Association, as the resolution he offered at the last meeting called for. In response Mr. Buckle stated that he did not think it was necessary inasmuch as he had received a petition from the police. Mr. Buckle then went on to say that the ordinance had been in the hands of the laws and ordinance committee for six months, and that while he had lots of patience, he desired to see the ordinance come before the Council for a vote. If Mr. Hetfield could offer any good reasons why the ordinance should not be adopted he would gladly listen and was willing to be convinced.

Mr. Barrows stated that inasmuch as the petition had been received he could see no reason why the meeting in question should be held.

Mr. Hetfield then said that advice had been given to the effect that a meeting should not be held, that irrespective of the disregard shown for his motion at the last meeting, the patrolmen of the city were lined up the day after the last meeting in front of the officers, who belonged to another association, and the petition was thrust at them and they were forced to sign it. They didn't dare say no, he continued by saying that the names on the petition of patrolmen who had told him that they did not urge the passing of the ordinance, and among them were Chief Grant, Patrolmen McCue, Flanagan, Lunger and others. Mr. Hetfield stated further that there was not a member of the Council who could say that the police force is as it should be, every man suitable for the place he is in; if it was so he said that he would vote for the ordinance.

R plying, Mr. Buckle said that taking the force as a whole it is desirous that an ordinance protecting the men be established. Mr. Buckle said that if he had as much fault to find with the force as Mr. Hetfield he should certainly pick out some good reason why the ordinance should not be adopted. He claimed that everyone has faults, and he was of the opinion that there was prejudice somewhere that is actuating Mr Hetfield's movements. He said that Mr. Hetfield had talked more with the police than he had since he has been chairman of the police board.

Mr. Barrows emphasized Mr. Buckle's remarks and informed Mr. Hetfield that the city does not recognize any association among the police, neither does it recognize officers. All are appointed by the Mayor as policeman. He said that there is no police force anywhere, man for man, that is better than the one in Plainfield, and it should be removed from political influence, and that all the ordinance aims to do is to prevent policemen from lobbying.

Mr. Hetfield replied by stating that no one on the force who is doing his duty is afraid of politics. "I went to the members of the police force and inquired among them what they knew about the police ordinance and what they had to say about it," said Mr. Hetfield, "I am almost satisfied that that petition came from the officers, and not the men."

Mr. Barrows informed Mr. Hetfield that the petition had come from the Mayor. A vote was then taken on the ordinance and it was adopted as stated. Messrs. Hetfield, Moffett and Liefke voted against the adoption.

Mr Barrows spoke regarding the proposed storm sewer through Park avenue. He said that owing to the early arrival of winter it was found that it could be impossible to install it this winter. He therefore asked the council to kill the ordinance, which was done. The matter will come early next year.

At the suggestion of the city clerk the council selected William M. Stillman to act as City Judge until the position is filled by election. William DeMeza was also nominated for the position by Mr. Runyon. Mr. Stillman received six votes and Mr. De Meza five. The selection of the former was made unanimous.

The Council received petitions for three electric lights on Johnston avenue, three on Jackson avenue and one on East Sixth street. These were all granted, as was also one for Oxford place near West Front street. Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of eleven permits, and Mr. Gavett reported that seven sewer permits had been granted. On a resolution offered by Mr. VanBerwerden $4,500 $3 00 was borrowed on thirty day notes to meet the expenses for the balance of the year.

Mr. Runyon called up the fire ordinance on second reading and after the title was read, Mr. Hetfield objected to its adoption on the ground that the city already has an ordinance that in the main is identical with the new one. He thought the city should be spared the expenses of paying to have a new ordinance advertised in the Newspapers. Mr. Hetfield urged that there is very little difference in the two ordinances. Mr. Moffett and Mr. Buckle agreed in the main with Mr. Hetfield, and no good reasons could they see why a new ordinance should be adopted.

Mr. Runyon stated that there were so many changes made that the corporation counsel thought it advisable to draft a new ordinance.

Mr. Hetfield's motion to lay the ordinance on the table was withdrawn and Mr. Barrows moved as a substitute that the ordinance be referred back to the fire and building committee and that an amended ordinance be presented to the Council. The motion prevailed, Messrs. Runyon and VanBerwerden voting in the negative.

After a motion was made that when Council adjourn it be to meet next Friday evening, the Council adjourned to hold a committee meeting with the street committee regarding the extension of the trolley.

Queer Antics of an Old Man Who Prowls About at Night.

James Gordon is an old man who resides with a cousin on Jefferson ave nue. Gordon is supposed to be out of his head. Not violently, but is said to be incapable of taking proper care of himself or to conduct himself as people with sane minds do.

His latest caper is a desire to get up in the middle of the night and go around the house from room to room, tapping softly at the doors, and awakening the people with his queer movements. Gordon would not harm a child, but imagines there is a need of some one in the house keeping awaknights to prevent a surprise which he anticipates.

The members of the family have applied to the authorities to have Gordon placed somewhere for safe keeping. Chief Grant will have him sent to the Morris Plains asylum as soon as possible

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

DIED AS HE HAD LIVED—IN GOOD AND QUIET.

The Venerable James McGee Expired During the Night.

HIS DEATH CAUSES A SHOCK

HE ATTENDED TO BUSINESS AS USUAL MONDAY.

A Well-Known Business Man in New York Circles—His Benefactions in Church and Charitable Circles Was Well-Known—He Was Responsible for Clearing Monroe Avenue M. E. Church of Debt—His Life

Just as quietly as he had lived a life of seventy-two years, occurred the death of James McGee, one of Plainfield's most honored and highly respected citizens, Tuesday about 9 o'clock. When the news of Mr. McGee's death became known it was a great shock to the community and people could scarcely believe it as the word was passed from one to another. On every hand nothing but words of praise were spoken of him whose existence was a blessing to all with whom he came in contact. Unassuming and retiring in his manner and entirely avoiding self praise or notoriety, he won many close and warm friends in his social, religious and business life. There was scarcely a man more deeply interested and active in the religious world than Mr. McGee. He was always aiming to do good and help others. His hand was never withheld from worthy charities. In almost every channel of charity in this city his assistance was felt in a large and substantial measure.

As a lasting monument to his life, the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, the Epworth House adjoining, and the parsonage, also close by, will ever be reminders. It was seven years ago last April that the Monroe Avenue church was organized and from that time Mr. McGee has been a leading and prominent factor in that religious body. He purchased the land at the corner of Monroe avenue and West Fourth street, where now stands the church, Epworth House and parsonage. It can be said that he presented the entire property to the worshippers of that church. Extra land was purchased, graded, flagged and curbed, all at Mr. McGee's expense. Nothing was wanting to make the organization complete, and only a short time ago he paid the last amount of debt on the the property, making it clear and free from all incumbrance.

James McGee was born seventy-two years ago in New York city, and was the son of Robert McGee. Nearly all of his life was spent in and about New York and vicinity. He attended the public schools and when a young man secured employment in the cotton business. He worked hard and faithfully, gradually making a way for himself by his own efforts. Later he engaged in the produce exchange business and was employed at the Produce Exchange. He held the responsible positions of vice-president and president of the Produce Exchange, and up to the time of his death he held the position of president of the New York Produce Exchange Safe Deposit Company.

For a brief period he was engaged in the business management of The New York Sun, and from that position he was identified in the petroleum brokerage business. After that he became associated with the Standard Oil Company and held a high and responsible position in the executive management of the company and this position he held up to the time of his death.

Mr. McGee was a member of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, where he was an active member. He was married in New York and started housekeeping in a very humble way. In August, 1874, he and his family took up their north Plainfield, and have resided there ever since. Mrs. McGee, a woman widely known for her goodness and her giving to charity, died five years ago, leaving many to mourn her death.

Of late Mr. McGee lived at the home of his daughter, Mrs J. R. Joy, of West End avenue, and it was at that place that he died. Monday he complained of not feeling well, but this did not keep him from business. He went to New York as usual, and returned last Monday in about his usual health. He did say that he had pains about his heart, and Dr. O. L. Jerkins was called to prescribe. He retired at about his regular time. Tuesday morning Mr. Joy awoke he stepped to Mr. McGee's room and found that he was dead. It is supposed that he died between 4 and 5 o'clock, and the end came peacefully and quiet. In his death the bereaved family have the sympathy of the whole community.

In Mr. McGee's associations with the Monroe Avenue church he held the positions of treasurer, historian, librarian, local preacher and president of the Sunday school Missionary Society. He personally compiled the church library and attended to it. He was not a regular ordained minister and disclaimed the title so often given him. He was simply a local preacher, and occasionally filled the pulpit when the pastor was absent. His personal attention to all matters in the church was felt by everyone.

There are four children left as follows: Mrs. Anne G. Ashbrook, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Adelaide F. Welsh, of Middletown, Conn; Mrs. James R. Joy, Mrs. C. E. Horne, A. McGee and Walter M. McGee, of North Plainfield.

The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon next at 3 o'clock from Monroe Avenue church.

MR. NEWCORN RESIGNS

WILL HEREAFTER DEVOTE ALL HIS ENERGIES TO THE LAW.

During Four And a Half Years, He Has Tried 1,681 Civil and 400 Criminal Cases—Only Two Decisions Reversed.

Prominent among the justices of the peace who have officiated in this city has been the name of Justice William Newcorn. After a very successful career in that judicial capacity, Mr. Newcorn has now resigned from the office and will turn all his attention to his legal business.

November 22d Mr Newcorn sent in his resignation to Acting-Governor Watkins and it has since been accepted. Mr. Newcorn's record has been an excellent one During the four years and six months that he has held the office, he has tried 1 681 civil cases and about 400 criminal cases, Of all the civil cases he has tried, in only two has the decision been reversed. One was a trial by jury, where the decision was given by the jury and not the judge, and the other where the case was dismissed for lack of prosecution.

Mr. Newcorn decided to resign on account of the large increase in his legal practice, and also owing to the fact that, as a Justice, he is not allowed by law to practice in another Justice's court. As he has a number of law latter cases, he has heretofore been compelled to retain another lawyer to conduct the cases for him. Hereafter, however, he will look after all his own business.

Holiday Advantages.

Plainfield merchants were never better prepared to supply the holiday requirements of buyers than they are this year. It will be to your profit and pleasure to visit the stores of your own town, especially to see the magnificent display of furniture at Packer's, where many Christmas presents are being selected and reserved, to be delivered at just the time to please the buyer.

New Iron Bridge.

The Berlin Bridge Company has secured the contract to erect a bridge over Green brook on Union avenue, Bound Brook, and Wm. Ferrier, of New Market, has the contract for the mason work. The work was given out by the Boards of Freeholders of Somerset and Middlesex counties.

To Be Settled Out of Court.

The trouble between Harvey Drake and Frank Williams, which resulted in a suit at law between the two early this week, when Drake sued Williams in tort for the alleged disposing of a lot of tools and a couple of bicycles, will be settled out of court.

Can't Collect the Judgment.

Judgment was rendered by Justice Mosher Monday afternoon in the case in which Lee Clausen, of New York, against Charles Bullman. The defendant has left the city, however, so the judgment cannot be satisfied.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choir-tester of Grace church for November are: Harris Egan, Edwin Daniel, Raymond Cohen and Miss Eleanor Van Deventer.

COUNTY TROLLEY IS CONSTITUTIONAL.

Supreme Court's Important Decision Monday.

COUNTY LINE CAN BE BUILT.

EVERY POINT RAISED BY OBJECTORS NOT WELL TAKEN.

Justice Collins Says That the Squire Act Does Not Create a Special Class of Counties—Denial of Applications for Writs of Certiorari Removes All Bar to Kean's Company Starting Work.

Trenton, Dec. 6—The Supreme Court, in an opinion yesterday, declares the Squire Trolley Law to be constitutional, knocking out every point made by the objectors to the construction of a trolley on Westfield avenue, between Elizabeth and Plainfield. This will allow the Elizabeth City Horse Railroad Company, which is controlled by John Kean, to go ahead with the construction of the trolley.

The opinion filed was prepared by Justice Collins, and denies the application for writs of certiorari removing to the Supreme Court the proceedings taken under the act by the Union County Board of Freeholders. The application was made by Lindabury and Depue, representing property owners along the line of the proposed improvement. The refusal of the application for writs of certiorari is not reviewable by the Court of Errors.

The opinion goes into a lengthy argument of the matter. That statute was assailed as a special or local law regulating the internal affairs of counties, because in its second section it is enacted that nothing in the act shall be construed to authorize the construction of a street railroad on any public highway on which it is not lawful at present to authorize the construction of a street railroad. The claim was made that this restricted the operation of the act to public highways actually existing. Justice Collins says on this point:

"It is too plain to need argument that the act will operate on public highways hereafter opened under county control, or subjected to such control. The only limitation is on the power to authorize the construction of street railroads where it is not now lawful to authorize their construction. This limitation does not create a class of counties. All counties are equally affected by it."

Another of the points raised was that the statute, in providing for condemnation proceedings, directed the condemning commissioners to take into account the benefits conferred by the improvement on the remainder of any lot or tract of land partly taken. The court thinks this challenge premature. Miss Bronson, one of the complainants represented by Lindabury and Depue, is affected, however, but Justice Collins says:

"I would not, on the complaint of one lot owner, check so important a public work as that projected, even if I thought the objection debatable. If the grant of power to take a part of a lot in one ownership is unconstitutional, the act, except in that regard, is valid and the proceedings should not be hindered; while, on the other hand, the land owners cannot be injured by permitting them to go on, for any attempt to take such land, if power to do so be lacking, is simply futile. In a case like this, I would regulate the land owner to the defendant, at most, review the award. But I think such questions is not debatable in this court."

The resolution of the Union County Board of Freeholders authorizing the improvement was attacked because "it declares an intention to otherwise improve Westfield or North avenue without disclosing the nature of the improvement." On this point Justice Collins says:

"It will be time enough for such disclosure when steps shall be taken to effectuate the intention. The resolution affords the necessary support for the advertisement for proposals to construct and operate a street railroad."

The resolution was further attacked on the ground that it "does not give information of the matters to be stated in the propositions to be submitted thereunder."

Justice Collins says:

"This was not necessary. The statute expressly directs what shall be stated in the resolution, and its publication is all the notice required."

The fifth ground upon which the application for the writs was based was that the contract with the Elizabeth Horse Railroad Company was not good, as that company was without legislative authority to construct or operate a street railroad on Westfield, or North avenue outside of the city of Elizabeth. On this point the opinion says:

"Assuming this, and assuming that the act of 1888 does not supply that authority to any person or corporation contracting with the county, we cannot see that the applicants for this writ have any standing to impeach the contract.

"The county has ample power to provide for the construction of the railroad and if it does so by contract, even with a corporation having otherwise no authority to operate it, the railroad will not be a nuisance, and no private right of any land owner will be invaded."

Justice Collins concludes by saying: "In the case in hand it is evident that the contract with the railroad company is beneficial to the county and cannot lead to increased taxation."

Elizabeth, Dec. 6—The commission appointed to condemn land along the north side of Westfield avenue from Elizabeth to Cranford, for the purpose of building a county boulevard has completed its labors, and on Friday will make its report at the courthouse to Judge VanSyckel, Ex-Senator Frederick C. Marsh is chairman of the commission.

PARKS WIN AT HOME.

TOOK TWO OUT OF THREE FROM JERSEY CITY A. C.

The Scores on Both Sides Were Low—Parks Won In The Last Game By Old Time Finish

The Park Club rolled its first game on the home alleys Monday and won two out of three with the New Jersey Athletic Club team. Neither side did any particularly brilliant work and all the scores were low.

The first game went to the visitors after the Parks had led most of the way. In the last inning, the visitors started in with a small lead but rolled in poor form and the Parks were victorious by 4 pins. The Parks rolled a very poor game in the start of the third but made up in a superb finish and swept the alleys clean in the last three frames. They won out by 27 pins.

The individual scores were as follows

AN ENDEAVOR SOCIABLE.

Pleasant Affair Has Been Arranged by Sociable Committee.

The chairmen of the various social committees connected with the Christian Endeavor Societies of this city, met at the home of I. W. Travell, 815 College place, Saturday night, to complete the arrangements for the local union sociable, which is to be held Thursday evening in the Crescent Avenue church.

A pleasing programme is being arranged consisting of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, etc. In addition to this Mrs. A. Dassori, Italian missionary at Manhattan Temple, New York, will give a talk upon her work among the Italians of lower New York. At the close an offering will be received for the Italian children's Christmas. Mrs. Dassori was formerly Miss Collisnaw, of Mariners' Temple. Everitt Kimball has charge of the programme.

The public is invited to this sociable and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of this opportunity to renew their acquaintance with Mrs. Dassori and to come better acquainted with her work. At the close refreshments will be served.

DEATH OF JAMES NOLAN.

Superintendent of Hillside Cemetery Passes Away.

James Nolan, who for twelve years has been the superintendent of Hillside Cemetery, died Monday after an illness of pneumonia. He was 70 years of age and was a well educated man. He came to this city from Nyack, N Y, where he held a similar position. He was born in Ireland, and his profession was that of civil engineer. Mr Nolan had full charge of Hillside Cemetery and personally looked after the grading and care of the grounds, and was considered a valuable man. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from his late home at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside. Mr. Nolan leaves a wife, a married daughter and a son, who is also married.

LOCAL ATHLETES IN INDOOR COMPETITION

Opening of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic Contest.

CONTEST WAS FOR NOVICES.

ELEVEN COMPETITORS ENTERED THE TWO EVENTS SATURDAY NIGHT.

Ray Carroll and Berry Egan Carried off the Honors of the Evening—No Records Broken—Standing Broad Jump and Standing High Jump the Events Contested Saturday Night—The Winners

The athletic contest in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium opened Saturday evening with eleven candidates in the race for championship honors. The eleven young athletes made a exciting contest, however, and are expected will show up well. Other contestants will probably enter as the contest progresses.

The athletic contest has been divided into five sections of two events each, the events of each section to be contested on a Saturday evening. Saturday night saw the first section. The events were the standing broad jump and the standing high jump The eleven contestants entered Saturday evening were Berry Egan, Ray Carroll, J. Harry Green, Jr., Henry Brokaw, Walter Sampson, Walter Dreser, Edgar Sheppard, William Morgan, Henry Burgess, Albert B. Meredith, and Frank McDonald. C. E. A. Heywood, Walter L. Long and George Proctor Smith acted as judges.

In the standing broad jump, Ray Carroll was first with a jump of 8 feet, 5½ inches, A. B. Meredith was second, 8 feet, 3½ inches, Berry Egan third, 8 feet, 1 inches They were the only contestants that cleared over 8 feet. The association record was 9 feet, 1 inch, made last year by F. O. Bristol.

The winner of the standing high jump was Berry Egan clearing 4 feet. Ray Carroll was second an inch lower. Henry Brokaw was third with a jump of 3 feet, 9 inches. It is probable that both Egan and Carroll could have done better, but under the rules each contestant has but ten trials in all and may pass such heights as he thinks he can jump. Both Egan and Carroll, anxious to equal the association record of 4 feet, 2 inches, made by Ivan Hardingham last year, passed the intervening heights be tween their marks and the record height and tried unsuccessfully to clear it.

The contest began at 9 o'clock after the close of the regular evening classes and continued until 10 o'clock. There were a few spectators who witnessed it.

The schedule of athletic events in the association, including the completion of the novice athletic contest begun Saturday night, has been posted and is as follows:

December 17th, second section of novice athletic contest.

December 24th, third section of novice athletic contest.

January 7th, fourth section of novice athletic contest.

January 28th, last section of the novice athletic contest.

February 11th, gymnastic contest for novices.

February 29th, open pentathlon contest, three events.

March 11th, open club swinging contest.

March 20th, dumb bell contest open.

April 8th, bar bell contest, open.

The remaining events in the novice athletic contest will be contested in the following order: Three standing broad jumps; running high kick; standing hop, step and jump; quarter-mile run; fence vault; potato race; putting the shot; runnig high jump.

The points for the different contests will be scored according to a schedule prepared by Mr. Heywood for the merit of the performance rather than the order in which the contestants finish.

To Form a Scottish Order.

The men with Scotch blood in their veins were invited to meet in Red Men's Hall in the Washington Hall building on West Second street Saturday evening to organize a branch of the Order of the Scottish Clans here. A few men attended the meeting, which was only held for the purpose of finding out what was thought of the scheme, and if enough members can be secured a branch of the order will be located here.

Grand Deputy Murray, of Elizabeth, was present, and explained the objects of the order. The order has been nineteen years in existence and has at the present time clans in almost every State of the Union. One of the principle features of the order is to unite in one great benedcial body, Scotchmen and their descendants until the fourth generation, so that the sons and grandsons of Scotchmen born in this or any other country are quite eligible for membership. The ritualistic work of the order is good. The regalia is such as makes every Scotchman's heart throb and think of "Bonny Scotland." All those present signed the application sheet for a charter. The meeting adjourned after appointing committees to meet next Saturday evening at the residence of David Bowden, 225 Grant avenue.

SERMON TO YOUNG MEN.

Dr. Lewis Delivered Some Inspiring Thoughts at Hope Chapel.

The first of the series of special sermons to men, which are to be a feature of the Sunday evening services at Hope chapel during the month of December, was preached Sunday by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. There was but a handful there on account of the storm, but those few gathered together and listened to the sermon attentively. Dr. Lewis said in part:

"Christ was a man on earth and appreciated the comforts that man everywhere enjoys, although in heaven he is still able to take pleasure in things that we all delight in. Christ, as a boy, no doubt stayed at home and worked in his father's shop. As a man he mingled with the people of all classes, and his life was mainly spent with the everyday people. The great deeds of the world are done by the common people, and so Christ mingled with them.

"The church represents Christ, and just see what the church is doing. Does the saloon ever build a hospital like that one across the fields? That is Christianity. The saloon robs him of all his money and all his manhood, then pushes him out of the way. Heaven and Christ are not out of the way somewhere. He is right at hand ready to keep you and me."

CHARGED WITH ARSON.

Former Plainfielder Accused of Setting Dover Buildings on Fire.

Dover, Morris county, has had a heavy touch of incendiarism and Milton Barnes, a former resident of this place, is now confined in the jail at Morristown, awaiting the action of the Grand Jury, on suspicion of having had a great deal to do with the fires. These fires all occurred last week Monday night and involved considerable loss. In all there were six fires. Barnes is employed by the Thomas Iron Company at Dover, and is in the habit of drinking heavily. When he was arraigned for a hearing he protested his innocence. He admitted that he had been drinking freely. The examination of Barnes lasted for two days, and he was finally committed to the county jail.

A BRILLIANT TEA.

Mrs. George Wharton Edwards Entertained in Honor of a Guest.

One of the most prominent teas of the year was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, in honor of her guest, Mrs. Eaton A. Edwards, of Washington, D. C. A number of prominent society women of Plainfield were present.

The rooms were decorated in pink, a profusion of pink roses being scattered about. In the Flemish dining-room, where Mrs. Louis G. Timpson and Miss Grace Cooley presided, pink shades on the lights made a soft rosy glow that contrasted pleasantly with the gloomy day out-of-doors.

Truckman Was Burnt.

Last Saturday afternoon at the freighthouse a narrow escape from a painful accident was witnessed. Henry Wierenga, the expressman, was loading some freight on his truck, when he happened to notice smoke rising from the front part of the truck. He investigated and found that a great quantity of burlap was on fire. How it became ignited no one knew. Mr. Wierenga, in his endeavor to put the fire out, severely burned his hands and face. The truck was burned to some extent, but aside from that the damage was slight.

Goes to New York.

Nicholas Wolfinger, who has been manger of the soda water fountain of Randolph's pharmacy during the past summer, has resigned his position in this city and gone to New York where he will have charge of a cigar stand in the Washington Life Insurance Company building on Broadway. He will also have charge of a theatrical ticket agency. While in Plainfield, Mr. Wolfinger made many friends who wish him success in his new venture. He and his wife formerly boarded on Madison avenue.

Bible Day.

Bible day was observed at the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school Sunday afternoon with appropriate exercises. The superintendent read a few opening remarks, Miss F. G. Hawkins, the assistant superintendent, read something about the Baptist Publishing Society, and Miss May Thompson gave a recitation. Besides there was special singing. The collection went to the aid of the Baptist Publishing Society.

Issued Burial Permit.

Dr. Wagoner, of Somerville, county physician in Somerset county, went to Union Village Saturday and issued a burial permit for Mrs. Jackson, who died Friday. George Wall, the postmaster of New Providence township, will have nothing to do with Jackson and his family as he claims that they belong to Newark.

Repairing Hotel Grenada.

Work was started Friday to overhaul and repair the hotel Grenada which is now owned by Harry Campbell. A new roof is being put on the building and extensive repairs will be made throughout.

BOROUGH SETTLES WITH MR. SPENCER.

Much Involved Question of Tax Money Straightened Out.

BOROUGH IS PAID $94.05.

OTHER MATTERS OF FINANCE ALSO TRANSACTED.

W. J. Buttfield Asks to Have $500 Returned That He Loaned to Macadamize Rockview Avenue—E. S. Hooley Resigns as a Member of the Consolidation Commission—Other Business.

There was little business of importance transacted at the regular meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening, but owing to the fact that an executive session was held, it was late when the members concluded the business on the programme. During the executive session the following resolution was presented and adopted unanimously: "Resolved, That the Mayor and Clerk be and are hereby authorized to accept $94.05 from H. N. Spencer in payment of the items of taxes shown on the accompanying statement and receipt therefore."

This action virtually settles all difficulties between the borough and Mr. Spencer, and is considered as final settlement to which all interested parties have agreed. The other business considered is given below.

The report of Clerk Arnold showed that $1,936 44 had been paid county and State, leaving a cash balance of $608.06 He also reported $32 29 received from licenses and subscriptions for macadamizing.

Collector George F. Brown reported that to date $6 419.94 had been collected, and $41 30 as interest money from the County Collector, also $427 50 as license money from the same source. Mr. Brown reported a balance on hand to December 1st of $7 968 41

W. J. Buttfield, of Rockview avenue, asked the Council to return to him $500 money loaned in connection with the proposed macadamising of Rockview avenue. This money was loaned in anticipation of the collection of the money to macadamize the avenue, and was done as a guarantee of good faith. Failing to collect the whole amount Mr. Buttfield wants his money returned.

E. S. Hooley, as a member of the borough and city consolidation commission, resigned his position, owing to his inability to attend the meetings. Charles Bock, now resident of the borough, stated in a communication, that he had paid 1896-97 taxes on his property, under protest, as he is entitled to $500 exemption as an exempt fireman. He asked that the $500 be credited to him on his 1898 taxes. The matter was referred to the Borough Counsel for his opinion.

Mr. Rogers presented the report of the street committee for Mr. Woolston, who was absent from the meeting. The report shows that $305.75 was expended for street work, and $10.50 was received for dirt sold. The report also shows that it cost $391.40 to macadamize Summit avenue.

Mr. MacLaughlin offered several resolutions which provided for the settlement by the committee on assessments and taxation of several tax amounts, some of which were not collectable and some had been paid in part.

Mr. Rogers stated that on January 1st next the contract between the borough and the Plainfield Gas and Illuminating Company for five years would expire.

This matter was referred to the proper committee for due consideration.

Mr. MacLaughlin offered a resolution, providing for the return of $3 06 to Stephen Beeching, which amount was received in excess in payment of taxes. Resolutions were offered by Mr. Valiant providing for the drawing of warrants to meet a $3,100 note and two notes of $1,556.25, with interest, now due, also a resolution providing for the drawing of a warrant for $4.538 on account of the county tax. Still another resolution offered by Mr Valiant provided for the drawing of a warrant for $630 to pay the fire department's note now due. The last resolution offered by Mr. Valiant called for a loan of $6,500 for one month, to be charged to borough account.

Mr. MacLaughlin offered a resolution that after January 1st next that the borough collector allow 10 per cent interest instead of 12 per cent as is now the rule in the case of collection of taxes.

William N. Pangborn, who was present in the lobby, was given the privilege of the floor and he asked the Council to allow him $500 exemption this year for the fact that he is an old soldier. He stated that that amount had not been allowed, and that he was unable to be present when the Commissioners of Appeal met. As Mr. Pangborn did not comply with the law in stating his objection within the prescribed time, there was an adverse feeling in the matter. Mr. Pangborn stated that he would go to jail before he would pay the full amount.

BOY BURGLAR HELPED HIMSELF TO CLOTHING.

Visited Harry Werner's Establishment Sunday.

GAINED ENTRANCE THROUGH A BACK WINDOW.

The Thief Turned the Stock Over and Left Everything in Disorder—Mr. Werner Will Not be Able to Discover Exactly What Was Taken Until he Takes Account of Stock.

A youthful burglar plied his trade successfully Sunday evening in the clothing house of Harry Werner, on West Front street. He left his rubber coat behind and helped himself to the goods displayed in the show cases and on the counters. Just how much he took it will be impossible to say at present for there was a large stock on hand and it will be necessary to look it all over and discover what is missing.

As Charles DeGraw, the junior member of the firm of Putnam & DeGraw, who do business in the store next to that of Werner, was passing Werner's establishment last Sunday at 6 o'clock, he noticed the shades on the blinds in the rear of the store was open. During the day Mr. Werner had dropped in and looked at the fire. He did not light the gas in the rear of the store as is his usual custom. He went out early in the afternoon.

The unbidden guest, whoever he was, evidently called at dusk when the streets were empty. It was storming then and only those who had to braved the rain and wind. Entrance was gained through one of the back windows. Part of a broken wagon stick, painted yellow and black, was used as a lever to pry open the shutters. A bolt holds them, but the lever pried off the blind. There are eight panes of glass in the window, four in the upper sash and four in the lower. One of those in the lower left-hand corner of the lower sash was smashed and the glass removed. Through this opening the thief crawled. He made no effort to open the window.

This morning, Mr. Werner and his clerk, Mr. Lindman, unlocked the store together. They saw the open blind and proceeded to investigate. A glance showed that the usually orderly piles of overcoats and clothing had been upset and disarranged. Chaos reigned. The cases, where the hats were kept, had been left open and the contents scattered about the floor. Two of the show-cases were found open. In one was a choice array of neckties. The thief had tumbled them over to find just what he wanted, and had evidently taken his pick from the four-in-hands, the Ascots and the bow-knot ties. The other case contained jewelry, and the thief apparently selected a goodly supply of collar and cuff buttons, together with some shirt studs.

Some short trousers for very small boys were heaped about but it was impossible to tell whether any were missing or not. The thief passed over the expensive overcoats and helped himself to the cheaper ones. He was evidently particular about a good fit for those that did not suit him he slung about on the floor. Several suits met the same fate and were tossed about.

The cash drawer in the desk was broken open and some thirty cents in pennies removed. There was no attempt made to touch the safe which gives the impression that the burglar was evidently new at the art. Another thing that would give the same impression is the fact that the burglar left his rubber coat behind. It was found by Mr. Werner right in front of the store. It was apparently a boy's coat and would fit a lad of fifteen or sixteen years. This and the small entrance and exit lead the police to believe that the thief was a lad of fifteen or sixteen years. There was no other clue.

Mr. Werner cannot possibly give his loss until he figures up just what stock he had on hand. He believes, however, that several suits, an overcoat or two, a hat, neckties and jewelry are gone.

FUNERAL OF MRS. DAUX

Held Yesterday From the Home of Her Brother, W. W. Howland

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Kate H. Daux were held Saturday afternoon from the home of her brother, W. W. Howland, of Rockview avenue, Washington Park, and Rev. Dr. W. E. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, assisted by Rev. Dr. K. P. Kelsham, of Freeport, L. I., had charge. Both divines spoke words of comfort and consolation. The exemplary Christian life and character of the deceased was spoken of in tender words. During the service vocal selections were rendered by a quartette consisting of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Mrs. Robert Lowry, E. E. Runyon and D. E. Titsworth. The floral display was very beautiful and consisted of many set pieces. Interment was made yesterday at Tarrytown, N. Y., in a family plot.

WILD STEER LOOSE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Escaped From Newark Stock Yards a Month Ago.

HE WAS ONCE WOUNDED.

DRIVEN OUT OF THE WOODS BY PANGS OF HUNGER.

Stock Yard Man, Shot Him at Springfield—Trailed Him by the Blood on the Snow—Men Hunted Him on Horseback and in Sleighs—The Steer Has Gone Toward the Passaic Valley.

All New Providence is aroused. Men armed with rifles and shotguns have been scouring the surrounding country on horseback and in sleighs for the past few days. The pursuers are numbered by the dozen, the pursued is only one. Nevertheless he has managed to make his influence felt as far away as Newark, from whence he came. The cause of all this trouble and excitement is a steer that escaped near Newark nearly a month ago and has successfully hidden himself away until Thursday morning when hunger drove him into the haunts of civilization.

A month ago three steers broke away from the herd while being transferred from the cars to the Newark stock yards. They rushed down the street causing consternation everywhere. The stock yard authorities immediately sent a dozen men out on their track and two of the huge animals were shot before twenty-four hours were over.

The remaining steer, a magnificent specimen of his race, could not be found. He was traced to Springfield and there disappeared into the mountains and made his home in the fastness of the woodlands that cover the hillsides there. Two men were sent by the stock yard officials with orders to find and kill the steer no matter how long it took. They were also instructed to tell the farmers that whosoever shot the animal could keep the carcass.

The hunt was continued without cessation. Frequent traces were discovered, but the hunters could not get a glimpse of the wandering steer. He occasionally ventured into the open, but never stayed long enough to permit a shot. He lived on the moss and undergrowth in the woods. When the snow came the hunters went out as soon as the weather permitted sure that they would be able to locate him.

Thursday morning the animal entered the village of Springfield and trotted down the main street. It was evident that the pangs of hunger had driven him out of the woods. One of the hunters was in town at the time and hastily opened fire with his shot gun at the steer. Several of the shot struck the beast in the quarter and sent him scampering away. The stock yard man mounted a horse and went in pursuit.

The steer took a course toward Baltazrol hill and rushed over the golf links there. The horse was unable to keep up with the frightened bovine and the pursuer went back for his companions. The chase was then continued on horseback and in sleighs, the track of the steer being easy to follow from the drops of blood. The hunt was continued until 10 o'clock Thursday night and the trail followed as far as the Feltville pond. The hunters then desisted for the night.

In the morning it was found that the wild bovine had spent part of the night in the cornfield belonging to a farmer named Xeners, back of New Providence, and done considerable damage to the crop. The steer followed the roads closely but ran in the gutter leaving a plain trail.

The trail led to Berkley Heights and then to Union Village. After that the steer laid his course toward the Passaic valley. There were half a dozen men in pursuit, two were from the stock yard and the rest from that neighborhood, anxious to shoot the steer so as to possess his carcass. Among the latter was Samuel Clark, of New Providence, mounted on horseback and armed with a rifle.

TROUBLE OVER WHEELS.

Drake and Williams Took Their Troubles to the Courts.

Harvey Drake has brought an action, in Justice Mosher's court, against Frank Williams, in tort, for the recovery of $75 damages. The papers are returnable December 9th, and William Newcorn is Drake's attorney.

Drake formerly conducted a bicycle repair and renting shop on West Front street near Madison avenue. A short time ago he sold out the good will of the business to Frank Williams and left with him a number of tools and two bicycles. The wheels Williams was to rent, and he also had the privilege of using the tools.

A few days ago Drake went to Williams to claim the tools and the two wheels and take them away. Tools and wheels were not to be found, and Williams said he had sold the bicycles. Drake then brought this action for conversion against Williams.

DAMAGED BY THE WIND

A SMALL-SIZED HURRICANE VISITED THIS SECTION.

Wires Blown Down in This City—The Damage Here Not Great — Lincoln Suffers Considerably From the Gale.

A small-sized hurricane visited Plainfield last Sunday and wrought considerable damage. At times, the wind blew with the velocity of seventy miles an hour. The electric light wires suffered somewhat.

Crescent avenue and some of the lights on far West Front street were out all night. The lights in the business section went out several times, but the damage was repaired at once. One of the house circuits also gave out. The linemen tried to repair the damage that night, but were unable to find the break.

Some thirty lines of the telephone company were in trouble this morning. In some cases the wires were broken and in others the line was crossed with an electric light wire. The trunk line to Somerville was crossed with an electric light wire at Round Brook, but was in use again at noon. The other damage has been repaired.

At Lincoln some forty-five cedar trees on Cedar Lane were blown over by the storm. Six poles of the main line of the Western Union Telegraph Company were also blown over at the same place.

The heavy wind Sunday evening uprooted a large tree on East Third street, near the old oil cloth works. In the borough many fences and trees were blown over, but no great damage resulted. A few signs suffered and were scattered about, but the owners had little trouble in recovering them.

Owing to the storm last Sunday no service was held at the First Baptist church. The service was to have been held under the auspices of the Temple Builders Society, but this makes the second time postponement has been made on account of weather.

GONE TO HIS ETERNAL HOME.

Death of Hans Schultz, Who Expected to Go to His Native Heath.

Saturday last occurred the death of Hans Schultz, a well-known character about town. Mr. Schultz was 40 years of age and has lived in this State for seventeen years. While in this city he devoted his time to selling doormats, vegetables, etc. He was born in Denmark and has a brother living in that country now. He also has an uncle residing at Perth Amboy. Mr. Schultz lived with Mrs Frohne, a widow woman, at 423 West Third street. His death was due to kidney disease. His illness extends over a period of one year.

There was found in Mr. Schultz' clothes a letter from a steamship company in New York, which states that his brother in Denmark recently sent a sufficient amount of money to them to purchase a ticket for his return to his home, and it is believed that he expected to sail for home at an early date. This letter was received a short time before he was taken ill.

TOOK REFUGE IN SWAMP.

The Wild Steer is Still at Large, Having Escaped His Pursuers.

The wild steer is still at large, despite the efforts of the stockyard men and the residents of Somerset county. He left the precincts of that county Saturday and betook himself to the Great Swamp, back of Long Hill, where his hunters cannot enter. The steer went across the Passaic Valley Saturday with the hunters in close pursuit. Somehow he managed to evade them and reached the boundaries of the swamp. In it he plunged and has not been seen since. The swamp is impassible for men and horses and it will be with difficulty that the steer will be able to make his way through it.

A SECOND LOSS.

E. M. French & Co., Had Insured Barn and Contents That Were Burned.

The loss on the barn in the rear of John Reid's house, at Netherwood, which was destroyed by fire Friday night, was covered by insurance which was held by E. M. French & Co. The barn was owned by the First National Bank, and was insured for $1,000. J. B. Guttridge held $500 insurance on the contents through the same company. The barn is a total loss, but most of the contents were saved.

E. M. French & Co. had just settled up a loss of $35 as the result of the last fire at the same place, when some incendiary tried then to set fire to the building.

Royal Arcanum Officers.

The annual election of officers in Greenbrook Council, Royal Arcanum, was held at the meeting Thursday evening. It resulted as follows: Regent, Charles F. Fulmer; vice-regent, R. B. VanArsdale; past regent, W. F. Oliver; orator, E. T. Brokow; secretary, A. A. Robinson; collector, L. B. Stillman; treasurer, Harry Coward; chaplain, Charles F. Wilson; warden, Frank L. Cobb; sentry, J. M. Higgins; guide, A. F. Runyon.

—John H. Tier desires The Daily Press to state that he will not allow skating on his pond, and he warns all persons from trespassing.

FIRE BUGS WERE SUCCESSFUL AT LAST.

After Many Attempts They Destroyed Reid's Barn.

THE HORSES WERE SAVED.

RESCUERS WERE TOO BUSY TO SEND IN ALARM.

Robt. Guttridge Saw the Illumination and Sent in an Alarm—Department Had to Plough Through Mud and Slush—When They Arrived the Barn Was Gone—Loss Does Not Fall on Reid.

John Reid has enemies. Friday they succeeded in doing what they have been trying to do for several months, burn down the barn in the rear of his residence on Leland avenue. Reid is the proprietor of a brickyard on Leland avenue, near Berkeley avenue. Last year his house close by burnt down but has since been rebuilt. He doesn't live there anymore, however. His home is on West Front street and one of the employes at the brickyard lives in the house as care-taker.

Fred I. Smith lives opposite. Shortly after 8:30 o'clock last evening Mrs. Smith looked out of the front window of her home. She saw the flames shooting out of the door to the hay loft in the barn opposite. She screamed fire.

There is a little settlement at the corner of Leland and Berkeley avenues. Besides Mr. Smith, there are the houses of James E. Guttridge, David Hand and Henry Hand. They were all aroused by the screams of "fire" and hurried to the scene of the conflagration. When they arrived the interior of the barn was nearly all ablaze. The barn is composed of a basement and two stories. The first story is of brick and the second of frame construction. The fire evidently started in the second story where the hay was stored.

It was with great difficulty that the two horses in the basement could be brought out. Then the rescuers went for the wagons. They dashed into the flames and dragged forth two wagons. The fire, however, consumed the regaling one with a quantity of harness. There were also two of the rescuers that none could be spared to send in an alarm.

They had been working at it for nearly twenty minutes when they heard the sonorous tones of the fire-alarm. Robert Guttridge, of South avenue, had seen the illumination and sent in an alarm from box 36, corner of South and Woodland avenues.

Just seven minutes after the first blow sounded Chief Doane's wagon reached the fire. The two hose wagons soon came behind. They came down South to Leland avenue and had to plough through a foot of mud and slush. But for the precaution of Chief Doane to put two horses to each hose wagon, they never would have reached the place. The truck would have been stranded in the mud.

The fire was nearly burned out and little was left. As the wind was blowing away from the house and brickyard sheds, the fire was allowed to burn itself out. The nearest hydrant was 1,500 feet away. The department had nothing to do and depended on horse-power as soon as it was evident that their services were not needed.

There is not the slightest doubt that the fire was of incendiary origin although there is no absolute proof to that effect. Twice before in the last thirty days, the barn has been discovered all ablaze. Before that, there were several other attempts made. Reid had some trouble with several of the Italian laborers employed about the brickyard and the suspicion points toward them.

The loss will not affect Reid in the slightest. The house and barn are owned by the First National Bank of this city. The barn is valued at $900 which was fully covered by insurance. The contents, horses, wagons and harness, were the property of J. B. Guttridge and were only used by Reid. The loss to Mr. Guttridge is in the neighborhood of $50, which is covered by insurance.

Combined Business With Pleasure.

There was a regular business meeting and social of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church last Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Runyon, of Arlington avenue. Mrs. W. S. Lowry, president of the society, was in charge, and the first half of the evening was devoted to a general committee conference, in which work for the winter months was planned. The last half of the evening was devoted to transacting routine business, after which refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed by all.

Rode the Goat.

John H. VanWinkle, Jr., of Duer street, a student at the University of New York, was initiated Saturday evening into the mysteries of Phi Delta Phi, a legal fraternal order of the colleges. After the initiation a banquet was served at the St. Dennis Hotel.

PLAINFIELD BOYS PLAY BASKET BALL.

Second Match for Local Y. M. C. A. Campionship.

THE B TEAM WON GAME.

THEY PLAYED WELL AND WON BY SCORE OF 14 TO 2.

The B Boys Have Now Won Two Games and Lost None—Lively Struggle Between Regular Team Men on Opposite Sides—Knew Each Others Tactics—Other Boys Did Well—The Line up.

The second match for the basket ball championship of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. was played last Friday in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The team known as the B team found no difficulty in defeating their antagonists of the C team by a score of 14 to 2.

Both teams are composed of members of the association with two of the first team on each to coach the others and give them the benefit of their training in the game. The captains were George Proctor Smith, of B, and Walter L. Long, of C. Both played centre for their respective teams and it was a struggle from start to finish between them. Knowing each others tactics so well, it made their playing particularly interesting.

Of course, it was to be expected that the other boys would not put up quite as brilliant a game as the regular players. The contest was a hot one, however, and it was very evident that the association has plenty of good material in it aside from the regular team, that only needs development to bring it right to the front. Of the new players, Roy Radford and Fred Overton particularly distinguished themselves, and played a hot, snappy game from start to close.

For the first five minutes neither side showed any superiority and the score stood 2 to 2. Then the B boys began to improve. Max Moraller seemed to be everywhere at once and played a remarkably pretty game. Fred Bonny followed him closely and gave Max a lively time of it.

The passing was fair and goal throwing, except on the part of Moraller, not particularly accurate. Of the new men, Radford and Overton showed the most aptitude in team play, which was probably owing to the fact that they had more practice in that work than the rest. At the end of the first half the score stood 8 to 2. In the second half C braced up on the defensive game, but was unable to score at all. The teams lined up as follows:

"B."	"C."
M. Moraller	right forward
Stall rd	left forward
Smith	centre
Motsenbocker	right guard
Overton	left guard

A PRAISE SERVICE.

Interesting Meeting Held by Young Woman's Mission Band.

The Young Woman's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held an interesting praise service in the lecture room of the church Friday afternoon. The programme, consisting of responsive readings, songs, etc., was one prepared by the Woman's Executive Committee Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church of America, and was adopted for the meeting by a committee from the Mission Band. Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, president of the Mission Band, was in charge and conducted the service. A report was read during the meeting by Miss Emma Gilliem telling something of the anniversary exercises of the Woman's Board of Domestic Missions which was held in New York a short time ago. Another feature was the vocal solo, given by Miss Blanche Fellows during the offertory.

"FROM SUNSET RIDGE."

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's New Volume of Poems to be Issued.

The many personal friends of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, of Boston, and friends of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, will be interested in the announcement made by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., in their holiday calendar, that Mrs Howe has gathered a volume of her poems under the suggestive title of "From Sunset Ridge." The book notice says of this volume that it may be regarded as her poetic legacy to mankind. It opens with her majestic "Battle Hymn of the Republic," followed by poems previously published and many not before included in any book.

Surprised on His Birthday.

Six-year old Joseph Walls, of Essex street, was treated to a surprise party yesterday afternoon, it being his birthday. The surprise was arranged by Miss Hattie Walls and Willie Little, and all had a very pleasant time. Refreshments were served about 5 o'clock. Those present were the Misses Jessie Chamberlain, Anna Gillan Violet Prosser, Hattie Walls, Willie Little, Harry Little, John Bishop, Willie Chamberlain, Harry Romsberg, Garry Keating and Joseph Walls.

CHATTED AND SIPPED TEA

AND INCIDENTALLY ASSISTED TREASURY OF WOMAN'S EXCHANGE.

Guild Room of Grace P. E. Church Tastefully Decorated for the Affair—Mrs. G. T. Waring Gave a Talk.

The guild room of Grace P. E. church was the centre of attraction Thursday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, when the members of the Plainfield Woman's Exchange gave a social tea and sale of cakes, fancy articles and dainties. The rooms were prettily arranged for the event, and during the appointed hours there was a large attendance of members and friends of the exchange.

Tea was served during the after noon and those who poured were Mrs Hugh Hastings, Mrs. Frank Bushnell and Mrs. Thomas Minford. They were assisted by Miss Stephanie Krom, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Lizzie VanBoskerck, Miss Minnie Wood and Miss Clara Finley as waitresses.

Mrs. Howard Tracy had charge of the fancy work and she was assisted by several members of the exchange. The department of dainties were in charge of Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, assisted by Miss Yerkes, Miss Bolce and Mrs. Craig A Marsh.

Those present availed themselves of the opportunity to purchase articles and thus help the excellent work of the exchange along. During the afternoon, the president, Mrs. G. T. Waring, gave an informal talk of the work of the exchange for the past six months, and a report of the money received from all sources was read as follows:

Fancy work, $339 36; preserves, $43 63; pies, cakes and bread, $1,706.06; maple syrup, $2,50; consignors' tickets, $26 80; employment bureau, $1.80; trip tickets, $82.40; telephone, $7.90; package sales, $12.65; ice cream, $3.20; commission from a member, 82 cents. Total amount received from all sources, $2,212.10.

This report is considered to be an excellent one, inasmuch as it represents the dullest part of the year, February 1st to August 31st. The sales in the fancy work department during the past four months have doubled the figures given above, and in the other departments greater things are expected. There are now 78 members in the exchange and about 63 consignors. The management want it distinctly understood that every consignor is a person who is worthy and needs the revenue received from contributing to the exchange. Commencing December 9th and continuing for three weeks there will be a Christmas sale, and the patronage of the Plainfield people is solicited.

SOCIABLE AT PARSONAGE.

Members of Ladies' Aid Society Entertained Congregation of M. E. Church.

There was a gathering of the congregation of the M. E. church at the parsonage on Central avenue last Thursday at the sociable given by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. The rooms of the parsonage were crowded with old and young and a delightful evening was passed.

A programme was rendered during the evening and was much enjoyed It opened with a vocal solo by Mrs. E. T. Douglass. Then followed a violin solo by Clarence Mills, accompanied by Miss Gertrude Sharp. Miss Susie Warner read several selections from the works of Eugene Field. After another solo by Mrs. E T. Douglass, it was announced that J. W. Jackson would give a solo and the audience was requested to join heartily in the chorus. It proved only a novel manner of asking for a collection, but was effective and a goodly sum was taken. Charles H. Lyman acted as master-of-ceremonies.

The affair was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass, chairman; Mrs. D. E. Davis, Mrs. H. Whitney, Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. L. M. Freidel and Miss Susie Jackson.

REFORM CLUB ELECTION.

Determination to Conduct Club Affairs on Better Business Basis.

The annual meeting of the Reform Club was held Tuesday at which officers were elected as follows for the coming year: President, William C. Mansley; first vice-president, M. F. Smith; first vice-president, M. Michael Armstrong; recording secretary, J. Q Miles; financial secretary, B. W. Hand; treasurer, J. D. Spicer.

Mr. Spicer, who was elected treasurer, agreed to accept the office if the affairs could be conducted hereafter in a systematic, business-like way.

There was a discussion about renting out the hall to different organizations. Mr. Smith said that $1 a meeting was just what it cost the club to heat and light the hall, and that they couldn't afford to rent it out for a cent less than that sum.

The new officers will be installed in office at the next monthly meeting, which will be held the first Thursday in January. At that time the executive and auditing committees will be appointed.

MANY BRAVES JOIN MIANTONOMO TRIBE

One Hundred and Fifteen Young Men Adopted.

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN.

GREAT GATHERING OF RED MEN AT MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT.

There Were so Many Candidates That the Adopted Degree Could Not be Worked on Them All—Two Were Selected and the Ceremonies Worked on Them—A Collation Followed Addresses.

Friday was a memorable one in the history of the Red Men of Plainfield. Miantonomo Tribe held a meeting at which it nearly doubled its membership. One hundred and twenty five pale-faces were entitled to become wild and woolly Red Men and one hundred and fifteen of that number were present and were converted into braves accomplished through the ministrations of the mighty chieftains of the tribe in question. Altogether it was a great event.

Four weeks ago at a meeting of the Miantonomo Tribe, two great chieftains of the Indian fraternity rated the members soundly for their slowness in bringing new recruits into the ranks. They were Grand Junior Sagamore Newcorn and Senior Sagamore Nash, of the Paughnaughcaughsinque Tribe. As a result, the members decided to make an extraordinary effort, the results of which have already been seen.

To attract many to the order, the rule regarding the initiation fee was suspended to all who were 35 years or younger. So the increase is composed of all who are under that age and most of them between 21 and 30 years of age.

The increase is the largest ever made at one meeting in the history of the order in New Jersey. There are few other fraternal orders in the State, if any, who can boast of such a record.

It was simply impossible to perform the adoption ceremonies on all the candidates, so two were selected from among the many who volunteered, and the regular adoption team went through the work with characteristic thoroughness and excellence.

The adoption degree team was composed of the following: Sachem, William A. Westphal; senior sagamore, Joseph Johnson; junior sagamore, David C. Allen; prophet, Andrew J. Stiglitz; first sannap, Joseph Neuman; second sannap, John Green; first scout, Charles Holdstein; second scout, George Houseman; first warrior, William Staats; second warrior, Fred Sauden; third warrior, Harry Dreier; fourth warrior, Louis Alpaugh; first brave, Robert Slorah; second brave, David Morning; third brave, Charles Fulmer; fourth brave, Edward Vall; guard of the wigwam, N. C. Magus; chief medicine man and rain-maker, William Newcorn; assistants to the chief medicine man and rain maker, Peter C. Blimm and John Cashman.

In addition to the candidates, there were over 150 Red Men present from the home tribe and from Paughcaughnaughsinque and Indianola tribes. After the adoption ceremonies, a collation was served by Mine Host Spiegel. Then came addresses by Great Sagamore Smyth, of Long Branch, Great Junior Sagamore William Newcorn and Senior Sagamore V. W. Nash.

Columbia Lodge Elects.

At the meeting of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., Friday, two new members were initiated, and two propositions for membership received. The election of officers was held in which the following were elected: Past master workman, Henry Nischwitz; master workman, R. V. Kinney; foreman, Fred C. Lounsbury; overseer, Robert Meeker; recorder, V. W. Nash; guide, Peter VanFleet; inside watchman, William F. Slater; outside watchman, N. Koller; trustee Oliver R. Pearson, Jr.; medical examiners, Dr. J. H. Carman, Dr. T. S. Davis and Dr. D. C. Adams; delegates to grand lodge, Henry Nischwitz and E. M. Laing; alternates, J. W. A. Bauersachs and G. T. Dunham.

Nominations Made.

A meeting of the Catholic Benevolent Legion was held Thursday Nominations were made for the officers which will be held next month. As only one set were nominated, they will, in all probability be elected.

The nominations were: President, Henry Lutz; vice-president, William Harding; secretary, Jerry Moore; treasurer, Hugh McDonald; collector, Andrew Nolan; marshal, P. Sullivan; guard, Edward Kelly; trustees, Father Smyth, P. Whalen and P. Nugent.

Interred in this City.

Miss Carrie Green, aged nineteen years, only daughter of the late Frank Green, died last Wednesday at her home on ninety eighth street, New York. The remains were brought to this city Friday afternoon and were interred in the North Plainfield cemetery.

HIGH SCHOOL IMPROVED.

STUDY OF LATIN TO BE STARTED EARLIER.

Will Be Taught in First Grammar Grade—Class Started This Week by Mr. Meredith—A Coming Improvement.

The Plainfield public schools have long been pointed out through the State as being among the best of which Jersey can boast. A high standard is maintained here and every effort is made to constantly improve the present system. Another notable improvement was tried for the first time Wednesday.

According to modern school methods, it has been found very advantageous to take up the study of Latin early in the course of the public school pupil as being of particular advantage to him or her in connection with their other studies. Heretofore Latin has been first taught at the Plainfield High School in the Fourth class, or first year in the High School. A class has now been started among the members of the first grade below the High School, commonly known as the First Grammar or High School preparatory. Wednesday morning, Mr. Meredith, one of the High School instructors, gave a class of thirty their first instruction in the subject. The class is composed of those who intend to enter the High School next year and take up the classical or general course.

At present, plain geometry is only taught in the Senior year. Solid geometry and trigonometry have not been taken up. In the modern High School course, both of the latter subjects are considered part of the regular instruction and it will probably only be a matter of a few months before a change is made in the Plainfield High School circulum and these two subjects added. Geometry will then be started at an earlier point in the course.

HERO OF EL CANEY HERE

CAPTAIN EDWARDS, OF THE 25TH INFANTRY, VISITING IN PLAINFIELD.

Captain and Mrs Edwards are the Guests of Mr. and Mrs George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin Place—Was Wounded.

Plainfield is particularly honored in having as a visitor one of the heros of the charge at El Caney in the recent war with Spain. Captain Eaton A. Edwards, of the Twenty-fifth U. S. Infantry, arrived in Plainfield Thursday afternoon in company with his wife. They are now the guests of Captain Edwards' brother, George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, the well known artist-author, where they will remain for sometime. The Captain is now on sick leave.

Captain Edwards is a veteran of the Civil War. He was wounded and left for dead at the Battle of the Wilderness. A companion carried him off the field and he finally recovered When the war was over, he stood high in the volunteer army. With many other officers he accepted a commission as an close of hostilities and went into the regular army.

When the war with Spain broke out, Captain Edwards was stationed at Fort Missoula in the west. His regiment was immediately ordered to the front. He went to Tampa and remained there until July when he sailed with his regiment for Cuba. He took part in the attack on Santiago and was at the head of his company when they took part in the famous charge up San Juan Hill. When they reached the trenches he sprung on the top, only to fall, shot through the thigh with a Mauser bullet. He was carried to the field hospital by his men and remained there until the Olivette made its first trip back. He was taken on board the Olivette to the hospital at Fortress Monroe.

Recovering from the effects of his wound he went to Washington where his wife was ill with typhoid fever. She has now recovered and they will visit in this city for a time. Captain Edwards' original three months' leave of absence has been extended. At its close he will return to duty at Fort Grant.

As a man, Captain Edwards is exceedingly modest, but as brave as a lion, knowing no fear and no regard for personal danger when on the field of battle, He is very popular with the men of his company.

Pleasant Event.

A pleasant event in the history of the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church was the entertainment and social of last Friday held in the church. An excellent time was a large attendance of the members and their friends, and a profitable and interesting time was had by all. The entertainment consisted of phonograph selections given by George Voehl, piano solos by Miss May Conroy, readings by Miss Lizzie Hoagland, and a vocal solo by Mrs Gardner, wife of the pastor of the church.

Dr. Carroll Talked.

Rev. Dr. H. K Carroll, commissioner to Porto Rico, gave a fine address Sunday afternoon before the scholars and teachers of Grace M. E. church Sunday school. He talked about his trip to Porto Rico and related many interesting incidents.

OUR LOCAL CANADA A MANY-SIDED SUBJECT.

Discussion About Consolidating City and Borough.

BOARD OF TRADE FATHERS IT

BUT THEY ARE UNABLE TO GET A QUORUM OF COMMITTEEMEN.

An Informal Meeting Held in the Board of Trade Rooms Thursday—Former Mayors Gilbert and Saunders Believe in Making the Consolidation Even if the County Lines are Not Changed.

An attempt was made last Thursday to hold a meeting of the joint committees from this city and the borough who have under consideration the subject of annexing the two places, but the attempt failed on account of there not being a quorum present. Messrs. Alex. Gilbert, Charles A. Reed, Wm. L. Saunders and Editor Harry C. Runyon, together with Lewer Harry C. Runyon, comprised a list of those present, and when it was learned that nothing definite could be done, a discussion of annexation was indulged in, during which many suggestions were offered whereby it was thought that the desired result could be brought about.

This idea was evident, as a result of the discussion, that annexation is a thing that has a political phase to it. There is an opinion among the commuter element of the city and borough that if the two places should be annexed they would then be able to control the politics of the place.

It was stated that annexation could only be brought about properly by having the county lines changed by the Legislature. Those present who favored annexation without a change of the lines gave out the impression that the arrangement would be so unpleasant to the majority that the Legislature would be beseiged with petitions to change the lines.

It was said that with annexation accomplished and no change of county lines, the affairs of the city and the borough would be carried on exactly as they are now. All cases of appeal in legal matters across the brook would go to Somerville as they do now, and from this city they would go to Elizabeth as at present. No claim could then be made for a district court.

If Plainfield should go to North Plainfield it is likely that Somerville would make a big kick, for it would mean a loss of power to that county seat, and then again they are afraid that they would lose the county seat. The consolidation was accomplished It is proposed to have three wards across the brook and five wards in this city. Some of these wards would have to extend across the brook to give satisfaction. If they did not there would be constant friction as to representation.

One thing in favor of annexation for Plainfield is that it would give this city a bigger representation in county politics.

Good Goods, Well Advertised.

Going the rounds of the press is an item stating that the Royal Baking Powder Company is the largest advertiser in America. Of course, the business would make be an enormous one to justify so great an expenditure in publicity. There is no fallacy more dangerous than that success can be gained by advertising an article of indifferent merit. But, given an article of the highest quality like Royal Baking Powder, which when the housekeeper has once used abandons it she desires the best food she cannot do without, then the greatest measure of success is attained by bringing it continually before public. Great merit and good advertising are both essential to make a product a great success. The Royal Baking Powder possessing the first, its proprietors have wisely used the second, and the result is apparent throughout the land. The Royal company believe that there is no medium for advertising like the newspapers, also in these enlightened days everybody reads them.

Scenes of the Cuban War.

H. Theordore Chamberlain gave a series of stereoptican views on the the Cuban and Civil wats Thursday in Washington Hall, under the auspices of Martha Washington Council. No 23, D. of A. Mrs. Tillie S. Biker was chairman of the entertainment committee, which was a successful one The views were first class and to be enjoyed by the audience very much The prize, consisting of a $2.50 gold piece to be given to the one holding the lucky admission ticket, was won by Mrs. Fred G. Walsh, the lucky number being 112. After the entertainment was over a dance was indulged in.

The Very Latest.

Popular opinion tends toward the belief that the latest American movement is in the direction of the Philippines, but Plainfielders will find the very latest American movement in gold and silver watches at Collier's, and the prices thereof will surprise any and every seeker after bargains in holiday testimonials. Call at 103 Park avenue and be convinced.

MAY NOT GO TO CUBA.

THIRD REGIMENT MAKES PREPARATIONS FOR A WINTER CAMP.

It is Reported That the Next Move of the Third Will be Back to New Jersey to be Mustered Out of Service.

The Third New Jersey is still at Camp Haskell, Athens, Ga., and information from there indicates that there will not be an early start for Cuba. The winter preparations for the camp have not ceased, and there is a rumor that there is to be a change in the brigade arrangements.

It is quite probable that the next move of the Third will be back to Jersey to be mustered out. News from Washington is to the effect that the Administration has decided to send as few volunteers as possible to Cuba in the near future, the hope being that Congress will promptly act on the President's forthcoming recommendation for a large increase of the regular army. If favorable legislation is passed very soon, it is probable that none of the volunteer regiments now in the service will be sent to do garrison duty in Cuba. The troops first to be sent to Cuba will be composed largely of regular regiments so far as they are available. Plans are maturing for the muster out of as many volunteers now in service as is possible.

The demand of the enlisted men to go home and leave the service is growing greater every day. This is true in nearly every garrison, and the arrival of Senators and Representatives with requests for the muster out of regiments or men in the regiments has largely increased in the last three days.

MAYOR WOULDN'T BE JOLLIED.

Disorderly Prisoner's Complimentary Remarks Not Appreciated.

James Wilkinson, a man of respectable appearance, was arrested Friday on North avenue by Chief Grant charged with being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language. The man was held until 5 o'clock last Friday when he was given a hearing before Mayor Fisk. Wilkinson pleaded guilty, telling the court that he was a Christian man, and one that always traveled in the best of society. He stated that he had come to Plainfield to see about buying a piece of property upon which to build. His wife had heard that Plainfield was a healthy place, and they wanted to move here. Mayor Fisk told the stranger that such as he were not wanted in Plainfield if they could not keep straight, and he then imposed a fine of $10 or twenty days in the county jail. The man paid the fine and was glad to get away, promising not to come here again.

BEEF COMPANY WINS.

Sustained the Case as Presented by Murphy & Blats.

Justice Mosher handed down his decision yesterday in the case of the Union Beef Company against Mrs. Henry Ruppert. Mrs. Ruppert ordered by the Beef Company for about $125 for meat. Murphy & Blats represented the plaintiffs and Codington & Swackhamer appeared for the defendant. Their defense was that Mrs. Ruppert was not responsible for the bill, as her husband carries on the business. The plaintiffs claimed that they charged the meat to Mrs. Ruppert because they would not give credit to her husband, who then asked them to trust his wife. Justice Mosher sustained Murphy & Blats.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The following resolutions have been adopted by Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M:

Summerhurst Nominations.

At a meeting of the Gossing and Turn Verein, held last evening in Sassenerhund Hall, nominations for officers were made. There were several candidates for each office and the nominations will be left open until the first Thursday in January, at which time the election will take place. It was decided at the meeting to give a concert during the latter part of next April, also a children's festival in the hall Christmas afternoon at 4 o'clock On New Year's, Monday evening, there will be a dance in the hall for members and their families only.

Relief Association Thankful.

The Relief Association gratefully acknowledges the many generous donations sent to the rooms for Thanksgiving, enabling the association to give out sixty-nine dinners.

ILLNESS AND HUNGER AWAIT THEIR VICTIMS.

The First Was the Mother Who Died Thursday.

THEY LIVE IN A COTTAGE.

IT WAS OBTAINED THROUGH KINDNESS OF MR. NIXDORF.

Father and Three Children Are Very Ill—Exposure and Lack of Proper Nourishment the Cause—Neighbors Have Been Kind to Them—No Physician—Roads Impassable With Snow.

The moon's silvery radiance lights up the scene. There, surrounded on every hand by the undulating plain of snow, stands a little cottage looking dark and grim against the whiteness of the surrounding landscape. There is no sound save the rattling of the bare limbs of the great oaks not far away. Out through the queer panes of glass in the window, some are missing and the opening left has been filled with paper and rags, looks a man with pale and haggard face. He is Lemuel Jackson, who has made a hard fight against sickness and starvation. It has been a hard struggle and he is slowing losing ground. But for his neighbors, Jackson and his loved ones would have fallen victims long ago. Thursday, his wife gave up the fight and passed away.

Jackson once lived in New Providence. While never wealthy nor anything approaching it, he had enough to live on, and when he married a fair country maid his prospects were bright. Things have changed lately, Jackson's prospects lost their brightness. He began to sink deeper and deeper into the horrors of poverty. Illness came and he could not work.

George N. Nixdorf, the overseer of the roads in Morris county, who is also a man of kindly nature, had charge of a small farm near Union Village and gave Jackson permission last summer to live in the little farmhouse. Jackson moved his family, which consisted of his wife and three small children, into the house, which is really only a small cottage of a few rooms. It answered the purpose, however, and protected Jackson and his little ones from the fury of the elements.

Even with a roof to shelter their heads, the Jackson family were little better off and the gaunt spectre began to haunt the place once more. Then the neighboring farmers came in. While many of them had little to spare, they gave willingly what they could and drove away hunger. Something to eat and something to wear were left there and Jackson continued the battle. Another kindly hearted old man brought a load of wood for the use of the unfortunates.

Now, however, the crisis of it all is at hand and Jackson's thin face has assumed a look of dispair. He is so ill that he is nearly able to move about. Exposure and lack of proper food and raiment is the cause. The three little children, they look more like living skeletons than human beings, are also ill. They are too young to aid the father even if they could.

Mrs. Jackson has been ill for many weeks. Of late she grew rapidly worse. There was little in the surroundings to aid her in battling against disease and weakness. The neighbors saw that she was beyond what simple remedies they had to offer. A physician was needed badly. Then came the blizzard that blocked all the roads in that vicinity. None of the neighboring physicians could reach her on account of the drifts in the road that made them impassable. It was with difficulty that any of the interested neighbors could reach the place.

Another appeal was made for a physician, but without success. Thursday the dying mother breathed her last. Weaker and weaker every day. The poormaster of New Providence township was appealed to and today he will take Jackson and his children in charge. They will probably be conveyed to the poorhouse, where they can be cared for better than at their present home.

The slight cough may soon become deep-seated and hard to cure. Do not let it settle on the lungs.

Think! Has there been consumption in your family?

Scott's Emulsion is Cod-liver oil with hypophosphites. These are the best remedies for a cough.

Scott's Emulsion has saved thousands who, neglecting the cough, would have drifted on until past hope. It warms, soothes, strengthens and invigorates.

Board of Education Grants Petition of the Scholars—Teachers to Decide When Pupils May Receive Callers.

It looked at first as if there would not be a quorum present at the Board of Education meeting Monday, Mr. Abbott being the only member there. But Dr. J. B. Fobasco and Dr. Jenkins came in afterward and the meeting was called to order. This was Dr. Jenkins' last meeting, as his term expires January 1st.

There was very little to be done at the meeting except to settle accounts. Taxes to the amount of $3,179.99 have been collected during the past month with interest, $48.48, making a total of $3,228.47.

Professor Maxson presented a claim from the Dunellen school board for tuition for one pupil. Professor Maxson explained that this pupil lived so near the borough line that it was easier to send her there than to compel her to walk all the way to the Plainfield school.

Professor Maxson also said that the teachers were annoyed frequently by parents, guardians and friends, who called at the door or over the telephone to see pupils. A resolution was passed that no pupil be allowed to answer these calls unless the teacher deems them necessary.

Professor Maxson also stated that there were three young ladies from the State Normal School who were here getting practical knowledge from the teachers as to how to conduct a class.

The board then went into executive session, at which one of the items of business transacted was to grant to the pupils of the Whittier building one session a day, just as is done in the High School. Only eight pupils voted against this change out of about 155.

TRIP THROUGH WHITE'S STORE.

It is Especially Attractive at This Season of the Year

The opening of the holiday season at White's is always an important event, but this year it is doubly so. In the front of the store are ten large plate glass show-cases filled with fine silver novelties and many other things. The front section on the right is devoted to toys. It's a regular paradise for the children. On the right is the men's department which is filled with handsome ties, handkerchiefs, shirts, etc. In the centre is located the pictures, fancy albums, dolls, gloves, umbrellas and stationery.

The entire rear of the store is devoted to fancy china, lamps, vases, cups and saucers, and lots of useful and ornamental articles; on the left are the more useful gifts, dress goods, silks, wash goods, linen vests. A trip on the elevator to the second floor and you see beautiful skirts, coats, capes, suits and silk waists. On the third floor are the rugs, blankets, carpets, lace curtains, portierres and etc.

Few at the Patriotic Service.

Only a few persons gathered at Washington Hall last Sunday to attend the patriotic service. Rev. B. W. Hand was to have delivered a patriotic sermon, but at the suggestion of all present the meeting was postponed for one week. It will be held next Sunday evening at the same place and time.

VICTORS IN BASKET BALL

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. EASILY DEFEATED NEW BRUNSWICK TEAM.

The Game Played in Plainfield—First Contest for the Victors—Poor Goal Throwing by the Plainfield Boys.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basket ball players found an easy mark in the team from the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. last Monday. The game was played in the gymnasium of the local association and the home team was victorious by a score of 38 to 7. It was the first game for the visitors and, considering that fact, they played very well. In team work they were far outclassed. The score would have been undoubtedly larger had the local team thrown goals with their usual accuracy. The score was 19 to 3 at the close of the first half. In the second, the visitors gained confidence and played better. The lineup was as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		NEW BRUNSWICK.
R. Mosher	right forward	Premo
E. Guy, Carroll	forward	Baker
Egan	centre, homp on Mosher	Mc.
M. Wheeler	first guard	Becker
Smith	last guard	Wood

Score—Plainfield, 38; New Brunswick, 7. Goals from the floor—E. M. Fuller (6), Guy, Carroll, Egan (4), Smith (5), Baker (4), Goals from fouls—Smith (3). Referee—Plainfield, 2; New Brunswick, 5. Referee—George Fuller. Umpires—John B. Dunn and C. E. A. Hopwood. Timekeeper—Mr. Cutting.

DEATH OF A DUNELLEN CITIZEN.

Isaac W. Laing Finally Succumbs to the Ravages of Consumption.

Dunellen, Dec. 6—The residents of this place were deeply grieved last evening to learn of the death of Isaac W. Laing, for several years one of the most popular and honored citizens. Mr. Laing's death was due to consumption. His illness extended over a period of three years and for the past two years he was out of business. He was employed by Mr. Robinson, the wholesale druggist of Greenwich street, New York. He gave up his place two years ago in March and went to Denver, Col., for his health. He remained there until last summer, when his condition was such that it was deemed best that he should return home.

Mr Laing was the son of the late Smith W. and Phoebe Randolph Laing. He was born in August thirty years ago at South Plainfield, and nearly all of his life has been spent in this vicinity. He was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, of this place, and tomorrow evening a service will be held at the late home to which only the members of the Foresters are invited. Rev. A. I. Martine will officiate. On Thursday morning at 11 o'clock a service will be held in the Friends' Meeting-house on Watchung avenue, Plainfield, and interment will be in Hillside Cemetery.

He leaves a wife and a sister, Mrs. George VanNest. His father died about four years ago. A number of relatives reside in Plainfield.

Little Folks the Guests

A birthday party was given Monday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock by Helen Marie Ross, of Coddington avenue. The little tot was four years old. There were about fifteen little folks present, and everyone joined heartily in the festivities of the occasion. The young hostess received many nice presents as remembrances of the event. Before the guests left for their homes refreshments were served to all.

GWYNETTE'S BARN BURNED TO GROUND.

Fire Was Not Discovered Until Too Late.

COW AND GOAT BURNED.

ALARM SENT IN FROM FIRE-ALARM BOX NO. 28.

Firemen Had to Lay in a Line 1,900 Feet Long—Saved an Adjoining Hennery—Total Loss Will Amount to Over $1,000—Barn Owned by Alfred Singer, of New York—Other Losses.

Another barn in the Netherwood district went up in flames last Monday. Anastatius Gwynette was the sufferer this time. He resides at 1135 East Front street, corner of Leland avenue.

Last Monday Gwynette drove down town and left the rest of the family at home. It was about 10 o'clock when his mother heard a horse and buggy come up the street at a rapid pace and turn in toward the barn. Then all was silent. She supposed it was her son returning. A few minutes later the horse and buggy were driven away. Some twenty minutes later the occupants of the house discovered the barn all ablaze.

Adolph Carman, of No. 2 Engine Company, lives on Netherwood avenue. He saw the blazing barn and hastened to box 28, corner of Woodland and South avenues, where he found Patrolman Saunders. At 10:25 o'clock they sent in an alarm although the fire was on the other side of town. Just after their alarm was sent in, someone else sent in an alarm from box 18, corner of East Front street and Netherwood avenue.

The apparatus responded with alacrity, but went to box 28 and had to cross to the other side of town. When they arrived, the roof of the barn had fallen in and forced out the sides. The back still remained standing. Behind it was a large hennery. The firemen laid in a line of hose 1,900 feet long from the nearest hydrant and saved the hennery, which was the only building threatened by the burning barn. The barn was beyond control when first discovered.

The structure was a well-made two story frame building. The loft was filled with hay. On the ground floor was a cow and a pet goat, both of which were burned to death. In one of the rooms was a very complete set of horsemen's materials, including harness, boots, blankets and the like. Mr. Gwynette is a horse trainer.

The house and barn is owned by Alfred Singer, of New York, and has only recently been occupied by the Gwynette's who formerly resided on Prospect avenue. The barn is a total loss, which will amount to $600. The loss in the contents of the barn, the property of Mr. Gwynette, will amount to $400. Both barn and contents were partially insured.

The fire department officials believe that the fire started from the stove in the barn. Mrs. Gwynette is inclined to think that it was the work of incendiaries.

CASE OF MURDERER ROESEL.

United States Supreme Court to Be Asked to Advance the Hearing.

Elizabeth, Dec. 7—Prosecutor N. C. J. English, of Union county appeared Monday in the United States Supreme Court at Washington and served notice through the court on Lawyer Frank Bergen, counsel for Louis Roesel, the condemned murderer of Farmer James C. Pitts, of Summit, that on Monday, December 19th, the Prosecutor would make a motion in the United States court that the hearing on the appeal be advanced on the calendar.

As the matter now stands, the case of the regular course would not be reached for several months. Prosecutor English's object is to expedite matters and have Roesel's fate definitely settled by the court of final resort. The Prosecutor hopes the court will grant his motion. Should it refuse, the condemned man will have a respite of nearly a year.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Some of the advantages of having only one session in the public schools, as now prevails in the Stillman and the Whittier schools, are thus presented.

1—The attendance of the school has been better. 2—The work of many pupils has improved 3—It has enabled those students that wished to do their home work in the afternoon by daylight, leaving the evening free. 4—In some cases it has permitted out-of-door exercise that was needed. 5—In many cases it has made it possible for pupils to return in the afternoon and get needed help from the teacher.

On the other hand it will be a disadvantage to many mothers; 1—Because the pupils will not get home to dinner until 1:15 or 1:30 2—Because they must get breakfast early, to reach school at 8:20.

A TROLLEY FRANCHISE.

ITS PROVISIONS ARE EXPLAINED TO THE COUNCILMEN.

Franchise to Expire in 99 Years—Will be Adjusted in 50 and 75 Years—Company Agrees to Other New Concessions.

After the Common Council meeting last Monday, the Councilmen were invited to a conference of the street committee to hear just exactly what was being done regarding the proposed franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway for the Scotch Plains extension. Friday, the Councilmen will be called on to vote on the application and so the street committee wanted them to think it over before acting.

The Daily Press told at the time of the conference between the street committee and the officials of the Plainfield Street Railway, arranged though the transportation committee of the Board of Trade. The synopsis of the ordinance then agreed to was brought to the attention of all the Councilmen.

The proposed ordinance is to last for a period of ninety years. At the end of fifty years, however, commissioners are to be appointed by the city and the street railroad company, who are to select another commissioner, and the three are to settle on new terms equitable to both sides. A similar plan is to be followed twenty-five years after that time and new arrangements made. Then, when the ninety-nine years are up, the franchise will expire entirely.

The trolley company has expressed its willingness to run a branch out Arlington avenue, and across to the Hillside links and the Driving Park, if the necessary consents are furnished, and also has agreed to connect with the Metuchen line should it be built. One of the provisions of the provisions of the proposed ordinance is that the trolley company shall allow another company to run over its lines on Richmond street. The other terms are similar to those of the former franchise, which was withdrawn before it was acted on.

QUEER LITERARY CHAP.

CHARACTERISTICS OF NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE DWELT UPON.

The Fifth Lecture in the University Extension Series Delivered Tuesday by Prof. Albert H. Smyth, of Philadelphia.

The apostle of the weird, Nathaniel Hawthorne, formed the subject of the University Extension lecture delivered Tuesday in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, by Albert H Smyth, of Philadelphia. This lecture was the fifth in the course on American literature, and was exceedingly interesting, conveying much information in a popular and entertaining way.

Hawthorne's family relations and his early surroundings were first described by Mr. Smyth. His recluse habits, remaining indoors during the day at his writing, and issuing forth at night for a solitary prowl; his early writings and his first publication, "Fanshawe," which he afterwards tried to suppress, were also dwelt upon. The great romancer early showed a taste for the marvellous; his home, "The Wayside," he especially recommended itself to him because a man had lived there who believed he should never die. An odd episode in Hawthorne's life was that of Brook Farm, when that little company lived their almost monastic life together, doing the daily work of the farmstead, studying Greek and writing poetry.

Hawthorne's acquaintance with and admiration for Emerson's show for us in "The Great Stone Face." The writing of "Scarlet Letter" was described and the author's view of it given. Hawthorne's later years and his mature work also received attention. This lecture on "The Ghost of New England," as someone has called the representative American author, closed with a careful, clear and sympathetic estimate of the man as a writer. Hawthorne's thoughts turned towards the right side of human nature; it was a gift to him that he could not write a sunshiny book. A selection, "The Divine Romance" was also read by Mr Smyth, showing the smooth construction and easy dialogue. The usual conversation class followed the lecture, during which Mr. Smyth recommended to the university extension students a number of books relating to Hawthorne.

There will be only one more lecture in the American literature course. It will be given Tuesday of next week and will have as its subject, "Lowell and American Culture."

Petit Jurors Chosen

The following petit jurors from this city were drawn at Elizabeth Tuesday for the January term by Sheriff Kirk: Edward J. Galbraith, F. H. Clarkson, Alfred J. Littell, William H. Abbott and John H. THE CITY ELECTION.

of Dr. Richards and B. Frank Corlell, who were scratched on some 20 ballots. One man was challenged on account of his age.

Both parties had their workers in the field, but the G. O. P. ites were in the majority and kept things busy.

THIRD WARD, 2D DISTRICT.

Citizens' Candidates All Run Ahead of Their Ticket, C. C. Burnet Doing Best.

Things were very very quiet in the Second district of the Third ward. There were 111 ballots cast which was a good showing there. Of that number 72 were Republicans and 39 Citizens'. All the Citizens' candidates ran ahead of their ticket, C. C. Burnet doing the best. Dr. Richards suffered correspondingly on the Republican ticket.

FOURTH WARD, 1st DISTRICT.

Vote Not as Large, by Four as That at State Election in November.

For some reason, the vote in the First district of the Fourth ward was not as large by 4 as the vote at the State election last November. There was another surprise, the Republicans carried the district by 13 votes and Rockefellow received a majority of 14 over Lounsbury. Councilman William N Runyon ran best on the Republican ticket being accorded a majority of 46 over his Citizen opponent. C. C Burnet and Peter V. Weaver, the Citizen candidates for constable, was the only ones of the ticket to lead their opponents.

The election was very quiet although there were many workers at the polls. A large crowd watched the counting

FOURTH WARD, 2d DISTRICT

Smith the Only Republican Candidate to Get a Majority.

The excitement over the election in the second district of the Fourth ward reached a high pitch. Both sides had out workers and everybody that passed had to run a gauntlet of them. The vote was heavy, 377, of which one was rejected. The Citizens' ticket led by some 70 votes. Runyon partially overcame that lead. Davis was scratched many times and so Smith managed to carry the district by 29 votes.

When the count was made the polling place was visited by several of the Republican leaders who were refused admission. This district was the last to complete its count, the old method of tallying being used.

FOURTH WARD, 3d DISTRICT.

Republicans and Citizens Broke Even with 155 Votes Each.

Honors were equally divided in the Third District of the Fourth Ward, of the 315 ballots, of which 5 were rejected, the Republicans had 155 and the Citizens 155. Runyon and Smith both ran somewhat ahead of their ticket.

There was no trouble at the polling place during the day, although both parties worked actively all the time the polls were open.

CELEBRATING THE VICTORY.

Drum Corps and New Brooms Played a Prominent Part in it.

As soon as it was assured that the Republican party was victorious all over the city, preparations were made to celebrate the victory in hearty fashion. An immense bonfire was soon roaring away in the centre of Park avenue, just south of the railroad bridge. Anything combustible was quietly hid away to add to the blaze. The light from the fire illuminated all the surrounding neighborhood and soon attracted a large crowd.

John Keeley started to take up a collection among the politicians in the City Clerk's office to get a drum corps or band. A sufficient sum was speedily raised and some of the local drummers and fifers roused out. With the drum corps at the head of the procession it started along Park avenue, stopping at Demarest & Son's grocery. There some fifty new brooms were distributed among the paraders and were soon waving in the air.

The procession of cheering and enthusiastic Republicans made a tour of the city and returned to Park avenue and Second street. A few words were said and all the candidates cheered. Then some of the adventuresome ones seized hold of the night lunch wagon and gave its proprietor a ride. The wagon was pulled around on Park avenue and then up North avenue to the station. After a time it was again hauled back to its old place.

Rubber Rollers are Used for Crushing the Grapes to Make Speer's Port, Burgundy, Claret and Other Wines.

Which, as is well known, rival the world in excellence, for invalids and aged persons, and are made from the Oporto grape grown on vines imported from Portugal forty years ago. The soil of northern New Jersey, containing iron, is just suited for them. Mr. Speer, however, uses the improved way of mashing the grapes. He employs large rollers of rubber run by an engine which crush grapes at the rate of a barrel a minute. Speer's Wines, especially the Port and Burgundy now in market, are of very old vintage, and have no superior. Physicians far and near prescribe them for weakly females and aged persons. They are blood-making, adding iron to the system, and tend to prolong life. Extensively used at parties, weddings and general family use. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS AND GROCERS WHO DEAL IN WINES.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put upon the form of a lozenge and distributed among the poor."

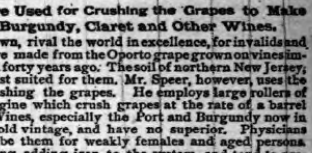
Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily papers, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."



An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had been employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time lobotized no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and find myself saving of $2 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two ladies who especially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued, "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules, as one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be so greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style package containing FIVE RIPANS TABULES packed in a box is now for sale by druggists generally throughout the United States and Canada, at the low price of FIVE CENTS. This low price is for the purpose of placing the Tabules within the reach of all. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (5 Tabules each) can be had by mail by sending fifty cents (the price of the regular size package) to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce street, New York. Ripans Tabules may also be had of some druggists, generally in the vest pocket nickel nickel-plated case, containing one dozen packages.

OLD NEGRO WANTED A NIGHT'S LODGING.

Took Possession of Chas. Johnson's Kitchen.

COULDN'T PUT HIM OUT.

HE FIRST VISITED WILL DEMLER'S STORE AT WASHINGTONVILLE.

The Old Maker of Baskets Had Partaken Too Freely—Wanted a Warm Place to Sleep—Gained Access to Johnson's Kitchen—Thrown Out by the Neighbors in the Morning.

When the youth of Washingtonville venture out at night now they go armed. It is all the result of a visitation by an old colored man last Thursday evening. He thought he owned the village for the evening. The result is that every suspicious looking bush is carefully scanned and dark places on the roads are frequented as seldom as possible.

For several months there has been an old negro of middle age who has visited Washingtonville at times trying to sell wicker baskets that he made himself. He met with fair success and seemed quite inoffensive.

Last Thursday evening the old negro partook too freely of the far famed "Jersey" lightning. He wandered into Demler's store and was put out by the proprietor. Then he went around to the back door of Mr. Demler's house and had lain down before the fire when he was discovered and forcibly ejected.

Armed with a lighted lantern and one heavy fur glove, that came from nobody knows where, the aged colored wanderer took the road to Martinsville, stopping at every farm house to demand shelter for the night. He caused a fright in several households but was turned away.

At the home of Charles Johnson only Mrs. Johnson and her young son were at home. They were sitting in the front room. The negro found the back door unlocked, walked in and made himself at home before the kitchen stove. There Mrs. Johnson found him later snoring soundly. All the efforts of her and her son to arouse him were unavailing and they were compelled to leave the negro there for the night. They took his lantern and glove and threw them outdoors. Then they awaited his awakening with fear and trembling.

In the morning the colored wanderer awoke and demanded his lantern and glove. At length he grew abusive and Mrs. Johnson summoned the neighbors. The old man was unceremoniously turned out and disappeared down the road. No signs have been seen of him about Washingtonville, although everybody was on the lookout.

ALERTS TO DISBAND.

Their Famous Silver Carriage to go to the Exempts.

It is the intention of the members of Alert Hose Company to disband at an early date and turn their silver hose carriage over to the Exempt Firemen's Association. They will probably sell their horses and the carriage to the city. This association of firemen has been one of the most aggressive in the history of Plainfield, and their work has been of the faithful and hard kind. For sometime past the company has been talking of disbanding, and it is believed that such action will be taken at no far distant day.

Leak in Sewer Pipes Repaired.

Street Commissioner Gavett's men have ceased digging up the sewer trenches on Richmond street, during the cold snap, looking for leaks in the sewer pipes, but will resume the work as soon as a warm spell comes. So far the men have found no cracks in the pipes but a few little openings in the mortar have allowed a little of the sewerage to escape. The leaks have been repaired as soon as they were discovered.

Money Came Too Late.

The case of Rev. Joseph B. Jennings, formerly pastor of Grace church, Westfield, was recalled Saturday by the inquiry of a Baltimore firm concerning his whereabouts. According to the provisions of a will of a college friend, made many years ago, when Mr. Jennings first entered the ministry, he was left a small legacy. Jennings died some time ago in a New York hospital in extreme poverty.

WOULD IMPRISON WIFE.

AT TWENTY-FOUR SHE IS A CONFIRMED DRUNKARD.

Husband Wanted Her Committed to Jail—Judge Stillman Advised Him Be Taking to Some Private Institution.

There was no City Court Wednesday. That was owing to the fact that City Judge Stillman is a humane as well as a just judge. A man appeared before the Judge Wednesday and wished to make some arrangement whereby his wife might be committed to the county jail.

This man is a skilled machinist living in the western part of the city. He draws large wages and has a comfortable little home. His wife, who is twenty-four years of age, and three small children compose his family. The reason for his apparent inhuman wish to send his wife to jail is a sorrowful one. The woman, though bright and pretty, is a confirmed victim of intemperance. Despite the husband's best efforts, the wife still remains a habitual drunkard.

Wishing to place her beyond the reach of drink and remove such an awful example from the sight of his young children, the husband thought of the county jail as the only remedy.

Judge Stillman refused to entertain any complaint in the case. Instead he advised the husband to place his wife in some proper institution of which there are many in the country. To send her to jail, he said, would ruin her morally. The man finally decided to take the Judge's advice.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. VanDyke Entertain Their Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, of East Front street, provided a pleasant time for a number of their friends at their home Tuesday evening. The occasion was partly in honor of the celebration of Mr. VanDyke's birthday, which occurred Saturday last, and partly from a desire to entertain a few of their friends in an informal manner. The home was beautified through an arrangement of evergreen and choice flowers, while a pleasing effect was obtained in the use of basquet lamps that were placed in the parlor, reception and dining rooms. The prevailing color was green.

The host and hostess received their guests in a hospitable manner. The absence of formality was a feature. During the evening the guests were entertained with vocal and instrumental music. A piano duet by Miss Mary VanEps and Lawyer Robert M. Clark was a feature of the evening. The performers were showered with congratulations and were compelled to respond to the hearty encore received.

Other pleasing features were the vocal solos by Miss Etta Krymer and Robert M. Clark, and the piano solos by Arthur Titsworth, all of which received cordial applause.

After the rendition of the informal programme, the guests were served with refreshments by the host and hostess. It was late when the guests departed, but they all expressed their kind wishes to Mr. and Mrs. VanDyke for the enjoyable evening given them.

Intoxicated Woman.

Tuesday afternoon a well dressed woman, who name cannot be learned, was found on East Front street in an intoxicated condition. It was at first thought that she had slipped on the ice and thus caused her fall, but after she was assisted into a nearby house and examined, it was learned that she had been drinking. The people in whose house she was taken did all they could to make the woman appear respectable, and they then started her on her journey. She soon disappeared from sight. No one seemed to know the woman was.

Needs of Children's Home.

The Children's Home now quarters twenty-five children, eleven girls and fourteen boys from ten to thirteen years of age. They are in need of shoes and rubbers, gingham, unbleached muslin, colored blankets, umbrellas, handkerchiefs, gloves and mittens. For the dining rooms, plated teaspoons, knives and forks. Toys and books are always thankfully received at this season of the year.

Mrs. M. E Kimball,
President.

School Opens To-day

The new school of shorthand, typewriting and bookkeeping will open in the Babcock building today. Instruction in a modern, rapid, light-line system of stenography that can be learned in three months. Special rates to students who register before January 1st.

—Officers will be elected at the meeting of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., Friday evening.

IN WHICH COUNTY WAS DROBNEY KILLED?

Judge Collins Charged Middlesex Grand Jury in Case.

BOTH COUNTIES TO INDICT.

THE CRIME WAS COMMITTED CLOSE TO THE COUNTY LINE.

All Now Hinges on the True Boundary Line—Streets Changed in Course—Dort Line Change With It?—Trial Will Probably Take Place in Middlesex—Streeter and Spencer Accused.

New Brunswick, December 14.—The principal feature of importance in the opening of the Middlesex county court here yesterday was the charging of the Grand Jury in the Drobney murder case. Warren Streeter and Joseph Spencer, of Somerville, stand accused of the capital crime. The fact that nobody is exactly sure as to the county in which the crime was committed, makes the case one of unusual interest.

Judge Collins presided at court and one of his important duties was to charge the Grand Jury in the case. There were other cases of less importance.

The murdered man was stabbed in the neck in a quarrel that was the culmination of a row in a saloon on the outskirts of Bound Brook, but in Middlesex county, near the county line. The fatal quarrel was at the end of a bridge spanning a brook that is accepted as the county line dividing Middlesex and Somerset. The trail of blood showed that the stab had been given in Middlesex county, but that Drobeny had staggered across the bridge and several hundred feet further on, in Somerset county, before he fell. His body was found there the next day.

About 10 years after the passage of the act fixing the boundary line at the brook a railroad was built, the brook changed its course to the present one and the question was presented whether the old or the new course should be the real boundary. The question gave excitement to a strip lying between the old and new courses of the brook. It was within this strip that the wound was inflicted and the man died.

As a solution of the problems the authorities of the two counties have decided to indict the men in both counties. Upon the indictments thus found the accused men will be tried, the place of trial being selected by the Circuit Judges of the counties, Justice Magie, of Somerset, and Justice Collins, of Middlesex. It is probable that the trial will take place in Middlesex.

DR. CARROLL IN GOOD COMPANY.

Will Sail to Porto Rico With Six Girls Filled With Love.

Dr. Carroll, of the borough, commissioner to Porto Rico, will sail for the latter place December 21st on the steamer Obdam. On the same steamer there will be a party of six young women from the south who, under the care of a chaperone, will go to Porto Rico to see their sweethearts, whom they have not seen since the war began. The chaperone, a wealthy woman, pays all expense of the trip, and the understanding is that not one of the young women are to get married while away. They propose to eat their Christmas dinner in company with their intended husbands.

Attractions at Church Bazaar.

Among the attractions at the bazaar to be held at Grace M. E. church today and Friday evenings will be Mrs. George Sauns, violin solos; John H. Carney, in original German dialect; Edson C. Martin, tenor solos; City Judge Wm. N. Runyon, in comic vocal selections, and Miss Elizabeth May Loveland, of Elizabeth, a talented and charming elocutionist, will entertain with a number of selections.

More Dangerous Than Football.

Raymond A. McGee, of Orchard avenue, Washington Park, met with a peculiar accident several days ago. He is now a student at Yale University. He was standing on a mantelpiece in his room at college hanging a flag when the mantel suddenly gave way. He cut a deep gash in his nose and another in his forehead, which necessitated several stitches being taken in the wounds.

Women and Modern Industries.

Women's participation in modern industries is rapidly on the growth, and though she has not technically entered the cut-ball industry, she's an artist in manicuring, and you can't touch her heart more effectively than by presenting her with a dainty manicure set such as are always on hand at Colliers.

THE SHOPPERS' DELIGHT.

WHAT CAN BE SEEN IN A TOUR THROUGH LOCAL STORES.

A Wealth of Everything That Will Make Suitable Christmas Gifts—Goods Shown at White's, VanEmburgh's and Lederer's.

As the holiday season draws near the stores grow livelier, and just now there is a what and a where on every tongue. It is "what shall I buy," and "where shall I get it?"

A quick solution of the problem is to be found at the store of Edward White. Every department, floor and counter seems to try to outdo the other, and the display is worthy of hours of special study. The stock shows a year's work of search, care and hard thought to get together such a collection of toys, fancy novelties in sterling, hand-painted goods, pictures, bric-a-brac, leather goods, perfumery, and a thousand and one other items that can't be mentioned.

The toy department is worthy of special mention as the entire line has been imported directly from the manufacturers, and this accounts for the low prices for which they are selling. The collection of dolls on hand is very fine. Then there are pictures, photograph albums, handkerchiefs, men's furnishings, with its assortment of mufflers, ties, hosiery, gloves, shirts and bath robes.

On the second floor is an assortment of furs, jackets, capes and dressing sacques, all of which make useful presents. On the third floor are the rugs, lace curtains and carpets. On the second floor you will find the reception room and reading room, with a woman in attendance to look after the children while you are busy with your shopping. In all it is as complete as a store can be, and with the seventy-five clerks and saleswomen in attendance you are sure of quick and polite service.

VanEmburg & Son claim to carry a different stock of goods from any other similiar merchant in the city. Their goods are all new and are not only as neat as can be got, but the prices are lower than the lowest. This first year in business proves on the quality of their goods, giving as much as is consistent for the money.

A look at their show window induces one to step inside, and to look around at the display. On the first floor the line of fancy goods, gentlemen's furnishings, dress goods, are all here. Some of their fancy goods are worthy of mention. There are collar and cuff boxes, kodac picture frames, pretty celluloid boxes and cases, toilet sets, dressing cases, and in fact everything to please shoppers. Down stairs the toy department is complete, and is in charge of competent clerks. No one can mistake the place, for the American flag waves over the store.

Lederer's store is compact as possible. The moment one enters he is struck with the holiday appearance on all sides. Heavy arches of evergreen are suspended from wall to wall, and Japanese lanterns, covering the electric lights, make a soft light when they are lighted.

Lederer's specialty is fancy goods of all descriptions, and he has a fine stock on hand. Hand painted goods predominate, and these are in glass ware, on celluloid and on wood. Another special line is their handkerchiefs, both ladies' and gentlemen's. Everything is up to date in style, and the prices are right. Another line of goods that attracts considerable attention is the sterling silver novelties, a great many of which are being used this year for Christmas gifts, and which may be seen here in endless array.

Downstairs are the toys. A great stock of wagons and sleds has been laid in, and these are selling fast. All the merchants have laid in a complete stock of holiday goods this year in anticipation of a large trade, and they are realizing their expectations. Every day brings an increase in business, and next week, the busy week, promises to be the busiest time among the storekeepers that has come in several years.

Dr. Gunsaulus' Lecture.

One of the leaders on the lecture platform of the country, Dr. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, will deliver a lecture in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church this evening. His subject will be "Savonarola." Dr. Gutsaulus has been frequently mentioned as a fit successor to Henry Ward Beecher and Dr. Lyman Abbott at the Plymouth church, Brooklyn.

Mr. Brown's Flattering Offer.

Charles B. Brown, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Jersey City, who was in Plainfield yesterday, stated that he had received a very flattering call to the Y. M. C. A. work at St. Louis. He has this week to make up his mind in the matter. The officers of the Jersey City Association are very anxious to have Mr. Brown remain with them.

JOHN KEAN AIMS TO PREVENT SURPRISES.

Republican Assemblymen Will Caucus Tomorrow.

MAY VOTE ON SENATORSHIP.

IN DOING THIS OPPOSITION TO KEAN WOULD BE STIFLED.

Disquieting Rumors Have Been Floating Around to the Effect That Influential Men Might Try to Knobble the Union County Man Out of the Senatorial Prize—Watkins for Speaker.

Trenton, Dec. 14.—In view of the fact that the Republican members of the Assembly will hold a caucus tomorrow, few politicians were at the State House yesterday. Those who were on hand discussed the project of the early caucus with a great deal of interest, because it has been the custom of legislative majorities to defer their caucuses until the evening before the organization. The reason given for the earlier gathering is that it will prevent much of the confusion and annoyance of that famous "night before."

It is claimed that the members are for weeks harassed by the seekers for the offices within the gift of the lawmakers, and that these places might just as well be agreed upon at an early conference as to wait until the night before organization. It is also claimed that the early caucus will settle the speakership, so that officer may have his committees all arranged on the first day of the session, and this will expedite business.

No shadow of a doubt is expressed as to the re-election of Acting Governor Watkins to the speakership for another term, and it is probable that he will have arranged his committees in time to proceed with business immediately after the organization of the Assembly.

These are some of the reasons given out for the unusual gathering of Assemblymen. On the quiet, however, it is whispered that a test vote will be taken on the United States Senatorship because of a fear in some quarters that delays are dangerous to the interests of John Kean, the heir apparent to the Senatorship. Recently there have been disquieting rumors afloat to the effect that influential men were opposed to the election of Mr. Kean. These rumors could be traced to the authority of no State leader and Mr. Kean's lieutenants say there is nothing in them, because his will be the only Republican name before the party caucus, and he will be the party's unanimous choice. Still, there would seem to be some more powerful reason than the mere placing of the office-seekers and the arrangement of committees for the early caucus.

PLEASANTLY SURPRISED.

Miss Schierenbeck's Friends Came in Unexpected to Her.

Miss Evelyn Schierenbeck, of Terrill road, was tendered a pleasant surprise party at her home last Tuesday. The affair was arranged by Miss Annie Manning and George Terry, of Fanwood. At an early hour the guests assembled at the home of Mrs. Ritchie, and, accompanied by her, they proceeded to the home of Miss Schierenbeck. The young woman was not expecting company, when about thirty-five of her friends walked into her home. Everyone joined heartily in the celebration and an evening of dancing and games were enjoyed, and at midnight refreshments were served. It was early this morning when the guests departed, but they promised to call again.

Musical Entertainment.

Fred and Stewart Pope, of West Fifth street, entertained a few friends in a musical way at their home last Tuesday. The singing of Frank Oakfair and the banjo selections of Fletcher Hallock were particularly pleasing. The others present were Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Doane, Miss Edith Randolph, Joseph Sattelle, Martin Korff, Thad Doane, Jr., Hervey Doane, Dyckman Wickler and Mr. Hyman.

To Talk of Silk Mill.

There will be a special meeting of the Board of Trade this evening when a report will be made concerning the trip of a committee to Paterson to investigate into the advisability of organizing a silk mill company in this city. A full attendance of every member is desired.

—The anniversary of Monroe Avenue church will be celebrated January 8th.

—The hot coffee served at Armstrong's soda fountain, made fresh while you wait, is a delicious drink.

A DANGEROUS RUNAWAY

HAND'S EXPRESS TEAM RAN IN A WILD MANNER.

Were Standing in Front of the North Avenue Station When They Started—A Wonder That Someone Wasn't Hurt.

Persons who happened to be in the business centre of the city at about noon yesterday witnessed an exciting runaway of the heavy draught horses used on one of Hand & Son's carting trucks. The team was standing in front of the North Avenue station while the truck was being loaded with trunks belonging to the "What Happened to Jones" Company.

In some way the team became frightened and started down the avenue toward Park avenue. By the time the latter thoroughfare was reached the horses were traveling at a high rate of speed. The swing around the corner made people standing near hold their breath. At the corner a trunk went off, and on Park avenue, between Second and Front streets, several other trunks left the flying procession.

At the corner of Front street and Park avenue, the team made such a wide turn that it could not escape a collision with the trolley pole in front of Shaw's drug store. The force of the collision snapped the pole at the base, but fortunately the horses were not injured. One of the team lost nearly all of his harness, but aside from the fact that the horses were well-winded they escaped injury. The heavy truck stood the racket well and was none the worse for the run.

When the team collided with the pole they were taken in charge and held until the owner arrived. The possibility of the team colliding with a trolley car brought feelings of horror to people in the vicinity of the accident, for such an accident would have resulted most disastrously.

PRINCETON CLUB TO DINE.

Annual Affair to be Held at Elizabeth This Year.

The annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Union county will be given at the Elizabeth Town and Country Club this evening at 7 o'clock. Chief Justice Wm. J. Magie, president of the club, will preside and act as toastmaster. Among the speakers who have promised to be present are: Rev. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton University; Rev. Wilton Merle Smith, D. D., representing the Princeton Club of New York; S. St. John McCutchen, of Plainfield, Yale; Benjamin H. Campbell, Columbia; Robert S. Green, the Elizabeth alumni, and Edward J. Patterson, the Plainfield alumni.

This will be the first dinner of the club attended by Dr. Patton, the president of the university, and an unusually large gathering of the Princetons men of the county is expected to give him welcome. Last year the dinner was held at the Casino, this city.

DR. BONDY AGAIN ARRESTED.

This Time Accused of Obtaining Money Under False Pretenses.

Bayonne, Dec. 14—Dr. Sigmund E. Bondy, the Bayonne physician who was recently accused by Jersey City, Bayonne and Plainfield tradesmen with having victimized them with alleged forged checks, and who is under indictment by the Hudson County Grand Jury, is again under arrest.

The new complainant against Dr. Bondy is George Cadmus, of Bayonne, who charges Bondy with having obtained money from him under false pretenses. He asserts that several months ago he loaned the physician $450, taking as security a chattel mortgage on the property in the physician's residence and office. He says that he found subsequently that a mortgage existed.

Bondy was arraigned yesterday in the police court before Acting Recorder Lazarus. He waived examination and was held in $500 bail.

G. A. R. OFFICERS.

Charles H. Stephens Chosen Commander of Winfield Scott Post.

At the regular meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held last Tuesday, officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Commander, Charles H. Stephens; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice-commander, W. W. Coriell; quartermaster, John Naylor; surgeon, Dr. Berg; chaplain, John A. Goodwin; officer of the day, I. L. McVoy; officer of the guard, Samuel Terry; council of administration, William C. Smith, W. W. Coriell, M. C. Dobbins; delegates to the department encampment, Andrew Cox, William H. Day, Dr. Berg; alternates, Samuel Terry, John Emmons, John Finley. It was not decided just when the installation will take place, but it will probably be a joint one with the Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans.

FAST IN THE GRASP OF THE COLD WAVE.

Mercury Falls to Lowest Point Yet Recorded This Year.

7 DEGREES ABOVE ZERO.

SKATING IS NOW FINE ON ALL THE NEIGHBORING PONDS.

Cold Wave Came After Monday Night's Snow Storm—Thermometer Was 17 Degrees Yesterday Morning—Last Night Was Clear and Still—Mercury Fell to 12 Degrees at 10 o'Clock.

As the substantial Patafielder sat in his cozy breakfast room yesterday, his smoking coffee before him and the morning newspaper in his hand, he didn't realize that it was the coldest morning of the season. The little boy, who brought the morning paper, realized the fact, however. It was cold, bitterly cold, when he bid a sorrowful adieu to the warmth of his couch and ventured townward after his papers. A faint glow in the east told that the sun was gradually approaching the horizon.

The thermometer smiled a chilly smile at the lad and coldly murmured, "Seven degrees above zero." The lad shivered as he heard it and then brightened up at the thought of the skating.

It was the coldest morning of the season as far as the mercury was concerned but the clear still air made it far easier to endure than the biting north wind of the recent blizzard.

Tuesday held the record for low temperature until today's mark was recorded. The weather observers told of a cold wave that was to follow the snow and, sure enough, it came. It was 17 degrees above zero yesterday morning with a slight wind that made it seem more penetrating. Last night the wind died out, and there was a chill in the air that presaged a still lower fall of temperature.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday, the thermometer had fallen to 12 degrees above zero. There was not a cloud to be seen and the stars shone with unusual brilliancy. Those who ventured out into the recesses of their bedrooms found those useful organs numb and red. It was the kind of cold that freezes without warning.

Yesterday, at 6 o'clock, the thermometer registered 7 degrees above zero, and it may have fallen even below that in the hours just preceding daylight when the cold is always most intense.

The small boy is rejoicing over the real cold weather, for the skating today is decidedly excellent. The slight snowfall of Monday night has affected it but little. The snow was so light that it was easy to sweep off and, even where that was not done, the skating was interfered with but little by the snow.

Pancakes and Coffee.

This evening, after 5 o'clock, the pancake socialists, under the auspices of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school, will be held in the lecture room of the church. The celebrated Hecker's flour will be used and an expert will be sent to Plainfield by the company to see that the cakes are properly mixed and baked. It will be a good way for our business men and others to assist Trinity Sunday-school in their efforts to assist in paying for the matting on the floor of the lecture room. No admittance will be charged, but a silver offering will be received at the door. Vocal and instrumental music and a very enjoyable evening is promised to all who attend. During the early part of the evening, in response to numerous requests, sausage will be served with the cakes, thus giving a substantial meal to those who desire it.

False Alarm at Park.

A few scattering blows on the fire gong Yesterday about 11:30 o'clock made everyone think for a moment that there was a fire. It proved to be nothing but a break, caused by some of the Telephone Company's men working among the wires on Liberty street.

Notary an Examiner.

Justice Mosher has issued summons in the contempt case of Beekman against Frederick Yates, executors of the last will and testament of James H Kenyon, deceased. The summons is returnable December 19th.

Back From the Klondike.

William Wolf, of Rose Hill Farm, has returned from his trip to the Klondike. He says that his experiences at times were very exciting. He expects to return at some future date.

Michael Powers, of South avenue, is detained at home by illness.

Miss Anna Flagg, of Hasbrouck Heights, is visiting friends in Plainfield.

RUSSIAN FAMILY SERVANTS.

Ambitions of a Land Owner to Have Everything Made at Home.

We were a family of eight, occasionally of ten or twelve, says Prince Kropotkin in the Atlantic; but fifty servants at Moscow, and half as many more in the country, were considered not one too many. Four coachmen to attend a dozen horses, three cooks for the masters and two more for the servants, a dozen men to wait upon us at dinner time,—one man, plate in hand, standing behind each person seated at the table,—and girls innumerable in the maid-servants' room; but how could any one do with less than this?

Besides, the ambition of every landed proprietor was that everything required for his household should be made at home, by his "own" men.

"How nicely your piano is always tuned! I suppose Herr Schimmel must be your tuner?" one of the visitors would remark.

To be able to answer, "I have my own piano-tuner," was in those times the correct thing.

"What beautiful pastry!" the guests would exclaim, when a work of art, composed of lees and pastry, appeared toward the end of the dinner. "Confess, prince, that it comes from Trembler (the fashionable pastry-cook).

"It is my own confectioner, a pupil of Tremble, whom I have allowed to show what he can do," was the reply which elicited general admiration

To have embroideries, harnesses, furniture,—in fact everything,—made by one's "own" men was the ideal of the rich and respected landed proprietor.

HE AT LAST GOT OUT HIS COMMAND.

It Was Badly Mixed, but the Boatswain's Mate Was a Veteran.

While the Philadelphia was lying at the Brooklyn navy yard several years ago, a young ensign was called aft one morning and placed in command of the deck. It happened that only one item remained on the list of the morning's duties. It was not a very martial command to give, but as the time approached the officer (proten) of the deck waxed extremely nervous. He imagined that the eyes of all hands were upon him, and almost that the safety of the ship depended upon his giving the order in the proper voice. At three minutes of seven bells he again scanned the order book. It read: "Seven bells. Pipe sweepers." It was plain enough and the embarrassed young officer took his stand near the mainmast and called out in a very weak voice: "Boy's!"

The man addressed sprang to his feet with finger touching cap. "Ay, ay, sir!" he replied. Then glancing hastily about, the scared officer muttered hoarsely, "Swipe sweepers!"

It was an entirely new order to the boatswain's mate. He touched his cap inquiringly. The ensign, more confused than ever, stammered desperately, "Peep swipers, my man." His words reverberated by several of his brother officers, and the laugh which followed proved the last straw. The ensign drew himself up, and with withering scorn exclaimed: "Sweep pipers, and be d——n quick about it, too!"—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

KEEPING COOL IN OTHER LANDS.

Glass Walled Palaces Sunk in the Lake During Hot Weather.

Of all delightful methods for keeping cool in hot weather the "sinking rooms" of Persia commend themselves most to the practical as well as the curious and delightful. When not required, these gilded, glass walled palaces float gracefully on the blue waters of Lake Niris, the most lovely of Persian lakes. When the heat ceases to be endurable their happy owners enter the floating palaces, which are drawn by heavy weights down into the transparent depths of the lake, and with an ample supply of air from above, surrounded by surroundings, fan drinks and fan waving houris, the Persian millionaire who cannot enjoy 100 degrees in the shade must be difficult to please.

The Prince of Agra has a similar palace moored in one of the reaches of the Jumna. Its furniture and appointments are superb; the very chairs are made of gold and incrusted with jewels, and the curtains are of the most exquisite silks. On sultry days the Prince and his suite enter their river palace, which is at once unmoored and floats gently on the bosom of the Jumna at the will of the tide, catching every breeze that blows and gliding to the soothing music of harps played by fair hands. Who would not be the Prince of Agra?

In India the well to do Englishmen and natives fly from the plains at the first blast of heat and seek refuge in the hills, where the cool breezes blowing from the snow capped mountains drive away all thought of the simmering plains below.—New York Herald.

He Thought the Dry Ones Best.

Admiral Farragut used to relate that a pretty girl on a Mississippi steamer was anxiously sought in marriage by five of the passengers. Viewing them all with favor, the girl applied to the captain of the boat for advice in making her selection. He suggested that she leap overboard, after he had made arrangements that would make injury to her impossible. She did as he said. Four of the suitors promptly were in after her and united in bringing her safely back to the deck.

"What shall I do now?" she perplexedly inquired of the captain.

"I don't rightly know, miss," he answered, "but it seems to me I'd take the dry one."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ROSE LORE.

The Story of the Greatest Flower That Grows.

In commerce the rose has not been without value. The most delightful commercial product of the rose is that known as the "Attar of Persia and India." Although the production of attar was discovered in Persia, the industry has nearly died out there to spring up in extensive rose farms in Turkey; and about Kazanlik, on the southern slope of the Balkans, close to the Shipka, or wild rose pass, famous in the history of the Russia-Turkish war.

The rose growing belt is situated at an average altitude of 1,000 feet above the sea and comprises seventy miles in length and ten miles in width. Since the emancipation of the Balkan provinces the manufacture of this exquisite perfume has become a great industry in Bulgaria and has been taken up in a large scale even in Germany. The ancestor of all, the rose of Damascus, furnishes the greater number of blossoms. The white musk rose is used, and a pink damask, but the dark red variety outnumbers them all. A fine attar is produced from roses grown in Cashmere. The attar is expensive, because it requires an enormous quantity of blossoms to yield even a few drops.

It is claimed that it was discovered by the favorite wife of Jehan Ghir, through whose garden ran a canal of rose-water. On the surface the Begum discovered a few drops of the precious attar, or oil floating.

Even rose-water has its value and may be also included among the luxuries.

The hundred-leaved rose, a variety well known to the ancients and originally found in the Caucasus, is also used to make rose-water and a medicinal syrup. A mild astringent syrup is made from the petals of the French rose. The petals of the tea rose, a species of roisette, with a very fine fragrance, are used in making fine flavoring teas.

A vinegar made from roses is used for headaches; a conserve of roses and sugar is given internally to children. The fruit or hip is also used that way, while on the Continent dried hips are used in the culinary concoctions such as soups.

The first cultivated rose is said to have been planted in Britain in A. D. 1522. The wild rose is a native of Britain, and grows abundantly. In the time of Edward III., 1334, a gold coin was made, called a rose-noble, because the figure of it the form of a rose was impressed.

In classical time there was a recondite significance connected with the rose. The statue of Diana of Ephesus was covered with roses and bees. It will be built to the south shop in the ineffable "Light of the Sheknah," while he terminates the Paradise with the rose-cross.

The Rosicrucians, brothers of the Rosy-cross, of Germany, used for their emblem the crucified rose. In ancient times, when secret meetings were held, men used to wear a chaplet of roses on their heads. Later on the forms of roses were painted and carved on the ceilings of rooms or halls where feasts were given, when everything connected with them was kept secret. From that custom came the expression "sub-rosa" or "under the rose," which means that nothing is to be revealed.

There is a fabled story that Cupid gave a rose to the god of silence as a bribe to prevent him from betraying the faults of Venus, and that in this way the rose became the symbol of silence.

Among the ancients the rose became the symbol of modesty, of joy, of gladness and of grief. It crowned the victor, it decked the garland of the lover and shed its beauty and its fragrance upon the dead after life's fitful fever closed.

In mythology we find that the rose was Flora's favorite flower. It is also associated with Bacchus, for we read of chaplets of roses crowning the heads of those who indulged in Bacchanalian orgies. Classic myths and traditions make efforts to account for beautiful legends connected with the rose, which assure us that it has been a favorite ever since it became known.

In Shakespeare, we find seventy or more instances of the rose in the plays, and in the fifty-fourth sonnet the rose is described as truth. In his time it was considered the queen of flowers. In Romeo and Juliet we read, "remnants of pack-thread and old cakes of roses were plainly scattered to make up a show." In Twelfth Night, "by the roses of the spring, by honor, truth and everything. I love thee so." There are few poets who do not make grateful and honorable mention of the rose.

The Latin poet, Horace, even though he often alludes to the myrtle bush, the vine-wreathed elm, the olive thickets, the thick-woven shade of the laurels, the violet bed, the tall, spreading pine, the white-leaved popular, the coronal of rosemary, the rugged oak, does not omit the rose; "while the odors of Syrian nard and the rose breathe sweet from locks tipped, and just dipped with Time's snows."—Ode 11. "Then strew freely the roses." "With locks all dropping balm on roses laid," and many other poetical illusions. Anacreon in the rose has an emblem of silence its sphere touches all nations, its mission touches all hearts, all joys, all sorrows. Much there is of history and sentiment in the heart of the rose.

It is the flower of compliment and ever breathes its own sweet language in beauty and perfume.

"What is firmness, father?"

"Firmness, my boy, is obstinacy in ourselves."

"And what is obstinacy?"

"Obstinacy is firmness in somebody else."—Chicago Evening News.

THE NEW DEFENDER.

It Is To Be Constructed Under Lock and Key in the Herreshoff Yards.

The new cup defender will of course, be built under lock and key, the usual method of the procedure that is adopted at the Herreshoff works, and little beyond the statement that she will be of the bulb-fin type and that her lines generally will not depart radically from those of the Defender, could be learned.

While the Herreshoff family is large, it looks upon "Nat" as its genius. At the age of ten he could sail a boat with consummate skill and judgment. When seventeen he became a student in the Institute of Technology, in Boston, where he still further developed his taste for physics as particularly applied to steam engineering and naval architecture. In 1870, when twenty two years old, he became connected with the well known Corlis Steam Engine Company, of Providence, R. I., and with the famous George Corlis gained great practical knowledge in engineering and the application of steam power. During his stay at the Corlis works he designed the engines for the naval construction at the Herreshoffs.

When he left the Corlis company he joined the Herreshoffs as part owner, designer and superintendent, and there he has since been, he has become deservedly famous.

The Gloriana, owned by E. D. Morgan, N. Y. Y. C., was the first vessel to snow Nat Herreshoff's fully developed theory of design, which was demonstrated in the Pelican, a much smaller vessel built several months before the Gloriana was designed. The theory was subsequently carried to its perfection in the sloop Wasp, which has been, perhaps, the most successful boat ever built at Bristol.

The development of cup defending models was really begun in 1892, with the centerboard sloop Navahoe, built at the Royal Phelps Carroll, N. Y. Y. C., which became famous in British as well as American waters. This vessel was built in the south shop at Bristol.

The cup candidate Colonia, a keel boat, followed, being set up in the south shops late in February, 1893, immediately after the Navahoe was launched. Previous to that time the centerboard Vigilant, the victorious cup defender, was started in the north shop. The Colonia was launched in May, and the Vigilant in June, 1893. The Vigilant was the first vessel of any size ever painted with bronze, and her record here and abroad need not be mentioned.

The Defender was commenced in February, 1895, in the south shop, and was finished and overboard the following July. The new defender, the yacht that will meet the Shamrock, will be built in the south shop, where the Navahoe, Colonia and Defender were constructed, and will probably in form closely resemble the victorious craft of 1895, as there may be danger in making radical departures from her successful design.

The Defender was designed by Nat. Herreshoff did not cease with her races. For three years he has had his mind pondering over the model of the new defender, which were subsequently no meagre to satisfy the multitude of exacting yachtsmen. And this continued thought must result in further improvement, if such is possible.

Voting in 1864.

One of the most interesting features of the stirring war election of '64, when Abraham Lincoln ran a second time for the presidency of the United States and was opposed by General George B. McClellan, was the voting of the soldiers. For nearly four years these gallant men had marched and fought, perilling their lives willingly on a hundred bloody battlefields and knowing no laws but the commands of their superior officers. Now they were again to exercise their rights as sovereign citizens, some at their homes, where they had gone on furloughs, and many in their far off camps.

Extraordinary precautions were taken to secure the untrammeled vote of the men fighting at the front and to guard against corruption. Some of the states had made provisions, before the war broke out, for taking the vote of soldiers absent from their respective states with the army; and many others had adopted similar provisions as soon as the necessity became apparent.

At this time General McClellan was supposed to be very popular with the soldiers, and many of the political prophets of the day predicted that the soldiers' vote would be cast almost solidly for "Little Mac," as he was sometimes affectionately called. But the boys in blue carried their own thinking machines along with them, and these did not permit of their forgetting "Father" Abraham. The subjoined table gives the army votes, which were counted in canvassing the returns for electors.

States	Lincoln.	McClellan.
Maine	4,174	741
New Hampshire	2,066	630
Vermont	243	49
Pennsylvania	26,712	12,349
Maryland	2,800	221
Kentucky	1,194	2,823
Ohio	41,146	9,753
Michigan	9,402	2,959
Iowa	7,378	1,364
Wisconsin	11,372	2,458
California	2,690	237

This table does not give the vote of all the soldiers. Many were at their homes on furloughs, and no separate account of their votes could be kept; but it is sufficient to show the warm place Abraham Lincoln held in the hearts and brains of the privates of '64.

Mrs. Taddells: "Let's see! Susie Dimpling is about twenty years old, isn't she?"

Mrs. Wiffles: "Susie Dimpling twenty! Susie Dimpling will never see twenty again if she lives to be eighty."

AT THE ELYSEE.

Its Tragedies and Its Romances of the Past Recalled.

During the last twenty-five years six presidents of the French republic have made the Elysee Palace their temporary home, and of these M. Felix Faure, the son of humble working upholsterers, and in every sense of the word a self-made man, has proved himself to be not only the most suitable for the post, but the most popular personality of them all.

In theory, if not in fact, M. and Madame Faure are entirely "kept" by the state—that is to say, they are lodged rent free and may consider all their own produce and the splendid kitchen gardens and conservatories kept up at Versailles and Fontainebleau. The president has the right of shooting and hunting in the state forests and woods, and from them the Elysee is supplied with wood and charcoal. The lighting of the palace, whether by oil, gas, or electricity, is also provided, and a laundry is kept up and managed quite independently of the president's official income for the use of the Elysee.

But the kitchens, which are in some ways the most important department of the palace, are entirely maintained by Monsieur or rather Madame Faure. There is a chef and under him four head cooks, and when a ball or banquet is to be given from thirty to forty extra scullions make their appearance. Madame Faure only patronizes the best Paris or rather French firms. Fortunately for the president, however, the Paris season for receptions and general entertaining only lasts some five or six months of each year.

The president finds it impossible to restrict himself to fewer than twelve horses, although the keep of only three is allowed by the state. The Parisian public are very good judges of outward show and state, and on certain occasions, notably the day of the Grand Prix, M. Faure is equipped and horses have to run the gauntlet of thousands of critical sightseers.

There is room and to spare at the Elysee, and each president has, to a certain extent, altered the arrangements made by his predecessor. M. Faure, being a practical man of business, has made his study on the ground floor, close to the splendid reception rooms, where Madame is President's receptions on official occasions. The president's study is a large, pleasant room, furnished with a view to work rather than play, but it has the beautiful ceiling and stately furniture to be found in most old French chateaux. When conferring with his ministers, and those other persons whose business procures them an audience with the president in his study, M. Faure sits at the big writing table at which he does all his official writing.

The official residence of the French president is situated in one of the pleasantest quarters of Paris, and the beautiful Champs Elysees is the only so called a palace by courtesy, fills up a considerable space between the Faubourg St. Honore and the Champs Elysees. History has been made and unmade in the Elysee. It was there that Napoleon I signed his abdication in favor of the king of Rome after Waterloo, and a few weeks later the emperor's study became the business room of Louis XVIII. of Wellington.

When the allies left Paris the Elysee Bourbon, as it was then called, was restored to the crown and was occupied by the heir of Louis XVIII. It was occupied first by one and then by another of the Bonapartes till the year 1848, when the new government assigned it as the official residence of the then president of the French republic, General Cavaignac, and by a strange irony of fate, in the very room where Napoleon I signed his abdication, Louis Napoleon, then prince president, waited with his feet on the fender to hear the result of the coup d'etat which made him emperor.

During the third empire, the Elysee Napoleon, as it had then become, was lent to the many sovereigns who visited Napoleon III. and the Empress Eugenie, although filled with works of art and furnished with some of the finest eighteenth century furniture in existence, the Elysee happily escaped the notice of the Communards, and so was neither sacked nor burnt.

When there was a question as to where M. and Madame Thiers should take up their official residence, the Elysee was found to be the only habitable state property in Paris.

GREAT HABIT, THIS!

"Hullos, old man. Been shrimping?"

"No—no! Been for my ma-ma-tutinal dip. Wouldn't be dip-dip-prived of it for worlds. It's awfully invigig-orating. Gi-gives me the coush-tit-tution of a lion. It will imp-pip-prove you won-on-derfully."

IS POLYGAMY REVIVING?

The Presbyterians Allege That It Is, and the Press Sustains Them.

The revival of polygamy in Utah is a live question. Religious politicians are stirred as never since her admission to Statehood. Suppressed mutterings are heard all over the State.

The Salt Lake Tribune says: "As to the existence of polygamy in Utah, no one doubts it, and that it has increased since Statehood is known to all who have opportunities of observation. Not only have old family relations been resumed, but new marriages have been contracted and are being contracted almost daily. There is no protest that there is no polygamy in Utah assume that the people of Utah are a class of chumps. The Church apologists claim there have been no plural marriages since the manifesto. Maybe not; but many in the Church who have had one or more wives have taken other women to their homes and supported them as wives. No matter what it is called, the polygamy question is going to get a good stirring up. The Church leaders, of course, in the face of the law, probably not admit that polygamy is now being practised, and in order to keep out of trouble from man made laws they solemnly deny it. But they justify this deception on the ground that polygamy is commanded by God."

And the Springville Independent has this to say: "The arraignment cannot be safely ignored. It does not charge, as some of the press seem to infer, that polygamous marriages are not being solemnized. It does charge that authoritative persons are in effect declaring that celestial marriages are an essential part of Mormon faith, that God is a polygamist and that Jesus Christ was the husband of three wives. Nothing of recent years in religious matters has succeeded in stirring up such a feeling of righteous indignation, and it must be met an answered.

"You may hear a priest comfort the mourners at the funeral of a young man who has died without having entered wedlock with the promise to seal a wife to him in heaven. And women go to the temples and are married to dead men."

BALKY HORSE CONQUERED.

With No More Formidable Weapon Than a Paddle.

"I have owned and used many horses," said a resident of Lewiston, "among which were several balky ones. I never owned a team, the best one I ever had, that at times were stubborn and ugly and would not work. One morning when we were going out in the field with a heavy load we came to a steep pitch in the road, and I, driving the animal, flared up and then the other. We tried to start them by coaxing and by using the lash, but it was no use; they refused to move. At last I blindfolded and would have killed the beasts with a club, but that was of no avail. I left the team standing there that morning, went back to the house and decided to leave them there, when a thought struck me that proved successful.

"I took a paddle board and, making it into the shape of a paddle, proceeded to the field. Once more we tried the horses, but it was no use; they were determined not to move. Taking the weapon which I had made, I struck first one horse, then the other a few blows, and to my great surprise they started at a rapid rate. After that I always kept the paddle-shaped weapon in my wagon and when they refused duty I merely had to show it to them. I have tried this same rule on many other horses and I never knew it to fail."

"What is your theory? It certainly cannot be the hardness of the blow?"

"My theory is that the animals are started from fright, caused by the jar of the board."—Lewiston, Me., Journal.

After the First Quarrel.

"Go!" she exclaimed, "and never speak to me again!"

He passed out into the unsympathetic night, but paused when he reached the sidewalk and drew something from one of his inside pockets. As he did so the beautiful girl, who was watching him from the vestibule, uttered a shrill scream and ran toward him.

"Albert!" she cried, "what would you do? Pray do not kill yourself! Throw your revolver away and let us forget our quarrel!"

"It isn't a revolver," he replied, as he caught her in his arms. "It is a monkey wrench I borrowed from you that day the wheel broke down. I have been wearing it next to my heart ever since."

Then they returned to the parlor and took up the thread of love's young dream where it had been broken.—Chicago Daily News.

Yellow Fever Record.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 7.—Following is the yellow fever record for yesterday in Louisiana:

New Iberia, 2 cases and 1 death; Franklin, 8 cases, no deaths; Jackson, 10 cases, no deaths; West Feliciana Parish, Stewardt's Plantation and vicinity, seven cases and one death; Jackson, 4 cases and 1 death; Wilson, 4 cases and no deaths.

The source of infection is reported as Madison station, Miss.

Republican Editors Meet.

New York, Oct. 7.—The Republican Editorial Association of the state held a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting in the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday to discuss the work of the campaign. Republican editors from all sections of the state were present and all reported great enthusiasm for the state ticket.

They say the chances of the Union League Club in the evening.

THE EPISCOPAL COUNCIL.

Resolutions Introduced Court's Powers Proposed.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Morning prayer for the delegates to the triennial convention of the Episcopal church was held yesterday at the Church of the Epiphany.

The Rev. Dr. McKim read the prayer service and Bishop Talbot of Minnesota pronounced the benediction. When the larger portion of the delegates had assembled the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, the president, called the meeting to order and read the form of Declaration to order.

Preliminary routine business occupied the time of the house for an hour. A number of standing committees were appointed and resolutions and memorials on deceased members presented and referred to appropriate committees.

The Rev. Dr. Mann of Missouri offered a resolution naming Kansas City, Mo., as the next meeting place of the convention. Following this was a resolution expressing the earnest desire of the convention that the instructions to the commissioners to be appointed to the general council of the Anglican church proposed by the czar of Russia shall recommend the establishment of a permanent court for the settlement of all differences that may arise. This was referred to the calendar of business for consideration by a committee.

The communication received yesterday from Felix Agoncillo, the representative of Aguinaldo, now in the city, was read by Dr. McConnell of Louisiana. The communication was the statement of the Filipinos for the convention and asked the prayers of the church in behalf of the natives of the Philippine islands, their liberties and welfare.

The convention then proceeded to the consideration of the report on the revision of the constitution, which had been made a special order for eleven o'clock.

To Stop It to War.

Washington, Oct. 7.—One of the most irritating questions in the railroad history of the United States is that that has been the provoking cause of more destructive rate wars than any other, is in a fair way to be settled.

The American, the continental lines and the Canadian Pacific Railroad company have agreed to submit the question to E. E. Clarke, general agent of the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis Railway; W. A. Day of Washington and J. W. Midgely of Chicago, as arbitrators, and the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company shall be allowed a differential on freight traffic between the Atlantic coast and certain specified points, and if not what differential shall be conceded to the Canadian road.

Supplies Land at Iloilo.

Madrid, Oct. 7.—An official dispatch from Iloilo, Philippine Islands, reports that the landing of troops there caused a panic among the insurgents, and that three hundred muskets, four cannon, a quantity of ammunition and a flag were captured.

In addition, eighteen Spanish prisoners were released. The insurgents were dispersed, the bulk of them withdrawing to the mountains and many of them surrendering.

The clergy and the inhabitants, the dispatch from Iloilo also says, are in favor of the return of Wellington. Communication with Cuba has been restored. In other encounters between the Spaniards and insurgents recently 36 of the former were killed.

Troops Back from Omdurman.

London, Oct. 7.—The First battalion of the Grenadier Guards returned to London yesterday from Omdurman, where it took part in the crushing defeat inflicted upon the Dervishes by General Lord Kitchener.

From the railroad station, where it left the train, to Wellington barracks, immense crowds of people lined the streets.

The windows were packed with spectators, flags were displayed on all sides and the most intense enthusiasm prevailed.

Clearing Camp Wikoff.

Montauk Point, L. I., Oct. 7.—The government authorities here are clearing up the camp as fast as possible, and it is a question in the minds of many if the order to break camp was with a trifle too much speed. This comment has been caused to be made by the removal of a number of sick soldiers who are not considered to be in condition to be removed, and it is feared that the change that they will undergo will not result in their improvement.

New Railroad Terminals.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 7.—One million dollars is to be expended in building railroad terminals on Hutchinson's island opposite Savannah, by the Georgia and Alabama Terminal Company, which includes a number of northern capitalists.

The entire river front of the island has been bought.

Vessels drawing twenty-six feet of water will be able to load at the docks and there will be extensive warehouses.

Yellow Fever Record.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 7.—Following is the yellow fever record for yesterday in Louisiana:

New Iberia, 2 cases and 1 death; Franklin, 8 cases, no deaths; Jackson, 10 cases, no deaths; West Feliciana Parish, Stewardt's Plantation and vicinity, seven cases and one death; Jackson, 4 cases and 1 death; Wilson, 4 cases and no deaths.

Cholly's Predicament.

Farmer—Hey thar! Git a move on! Ther bull will fetch you sure!

Cholly—Aw, but I cawn't! I've sprwained me ankle!

Farmer—Well, use yer cane, an' ye kin git ter ther wall!

Cholly—Weally, I couldn't, don't yer know! It's much too beastly bad form to walk with your stick, don't yer know.—New York Ledger.

Why Willie Stopped Smiling.

The salesman was showing Willie the new styles of golf stockings, and said: "You have just the legs to display this pattern."

"Yes?" murmured Willie, with a complacent smile.

"They are long and the same size all the way up," continued the clerk and the smile faded away.—Spokesman Review.

THE HORSE SHOW.

The History of New York's Chief Society Event.

The original projectors of the Horse Show builded far better than they knew when they first met and arranged for their first display in 1883. The idea of the Horse show was first developed in and among the then comparatively small element in the New York society of which was "the hunting set," and whose chief headquarters then as now were in the saddle at Hempstead and Far Rockaway.

The first five shows in the old Garden were most modest affairs compared with those of the present, and the figures both of the attendance at these and of their receipts look almost ridiculous beside those of to-day. But each year saw a steady improvement in the attendance and consequently in the receipts. With the opening of the new Madison Square Garden in 1890 the public began to realize that the show afforded it an opportunity to inspect the much-talked-of and much discussed beauties and leaders of New York society at close range and to study their costumes and gowns, with the result that they rushed to the Garden. The show had its red-letter days in 1895, although that year was almost equal in the figures of attendance and receipts.

As the years went by, the demand for the best boxes became such that the premiums paid at the auction sales reached surprising figures, until in 1897 $2,500 was the effective price for the choice of a prominent box for the week. The ticket speculators saw their opportunity in this craze and frequently managed to secure some of the best boxes, as well as the best seats. One of these in the first four years ago held a box in a good position at $1,000 for the week of the show. He offered it to Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, who refused to pay more than $500 and immediately afterward sold it to Captain De la Mar. This is the highest recorded price paid for a box at the Horse Show.

Until three years ago New York society made the show so much of its own that it influenced most in all the boxes and aspiring millionaires from other cities were not able to break into the charmed circle, although several attempts were made to do so. Three years ago, however, Philadelphia began to assert itself the next year Boston, Baltimore and Pittsburg were represented. Last Autumn other cities held at least a third of the prominent boxes.

Considered solely as a social function, the Horse Show is distinguished by the fact that it has ceased to be a novelty and that the interest of New York society in it is somewhat waning. Is still undoubtedly the most important event of the year in the society world, but not in New York, but of America. It is the Advent season of the society year, and its week means the opening of the Winter's gayeties. The members of New York society return to town in force at this time of returning to their city homes by it and date the events of the year from and by the show week. For it the matron and belle prepare their most elaborate gowns, and the man of fashion overhauls his wardrobe and gives extra instructions to his valet.

As may be supposed, it is the event of the year to the milliners and dressmakers not only of this country, but of London, Vienna, Berlin and Paris, for many workshops in those cities are busied every summer on orders from American women for Horse Show gowns. As is natural, therefore, how sets originate the fashion in Winter gowns and even in men's clothes, and is the Mecca of all the leading milliners and dressmakers of the country who assemble at the Garden during its week to study their own and their fellow's productions and to get points for the Winter's fashions.

At the show the Winters' gayeties are planned, entertainments are organized, engagements announced and scandals whispered. It is the first meeting day of the society clearing house after the long Summer and Autumn, and to a large extent it sets the pace for the months to follow. The mornings of the show are devoted by the more enthusiastic members of the hunting set and by the children of society. About three o'clock the advance guard of the fashionable throng begins to arrive, and by four the boxes and prominent seats are filled with fashionably dressed occupants, and the public begins its rounds of study and comment. At five o'clock the human tide begins to ebb as dinner hour approaches, and at eight it begins to flow back again. By 9:30 every night the function is at its height, and at eleven the show is over. Then the fashionable restaurants and cafes are filled until long after midnight with the brilliantly dressed throng discussing the events of the day.

Sympathy in Children.

Collecting butterflies, birds' eggs, etc., should never be encouraged. It is apt to develop all that is hard and cruel in a child's nature, and to make him heedless of giving pain and sorrow to others. Any sign of cruelty in a child's nature should at once be checked, as should also the fear of any insect or animal. Instead of telling the child to "throw away that nasty caterpillar," instruct him to touch it very gently so that he will not hurt it, and to admire its beauty of form and coloring. Always encourage the love of animals in children.

Isabelle—There's a Frenchman behind us; I'd better tell you this in English.

Bertie—On the contrary, you'd be safer if you were to speak French!—Judy.

ALMOST A SCANDAL.

Mrs. Hillyer turned upon her companion with a flash of indignation in her gray eyes, and a brighter pink dyed her fair cheeks.

"What do you mean, Mr. Landor?" she demanded in low tones which trembled with feeling.

"What I said, of course," replied Landor, looking down upon her with a peculiar sparkle in his sombre eyes. "I don't wonder that it affects you so. When I saw it, it was all I could do to prevent myself from springing forward and throttling that faithless husband of yours."

"You say that with your own eyes you saw Robert Hillyer kiss a woman—that is the charge, is it?" in a calm, measured way.

"Yes. And you his wife! For this man you trampled my love in the dust. Oh, Mildred, how I would have cherished you!"

"You forget yourself, Mr. Landor."

"Yes, forgive me—I think only of you."

"Can you tell me just when and where you witnessed this remarkable scene?"

"At Arlington's ball. You know where the Cupid and Psyche stands? I was having a solitary cigar in the shadow of a laurel, when he—your husband—came along with a lady. I saw him distinctly, though I could not tell who she was. They stopped among the palms just back of the statuary, and—what is the matter?"

Mildred's pink-lined sunshade concealed her face from his view, but the convulsive breathing, fluttering the lace at her throat, told him that she was greatly moved.

"Mildred! I should have spared you, but I could not! Curse the infamous wretch who has been the cause of your unhappiness—who, having won the loveliest woman on earth, wears her so lightly—who——"

Landor stopped short in amazement as the pink-lined sunshade was slanted back and revealed a rosy, dimpling face.

"Oh!" laughed Mrs. Hillyer. "I can't keep up my role of tragedy queen, though I must congratulate you on the success you are playing the heavy villain. Mr. Lanrod," more seriously, "you are too good a friend of mine. You worry too much about trifles. I shall give Robert a lecture, and I am sure it will never happen any more."

"You are different from what I thought you if you can let such a thing pass so lightly."

"It was bad form, but the dear boy is so unconventional. I thought there would be no scandal if he stole a kiss from his wife in the dark."

"It was you?" he asked, forcing a smile to his pale lips. "How infernally stupid I was not to have known it! Can you ever forgive me?"

"Yes, and forget you, too. Your very protective, watchful friendship is wholly unnecessary, Mr. Landor. Robert dearly loves to take care of me, and you are superfluous. Be good enough to transfer your kindly offices some worthier woman who will appreciate them more."

Landor bowed. His best-laid plan had "gang agiee."

New Engagement Ring.

Even the engagement ring of the New York girl tells the story of the times she is living in. It might not be thought that lovers, generally all sufficient unto themselves, would be influenced by consideration of patriotism and memories of the war that has just come to an end, but there are evidences that they are. The new engagement ring is patriotic in the extreme, and several engaged girls are proudly wearing it.

It displays the three national colors and is really three rings. These are quite separate and distinct. Each is a very narrow band of gold, one which is set seven very small stones. There must be no display. Each must be extremely simple, and the combined effect of the three very quiet and elegant.

The first band or ring has rubies for its seven stones. These are ranged in a row. The second ring, of seven other stones similarly placed, is of diamonds, the whitest that can be found. The third ring shows blue in its seven sapphires.

All this is rather expensive, despite the fact that the stones necessarily are small ones. So it can safely be said that not many engaged girls will be able to "sport" a ring or rings of this variety. It is a betrothal present, however, that any girl who owns set eyes on one of them will envy."—New York Herald.

"Knots" and Miles.

The use of the word "knot" in connection with the speed and distance sailed or steamed by a ship in a given time is open to misapprehension. The difference between the geographical mile, as the term is used by landsmen, and a nautical mile is that the latter measures 6,080 feet, or 800 feet more than the land mile. Thus, when we read of a war ship making 20 knots, it means that she is covering 23 ordinary miles in an hour.—New York Herald.

Soldier's Magnanimous Act.

The war with Mexico is a part of our country's history. Taylor and Scott and Davis and Lee came out of it immortal. The epic of that great struggle was the storming of Chapultepec. That frowning fortress was the Gibraltar of Mexico. Its massive walls seemed impregnable. But American daring knew no obstacles, and an intrepid band of volunteers was chosen to scale and assault it.

STORY OF AN INVENTOR.

How His Persistence Secured Him a Fortune.

The late G. W. U. Yost, inventor of the typewriter, used to tell his friends that his business success was due to his always bearing down hard on one point until he made it felt, illustrating the remark by gradually increasing the pressure on his thumb on any available and tender portion of his friend's thigh until the friend acknowledged the force and application of the point.

When a young man, on his way to Washington, Mr. Yost arrived in Chicago with no friends to carry him further. Accordingly he set out in quest of work, and calling first at a large iron foundry, asked to be directed to the foreman. When the foreman had been pointed out, the young man approached him and said,—

"Sir, I have come to work for you and want you to tell me what I am to do first."

The foreman turned with a surprised expression. "See here, young man," he said, sharply, "I tell you we have all the hands we need. Now go along."

"Why, my dear sir," said Mr. Yost with the blandest smile and greatest geniality of voice, "that isn't at all the question we are to discuss. What I said is that I have come to work for you. Now, I want you to tell me what to do first."

The young man's manner was so engaging that the foreman could not feel offended, and, after a moment, pointing to three Irishmen piling pig iron he said, ironically,—

"Do what those three men are doing."

Nothing daunted, the young man obeyed his instructions literally, and in an hour piled as much pig iron as did the three other men.

"Now boss those men and make them work like that," observed the foreman.

Mr. Yost was rapidly promoted, and soon earned enough to enable him to complete his journey.

"But I had a harder time to get that foreman to let me go," he said, in telling the story, "than I had in getting him to tell me what to do first."

"Small Cap" Shatter.

"'Pecos Bill' is not the only nickname the General Shafter ever enjoyed," said an old newspaper man the other night in Denver he was known for years as 'Small Cap Shafter,' and as he is anything but small the title calls for an explanation. It seems that a banquet of some sort had been given to a lot of army officers, among the guests were General, then Colonel, Shafter. The old 'Denver Tribune' printed an account of the affair and a list of those present was included in the article. When the proofs were examined before the paper was made ready it was observed that Shafter's initials were in lower case type and the proofreader promptly marked them 'small cap,' meaning that they should be reset in capitals of a small size. The intelligent compositor supposed that the inscription indicated some pet title with which he was unfamiliar, and instead of making the proof correction substituted 'Small Cap' Shafter, and thus it appeared on the following morning. 'Pecos Bill' was mad enough to bite nails when he came in later, but everybody else roared and the title stuck to him until the yarn was gradually forgotten. It is still remembered, however, by plenty of old timers."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wasp and Bee Stings.

It is claimed that cocaine is a remedy for wasp or bee stings. It acts not only as a temporary local anaesthetic, but apparently has the power of destroying the poison of the sting. A gentleman writes that he happened to have some sixteenth-grain cocaine tabloids for hypodermic injection when a lady was badly stung by a wasp. Such stings ordinarily had a great effect on her, not only producing a very large and painful swelling, but making her feel more or less unwell for two or three days. One tabloid, dissolved in a few drops of water, and applied with the finger at once, almost removed the pain; a second, applied an hour or two afterward completely cured it. In other cases the remedy was equally effective, and it is proved advisable to keep a small bottle of strong solution of cocaine ready for use. It should, of course, be applied as soon as possible; it is known to have given relief if applied even up to seven or eight hours after the sting.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Filial Affection.

The following anecdote is given by an Indian officer of the habits of the Pathans and the customs of the wily Pathan. A certain General and his staff while wending their way through one of the narrowest valleys of Tirah were annoyed by the attentions of a solitary marksman, who from time to time sent a bullet unpleasantly close. At last the General turned to his orderly—a Pathan sowar—and told him to dismount, take his carbine, and try and stalk the mountaineer. The sowar started off, and presently there was a crack, and a gray-bearded old Afridi tumbled headlong down the mountainside. The sowar returned and fell into his place. "Well done," said the General. "But how on earth did you manage it so easily?" "Oh," replied the sowar, "I knew his habits. He was my father."—London Truth.

Raising Trout for Market.

The natural requirements to grow trout successfully are simple, so that any boy can build what is needed from a few simple and easily remembered instructions. He will find a ready market for his entire product. Some claim that a trout can be grown in three years to weigh a pound, but it is safe to say that it will require nearer four years, much depending upon conditions and food supply.

The conditions for successful trout culture are a proper water supply and ponds or vats so constructed that the trout may be controlled and the ponds or vats kept clean. If the water supply is from a stream then they must be so constructed that no high water or freshet will ever endanger them. If from a spring, so much the better. Of the two plans, I much prefer the vats, as they are easier to care for. Build the vat fourteen feet long, four feet wide and four feet deep. Use inch boards, but make the joints tight and true. Put four bars for the bottom and sides. Such a vat will hold a large amount of water. The foundations must be even, and if the sides are banked up with earth it will give material support. From the upper end of this vat bore down one foot each by two feet in width and into this build a trough or raceway fourteen feet long, two feet wide and one foot deep. At the other end cut down for the outlet six by eighteen inches and cover with a three-inch inch board grating. In each corner of the vat bore a two-inch hole, and cover with a trap that can be raised. This is essential, as it makes it possible to clean the vat at any time quickly and easily.

Build a covering for the vat of lattice work, roof shaped. This can be locked, but at the same time you can see your trout. The raceway should be covered and fastened. Into the raceway put small pebbles. An inch stream of water will take care of a vat like this into which you can place a thousand yearling trout, for if the water is cool and has not been so spread out that the sun's rays have destroyed all animal life, the stream will take care of a good many trout, for after the water has fallen from the outlet of the vat it will have aerated itself and can again be used in another raceway and vat. Once each week put a pail of earth should be thrown into the vat. The trout like this, and you will see them dart through it, seemingly to free themselves from any parasites that may be adhering.

Trout be led into feeding corn meal, or soon disease will creep in, and the fish will die. Liver is alike objectionable. One of the best foods, if it can be obtained, is live minnows. The trout will take them as they float through and thrive. As you can readily dispose of trout at $1 per pound and always find a ready market if within shipping distance of New York, you will have a business both pleasant and profitable.—C. H. Barbour in Agriculturist.

For Getting Rid of Woodchucks.

The Country Gentleman says in regard to exterminating woodchucks: "There are several ways of getting rid of woodchucks, the quickest, perhaps (in grass fields or places removed from dwellings) by blasting. For blasting make cartridges of common blasting powder. To take one inch diameter of dynamite, attach a fuse to the cartridge and push it down into the hole. Close up all others, and then the main hole with earth. Then light the fuse. If the animal does not come out bodily dead with the concussion it will never come out at all after the explosion. This of course finishes up the whole colony, which may be a large one. One that was recently destroyed in this way had nine in the family. The holes were exactly nine holes to the rather extensive burrow. Four ounces of common blasting powder did the business for the whole. The ground should not be blown out too much; the powder is to be gauged so as merely to lift the earth, which will settle down again without leaving a crater, while the gas will quickly suffocate the ground hogs. As a less violent remedy several correspondents recommend putting bisulphide of carbon, which can be bought cheaply of manufacturing chemists. By saturating woolen rags, using about a tablespoonful of the mixture in each case, and putting them well into the holes and closing the entrance, the work done will be generally successful. A deadly and heavy gas is generated, which permeates every portion of the hole and makes animal life impossible."

Don't Breed From Poor Stock.

So far as progress is concerned, it is useless to breed from mares deficient in form, spirit and movement, or common, cheap horses whose chief recommendation is that they are large, look bright, shed a fine coat, being well fed and groomed. The country is full of large, dull, spiritless horses, whose feet in traveling dangle as if the pastern joint was a pivot on a swivel from which the foot depended. The Morgan roadster raises the foot from the ground, and casts it forward as if making an air line as true and exact as if moved by machinery.

Storing Leeks for Winter.

These vegetables are stored in trenches the same as celery and are not injured by a temperature of 15 to 20 degrees below freezing.

A Cannibal Plant.

There has been discovered in Nicaragua a flesh-eating, or rather man-eating plant, which for horror is quite the equal of the novelist's imagination. This plant is found, it is asserted, in Nicaragua, and is called by the natives the devil's snare.

It appears that a Mr. D——y, a naturalist, has lately returned from Central America, where he spent two years in the study of the plants and animals of those regions. In one of the swamps which surround the great Nicaragua Lake he found this singular growth of which we are writing.

He was engaged in hunting for botanical and entomological specimens, when he heard his dog cry out, as if in agony, from a distance. Running to the spot whence the animal's cries came, Mr. D—— found him enveloped in a perfect network of what seemed to be a fine, rope-like tissue of roots and fibres. The plant or vine seemed composed entirely of bare, interlacing stems, resembling, more than anything else, the branches of the weeping willow, devoid of its spring, but of a dark, nearly black hue, and covered with a thick, viscid gum that exuded from the pores.

Drawing his knife Mr. D—— attempted to cut the poor beast free; but it was with the very greatest difficulty that he managed to sever the fleshy muscular fibres of the plant. When the dog was extricated from the coils of the plant Mr. D—— saw, to his horror and amazement, that the dog's body was blood-stained, "while the skin appeared to have been actually sucked or puckered in spots," and the animal staggered as if from exhaustion. In cutting the vine the twigs curled like living, sinuous fingers about Mr. D——'s hand, and it required no slight force to free the member from its clinging grasp, which left the flesh red and blistered.

Six Months in a Bath.

Life in a bath must be somewhat monotonous, but it is quite common in the best of our modern hospitals. At first it was tried only in a few absolutely hopeless cases, but the results were so satisfactory that various forms of disease are now systematically treated by continuous immersion in water.

Some time ago, for instance, a young girl was brought to a complication of terrible diseases. She was a mere shadow, and nothing but death was before her under ordinary treatment. But an ingenius doctor placed her on a sheet and sank her into a warm bath in that only her head remained above water. The bath was kept constantly warm, and in it she ate, drank, and slept for 183 days and nights. At the end of the time she stepped out fat and strong.

In skin diseases the continuous bath is invaluable, for it can be medicated. And many hopeless cases of burning have been successfully treated in this extraordinary way.

Army Cat Boarded.

Lovers of puss w I learn with regret that the German Army cat is doomed. For some time past the Kaiser's military establishment has included a regularly organized corps of cats, whose function it is to protect the military stores from mice. These cats are trained in their duties by the inevitable drill-sergeant. They wear badges and receive rations and medical attendance. Now the announcement is officially made that this corps is to be disbanded, inasmuch as Professor Loeffler has discovered a species of typhus bacillus which is fatal to mice, and whose services will, in consequence, be substituted for those of the cats.

One can easily imagine the military Tom, after undergoing a physical examination and being mustered in, donning his badge and reporting for duty, and drawing his daily rations of milk and cat's meat. What puzzles one is what food the typhus bacillus will consume and whether it will wear a badge.

Natty Short Jackets.

The Eton and zouave jackets continue to appear on suits with very many of the autumn costumes, and an unusually pretty one is made of dark navy serge, and opening at the sides of the top of the front breadth after the fashion of the bicycle suits. Odd colors are combined in these costumes; blues are lined and faced with green and heliotrope; browns have military red or yellow vests, etc., and although there are only glimpses to be seen between button-trimmed straps, slashed fronts, folds, and the like, these glimpses give a touch of color which renders the gown smart or otherwise.

Strange Dishes.

Horseflesh, sassfleah and muleflesh are now eaten in such large quantities in France that the regular butchers who deal in beef and mutton are getting uneasy. In the dingy restaurants frequented by the poorer orders of Rome, Florence, and Naples, dog is one better. There, a dish composed of the harmless wood serpent's flesh is regarded as something of a dainty.

Braid Popular for Trimming.

Mohair braid in various widths and buttons of graded sizes for the skirts and bodices of rough dress fabrics, and silk braid and small tailor buttons ornament the costumes made of finer weaves of wool and silk and wool materials.

Never enter a sick-room in a state of perspiration, as the moment you become cool your pores absorb any infection that may be there. Do not approach contagious diseases with an empty stomach, nor sit between the sick and the fire, because the heat extracts the vapors.

Hand-Reared Calves.

Successful to a marked degree in all my ventures in calf rearing, I would suggest that all calves be hand fed from the very start. The reason is the necessity of weaning calf and mother from each other is thus avoided. This has been made one of the cruelest of farm practices. No calf need run a day with its mother or ever be allowed to suck. It can be fed beside the cow at night and kept within sight and sound of her through the day. Thus treated both calf and mother become weaned in a little time. In a very short time the calf may be turned into the pasture or lot with its mother and thus allowed to forage, giving any trouble about sucking.

My best cows, Jerseys and common stock, have developed from hand-fed calves. They were regularly given milk that was sweet and warm. A calf that is allowed to become hungry and thirsty, and then allowed to gorge, becomes "podded" and ill-shaped. Three times a day is not too often to give milk to a calf under three months of age. Scalded chop-feed, a reasonable quantity to each feed of which is desirable. The making or ruining of a cow lies largely in the hands of her owner. Blood and breeding are the main factors, to be sure, but the best of thoroughbred blood, and the most careful breeding of pure pedigree, may become of no avail, if that calf be left to come up, instead of being rightly brought up.

It is unwise to give much corn as soon as she will eat it. Oats ground or whole are always good for her. Eggs if to spare, broken in, are very advantageously added to the milk once in a while. She responds by showing you a glossy coat and a general air of thriftiness. Add of late, I have used blood-meal, a teaspoonful at first and but once a day in a feed of milk. This amount can be increased to twice and three times that amount, but give only once a day. Practical experience of years proves to me that hand-reared calves are the best and most valuable. Such a calf must first be fed a proportion of new milk and later on sweet skimmilk, and a generous quantity of bone and muscle producing foods.—Nellie Hawks in Agriculturist.

Keeping Cream in Winter.

In small dairies where it takes a long time to secure cream enough for a churning, it often becomes sour, smells and tastes bad, but is not sour. One of the best ways out of the difficulty, with the conveniences usually at hand, is to keep the cream in as cool a place as possible, but below freezing. If it gets before churning, place the can in hot water, stirring frequently until the temperature of the cream reaches 85 degrees. Then put the can where it will keep warm. The next morning it will be sour with that refined sourness which proves that it is of the proper acidity. If not warm enough to churn properly, put it again in warm water and stir so that it will warm evenly.

The Yellow-Skin Fad.

In mating fowls for breeding stock, from which to raise broilers and roasters, each fowl should be select d with care. If the flesh and skin are not deep yellow, the fowl should be rejected. Poultry in trade in the New England markets and to an same degree in the best trade of many western cities does not want white-meated poultry. The male bird is of the first importance. He is half the flock. Yellow-meated poultry is a fad in the markets in certain sections, and there is no use in kicking against it so long as we can make money out of it. Even a yellow-skinned breed will be found if not fed right. Nothing but yellow corn meal will make the yellowest meat.—W. H. Hadd, in Agriculturist.

Why Winter Squash Rot.

Many people who grow winter squashes complain that the fruit will not keep for any length of time after it is removed from the vines to the vegetable cellar. They have also occasionally feat in the choice of varieties, but this is not usually the case, since the favorite late variety is still the old reliable Hubbard, a variety noted for its keeping qualities. Generally the fault rests with the man, who, occupied with other matters, lets his "hardy" vegetables lie in the field exposed to the frost long after they should be stored, and when he removes them, grumbles because these crops must be left until the weather is "most too cold to work out of doors."

How to Kill Lice on Hogs.

Hogs will invariably take to the water when given an opportunity, especially when troubled with lice. If the animals have a "wallow" one should be provided. This is easy to accomplish. Simply dig a hole and fill with water and the hogs will do the rest. When the wallow is formed pour over its surface kerosene oil varying in amount according to size of wallow. The mud and water will then treated become sure death to the lice on the hogs.

Measuring Hay.

The quality of hay varies so widely that it is very difficult to get an accurate measurement of a certain quantity. It is generally believed, however, that 400 cubic feet, taking it right through, will make a ton. A mow, 24x12x6 would, therefore, contain very close to 11 1-2 tons.

FATHER AND SON.

Both are Kings and Have Reigned for Thirty-Five Years.

Father and son celebrate the thirty-fifth anniversary of their accession to thrones within a month of each other, and strange to say, King George, of Greece, had royal honor, even before his aged father, for the former ascended his throne October 31st, 1863 and King Christian, of Denmark, was crowned on November 15, of the same year.

Prince Christian, a fourth son of the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, had been brought up in the ordinary military career of princes without expectations. He had a small salary, she a small dot. For ten years they had to practice the most rigid economies. Then came a slight betterment in his condition and an enormous and unexpected change in his prospects. On May 8, 1852, the apparently inextricable confusion into which the question of the Danish succession had lapsed was straightened out by the protocol of London, and Prince Christian was formally recognised as heir to his wife's cousin, King Frederick VII. of Denmark. The couple received the title of Royal Highnesses, and later Christian became inspector general and commander in chief of the Danish cavalry in a miniature army of forty thousand all told. This turn of Fortune's wheel, however, made little if none as a dividend to the Danish.

Simultaneously with the accession of the Prince of Schleswig-Holstein to the throne rival claimants arose for the duchies of Schleswig-Holstein, which had been part of the possessions of King Frederick VII. of Denmark. The extinction of his dynasty, it was asserted, and the substitution of a new one, had entirely altered the change in the household's style of existence until the year 1863, when Frederick's death brought the prince to the rights of succession in these provinces. It is needless to enter into the merits of this involved and difficult controversy. Lord Palmerston used to say: —"There have been but two men who really comprehended the question about the duchies—Prince Albert, who is dead, and I, who have forgotten." Suffice it to say that after diplomatic wrangles, which closed in an appeal to arms, Prussia, allied with Germany all took a hand in the fight, and the first of these great countries, widening the wily hand of Bismarck, succeeded in robbing little Denmark of the three duchies of Holstein, Schleswig and Lauenburg, which it added them to her own dominions. France and England looked on growlingly, but both concluded not to interfere.

After this loss of one-third of the kingdom internal troubles arose in that portion of the dominions which still remained to King Christian. King and parliament could never agree, a characteristic that both have retained almost to the present time. Ministerial crises in Denmark have been as frequent as revolutions in South America.

But in his home life he found a relief from the strains of ruling, and the story of the splendid marriages of his sons and daughters has become an old one by rote to every household in Christendom.

THE WASP AS AN ENGINEER.

Bit of Insect Cleverness That Won Praise From Army Men.

Several members of the United States engineer corps were interested witness a of a feat of insect engineering over the road on which they were working. One of their number found a blue ground wasp dragging along the ground a dead swamp spider onequarter the size of a full grown tarantula. Whether the wasp killed the spider or found it dead is a question beyond solution. He was having a hard time dragging his prey along, and presently left it to go prospecting for his abode. The discoverer of the wasp called his companions, and the three in coming stepped upon the wasp's ground hole, crushing down some blades of dried grass across it. This caused no little trouble to the insect, who, upon locating the hole, nipping away at the obstructing stalks with his strong mandibles until he had cleared a passage. Then he went back and sized up the spider, walking around the big body and surveying it from all sides.

"He's going to find the hole isn't big enough," said one of the engineers.

"That's all right, he'll fix it," said another, as the insect went back and commenced vigorously widening the entrance to his domicile.

Again he returned to the spider, seized it and dragged it to within a foot of the orifice. To the spectators it was evident that more work would have to be done before the spider could be dragged in. This struck the insect in the same light, and again he left the body, examining it carefully, and returned to the hole to take measurements. He went to digging a second time. Having dug for two minutes, he brought his prey up to the edge of the hole, tipped out a piece of dirt here, cut away a grass stem there, and after fifteen minutes of hard and skilful labor disappeared underground, dragging the spider after him, doubtless to form the piece de resistance in a winter storehouse. The engineers then resumed their work, exchanging comments of admiration.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"If you do not marry me I shall hang myself," exclaimed a lovelorn Denver young man.

"Well, if you do, please go down a block," was the cheerful response. "For I heard papa s, y he did not want you to hang around here."—Denver Times.

THE MATCH-MAKER.

The service was just beginning when I got to church. There was such a crowd that I slipped into a dull corner facing a wall.

Immediately in front of me I noticed a young girl, quite shabbily dressed. She seemed conscious of her poor appearance, and evidently shrank from notice.

Presently a gentleman came in, very well dressed and with an air of wealth somehow, but instead of the self-confidence of his class he also was shy and shrinking. Poor man, he was deformed. He couldn't help knowing there was a woman of some kind next to him, but he seemed to pull himself together to avoid her.

We got to the first hymn. She couldn't find it—wrong book. Civility compelled him to offer his, and very shyly, coloring crimson, the thumb of her shabby glove grasped the extreme corner.

At the next hymn and the next they were getting quite friendly in an unspoken way.

I felt very interested. I am a born match-maker, and always like to give heaven a little assistance, but I didn't quite see what I could do in this promising case.

However, chance favored me. Coming out of church there was a heavy shower. I was delighted to find my son George waiting for me with an umbrella. I always find him thoughtful.

"I knew you wouldn't have one," he said so triumphantly that I wished to goodness I had.

"Hullo, Meredith, haven't you got an umbrella either? Serves you right."

"Hush," I said, squeezing him arm. To my great delight George caught on, speaking to the man I had noticed in church.

"Perhaps you will come home with us," I said, smiling sweetly, "and wait till the shower is over."

I managed it all so beautifully; he came in to supper, and got on so well that in a very short time he was quite a frequent visitor. He seemed at ease in a house where there were no tall girls to look calmly at him with perfectly composed manner. George's boyish tastes were in rest for his studious soul, and I am sure he liked me almost as much as I liked him.

At a large "at home" one afternoon one of the musicians was a Miss Sydney-Jones, and while I was dreamily wondering what on earth could have her badly-made frock caught my eye, and I beamed. It was the shabby young lady I had seen in church.

Five minute later she was sitting by me. I praised her playing, asked in her then a number of questions out of her that she was a music teacher, and evidently not much at that.

I arranged for her to come to tea and bring her music, and took care that Mr. Meredith dropped in at the same time. I saw he looked peculiarly at the girl, but was sure he remembered her. Perhaps he had often thought of her in the silent watches of the night. Perhaps George is right that I incline to be sentimental. Miss Jones seemed unable to conceal her extreme shyness, and my son kindly tried to put her at her ease.

Mr. Meredith looked on with sad eyes. I knew what he was thinking of, but he depreciated himself; if the girl had any sense she would take him at his true worth.

The tuning of the fiddle-strings sent George flying; but Mr. Meredith watched every movement with such admiration that the girl's head was turned, and she put on little airs of importance. Quite finished the man so woman had ever designed to flirt with before.

I slept that night with the blissful consciousness of having done a good action, helped in a difficult job.

Before I went to sleep I thought I would give the girl a wedding-dress and decided where it would be nice for them to live.

About twice a week the little comedy went on. At first Mr. Meredith made some excuse for coming; afterwards, quite suddenly, he and I understood each other.

Miss Jones lost her shyness, or it took a new form. The little hesitation and glance which accompanied her speech George once described as "fetching." I was so glad for Mr. Meredith's sake.

* * * * * * *

I was idling over the tea-table one afternoon, rather wishing my "young couple" would turn up, when I heard Mr. Meredith's knock at the front door. I started to my feet when he came in, and my heart seemed to choke me, for no reason whatever. I don't know how it was, but I knew.

He had the look of a saint on his face—a look of humility, sympathy—what did his mis-shapen shoulders matter with such a soul as that?

"I was to break it to you," he said; "but I see you know. They were married this morning at St. Luke's. They didn't tell you, for fear you should be angry, they said."

Oh, my son, my son!!

The "Tramp and Rat" Fable.

Once upon a time a Tramp was Sorely in need of Something to Eat, and approaching a Farmhouse, he spake unto the Farmer, saying: "If you will give me the Wherewithal to satisfy the Cravings of the Inner Man, I will kill all the Rats about the place."

"Agreed," said the Wife of the Soil, and he ordered his Good Wife to give the Tramp a Square Meal. After the Tramp had Devoured everything in sight he went to the woodpile and selected a stout Club; then, seating Himself on the Porch, he said to the Farmer, quoth: "Now bring on your Rats."—Chicago News.

Deceiving Jersey Stomachs.

It is an old and somewhat trite saying that when you touch a man's pocketbook you touch him in a tender spot, but it is equally as true that the ordinary citizen is as sensitive about the welfare of his stomach. Especially is this so of Jerseymen who enjoy living high as well as any class of people on top of the earth. Therefore when the people of New Jersey learn, from State Dairy Commissioner McGuire's annual report, how their palates and stomachs have been cruelly deceived by the ingenious venders of food products, they will want to take an ax to somebody.

Commissioner McGuire reports that during the past year 753 samples were analyzed, and that of these 308 were adulterated. The greatest amount of adulteration was found in cream of tartar, tomato catsup, honey, syrup and coffee. In the case of cream of tartar, one-half of the samples examined were found to contain foreign substances, chiefly starch and sulphates. In honey and syrup more than one-half of the samples were found to contain glucose; this was also the case with molasses. Chicory was the principle adulteration in coffee. Over one-half of the samples of tomato catsup were found to contain salicylic acid.

The Consolidation.

After nearly four years of discussion and work on the part of those especially interested, the project of a Greater Plainfield seems in a fair way of coming to a question upon which every one will have his share of determining whether or not it is to succeed.

The meeting of the consolidation committee of the city, borough and Board of Trade Friday night was important in the fact that Senator Reed rendered a report explaining definitely one phase of the consolidation talk, and also in the fact that resolutions were adopted which will result in the people voting on the project.

Senator Reed's report of the conditions that will prevail if the consolidation is effected without a change of county lines is clear and concise. He takes a rather dubious view of the situation of a Greater Plainfield in two seperate counties. He is right, however, in taking such a view Were we one municipality in local government and two in county affairs we believe that it would not be a condition that would be conducive to peace of mind or an even-going administration of public affairs.

Even those who favor the consolidation without changing the county lines do so on the ground that it would stir up such a muss in local affairs that it would compel the changing of the county lines. But unless the consolidation can be accomplished without such friction it is best to leave the city and the borough remain as they are. As a matter of fact, who knows but that if the consolidation was accomplished without changing the county lines and the arrangement should not be satisfactory, that it might not result in the re-establishment of the borough on the other side of Green brook. Certainly, then it would be better to have never effected the consolidation.

The proposition of consolidating the city and borough upon a fair and satisfactory basis will be a serious problem. It will be one which will require diplomacy of a high degree, but if it can be secured without creating too much disturbance it will be warmly welcomed by the majority of both city and borough.

A Dubious View.

The project of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield into one municipality is attracting considerable interest throughout the State, as it is realized that in such a consummation another city of considerable population and influence would result. The Newark News, which is one of the most observing of New Jersey papers, devoted considerable space to the subject yesterday. After presenting in substance Senator Reed's report on the possibility of effecting the consolidation without changing the county lines, The News says:

While Senator Reed's presentation of the reasons why consolidation without change of county lines is impracticable convinced the joint committee, that body decided not to give up the agitation, but to continue upon the plan of including both municipalities in either Union or Somerset counties. Right here is the rock upon which the movement is likely to be wrecked. Plainfield having the advantage in population, will no doubt insist that the borough shall forsake Somerset and come to it, while whatever may be the sentiment in North Plainfield itself, Somerset county will not voluntarily relinquish such a large slice of its wealth and population. In many ways consolidation would be of material benefit to both municipalities were it not for the divided county jurisdiction, but this artificial barrier is a difficult one to remove, and in all probability will suffice to seperate Plainfield and North Plainfield for several years to come.

Publishing the Laws.

Several years of experience in attempting to properly disseminate the laws enacted by the State Legislature through pamphlets has proven a failure. Possessed of an economical spasm that vented itself in putting the ban on the publication of the laws in the only proper channels—the newspapers of the State—the reform Legislature that enacted the law worked with ill regard for the information and the protection of the people for whom it legislated. Successive sessions of the Legislature have failed to change the worthless substitute, which the reformers instituted, in fear that the slight increase in State expenses that a proper law would incur might prove a bugbear to the cheese-paring element of the dear public. But this plan for getting the laws before the people, which it signally fails to accomplish, is likely to be abandoned by a new law which the next session of the Legislature will be asked to pass.

Senator Cross, of Union county, will probably father the measure. The plan will be considerably changed from the old one, and will be more discriminating and careful in operating, so that the money that will be expended under it will be appropriated with more regard for the good it will do in reaching the greatest number of people rather than the political subsidy it will afford party organs. The amount it will require to get the new laws before the people will be considerably less, it is said, than under the law that was repealed. However, the result will be in better acquainting the people with those laws and formally relieving the State of the responsibility of not letting the people to know that which their servants have enacted for their benefit and control.

So far as the present system is concerned, it is an utter waste of money for it to be continued.

A Fair Hearing.

As we anticipated, the trolley ordinance was presented and adopted on first and second readings last night. Leaving out entirely the question of whether or not the terms are fair and proper for the city, we cannot but help think that that such action was precipitate under the circumstances. The only question at issue in the agitation concerning the extension of the trolley is one of what the terms are to be. It is an admitted fact that everyone is anxious to see the trolley cars running in every direction.

For the public sake invited to appear at the Common Council chamber last night to be heard for or against the proposed terms when these stipulations were unknown till the ordinance was read at a rapid rate by the acting clerk. Presumably the Council concluded that Plainfielders were possessed of memories forty miles or more in length and were veritable phonographic machines that were capable of jotting down correctly the multitude of details as they were presented hastily. In order to appear at the hearing in an intelligent manner such a capacity would have been necessary for anyone who cared to discuss with any degree of earnestness the terms therein proposed.

It took the clerk of the Council forty-five minutes to read the papers in connection with the introduction of the ordinance, and yet the honored councilman believed that they were acting in the spirit of a fair hearing to assume that any man could talk intelligently on the exact terms under those circumstances!

That old proposition to consolidate the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield has been revived, and is to be agitated in the Legislature. There is much to be said in favor of consolidation, while the arguments against it are, with one exception, of trifling importance. This exception is, however, an exceedingly difficult one to get over, because it consists in the fact that, while the city and the borough are cheek by jowl, they are in different counties, the city in Union and the borough in Somerset. Clearly it would never do to have a consolidated city with part of it in one county and part in another. This is where the puzzle begins. Shall North Plainfield be annexed to Union County? The remainder of Somerset says "No," because Somerset is small enough already, and can't afford to lose any of its taxable property. Annex Plainfield to Somerset? The mere suggestion will fill up progressive citizens of Plainfield to a white heat. They say that Union's energy in road-building and in other directions just suits them. And Republicans in other sections of the county don't want to lose Plainfield's big Republican vote. So there you are.—New York Tribune.

MAD MULLAH'S PLIGHT.

(Written for The Daily Press.)

There is war again in Swat.
All about—I don't know what;
And the tribesmen now hurrah
For the conquering Mad Mullah.

But they soon will cease their whoops—
Day by day the British troops
Nearer and still nearer draw,
Seeking for the Bad Mullah.

They for him will make it hot;
They will teach him what is Swat;
When he feels the Lion's paw
He will be the Sad Mullah.

Better School Advantages.

When Mr. Grigge, then Governor of New Jersey, selected Charles J Baxter, of Plainfield, as the head of State school affairs, he picked a man who is constantly demonstrating his particular fitness for the position. Superintendent Baxter is not only an administrative genius of educational realms. During his service as State School Superintendent he has brought about several innovations in connection with public schools, but his latest proposition, made in his annual report to the State Board of Education, is perhaps the one that is most important and shows in a thorough manner his studious and perceptive mind in relation to the institutions of which he is the official head in the State.

In this report Superintendent Baxter makes a strong plea for equal educational facilities for public schools throughout the State. It is a recognised fact that only those whose fate of residence brings them into well-populated communities are possessed of the high and graded grammar schools advantages. The district school still prevails in rural communities and while in many ways they afford excellent advantages for instructions to the youth of their particular sections they do not gratify ambitious pupils with the curriculum of studies that they years for. Under the present condition of affairs young people aspiring to equip themselves for higher instruction are compelled to go to a place where such advantages do exist. That, of course, entails extra cost for tuition and for expenses of transporation to and fro, as well as the cost of living while away from home if the distance of their chosen school is such as to prevent them going back and forth each day. This state of affairs naturally bars many by force of financial circumstances from securing the education that they are desirous of.

The discerning mind has suggested to Mr. Baxter the need of a better system of instruction in the rural communities, and he recommends such legislation as will permit the establishment of township, union or county secondary schools, the instruction of which shall be free to all pupils qualified for admission and residing within an area for which such schools have been established. In this way the field of High School education will be widened, and to a large extent the problem of providing equal schooling for the urban and the rural communities will have been solved.

At the next session of the Legislature Superintendent Baxter will ask for the appropriation of funds necessary to carry out his plans.

With Allan McDermott in the Senate and young Leon Abbett in the Senate the Democrats will not be barren of capable leaders. If the young Mr. Abbett exhibits any of the aggressiveness that his father made a display of when in power he will doubtless worry the Republicans somewhat. Republicans say that the legislative session will be almost entirely devoted to the consideration of subjects of a non-partisan character. With the present laws on the statute books concerning the distribution of the public patronage they say they are well pleased, and they consider it wise to leave well enough alone. The people have indorsed their policy and they have no desire to meddle with buzz saws.

The Newark News editorial writers have been attracted to the utterances of Senator Reed in reference to the outcome of the election in Somerset county, and after reviewing the situation in a half column editorial The News says:

This is Senator Reed's last year in the Senate, and, although it has been said that he would not seek re-election, it has been generally supposed that he would again be the Republican candidate. If he had such ambition, Senator Reed's audacity in throwing down the gauntlet to the present leadership bespeaks him a bold fighter who disdains to meet his enemies other than face to face. It is scarcely probable that the published correspondence will tend to promote harmony among Somerset Republicans. What effect it may have on Senator Reed's aspirations toward the presidency of the Senate is another question.

John Naegle is one of the best justices of the peace Plainfield has ever enjoyed. Incidentally it might be said that Mr. Naegle has never officiated in any sort of case that his official power gives him the right to. More of his kind would be better for New Jersey.

Admiral Dewey is said to be anxious to come home from Manila. He deserves almost anything that he asks for.

TROLLEY WILL GO TO SCOTCH PLAINS.

City Fathers Pass Franchise on First and Second Readings.

A REVISED ORDINANCE.

STREET RAILWAY COMPANY GRANTED MANY CONCESSIONS AT LAST.

Councilman Barrows Explained the "Star Chamber" Proceedings—Few Objectors Present—The Proposed Ordinance Fairly Swamped Them by Its Magnitude—Another Public Hearing December 29th.

After months of trial and tribulation, the Plainfield street railway is in a fair way to secure what it wants, a franchise for the Scotch Plains extension of its lines. Monday the Common Council held an adjourned meeting and continued the hearing of the trolley ordinance. The draft of the proposed ordinance was sprung and those of the objectors who did appear were fairly overcome by the magnitude of the draft and the multiplicity of its provisions. The addition of a number of important concessions by the Street Railway Company, over the original draft, made it apparent that the city had gained much through the efforts of the so called "objectors." All the Councilmen were present except Mr. Andrews, who is ill.

In the absence of City Clerk MacMurray of Illness, Mr. Wean, his assistant was made clerk pro tem.

After, a successful motion to dispense with regular order of business, Mr. Barrows defended his recent actions in the Council. The so-called "star chamber" proceedings, he said, were simply meetings between the street committee and the representatives of the Street Railway Company in efforts to arrange a suitable franchise satisfactory to both parties. He denied the charge made by The Daily Press that his actions had been in variance to his remarks that he was anxious to have the people fully acquainted with all the details of affairs in the Council.

He then called up the proposed ordinance to its first reading for information.

The draft of the ordinance was a lengthy one an I took over half an hour to read. Its provisions were so multitudious that no one could reach a full understanding of it without a study of it. Portions of the ordinance conformed with those of the original trolley ordinance.

The full text of the ordinance will be found in another column.

Before the hearers had fairly recovered breath from the mass of facts hurled at their heads, Mr. Barrows gave the clerk the articles of agreement between the city and the Street Railway Company and explained that they were more stringent even than the ordinance and were equally as binding.

In the articles of agreement the Plainfield Street Railway Company agreed to protect the city in event of any law suit which might in any way be the result of the granting of the franchise or the laying of the tracks and the running of the cars. The company, in another provision, agreed to defend the city in any suit that the County Board of Freeholders might bring as a result of any trouble regarding the use of Richmond street by the trolley. It was agreed that the company should macadamize Richmond street from Putnam avenue to East Second street, and East Second street from Richmond street to the end of that thoroughfare. The macadamizing is to be from curb to curb, 6 inches deep in the middle and 3 inches deep at the curb. All snow thrown by the plow to the side of the street is to be removed within twelve hours after the storm. All cross walks covered by the snow from the plows are to be cleaned by the company's employes. Regarding repairs or new paving done to any streets in the city where the lines of the company run, the company agrees to pay one-third the cost where there is a single track and one-half the cost where there are double tracks or turnouts.

Mr. Barrows had more ready. Next was a communication from the Plainfield Street Railway regarding the Arlington avenue extension, which, he declared, was equally binding with the agreement. It stated that the Company would build a single track extension from West Fourth street, through Arlington avenue, to Randolph road, to the bicycle track, to the Hillside cemetery and the golf links when the necessary consents were secured, the Company agreeing to do its best in securing them. The service will not be required to be over 30 minutes headway until each car pays $15 per day when the service on that extension will be the same as that on the rest of the lines. In case the Council decides to widen Arlington avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets, the Company agrees to give $500. The Company stated its willingness to place the Arlington avenue extension in operation within twelve months after the franchise was granted.

An addenda to the communication was read in which the Company stated that under the same terms it would run an extension through any of the streets of the city if the consents were obtained and $15 a day per car could be reasonaly guaranteed, provided the new extension was three blocks from any other branch and was 1 3-4 miles long, or forfeit $10,000.

The reading of the ordinance and the communications lasted 45 minutes.

Then the public hearing was opened. F. E. Kinsman was the first to speak. He said that he was much pleased with some of the features and wished to congratulate the street committee on securing them. He remarked that the ordinance was a little too much for him that night.

President Baker observed that he didn't see that they could help him any. Mr. Kinsman said that he had thought he understood the trolley ordinances, but after listening to that one he didn't know.

Here Mr. VanHerwerden came forward with the announcement that Mr. Riker, of the Street Railway Company, had agreed to pay for one-half the street improvements at Putnam avenue and West Fourth street, instead of one-third, as previously announced.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray had a few observations. He, too, remarked on the immensity of the ordinance and the impossibility to digest it all at one reading. He thought that the ordinance should be so read that any changes made to the city line would give the new sections the same privileges now granted to the city. He criticised the provision that allowed a change of power to be made by resolution instead of ordinance, and thought that the powers of the commissioners to arrange the terms should not be limited. He also announced his belief that a 25-year limit should have been put in it. He smiled at the very complicated method to ascertain exactly what the city gets every year, and said that it would take a mighty good accountant to discover it. It was his opinion that with such a rush of new concessions the city might have had even more by holding on for a while. He concluded by expressing his belief in railway extensions, but thought the city ought to get all it can.

There were other remarks for both sides that didnt bear directly on the question, only Mr. Kinsman remarked that he wanted to register his objection to the 99 and 50 year features.

The ordinance was next called up to its second reading and the first section was read. Then Mr. Hetfield told how he had carefully refrained from saying anything either way, but had thought very deeply. He now approved of it. He removed the opposition in a few words, telling that he had failed to find any excepts from the newspapers, which he confidently believed did not express the feeling of the people. He threw out hints of the armies of First ward citizens that had hurried to him to beg that the ordinance might go through at once.

He scorned the Press' comparison with the Chicago Alderman, and told his collegues, for the others had almost all gone home, how much better a franchise it was for Plainfield than those that any of the neighboring cities and towns had awarded.

Mr. VanHerwerden told how he had been criticized for obstructing the trolley. He had stood out, he said, against the granting of a franchise in perpetuity for the Arlington avenue extension. Both points had been gained by the city. Other Councilmen had a little to say. The reading of the ordinance was then finished, adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised. Further public hearing will be continued on the evening of Thursday, December 28th. A special meeting will be held the night after the franchise will be finally adopted without doubt.

After the return to the regular order of business, there was a petition received for a new fire alarm box at the corner of Johnston avenue and George street and the fourth payment to Wyman & Haberle for the new engine house ordered paid

REED TO WIELD GAVEL IN THE STATE SENATE

Senator Ketcham, of Essex, Out of the Race.

JOHNSON TO BE LEADER.

BERGEN COUNTY MAN WILL BE IN LINE FOR PROMOTION.

It is Understood in State Political Circles That Senator Reed Will Be Out of the Senate After the Next Session—Senator Johnson Would Then Be the Logical President at Next Session

Presidency of the Senate the only bone of contention of any consequence, the Republican politicians feel out of their element because they have nothing else to talk about. The contest for that office now lies between Senators Johnson and Reed, the prevailing opinion being that Senator Ketcham is virtually out of the race.

The Republican Senators, while they are willing to listen to the advice of the leaders of their party and do whatever is deemed necessary to promote its interests, yet with regard to the Senate office in question they do not see any good reason why they should forego their personal choice and vote for a presiding officer at the dictation of one county alone. In other words, they do not care to be coerced into voting for a man, no matter how qualified he may be for the office, when no special political purpose is to be served, and when their personal inclinations are for another. It is not that they dislike Senator Ketcham at all that they oppose him, but they prefer either Mr. Reed or Mr. Johnson.

It would seem that so far Mr. Reed has the call. He is about to enter upon the last year of his term, and his friends say he will not be a candidate for re-election. This, then, perhaps would be his last chance to become President of the Senate. Mr. Johnson is about to enter upon a new term of three years, and by withdrawing from the present contest an understanding could be arrived at by which he could get the office in 1900. Probably such an arrangement may meet with favorable consideration.

JUDGE STILLMAN ON THE BENCH.

Had His First Active Work in the City Court Monday Morning.

City Judge William M. Stillman, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge DeMeza, had his first active work last Monday in the City Court. City Judge-elect W. N. Runyon was also present and was given a place on the bench where he could see how it was done.

Judge Stillman had quite a batch of offenders on which he had to pass sentence. None of the cases were particularly aggravated and no serious punishment was meted out. Judge Stillman has had practice on the local bench before so the routine of the court was not new to him.

Funeral of Miss French.

The funeral services of the late Miss Adelia H. French were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Bird, on Park avenue. Rev. Dr. Yerkes officiated and spoke eloquent words concerning the exemplary Christian life of the departed. During the service Mrs. J. H. Manley sang impressively "Rock of Ages," and "Lead Kindly Light." The interment was in Hillside Cemetery and those who acted as pall-bearers were O. Frank French, N. W. French, Morgan Bird and L. E. Hart.

CONDE DIDN'T COME

But His Dusky Acquaintances Did and Were Fined by Judge Stillman.

Patrolman Totten arrested two colored women and a white man Saturday evening for being disorderly on Front street. They were afterwards released by Sergeant Kiely to appear Monday morning before City Judge Stillman. The colored women, Mary Walker and Annie Parker, were arraigned last Monday. Jacob Conde, of Manson place, failed to appear.

The circumstances were told and the Judge found both women guilty according to their own statement. He offered them their choice between a fine of $3 or ten days in the county jail. Both said they had no money.

JENKINS DIDN'T HIT HIM.

IF HE HAD, THE CITY JUDGE WOULDN'T HAVE BEEN NEEDED.

Pugnacious Little Charlie Wyett Objected to His Wife Sitting at Table With Another Man—Trouble Followed.

The Wyetts celebrated their wedding anniversary in the City Court this morning. Six years have they been married, and it is now decidedly evident that marriage in their case, at least, has proved a dismal failure. It was the conclusion of a little drama in which Charles Wyett and his dusky spouse and one tall and powerful Sherman Jenkins were in the leading parts. It happened thuswise.

Wyett works at Aller's restaurant, Newark, and has been coming home every two weeks. On each and every occasion, there has been trouble before he departed.

"It isn't the drink alone," his wife told Judge Stillman. "But it's the devil that's in him."

Sherman Jenkins is a large and sturdy son of Ham who is employed by T. J. Carey. He has been boarding at the home of Mrs. Ceasar Peterson, of 507 East Sixth street. Mrs. Peterson's daughter, Mrs. Wyett, lives with her. After working late Saturday afternoon, Sherman came to the house and began a substantial meal. Mrs. Wyett sat at the table with him.

Wyett is rather tiny but with a wildly ferocious moustache that might awe a lesser man than Jenkins. He entered and demanded to know why this was. Jenkings despatched a large potato and paid no attention. Then the irate husband began to swear. Still Jenkins' eyes were riveted on his plate. Then Wyett waved his hands about and in the face of the diner. His actions grew so unpleasant that Jenkins finally rose in his seat and gave Wyett a push. He finally removed the husband from the room.

"If I'd hit him once, Judge," remarked Jenkins, "there wouldn't have been any need of you." The Judge fined Wyett $5.

"Why can't he stay away and leave me be?" exclaimed the wife. "I don't want him." Then the Judge exclaimed that he didn't have anything to do with that.

The seventh anniversary of the organization of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was observed Saturday morning with appropriate exercises. The service took the place of the regular morning service in the church. Miss Luella Clawson, president of the society, presided.

The report of the secretary, Asa Randolph, was read by him giving an interesting sketch of the year's work. He showed that in the seven years of life, the society had contributed over $1,400 toward missionary and tract work. There are now 72 active members, a net increase of 4 over last year. The entire increase amounted to 14. The society is educating a girl at Alfred University and contributing toward Salem College.

The report of the junior superintendent, Orra Rogers, showed that there were 6 children in the junior society from 27 families.

The address was made by Rev. Geo. B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church in New York. His subject was "The Bible From a Literary Point of View."

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents, large for 50 cents. All druggist keep it. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Accused of Attacking Shrager.

John Lines was arraigned before City Judge Stillman Monday morning charged with being one of the gang that attacked John Shrager, the Madison avenue tailor, the evening of Saturday, Nov. 19th. Lines admitted he was there, but his father demanded a trial for the lad. Lines was held in $100 bail, which was furnished by his father.

In Charge at Washingtonville.

Miss Florence G. Hawkins, president of the Local Union Christian Endeavor, and Thomas A. Cuming, took charge of the service at the Washingtonville Memorial chapel last Monday. Miss Hawkins delivered an address, and Mr. Cuming sang two solos.

"ATHALIE" RENDERED IN EXCELLENT MANNER

A Large and Musical Audience Heard the Choral.

SEVERAL FINE SOLOS GIVEN.

THE SINGING UNDER THE DIRECTION OF CONDUCTOR FITZHUGH.

Part First Consisted of a Rendition of Classical Numbers by the Soloists, Ending With "Star-Spangled Banner" by Choir and Audience—The Work of the Chorus was Strong in the Cantata.

The large audience that assembled in the First Baptist church last Monday was in every way an appreciative one, as well as a musical one. It was the first private concert given by the choir of the church and in every particular it was a success. The voices were well selected and under the direction of Edward J. Fitzhugh, conductor, the best results were obtained throughout.

Part first of the programme was devoted to a rendition of varied classical selections, in which Howard Case, organist, gave "Minuet Syphonique," by Salome; George H. Smith, tenor, the sanctus from "Messe Solenelle," by Gounod; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto, "The Three Singers," by Tours; William Holmes, baritone, selection from "Elijah," by Mendelssohn; Miss Juella C. Harris, "Hear Ye, Israel," Mendelssohn. The last number was the "Star Spangled Banner" by the choir and audience.

A decided feature of the work was the reading by Mrs. Frank J. Smith. Her efforts were superb, giving the lines with much feeling and strength. The work of the accompanists was perfect, and much preferable to an orchestra. Those who had charge of the arrangement of the concert and those who took part have reason to feel proud of the production.

The choir was composed of the following: Sopranos—Miss Harris, Mrs. Asa Collier, Mrs. Samuel Case, Mrs. H. E. Rider, Mrs. Harold Serrell. Mrs. Frank Hubbard, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Alma Runyon, Miss Clara Woodward. Miss Mabelle Smith, Miss Swain; contraltos—Mrs. Ward, Mrs. L. H Biglow, Jr., Mrs. J. H. Case, Mrs. William C. Hubbard, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Mary Collier; tenors W. McCutchen, George H. Smith, L. H. Biglow, Jr., Bradley Hall, Clifford Braider, Mr. Maxwell, J. E. Douglass; bassos—William Holmes, Geo. Taylor, Harry Drake, W. Beekman, B. T. Barnes, D. E. Titsworth, Wyatt Barnes and Messrs. Kirkpatrick.

The concert was given for the benefit of the Sunday-school of the church and a gratifying sum will be realized therefrom. To C. W. McCutchen much praise is due for his untiring efforts in giving the concert.

It is thought that the concert will net about $125 for the Sunday-school.

THE ELDER BROTHER.

Second of Series of Sermons to Young Men at Hope Chapel.

The second of the special sermons to young men was preached at Hope chapel last Sunday by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. His sermon was on "Jesus and the Brotherhood of Man. Our Elder Brother." His text was from Genesis 37:37, "For He is Our Brother in the Flesh."

He pointed out that Christ came on earth and became human and went through all the temptations that the rest of man has to meet. He further spoke on the principles that Christ expounded and how nothing would now meet with success unless it contained these same principles. The instruction to love your enemies, he pointed our, was illustrated in the recent war with Spain when the wounded and prisoners were humanely treated instead of being murdered as in conflicts in past centuries. He spoke of various organizations and said that they which lacked the principles of Christ had not and never would succeed. He talked of communism and pointed out that it had selfishness at its very root which would prevent its ever being successful. He closed with an appeal to follow closer in the steps of The Elder Brother."

Severe Bicycle Accident.

The breaking of the head to his bicycle has laid up James Taylor, of West Seventh street, for a few days, and will compel him to carry his left arm in a sling for several weeks to come. Taylor was riding his wheel down East Front street Saturday afternoon bound for Hyde's mill-pond to skate. He was riding at a fast clip when the head to his bicycle broke without warning and he was thrown heavily to the ground. His left elbow was dislocated by the blow and he was badly bruised by his contact with the frozen ground. He was carried home and is now there waiting for his injury to recover.

TO TRY TO SELL STOCK.

SILK MILL PROPOSITION REGARDED WITH GOOD DEAL OF FAVOR.

Special Committee of Board of Trade Make a Favorable Report—Plainfielders Must Subscribe for $35,000 Worth of Stock.

A special meeting of the Board of Management of the Board of Trade was held Monday to hear the report of the committee appointed to visit Paterson and investigate the claims made by the gentlemen who desire to establish a silk mill in this city.

The report was a very favorable one. The committee found the statements made by the promoters to be truthful, and the actual condition of affairs to be better than they said they were. It was the impression of the committee that the establishment of the silk mill would be a splendid thing for the business interests of the city. The matter was discussed with great interest by the board of management, and it was decided to call a special meeting of all the members of the Board for Thursday evening of this week to consider the propositions.

In the meantime Secretary Runyon was authorized to go among the business men and see how much stock would be subscribed for at $25 per share. It will be necessary to raise $35,000 to bring the mill here. Over half that sum is said to be in prospect now.

It is said that one man stands ready to take half the stock, but it is the purpose to make the enterprise a popular one and divide the stock among the people as much as possible.

A QUEER DECISION.

Borough Recorder Rules in a Way That Does Not Seem Regular.

George Benson, of the borough, was arraigned Monday afternoon before Recorder Long on a charge preferred by Frank Hull, his brother-in-law, who complained that Benson had illtreated his wife last Thursday evening. Lawyer Frank Bietz appeared in behalf of Benson, and both the complainant and the defendant's wife were present to substantiate the charge. After hearing the evidence the Recorder decided that Benson should be find $10, and then subsequently decided that he would suspend sentence. The Recorder warned Benson that if he ever appeared before him again as an offender he would extract the $10 imposed as a fine. Many are wondering how the Recorder can so dispose of the case.

Benson told the court that after last Thursday evening he and his wife lived like two angels. He said that he came in on the evening in question and asked his wife for ten cents. She replied by saying that she did not have it. Benson thought this a queer state of affairs, inasmuch as he had given his wife all his money. One word brought on another and thus the quarrel was started.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that is fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Good Address to Men.

Dr. Tomlinson's address Sunday at the men's meeting in the Seventh Day Baptist church, was a plain and forcible setting forth of the cause of physical and moral degeneracy, from the point of view of one who is both a physician of nature and experience, and is one with strong human and Christian sympathies. The paper was followed with most earnest words by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Superintendent H. M. Maxson. We wish hundreds of youths and men could have heard the things said.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

While J. V. N. Christopher, of Asbury Park, was enjoying his fall vacation at the home of his father, in East Millstone, Somerset county, he became the possessor of an old and curious-looking piece of Continental currency which he prizes highly as a souvenir of the early days of our Government. The half-dollar, for such it is, is about two and one-half by three inches in size, and looks as though it was an old piece of wrapping paper. Age has caused it to turn color. On the face, surrounded by a heavy border, are the words, "Half-dollar, acco-ding to a resolution of Congress passed at Philadelphia, February 17, 1776." The series is "B" and the number is "90,600." The signature looks like "S. O. Morris." It is in red ink but the two first initials are faded. On the reverse side is a chain, each link representing one of the thirteen original States, viz., New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Georgia, North and South Carolina. In the centre of the chain is another circle. On this the words, "American Congress, we are one," appears. At the bottom it says the half-dollar was "printed by Hall & Sellers in Philadelphia, 1776."

PAID AT "TUNLAW" ACCORDING TO AGES.

Tea and Birthday Party Given by Miss Wilson.

TO AID REDEEMER CHURCH.

PROFITS TO INCREASE THE BUILDING FUND.

The Home of Mayor Wilson Made Resplendent With Choice Decorations, With Pink the Prevailing Color—Large Attendance of Guests, Many Being From Out of Town—Those Who Assisted.

One of the delightful social events of the season was the tea and birthday party given Saturday afternoon from 3 until 7 o'clock by Miss Minnie Wilson at her beautiful home, "Tunlaw," in the borough. It was very largely attended by people from this city and borough, as well as many out-of-town people, including many of the local clergy. In fact, nearly every church was represented.

The affair was given for the benefit of the Church of the Redeemer building fund, and from a financial and social standpoint it was in every particular a success. Miss Wilson arranged and gave the entire affair, and she had the assistance of many of the ladies from the Church of the Redeemer. The home was resplendent in choice decorations, the principle color being pink. The decorations consisted of nature's rarest and choicest flowers, arranged in a way that brought forth the admiration of everyone present. The same flowers that were used for decoration were sold during the set hours and a handsome profit was realized therefrom. Of course the greatest profit was realized from the receipt of the birthday sacks, in which the recipient had placed cents to represent as many years as they were old. These sacks were displayed after the money was removed and it presented a very pretty sight. It is thought that the receipts will be considerable over $100.

Miss Wilson received the guests and she was assisted by Mrs. W. M Downey, wife of Rev. Mr. Downey, rector of the church. Everyone present remarked the entire absence of formality, and the hospitality of the hostess was proverbial.

Those who poured tea and bouillon were Mrs. Maurice Audsley and Mrs. Frank Bewley, while those in the dining room included Miss Barlow, Miss Moore, Miss Edith Clapp, Miss Faber, Miss Dora Waring, Miss Phillips, Miss May Audsley, of the borough, and Miss Wisner, of Brooklyn. The very handsome flower booth was in charge of Miss Helen Phillips, and the supply of flowers was entirely exhausted.

The money received will be added to the church building fund which at present is assuming large proportions. The lot upon which the church will be erected has been secured and paid for, and before the edifice is started a goodly sum is desired. That amount is rapidly being reached and before a great while the work of erecting the new church will be started. These teas will be continued during the winter at frequent intervals.

LAST NIGHT OF THE FAIR.

Sons of Veterans End a Successful Week's Event.

The last of the fair which has been conducted by the Sons of Veterans during the past week, was seen Saturday night when the bazaar closed with a grand sale of everything left, and a general cleaning out of the hall. The attendance was very large, and the weather having been so favorable to them all the week it is estimated that the proceeds will amount to $250.

Saturday night ended the contests, too, and the prize winners carried away the prizes. The contests were for collecting money, and George Wilson received the camera outfit. Miss Emma Naylor won the gold watch, but Miss Porter was such a close second that the committee decided to reward her in some way, and gave her a silver watch.

John Higgins, of the West End Hose Company, ran against Charles Smith, of Plainfield, for the fireman's hat and won it. Miss Maggie Kennedy won the gold watch chain. It is to the efforts of these workers that the amount raised is so large.

Epidemic in the Schools.

For several weeks past there has been a skin disease of a contagious nature prevalent among the pupils attending the public schools. It generally broke out on the hands or face, though sometimes it appeared all over the body. The medical name for it is impetigo. Local physicians say that it is dying out now.

Bachelors' Club Disbands.

The Bachelors' Club, an organization of young men of this city, has been dissolved by mutual consent of its members. It was the custom to meet weekly and play whist. Several of the members have left town, others have lost interest and it was deemed best to give up the whole affair.

SUGGESTED BOOK TITLES

INTERESTING AFFAIR GIVEN IN THE TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

A Chance for Book Worms to Show Their Talents—Various Curious Devices Made to Represent Book Titles.

One of the most unique entertainments given in any of the churches here this season was the "library social" at Trinity Reformed church Friday. The sociable was of a literary nature, as the name infers, and to really enjoy it one needed to be somewhat acquainted with books and their authors.

The plan was to set the people to guessing the names of books and their authors from articles hung about the room. These were newspapers, a clock, pieces of pasteboard with a picture on them, or sometimes just a letter or a figure. Each one of these bits of paper or cards represented some book. The figure or number or something about it suggested to the mind of the one trying to guess, a certain book, of which there were eighty altogether, and the young folks, armed with book and pencil, went from one to the other of the objects in succession and jotted down a guess as to what book the object suggested. Some of the guesses went pretty wide of the mark, but then it was all for fun and everyone enjoyed it. There were no prizes, but refreshments were served towards the close.

Some of the articles suggested the following books: The New York World, folded, and with a paper band around it, stood for "Around the World in Eighty Days," that marvelous story of travel and adventure by Jules Verne. A little card on which was a picture of a group of Indians, suggested "Redskins," by James F. Cooper. Two more newspapers, The New York Press and The Daily Press, hanging side by side, stood for a "Tale of Two Cities." The word "Beauty" on a white card everyone guessed to be "Black Beauty."

An object that drew considerable attention, and seemed hard to guess, was a white card with the picture of a hooked rug on it and over it the letter "D." This was "Donovan," by Edna Lyall.

The sociable was in charge of the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society, consisting of Miss Cora Laire, Miss Lottie Wilson, Miss Cora Young, Miss Edith DuBois and Miss Nellie Backer. Much credit is due to Miss DuBois and to Robert M Davis for the success of the affair.

FUNERAL OF ISAAC LAING.

Services Held in the Friends' Meeting House Thursday Morning.

The funeral of the late Isaac W. Laing, of Dunellen, was held Thursday morning in the Friends' meeting house. The services were simple, as Quaker services always are, and lasted half an hour, during which time the casket was open and an opportunity was given the relatives and friends to take a last look at the remains before they were closed forever.

Rev. I. A. Martine, of the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, spoke a few words in which he told of the necessity of being prepared to die. Having known the deceased personally, the pastor was able to speak from the heart. Margaret F. Vail also read a poem from The Young Friends' Review, a publication printed in Canada.

The casket was covered with grey cloth, the Quakers' color, and on it were laid several floral pieces. Among the pieces was a green Maltese cross sent by the members of Court Dunellen, I. O. F. The bearers were Albert Randolph, Adam Deslaman, Fred Sandford, George VanNess, Theodore Day and George Smith, of East Orange. Interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

Previously a service was held at the home in Dunellen, under the auspices of Court Dunellen, I. O. F., at which Rev. Mr. Martine spoke very tenderly.

AT HOME TO CONGREGATION.

Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Main Entertained Their Parishioners.

Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Main gave a charming "at home" to the congregation of the Seventh Day Baptist church Saturday evening from 7 to 11 o'clock at their home on Central avenue. They were assisted in receiving by Rev. and Mrs. George B. Shaw, of New York.

The affair was very largely attended by the people of the congregation. Tea and wafers were served under the direction of the Misses May Tomlinson, Ida Randolph, Ida Spicer, Ernestine Smith, Elizabeth Allis and Mabel Magson. They were assisted by the Misses Jessie F. Randolph, Mertie Randolph, Ethel Titsworth, Ethel Williams and May Ross; and J. Stanley Mosher, Harry Rogers, Frank Maxson and George Main.

A phonograph, under the charge of W. H. Rogers, entertained for part of the evening.

Won't Vote for a License for Kavanaugh.

Councilman-elect Frank Smith made one promise before election and that was that he would not vote to give a liquor license to John Kavanaugh. Mr. Smith informed Mr. Kavanaugh to that effect before the election.

SALE AND FLOWER FAIR

GRATIFYING SUCCESS ACCORDED TO WOMEN OF ALL SOULS' CHURCH.

The Interior of the Church Filled With Articles Suggestive of Christmastide—Names of the Leaders Who Had Charge.

The women of All Souls' church met with gratifying success with the sale and flower fair that began Thursday afternoon and was continued that evening, Friday afternoon and evening. The affair was arranged for the benefit of the church, and to give people a chance to select some pretty or useful present for Christmastide. During the entire time the pretty little church was filled with people who were much interested in everything they saw. Through the efforts of the women flowers of all kinds were perfectly imitated in paper, and these were artistically arranged about the various tables and rooms. There was placed on sale fancy and useful articles, candies that tempted everyone, and an attractive place was that which had for sale useful household articles. Everything needed in a useful way was here displayed, including baking powder, soaps, lamps and pictures. There was also on exhibition a portrait, the gift of John Wanamaker. Another attractive place was the children's department, where dolls and all sorts of things for children could be found. The little ones, as well as the older people, found much to amuse them at this place.

Another department was devoted to a display of decorated china, stationery of all kinds, and useful novelties of every description. A department devoted to embroideries of all kinds attracted considerable attention from all. Here all sorts of small and large articles of a useful nature were to be found, and the embroidery was the feature.

A very desirable place at the sale was that devoted to the dispensing of ice cream and cake. This place was generally filled and those in charge were kept very busy.

Among those who had charge of the affair were Mrs. A. C. Nickerson, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Draper, Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. Mumford, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Brown, Miss Brown, Miss Haviland, Miss Conklin, Miss Perry, Mrs. Conklin, Miss Reynolds, Mrs L. B. Woolston, Mrs Brownell, Mrs. Henry B. Wells, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Alice Thompson, Miss VanZandt, Miss Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Durar, Mrs. Buckle, Miss Buckle, Mrs. Osgood, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Phillip J. R. VanWyck, Miss Dorothy Wells, Miss Osgood, Miss Andrews, and Miss Walker.

A CHARMING TEA.

Given by Miss Bushnell in Honor of Mrs. Howard Wade Beebe.

A very charming tea was given Friday afternoon by Miss Mary Bushnell, daughter of Frank Bushnell, of Madison avenue, in honor of Mrs. Howard Wade Beebe, formerly Miss Gertrude Baker.

The parlors were handsomely decorated with pink roses, and the same color prevailed in the dining room. The table was crossed with broad pink ribbons, which terminated in large bows, and with the shaded candles and pink dresses of the young girls, produced a charming effect.

All the young lady assistants, with the exception of three, were bride maids at the wedding of Mrs. Beebe, which occurred a few weeks ago. Miss Bushnell and Mrs. Beebe were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Frank Bushnell, Mrs. Thomas Baker, Mrs. Masters, of Germantown; the Misses Nancy Lawson, Mary Whiton, Katherine Reinhart, Florence Abbott, Annie Miller, Helen Bushnell, Jessie Bushnell and Miss Porter, of Ottawa, Ill.

CONFERRED A DEGREE.

Initiatory Work Conducted by a High Masonic Official.

The regular convocation of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., was held last Thursday, at which time Excellent Companion George C. Woolson, the Grand King of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of New Jersey, was present to make an official visitation. The Mark Master's degree was conferred on James H. Rogers, a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., after which a banquet was given in the banquet hall. There were remarks made by Mr. Woolson and members of the Masonic fraternity present. The initiatory work performed by the members of Jerusalem Chapter was highly commented upon by the Grand King, as being fully up to the standard.

Lacerated Her Scalp.

Last Saturday evening Helen Wooley, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Wooley, of West Front street, fell down at the corner of Front and Grove streets and received a severe laceration of the scalp. She was taken to the office of Dr. Adams, where proper treatment was given. The doctor was obliged to take several stitches in the cut. Although the little one suffers much pain, the injury is not a serious one and will heal in a short time.

Walter Houstis, of this city, has about recovered from a severe illness.

CONSOLIDATION TO BE PUT TO VOTE.

Will be Presented to Borough at Next Election.

THE CITY WILL ALSO VOTE.

SOME WANTED TO PUT BILL BEFORE LEGISLATURE AT ONCE.

It Was Opposed on Ground That There Had Been no Expression of Public Opinion as Yet to Support It—Adverse Report on Consolidation Without Changing County Lines—Committee Appointed.

The people of Plainfield and North Plainfield are to be given a chance to say whether they want to consolidate into a Greater Plainfield. Such was the decision reached by the consolidation joint committees at a meeting held in the Board of Trade rooms last Friday. It was only done after long discussion.

After one unsuccessful attempt, a quorum was secured for a meeting. Those present were Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the committee, Former Mayor W. L Saunders, secretary, Senator Charles A Reed, Former Councilman S. A. Ginna, Former Councilman George T. Rogers and Editor Frank W. Runyon.

At a former meeting of the committee, the possibilities of a consolidation without changing county lines were discussed and a sub-committee appointed to look into the matter. The report of the sub-committee was submitted by its chairman, Senator Reed. It was as follows:

Gentlemen—As chairman of your sub-committee to which was referred the question "Is consolidation without a change of the county lines practicable and desirable?" I beg to submit the following:

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of this sub committee, I have been unable to discuss the subject with because of his absence. The third member, Mr. F. W. Runyon, feels that the question submitted involves so much that is purely legal in its character that he hesitates to express any decided opinion.

So far as I am personally concerned, I wish it distinctly understood that I am not opposed to consolidation if it can be accomplished in such a manner as to be beneficial to both communities concerned, and without injury to the county I represent.

This brings me to the real question in hand. To consolidate without a change of county lines means to maintain a separate existence for two different portions of Greater Plainfield so far as concerns many of the most important phases of municipal life.

For instance, there must be two taxing districts, with different rates of county tax. The county tax from one district being accounted for to Union county and from the other to Somerset county.

Separate school districts, with consequent differences in government and taxes. Different taxing officers, the Assessors for instance in one district being members of the Somerset County Board of Assessors and the others of Union.

Separate courts, with all their machinery, suitors and parties from one district being subject to the forums of one county and from the other district to those of the other county. No district having jurisdiction over the whole city would be possible. Separate election districts, in some of which the citizens must vote for one set of county and federal officers, while in others they vote for another set. Separate machinery for licensing of hotels and saloons. Joint action of two separate Boards of Freeholders would still be required to procure bridges across the brook. Indeed, there are a hundred and one instances which might be cited, many of which may seem of little importance in theory, but which would in practice result in constant irritation and interminable litigation. I have discussed this subject with many lawyers of ability and experience, several of them residents of Plainfield, who favor the general proposition that consolidation would be a good thing, but every one of them has emphatically stated that consolidation without change of county lines is both impracticable and undesirable. When I say impracticable I do not mean impossible, for that involves an answer to constitutional questions which could only be decisively given by a court of last resort. It is sufficient to say on that point that there are serious constitutional questions involved, and that the proposition under discussion may be impossible of attainment in this State.

After careful consideration I am forced to the conclusion that consolidation without change of county lines is both impracticable and undesirable because it would secure but the shadow of the unity desired, and place the new community in a condition which must of necessity produce constant internal dissension and unrest. The cure would be worse than the disease.

A discussion of the report followed but the members of the committee could not fail to see that while they might have the form of a consolidation, the reality would not be unless the county lines were changed.

The necessity of starting an agitation in behalf of the movement was pointed out and several of the members thought that the best way to accomplish that was to introduce a bill into the next Legislature changing the county line so that both city and borough would be in either Somerset or Union county. This was strongly opposed on the ground that as yet there was no public exhibition of feeling in favor of consolidation and that consequently the Legislative representatives from all over the State, whose support might be secured if there was a united demand from the people, would be forced to take sides against it.

The committee was given to understand that at present Somerset county, outside of North Plainfield, was strongly opposed to consolidation in either of the two counties and that consequently the representives of that county in the Legislature would be forced to oppose it if an attempt was made now to get a bill through.

It was finally decided that it would be best to give people a chance to express their opinion first. As a result, Mr. Saunders introduced the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, that a committee of three members be appointed by the chair for the purpose of submitting to the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield at the next election a proposition for the consolidation of the two municipalities and if such proposition is favorably received this committee is authorized to prepare a bill for submission to the Legislature.

Chairman Gilbert appointed S. St. John McCracken, Wm. L. Saunders and Frank W. Runyon as the committee of three. They will also look after the formation of a literary bureau to bring before the people of city and borough the advantages of consolidation. It is understood that the proportion will be by changing the county line one way or the other.

VISITED CATHOLIC CLUB

DELEGATION FROM ORANGE VALLEY PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

The Visitors Were Outclassed at Bowling But Held Their Own in the Male and Dancing Contests.

Some twenty visitors from Orange Valley were the guests of the Plainfield Catholic Club last Friday at the clubhouse of the latter. A bowling match opened the evening in which the visitors were completely outclassed. The scores were as follows:

CATHOLIC CLUB.		ORANGE VALLEY.
Moran	192	B. Pimentel	168
Higgins	164	Lyons	150
Meisenzer	184	B. Pimentel	150
Shannon	160	Corrigan	154
Carty	147	Hassett	153
	821		779

An informal musical entertainment followed in which the local participants were Miss Daly, Miss Day, T. J. Cumerford, J. O'Brien and William Claassen. Refreshments were served and the evening's pleasure closed with a dance.

IN FINE VOICE THEY SANG

FIRST SUBSCRIPTION CONCERT GIVEN IN THE CASINO.

Fashionable and Critical Audience Was Present—Artists Appeared to Excellent Advantage in the Programme of Music.

The first of a series of two subscription concerts to be given at the Casino took place last Thursday. A fashionable and critical audience was present to enjoy a programme of real merit. Frank J. Smith, organist of the Crescent Avenue church, had charge of the programme and presided at the piano during the evening. The artists included Madame Anita Rio, soprano; Miss Marguerite Keys, contralto; Dr. Ira A. Jackson, tenor; Dr. Carl E. Dufft, basso; assisted by Messrs. E. D. Barnes, S. T. Wilkinson and F. Metcalf with the mandolin, and E. F. Higgins with the guitar.

The programme opened with the rendition of "Excelsior," by Balfe, which was given by Dr. Dufft and Dr. Jackson. Both of these artists have appeared here before, and they received an ovation that was sincere. This was followed with a soprano solo by Madame Rio, who gave "Ave Maria," by Schubert. This singer is not a stranger here and her work of last evening was fully up to the standard. She also sang "Devotion" by Schumann, in a meritorious manner. The next two numbers were given by Dr. Dufft, "The Linden Tree," by Schubert, and "The Two Grenadiers," by Schumann, and the audience assured this artist of his ability to please. Dr. Dufft's reception was flattering, showing that he had lost none of his popularity. His voice sounded as natural as it did when he appeared so frequently in the Choral Society concerts.

The next three selections, "In Winter I Got Up at Night," "Oh! That We Two Were Maying," and "I Once Had a Sweet Little Doll, Dears," all by Nevin, were given by Miss Marguerite Keys. Her work was of a superior character. Miss Keys has a deep, rich contralto voice over which she has perfect control.

Dr. Jackson, tenor, was one of the favorites on the programme, and his excellent voice was heard to good advantage. His higher notes possessed strength and purity that is delightful. He gave "It Was Not So To Be," by Neesler, in a careful and painstaking manner. The last number in part one was a quartette selection and it was a gem. Miss Rio, Miss Keys, Dr. Jackson and Dr. Dufft took the parts with mandolin and guitar accompaniment. The selection was "Funiculi, Funicula." by Denza. Each voice was allowed a wide scope and the parts were given with precision.

In part second Madame Rio sang a 'Lullaby," by Fairlamb; "The Dandelion," by Chadwick; "The Sweet Red Rose," by Bartlett; Dr. Dufft sang "Gipsey John," by Clay; Miss Keys gave "On the Wat to Kew," by Foote; Dr. Jackson rendered "My Heart Ever Faithful," by Kjerulf; "A Dream," by Bassett. The programme was concluded with the final trio from "Faust," by Gounod, which was given by Mme. Rio, Dr. Dufft and Dr. Jackson.

The encores during the evening consisted of "Coming through the Rye," by Mme. Rio; "Annie Laurie," and "My Old Kentucky Home," by Dr. Drift; "Ben Bolt," by Miss Keys; "Boonie Dundee," and "Forgotten," by Dr. Jackson.

There was not a meritorious feature that escaped the attention of the audience. The work of Mr. Smith, pianist, was, as usual, superb.

Funeral of Mrs. Lenox.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. J. P. Lenox took place Wednesday Dec. 7th at 2 o'clock at the home of her son in-law, William H. Smalley, near New Brunswick. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of this city, of whose church Mrs. Lenox was for many years a faithful member, was the officiating clergyman. The remains were temporarily placed in the receiving vault in the cemetery at New Brunswick. Mrs. Lenox was the mother of David Lenox, who is well known in this city.

Justice Didn't Refuse Fees.

The adjourned case of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company against Fred Hand, which was adjourned in Justice Moffett's court Friday morning, will be tried again Friday next. Justice Moffett does not wish the readers of The Press to think that he refused to allow the jury, who were discharged, jury fees, for he says that is something that the court has nothing to do with, but that the attorneys for the plaintiffs were the ones who refused to pay the jury the fifteen cents apiece that they demanded.

Attended Y. M. C. A. Conference.

Seven men from this city, who are either members of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. or interested in Y. M. C. A. work, took dinner last Friday with other directors and Y. M. C. A. workers from all over the State at Davis' restaurant, Newark. Those who attended from here were F. H. Andrews, Stephen Cahoone, William D. Murray, J. Harry Manning, Geo. S. Clay, A. C. LaBoyteaux and George Bittenhouse.

CHANGES THAT OCCUR WITH CITY FATHERS

Record of the Council Members That Will Retire.

CORIELL FOR PRESIDENT.

COUNILMAN-ELECT FROM THIRD WARD WILL PROBABLY PRESIDE.

Mr. Barrows Does Not Care to Occupy the Chair, as He is Inclined to be too Aggressive on the Floor—Caucus of Republicans With Mayor Wal Shortly to be Held—Mr. Andrews May Resign.

Regarding the Common Council for 1899 there are some interesting features. Those of the present Council that hold over include Messrs. Barrows, Andrews, VanHerwerden, Hetfield, Homan, Liefke and Buckle, while President Baker and Councilmen Newman, Moffett and Runyon go out. Mr. Baker has served but one term in the Council, but he has made an excellent presiding officer. His decisions have in general been accurate and he has not allowed the members on the floor to get too far away from the business to be transacted.

Councilman Runyon has served but two terms, but he has made a good record in the various departments that has engaged his attention. He has always attended to business and by faithfully looking after everything that has come under his observation he has gained a deal of experience that will guide him in no small measures as City Judge, for he will know much of the work that engages the attention of the Council and City Judge. As for Mr. Moffett, he has been a faithful attendant at all meetings and has attended to his duties. He has tried to serve the city well and conscientiously. Mr. Moffett has served two Council several terms, but will now probably retire permanently from the political field.

Mr. Newman has served two years, and while his duties have not been great, he has looked after everything that has been given him and has been a good city father.

The new Council will be composed of the following persons: Messrs. Andrews, Barrows, Homan, Van Herwerden, Liefke, Buckle, Tolles, Smith, Mellick, Coriell and Hetfield. The chances are strongly in favor of B. Frank Coriell being the president of the new Council. He has served the city and Council before in a capacity and is fully acquainted with the duties of a presiding officer. Mr. Barrows has been suggested for the presidency, but his aggressiveness will hardly permit him to accept. He has been somewhat of a leader on the floor and it is thought that he will prefer to stay there.

By the change in the Council the entire fire committee retires. Who will compose that committee next year is hard to tell. There will be good material to draw from and no doubt every committee will be an efficient one. Sometime during this month there will be a caucus of the new Mayor and Council to prepare for next year's work so far as the arrangement of the committees are concerned.

It would not be surprising to the friends of Mr. Andrews if he should resign from the Council during the coming year. He has threatened several times this year to retire, but has been prevailed upon to continue. He is likely, however, to retire early in 1899.

COLUMBIA LODGE ELECT.

A. O. U. W. Choose Their Officers for the Ensuing Year.

At the last meeting of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., the following officers were elected for the coming year: Master Workman, R. V. Kinney; foreman, F. C. Lounsbury; financier, E. M. Laing; receiver, Henry Liefke; recorder, V. W. Nash; guide, Peter VanPelt; inside watchman, W. F. Slater; outside watchman, Jacob Keller; overseer, R. A. Meeker; trustee, three years, O. R. Pearson, Jr., medical examiners, Doctors J. H. Carman, T. S. Davis and D. C. Adams; representatives to grand lodge, Henry Niechwitz and E. M. Laing, alternates, J. W. A. Bauersachs and G. Q. Dunham.

These officers will be installed on the first meeting night in January. At last night's meeting two new members were initiated and three propositions for membership were received.

A MOCK TRIAL.

Law Students Arrange a Trial to Test Their Talents.

The boys who belong to the Plainfield Law Debating Society are planning to spend their Christmas afternoon in Justice Nash's court room, where they will hold a mock trial. The plaintiff will be Edward Bellis and the defendant Edward Duck. The lawyers are Willie Nash and Charlie McCann. J. P. D. Kirch will act as judge and preside.

The young men are going to undertake a difficult case, one of contributory negligence, but they are holding these mock trials to accustom themselves to practical work in the courts, and expect to derive great help from them.

A WAGON WRECKED BY TROLLEY CAR.

Exciting Crash on West Fourth Street Friday.

THE CAR WAS DERAILED.

MOTORMAN INJURED BY SUDDEN STOPPING OF CAR.

Powlson & Jones' Wagon Flew Into Two Directions—Driver Went Over the Dashboard After the Horse—Front Vestibule of Car Demolished—Motorman Says he Gave Warning Signal.

A trolley car crashed into one of Powlson & Jones' delivery wagons at the intersection of Madison avenue and West Fourth street Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The wagon was practically demolished while the front vestibule of the car was wrecked. Motorman and driver escaped with no very serious injuries.

Car No 3 in charge of Motorman E. P. Hoppock, of West Third street, and Conductor Charles Hepner, of John street, was passing along West Fourth street going west. According to the statement of the motorman he slowed down as he approached Madison avenue, sounded the gong twice and then seeing nothing increased his speed to the ordinary rate.

Just as he reached Madison avenue a horse and wagon came along at a good speed right in front of the car. The horse passed by safely and then the car struck the wagon just behind the front wheels. There was a loud crash. The front wheels and axle of the wagon were separated from the rest and tumbled twenty feet away to the right of the track. They were completely wrecked. The remainder of the wagon was thrown to the left and turned upside down. The top was demolished and the whole vehicle badly strained.

The horse was cut loose and left the traces behind. The driver clung to the reins and followed the horse, which was not injured. The driver, Charles Ellis, of Duer street, was stunned by his fall. He was bruised about the body and his face was skinned. He received no serious injuries, however.

The force of the collision bent in the dash board of the trolley car and wrecked the glass and frame vestibule that protects the motorman from the weather. A part of this wreckage fell on the track and turned the car wheels off the rails. The car left the rails entirely and ran to the right, stopping only a foot from the curb.

The sudden slackening of the speed of the car threw the motorman against the brake handle with much force. It was first thought that a rib was broken, but it only proved to be a bad bruise and strain. He was somewhat bruised in other places.

There were five passengers in the car, including women, who were badly frightened by the accident. None of them were injured, however. Wm. A Woodruff, of East Second street, was one of the passengers, and he remembers very distinctly that the motorman rang his bell.

Ellis, the driver for Powlson & Jones, says that he never heard any bell. The house on the corner is so near the street that he could not see down Fourth street until he almost reached the track. The distance was too short to stop in, and so he tried to clear the tracks before the car came. It may have been difficult to hear the bell, as the wind was blowing fiercely toward the car and the wagon made considerable noise on the frozen ground.

Ellis and Hoppock were carried into the house of Dr. M. S. Simpson, where their wounds were dressed. They were then taken home. Neither is on duty today. The damage to the wagon will amount to in the neighborhood of $75.

Relief Corps Elects.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps was held last Friday in the rooms on East Front street, at which time officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. E. C. Morse; senior vice president, Mrs. Charles Westphal; junior vice president, Mrs. Samuel Terry, Sr.; treasurer, Mrs. Walter Walker; chaplain, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; conductor, Mrs. Caspar Bolsterie; guard, Mrs. Charles Stephens; delegates to State convention, Mrs. V. W. Nash, Mrs. Samuel Terry, Mrs. Swarzent, Mrs. Bogert and Mrs. Cox. The balance of the officers will be appointed by the president at the first meeting of the corps in January, when installation will take place.

Will Case Settled.

The contest over the will of the late Ephriam Randolph, of New Market, which has been before the Middlesex County Orphan's Court for some time, was settled Friday morning at the law offices of Codington & Swackhamer in a manner satisfactory to the widow and the legatees. Codington & Swackhamer represented the legatees and Robert M. Clark was the counsel for the widow, Mrs. Addie A. Randolph.

THE UNION SOCIABLE.

ENDEAVORERS MET IN A PLEASANT WAY THURSDAY NIGHT.

An Informal Musical Programme Rendered and Then an Address by a Missionary Worker Was Listened to.

Endeavorers gathered in the parlor of the Crescent Avenue church Thursday to enjoy a social hour. It was another one of those successful union sociables when the workers from all the societies in the city and neighboring towns are brought together to become better acquainted with each other.

The parlor was crowded, but not enough to prevent easy moving about, and after a short programme had been rendered, consisting of selections on the violin by Arthur Mosher, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Ailing, on the piano, and an address by Mrs. Dassori, of New York, the members of the reception committee set to work to make every one feel at home.

Mrs. Dassoris a cultured and refined woman who is consecrating her life to missionary work among the Italian poor of lower New York. She told something of her work among them, of how they live, and how regular they are in attendance when they become converted and leave the Roman Catholic church of which all of them are members.

At the close of her remarks, Mrs. Dassori appealed to her audience for a generous collection to enable her to prepare a good Christmas for the Italian children who are looking forward to this event with all the expectation of children situated in better circumstances, and Mrs. Dassori does not want to disappoint them. She also asked for old clothing so that the mothers as well as the little ones can be more warmly clad. When the collection was taken up $16 was given and promises were given for several articles of clothing.

The room was decorated with the local union colors, green and white. The presidents of all the societies formed a general committee, with James E. Kimball, president of the Crescent Avenue society, as its chairman, and the chairmen of all the social committees of the societies formed a general social committee with I. W. Travell as chairman. Miss Anna Wyckoff had charge of the refreshments.

WORK OF KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Semi-Annual Meeting of the City Union Held Thursday Afternoon.

The semi-annual meeting of the City Union, King's Daughters, was held Thursday afternoon in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Mrs. Charles A. Reed, chairman of the union presided, and in the absence of Mrs. William C. O'Donnell, who is the secretary, Mrs. Elwood Caldwell, the vice-president, filled the position.

After the transaction of the routin business, the members listened to an address by Mrs Isabelle Charles-Davis, corresponding secretary and business manager of the International Order of King's Daughters and Sons. Mrs. Davis spoke distinctively along the lines of work of the order and gave many valuable suggestions as to furthering the interest of the order.

After the address reports from various circles were received and the money pledged for the support of the city nurse and her work was given. All but five of the circles reported and the amount received is about $600.

The business portion of the meeting closed after a slight amendment was made to the constitution, and a social time followed during which tea was served under the direction of the Daughters of the Cross and Brightside Circle. Those in charge in the tea room were Mrs. S. St. John Mc Catched, Mrs. Frank Jones and Mrs. George T. Rogers.

EARLY MORNING FIRE.

Barrel of Rubbish Caught Fire But Did No Damage.

The fire department had another early morning run Friday. An alarm came in from Box 47 at the Pond Tool Works at 6:50 o'clock. The apparatus responded promptly but were not needed.

A barrel of rubbish in the barn of Mr. Wenzel, 212 McDowell street, caught fire. A lad saw the flames and rushed over to the Pond Tool Works shouting "fire." An alarm was sent in and the men hurried to the barn and put out the flames before they set fire to the structure itself. The damage was slight.

Too Hot a Fire in the Furnace.

Wallace V. Miller came near having a disastrous fire in his house, 924 West Fifth street, Thursday morning. There was too hot a fire in the furnace and after awhile the woodwork surrounding one of the heater pipes took fire. It was discovered in time to quench it with a few pailfuls of water.

Went to Jail.

Oscar Ten Eyck, the colored man who was convicted of cruelty to one of Hetfield & Gallup's horses and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 or go to the county jail for sixty days, decided to take the days Friday, so he was escorted to Elizabeth towards night by Constable Moffett.

MANY HONOR MEMORY OF LATE JAMES M'GEE

Funeral Services Held at Monroe Avenue Church.

A VERY SIMPLE SERVICE.

MANY DISTINGUISHED MEN WERE PRESENT THURSDAY.

Services Were Conducted by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and Rev. H. B. Munson—Church Crowded—Large Delegation From Standard Oil Company and Produce Exchange—Buried at Hillside.

In the place where the interests of his last years on earth had been largely centred, the friends and associates of the late James McGee gathered Thursday afternoon to do honor to his memory. Never in the history of the Monroe Avenue M. E church was that sanctuary so filled to its utmost capacity. There were those old and young who had known Mr. McGee during the years of his connection with the church; others who had found him a kind and courteous friend in their social relations with him; and then those whose daily business life brought them in close touch with him, where his integrity, activity and clear-sightedness were very evident. As his life had been, so were the funeral services, quiet and unostentatious There was no attempt at eulogy, and it seemed best that it should be so, for there was so much to say that none could do justice to it.

It seemed fitting that the last sad rites should be held at the Monroe Avenue church, although it would not accommodate as many as the other church of the same denomination Everything was very simple, according to the wishes of the late Mr. McGee. On the platform palms were grouped about a simple little desk above the resting place of the casket. On either side a profusion of white roses stood in relief against the green foliage.

In the main body of the church were seated the friends from the church and the city. In the alcoves on either side the business associates of the deceased were gathered. Every seat was filled and all available standing room occupied, for James McGee had been a grand, good man and there were many, indeed, anxious to do honor to his memory.

Shortly after 3 o'clock the service began. The swinging doors to the left of the front of the church were opened and the cortege entered. Rev. William C. O'Donnell, pastor of the church, and Rev. Herbert B. Munson, of Amityville, L. I., the first pastor of the original chapel, led. Rev. Mr. O'Donnell repeated in solemn voice a scriptural quotation. Following was the casket, half hidden by floral decorations of white and green, and borne by Rev. Herbert Welch, of Middletown, Conn., and James R. Joy, of North Plainfield, son-in-law of the late Mr McGee, and Clifford A. McGee, Henry L. McGee, Raymond A. McGee and George A Horne, all of this city, his grandsons.

After the casket was placed in position a quartette, composed of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, sang "Rock of Ages" very impressively. Miss Jessie Utter was the organist.

A spiritual passage was read by Rev. Mr. Munson, and he then offered an earnest prayer, invoking divine comfort on the bereaved ones and thanking God that the departed one had been allowed to do so much good en he was called to his Heavenly home "Abide With Me" was rendered by the quartette.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell gave another appropriate Scripture reading and then also offered prayer in heartfelt words of sympathy and sorrow for the loss. "Hark, Hark My Soul," by the quartette, was an effective ending to the simple services.

Then, one by one the silent witnesses of it all passed by the casket and looked for the last time on earth at the face of their friend, co worker and associate. There were many tears shed for the face, calm and serene even in death, recalled to all his good qualities of Christian example and how he had passed away forever.

It was a very distinguished group of New York's leading financiers and business men who came out to attend the funeral The officers of the Standard Oil Company on Broadway, New York, where Mr. McGee had been, were closed at 1 o'clock. A large delegation, composed of the officers of the executive board of the Standard, of which Mr. McGee was a member, together with his more intimate associates in the company, was present. The Produce Exchange, of New York, sent fifty-three of its members, headed by the three principal officers of that organization.

To accommodate the friends of Mr. McGee who came out from New York, the club car Netherwood was tendered by the members of that club. It was attached to the 1:30 train from New York. The car was arranged to carry some eighty passengers and was completely filled. In addition, there were a number of other prominent men in the other care of the train.

It was first the intention to leave the Netherwood at Plainfield and transport the occupants to the church by trolley. On account of the large number, however, it was deemed best to go through to Grant avenue. From the station it was only a short walk to the church.

In the Standard Oil Company delegation were William Rockefeller, John D. Archibald, Charles Pratt, H. H. Rogers, O. H. Waring, John Bushnell, Dan O'Day, W. C. Folger, A. B. Brainard, Gus Heye and A. J. Pouch, of New York; J. H. Alexander, vice president of the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey; Malcom Lloyd and N. V. Harkness, of the Atlantic Refining Co., of Philadelphia, together with a number of others from the Standard Oil Company.

Samuel Q. Brown, president, and J. H. Cuthbert, treasurer, of the Tide Water Pipe Company, and A. A. Sumner, treasurer of the Tide Water Oil Company, were also in the party.

The delegation from the New York Produce Exchange was headed by its president, Frank Brainard, Vice President Elliot T. Barrows, Secretary Fred H. Andrews, and ex-President Evan Thomas. Among the other well-known members in the delegation were Charles W. W. McCutchen, J. H. Parker, John Valiant, James W. Jackson, S. G. Nelson, A. Whitman, S. B. Joseph, R. F. Murray, Timothy Hogan, P. A. Ferris, John R. Livermore, J. J. Kane, Dr. D. W. Miller and Adolph Goepel.

In addition to the delegations mentioned there were also present a number of prominent business men from New York and Philadelphia who had been associated with Mr. McGee in various ways and had early learned to admire and honor him.

All the local clergymen, who were able, were in attendance at the services. Several prominent divines from other cities were present and included Rev. Dr. Jesse H. Burthat and Rev. Dr. Tuttle, former pastors of the First M. E. church in Plainfield.

At the close of the service the remains were taken to Hillside cemetery where a brief service was held by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and Rev. Herbert B. Munson. Only the members of the family were present at the interment.

CENTRAL LODGE ELECTS.

Members Select Those Who Are to Govern Them Next Year.

At the meeting of Central Lodge, A O. U. W., last Thursday the following officers were nominated and elected: Master workman, Edward B. Mosher; foreman, William Larrabee; overseer, George Blythe; recorder, N. C. Magee; financier, William Newcorn; receiver, Charles H. Randolph; guide, Harvey R. Thorn; inside watchman, Adam Hurlich; outside watchman, John Cashman; past master workman, James Kelly; trustee (for three years,) William H. Brokaw; representatives to grand lodge, Clark T. Rogers and James R. Dunham; alternates, N. C Magee and C H. Randolph; medical examiners, Drs. O. L. Jenkins, William J. Nelson and Marion Whitford. There were thirty-nine applications received at the meeting.

Resolutions.

WHEREAS, Our beloved brother and benefactor, Mr. James McGee, has been suddenly called to his heavenly reward, and

WHEREAS, His connection with the Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal church was of such unusual character and value, be it therefore

Resolved, That we, the Official Board of the Monroe Avenue church, and on behalf of the entire membership, Sunday-school and congregation, do hereby express of our deep sorrow in this our time of greater calamity could have befallen us than that of him whose wise counsel and fatherly care was the main source of our present prosperity.

Resolved, That we assure the sorrowing family of our sincerest sympathy and highest regard, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the proper petitions to the Throne of Grace.

Resolved, That we give publicity to these resolutions, that all may know with what love and reverence we regarded our honored brother. As a local preacher, as treasurer, as teacher of the Bible class, as founder and illustrious of Epworth House library, as the generous Christian example properly, and as a safe leader in every praiseworthy enterprise, he occupied such a position among us as to be frequently called "The Father of Monroe Avenue church."

His leadership, his high sense of honor, his benevolence, his self-abnegation, his devotion to duty, his earnest a irituality, his sublime faith, his tireless attention to all the exactions of his church life, his marvellous sympathy and Christian courtliness, have been a benediction to all who have been permitted to collaborate with him in the Lord's vineyard.

For the Official Board.

Exciting Mock Trial.

A very exciting mock trial was held at the meeting of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., last Friday in their rooms in the Babcock building. It was a breech of promise case in which Michael Kollar, attired in women's clothes, appeared as the plaintiff, and George Wikoff as defendent. Isaac P. Runyon made a very dignified and worthy judge. The plaintiff's case was conducted by Fred Pope, and Robert M. Clark was attorney for the other side. There was a jury of twelve men. Five witnesses were sworn by each side, of which Louis Randolph made a decided hit as a three-year-old infant. The jury decided that the defendant wasn't guilty but he mustn't do it again.

SENATOR REED FIRES POLITICAL HOT SHOT.

He Does Not Mince His Words About Somerset Politics.

ANSWER TO DISGRUNTLED.

SAYS SOME SOMERVILLE REPUBLICANS ARE TRAITORS.

The Senator Declares That They Want to Rule or Ruin and That They Applied These Tactics When They Voted Against VanDoren for Sheriff, Who Had Been Honestly and Regularly Nominated.

Senator Charles A. Reed has thrown a veritable bomb shell into the Republican camp in Somerville by a letter published over his own signature in the Unionist Gazette Dec. 8 Senator Reed's letter is inspired by the recent communications published in the local papers anent the result of the late election, in which Mr. Reed's candidate for Sheriff, VanDoren, was defeated through the failure of Bridgewater Republicans to support him loyally.

After introducing his letter, Mr. Reed lite out straight by saying:

"It is evident that unless the candidate is nominated who is favored by certain elements, such candidate suffers on election day. He is cut.

"This practice is carried to a greater extent in Bridgewater than anywhere else in the county. The excuse is always the same. Those who are unsuccessful in convention, at once set up a shout that they were not fairly beaten. "Peculiar tactics" and other like vague forms are used to influence voters. There is no denial of this—on the contrary, as appears by the proceedings in your last issue, it is defended and justified. That some one is responsible for this state of affairs is apparent, and the three thousand and more Republicans who consistently vote straight, have a right to know where to place the blame.

We of the outside townships are not satisfied to allow these self-constituted high priests in Bridgewater to determine just what Republicans shall be defeated. We are not wholly satisfied with their honesty. We find that the man who fails to measure up to their standard invariably resides in some other township.

It is safe to say that ninety per cent. of the Republicans in Somerset county want this practice ended. They are not deceived by the vague charges of improper influence at conventions and the like. They are familiar with the old game of "claiming everything" before the convention meets, and then crying "fraud" if you don't get it. They are Republicans upon principle and not for pelf, and they are becoming very restive under the present condition of affairs and not without reason.

"Straight Republican" assumes that because there was a cut against VanDoren, amounting to 123 in the First district in Somerville, the gentleman in charge of that poll is responsible This must be entirely unwarranted, for that gentleman is the Hon. L. A. Thompson, who has been honored by the Republican party more frequently and more substantially than any other man in Somerset.

There, then, is the reason to be found?

Your correspondents have something to say on that subject, and one of them says it was the result of a desire to prevent the "turning down of an old leader and his adherents;" another says it was because "sharp practices and unsavory tactics were used to secure his nomination;" another says practically the same thing; an other says "we do not propose to put a man in office who was not fairly nominated, but a good nomination through the schemes of Thompson's political enemies," while one says it was because Schoonmaker supplied the people with coal and gave them time in which to pay for it.

If we are to be ruled by the majority, then we find that four of your six correspondents practically agree that VanDoren was beaten because his nomination did not suit a certain element referred to by them, while the other two think it was owing to Schoonmaker's popularity. As it is four to two, it is not fair to assume that the 563 votes in question were influenced in the same proportion? If so we will have to charge up about 335 to that sentiment, and 168 to Schoonmaker's popularity, which would have come 168 short of electing him!

Now, if upon such grounds the "Wise Men" of Somerville justify the defeat of an exceptionally well qualified candidate, who was the deliberate choice of a convention, which, without hesitation, made his nomination unanimous, is there not danger that other "Wise Men" in other townships, who fail in securing the nomination they prefer, will learn to play the same game?

Mr. Editor, it is time an end was put to all this, and it is hoped that The Unionist-Gazette, as the Republican newspaper of the county, will do its duty to the party at large, without regard to individuals or factions, without fear or favor. Let those who make charges of improper methods in conventions come forth and produce the evidence on which their charges are based, or, if they refuse to do this, denounce them.

Let those who feel inclined to rule if they cannot rule, understand that the Republican party is greater than any man or set of men, it makes no difference to what faction they belong.

JURY WAS NOT WANTED

ABRUPT ENDING OF A CASE IN JUSTICE MOFFETT'S COURT.

The Jurors Demanded Fifteen Cents Each as a Fee, But They Were Refused—Fred Sind Was the Defendant.

The case in tort in which the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company are plaintiffs and Fred Sind the defendant, which was to have come up before Justice Moffett Friday morning, had an abrupt ending. Constable Matt x was given the venire Thursday to summon a jury, and Friday appeared in court with twelve men who had come "truly and lawfully to try the cause."

The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company are suing Hand for $71.18, which they claim is money Hand collected and converted to his own use after he had sold out his ice business to them two years ago. Pope & Runyon represented the company, and after the jury had assembled, Mr. Pope arose and moved for an adjournment on the ground that one of their witnesses was ill, and this was granted.

It is whispered about that this was not the real reason that the adjournment was asked for, but that the plaintiffs were afraid to try the case before that jury for fear that the men were prejudiced.

When the adjournment was granted the jurymen demanded fifteen cents each as the fee to which they are entitled when a case is adjourned after they are assembled in court, but this the court refused to grant. Several of them besieged the office of the Cold Storage Company and pressed their claims, but again were refused. The case comes up again next Friday morning.

A Richard Wagner Monument.

During the past summer an exhibition was held in the Exposition Palace in Berlin, for the benefit of a fund to erect a monument in that city to the memory of Richard Wagner. The exhibition was held under the auspices of Princess Charlotte, of Prussia, and was especially devoted to music and musical instruments. Besides a large collection of Wagner relics, consisting of manuscripts, autograph letters, portraits, etc., there was an exhibit of modern musical instruments, and prizes were awarded by a jury of eminent musicians. The only honor conferred upon an American manufacturer was the diploma and gold medal of the first class awarded to the Mason & Hamlin organs, because, as the diploma states, of their "superior quality of tone and great variety of tonal effects." Truly a gratifying honor from such a source.

Celebrated Her Birthday.

A birthday party was given Thursday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock by Ruth Frances Stryker, of 304 East Front street. The little one was six years old. There were about eighteen little folks present and everyone joined heartily in the festivities of the occasion. The young hostess received many nice presents as remembrances of the event. During the afternoon they were entertained with the graphophone, after which refreshments were served and they departed for home tired, but well satisfied with the afternoon's play.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week:

Sarah B. Line and Abram M. Vail et ux to Catherine Mohair, all of Plainfield. Robert Clark et ux to Nellie P. Lyman, North Plainfield, $1. Peter J. McDonough et ux to Reuben T. Barbour, North Plainfield, $1. Emily H. Cory to Wm. L. Smalley, North Plainfield, $200. Robert Clark, jr., et ux to Nellie P. Lyman, North Plainfield, $1. Ella M. Mooney et al to John W. Brady, North Plainfield, $3,200.

Death of a Groceryman.

James Flynn, aged fifty-three years, a well-known grocer living at 227 Plainfield avenue, died last Friday at his home after a 1½ ng illness with a complication of diseases. The funeral services were held from the late home Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, and from St. Mary's church at 2 o'clock. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Didn't Know it Was Loaded.

Miss Davie, daughter of Archibald Davie, of 18 Jackson avenue, was handling a pistol a few days ago and "not knowing that it was loaded" pulled the trigger. The bullet passed through the palm of her hand. The family physician, Dr. Jenkins, was called in and dressed the wound and no serious results are anticipated.

Improved His House.

H. C. N. Johnston, of 208 East Front street, has improved his house by the addition of a fine vestibule. He is also remodeling the interior, which will make it more convenient. Byron Young is doing the work.

NEW CITY OFFICERS TAKE OATH OF OFFICE.

Were Sworn in by Mayor Fisk Saturday Afternoon.

HIS HONOR WAS FACETIOUS.

GAVE EACH ONE OF THEM A KINDLY WORD AT THE TIME.

All the Officers-elect, Except Mr. Rockfellow, Were on Hand—The Latter Had Taken Oath of Office a Few Days Before—Thirty-third Time That Constable Moffett Has Taken Oath of Office.

Mayor Fisk's office on Park avenue was an interesting place to be last Saturday afternoon when all of the new city officials presented themselves before him to take the oath of office. All appeared except Mayor-elect Rockfellow, who had taken the oath last week. As each one appeared and went through the form His Honor had a pleasant word to say. The first to take the oath was Collector James A. Martin, and after him the following appeared: Councilmen R. I. Tolles, George P. Mellick, Frank H. Smith, B. Frank Coriell; School Commissioner R. W. Richards; City Judge Byron D. Runyon; Justices of the Peace J. E. Mosher, Adam Youngs, John Naegel, H. C. Carse; Constables John Gjetleen, Amos Moffett, P. V. Weaver and John Sheehan.

The Mayor extended to each a hearty handshake and stated that it afforded him great pleasure to perform the deed that installed them into office. Constable Amos Moffett was sworn in for the thirty third time.

Justice of the Peace John Naegel informed the Mayor that he had not tried a case since the first took the office, but was hoping that things would come his way soon.

The Mayor told Constable Weaver that he was pleased to swear in a good looking member of the Citizens' ticket. And so on through the list everyone was congratulated by the Mayor.

Many of the officials sworn in expressed regret that Mr. Fisk was not going to remain in office to look after the city as he has in the past. The Mayor thanked for the kind expressions and stated that he would be pleased to watch the doings of the officials from the outside.

PLAYED AN OLD TRICK.

Stranger But Slick Woman Bunoozed Dunn's Grocery Out of $10.

Fred Dunn, the grocer, was bunooed out of about $10 a few nights ago by a slick woman. She went into the store and made a 50 cent purchase, offering a $20 bill in payment. She received her change, then suddenly turning back to the desk asked to have the bill back again as she had a 50 cent piece in her pocketbook.

The woman got the bill and laid down a pile of bills which the cashier supposed to be change she had just given him, but after the stranger had gone out, it was found to be $10 short. A hurried search was made for her, but she was not seen again.

M'CUE IS A SPRINTER.

CAPTURED JACK FILMORE AFTER A LIVELY CHASE.

He First Ran the Unlucky Young Man Through Green Brook—Filmore Was Trembling His Wife, Tie Said.

John Filmore, commonly known as "Jack," learned two facts Sunday. Experience was his teacher. He discovered that the water of Green brook were a trifle chilly at this time of the year and he also made the discovery that Patrolman Tom McCue is a sprinter.

Jack went out Sunday afternoon. His wife and his mother-in-law say he was drunk and Jack admits the fact. He claims his wife sent for him. Now Filmore and his wife don't live together. She abides with her mother, Mrs. Veremuie, in the little cottage on Watchung avenue, between the mill race and the Green brook. He boards wherever he can.

He went to the house Sunday afternoon and demanded admittance. His mother-in-law met him and told him to go away. Then Jack forgot himself and made insulting remarks about his wife. His abuse grew so vile that his wife slipped out and went for Patrolman McCue.

When Jack sighted the bluecoat he departed hurriedly. He went in the opposite direction without much regard to where it led him. Green brook happened to be in his path and he waded through. That took him into Somerset county, a free but chilly man.

Half an hour later McCue saw him go into Margentino's store on Park avenue to warm up. McCue followed. Jack departed by the back door with the officer in pursuit. They ran through Tier's alley into Park avenue and thence to Front street. Jack ran fast, but the policeman ran faster and won the race.

After hearing the story Judge Stillman fined Filmore $5, with the privilege of taking ten days in jail.

MADE COMFORT BAGS.

Good Cheer to be Sent to Soldier Boys by Congregationalists.

A pleasant and profitable time was passed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Winckler on Park place, last Monday, when a large number of Christian Endeavorers of the Congregational church assembled under the direction of the missionary committee of the society and made comfort bags for the sailors of the U. S. Navy. The affair was arranged by the missionary committee of which Miss Mary Prescott Chase is the chairman, and the male members of the society took a hand at sewing as well as the ladies. In all thirty-one comfort bags were made and they were filled with all sorts of useful articles. There was also placed in each bag a testament and a personal letter, all of which, undoubtedly, will be greatly appreciated by the recipients.

Trolley Power House.

It is said that the Plainfield Street Railway Company will probably erect a power house on the lot at the corner of Front and Richmond streets, which they purchased some time ago in the effort to get a majority of the street frontage on that thoroughfare in order to get the right of way for a line to Scotch Plains.

TO VISIT PALESTINE.

DR. RICHARDS TO JOURNEY THROUGH THE HOLY LAND.

He Will Accompany the Tour Being Arranged by A. V. D. Honeyman—Several Other Notables to Join Party.

Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church of this city, has received the unanimous consent of his church session to take a three months' vacation next spring to visit the Holy Land. The session heard that the doctor had a desire to go at some time in the future, and of their own accord met last week and passed the resolution named above. They expressed themselves as greatly gratified that he thought of visiting Palestine, because the impressions he would bring back would serve to enrich his sermons for a long time in the future. The doctor expects to go with the party conducted by A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, who is a member of his congregation.

Mr. Honeyman, on being interviewed this morning as to the prospects of his Palestine excursion and who otherwise were going, stated that the party already numbered fifteen and would not exceed twenty, that being a convenient number to handle in Oriental countries. Rev. T. E. Davis, the well-known Christian Endeavorer, of Bound Brook, has announced to his people that he is to be one of the party and so he may be named, but otherwise Mr. Honeyman said that he was "not permitted to publish names, some people not liking it. It is enough to say that there will be two ex Judges, several clergymen, several business men and at least ten bright, intelligent ladies. We go to see the most possible in three months and expect to take along a library of fifty books, have the best obtainable couriers and give plenty of time to Greece and to Egypt as to Palestine."

The party will start February 25th and will visit Southern Italy, spend a week in Greece, and there will be a side trip to Constantinople. The three weeks in the Holy Land will include Easter Sunday at Jerusalem and a regular caravan trip through that country from north to south. They will then spend two weeks in Egypt and the following two weeks in Italy, reaching home May 31st.

Pancake Sociable.

The Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church will give a novel sociable Thursday evening. No admission will be charged, but a silver offering will be appreciated. Besides a musical programme, pancakes and delicious coffee will be served to all who have the price, 15 cents. The amount realized will go toward paying for the balance due on the matting covering the floor of the Sunday-school room. Cakes and coffee will be served from 6 o'clock on into the evening, and an enjoyable time is promised to all who attend. An expert from Hecker's establishment will be present and bake the pancakes.

A Consecration Service.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold a consecration service next Friday evening at the church. The meeting will be conducted from memory, and the members are expected to respond in the same manner. No Bibles or hymn books will be used.

UNITARIAN WOMEN MEET

FIRST MEETING OF BRANCH ALLIANCE FOR THE WINTER.

Mrs. S. R. Krom Resigns as a Member of the Executive Board—Mrs. Hall Reads a Paper on Life of Starr King.

The first winter meeting of the Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women was held in All Souls' church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The president, Mrs. David P. Hall, was in the chair. After the transaction of a small amount of routine business, the resignation of Mrs. S. R. Krom as a member of the executive board was received with much reluctance. The members tried their best to prevail upon Mrs. Krom to remain in office, and this matter was settled for the time being by placing the resignation on the table for future action.

The feature of the afternoon was the reading of a paper by Mrs Hall on the life of Thomas Starr King, for many years a leading light in the Unitarian church. The article was prepared from sermons preached by Dr. Bellows and E. P. Whipple, and gave a highly interesting sketch of Mr King. He was portrayed as a man of rare intelligence and grand thoughts, and one who belonged to the Church Universal. He had deep religious feeling and suffered great hardship and poverty for the cause he espoused. He was bright, vivacious, and at the age of fourteen years he was at the head of a family, his father having died at that time leaving him the oldest of the children. In early life he held many responsible positions and when eighteen years of age he began to prepare for the ministry. When a young man he preached with great fervor and intelligence in a number of prominent churches in large cities, and for eleven years preached in Boston. His sermons were along the line of unity of spiritual life. He possessed a very sensitive nature, but he had his happy moods as well as sad ones. It was said of him that he saved California to the Union in 1861, and at a great cost to his life. He was a hard worker and died Friday, March 4, 1864. Following the reading of the paper an informal discussion took place, and many present related incidents in connection with the life of Mr. King.

WISHED THEM BON VOYAGE.

Mr. and Mrs. Binning's Friends Give Them a Great Sendoff.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Binning, formerly of this city, but late of New York, sailed Saturday on the steamship Campania, of the Cunard Line, for England, where they will remain for an indefinite time. Mr. Binning was formerly the efficient engineer for the Plainfield Electric Light Company, but later worked for the Union Electric Street Railway Company, of New York. Mrs. Binning (nee Miss Emma Martin) will be remembered as one of the first operators at the local office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company.

Previous to their departure they were given a royal sendoff on the steamer by about fifty of their friends in New York, among whom were the officials and fellow-employes of the Union Electric Street Railway Company, and their wives. Miss Josie W. Martin, of Chatham street, a sister of Mrs. Binning, was also present.

CELEBRATED HER RETURN.

The After Effects Made Her Nervous and so the Judge Let Her Off.

Bridget Coleman has just returned after a sixty-day sojourn in Elizabeth. It isn't necessary to say that the sojourn was rather compulsory. Monday afternoon, when she returned, she immediately celebrated the event with a visit to the flowing bowl. Patrolman Watson found her on West Third street sadly the worse for the hilarity. He locked her up.

Tuesday, she was arraigned before City Judge Stillman. She explained to the Judge that she was feeling nervous. He deemed the punishment sufficient and suspended sentence.

Entertained at Euchre.

The Monday Evening Euchre Club was delightfully entertained last Monday by former Mayor and Mrs. Alex. Gilbert at their home on Eighth street. There were nine tables, and in addition to the regular members there were a few invited guests. The first second and third prizes for the women were presented to Mrs. J. Parker Mason, Mrs. J. K. Myers and Mrs. Samuel Kimball, while Edwin Conklin, Samuel Huntington and Howard Fleming won the prizes for the men. After play refreshments were served by the host and hostess and the rest of the evening was passed in sociability.

Camera Club Elect.

At the meeting of the Camera Club held Monday the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Walter H. Freeman; vice-president, J. R. H. Hall; secretary, J. Hervey Doane; treasurer, H. H. Coward. Asa Randolph, C. T. Coons and Mrs. A. W. Rand, together with the above named officers, constitute the board of directors. The members are looking forward to a good year.

CONFISCATED THE COW.

RATHER RADICAL REMEDY TO PREVENT TRESPASSING OF BOSSY.

The Animal is Owned by James McCarthy, But Edward Coughlan Has Got Possession and Won't Give Her Up.

The plaintiff in the case in tort of James McCarthy against Edward Coughlan unexpectedly discontinued the action in Justice Mosher's court Monday, which has put aside the proceedings for awhile, although it is likely that another suit will be started, this time in a higher court.

This is the famous heifer case that has been postponed and adjourned in this court for the past month. McCarthy and Coughlan are neighbors and live on Webster place. McCarthy has a cow, or had one, but now the animal is in the possession of Coughlan.

While McCarthy owned the cow he used to pasture her along the sidewalk and in his back yard. Often the animal would slip its tether and escape into Coughlan's yard, where she would raise mischief with his vegetables. He stood this for some time, but finally he and McCarthy had trouble over the matter which led to a quarrel, in which Coughlan claims McCarthy struck him.

Coughlan had the other arrested on a charge of assault and battery. Before the day for trial McCarthy had Coughlan arrested on a charge of retaining possession of the cow which, it seems, Coughlan has done, for when the cow next strayed in the yard Coughlan tied her up in his barn and there she is yet.

It was this case, in tort, that was to have been tried Tuesday morning, but when the plaintiff and his lawyer, Councilman Hetfield, appeared in court they moved to discontinue the proceedings. They will now replevin the cow, through the sheriff, a much longer and more expensive proceeding, but the only one by which the true owner of the cow can gain possession of her once more. W. S. Angleman represents Coughlan.

OLD CLUB; NEW NAME.

LOCA BANJO CLUB NOW CALLED THE METRONOME CLUB.

Will Begin an Active Season Thursday With Concert In Promenent New York Church—The Members and Officers.

Plainfield's only banjo club, which had such a successful season last year, has reorganized this fall under the name of the Metronome Banjo and Mandolin Club, of Plainfield, and will enter upon an active season Thursday with a concert in a prominent New York church.

Last year the club was known as the Plainfield Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club. It gave several concerts in this city and elsewhere, meeting with a favorable reception wherever it appeared. This year the number of players has been slightly reduced, but the excellence of the rendition of the selections will be improved. The members have been practicing hard and are now prepared to hold their own with any similar organization of the kind.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell is president of the club and J. C. Kirkner secretary. Fred G. Smith is again the business manager and Fred F. Van Epa the musical director. The club is composed of the following, all Plainfielders: Banjos, Fred F. Van-Epe and Fred G. Smith; mandolins, Rev. Wm. C. O'Donnell, Raymond B. Carroll, Albert L. Littell and J. C. Kirkner; guitar, D. Webster Littell, Jr.; piano, Herbert J. Harold.

Thursday evening the club will take the principal part in a concert at the Madison avenue Presbyterian church, New York. Other engagements will follow. Later in the season a concert will be given at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

Attractive Euchre Party.

A euchre party of unusual proportions and unusually attractive features was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Gertrude Rushmore and Miss Edith Gilbert at Miss Rushmore's home on West Second street. Eighteen tables were arranged in the spacious rooms which were profusely decorated with pink roses. Miss Rushmore and Miss Gilbert were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Rushmore, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Pinto, Mrs. Walter Moore, the Misses Minnie and Katherine Wood, Phoebe and Laura Lovell, Caroline Randolph, Mary Week, Ariadne Gilbert, Miss Moore and Miss Baker. The winners of the prizes were the Misses Leslie Kyte, Marjory Coe, Emma Haviland, Mary Whiton, Mabel Pierson and Kathleen Ryder.

Entertained Ministers.

The members of the Plainfield Ministers' Association were entertained yesterday afternoon by Rev. Dr. Schenck at his home in West End Park, and Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, prepared and read a paper of great interest to all. An informal discussion of the subject followed which brought out the many fine points in the paper.

ROYAL ARCANUM ELECT.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL CHOOSE OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR.

Albert L. Littell Honored With the Office of Regent—Visit of Grand Lodge Officials—Speeches and Music at Close.

One of the best meetings ever held by Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, took place last Tuesday, at which time officers for the ensuing year were elected and there was a visitation from Grand Lodge officers. The attendance of members was very large and there was a lively contest for honors. The following named persons were selected to guide the affairs of the council for the coming year: Regent, Albert L. Littell; vice-regent, Herbert C. Bixson; orator, Dr. Kempton Browning; past regent, L. B. Bromfield; secretary, F. J. Pope; treasurer, D. W. Littell; collector, Eliot Burr; chaplain, Edward Love; guide, W. B. Remsen; warden, A. W. Winckler; sentry, W. S. Lowry; representative to Grand Council, L. B. Bromfield; alternate, Rowland C. Treadwell; trustee, (three years), A. W. Rand.

After the transaction of the regular order of business the balance of the evening was devoted to sociability and a pleasing programme of music and speech. Joseph Saitels' orchestra was present and discoursed music. There were also vocal selections by Frank Cokefair and F. J. Pope. Speeches were made by Grand Secretary Alberts, of Hoboken, Grand Medical Examiner Applegate, of New Brunswick, and many of the local members. Nearly all of the officers-elect had something to say of a pleasant nature.

Following the above programme a repast was served by Stephenson, the caterer, during which everyone had a jolly good time.

MADE LOVE TO STATUE.

PATROLMAN TOTTEN FOUND HIM EMBRACING INDIAN MAID.

Too Liberal Pulstoms Made George Leland See Strange Sights on West Second Street—Fined $3 This Morning.

George Leland came reeling down West Second street last Monday with his brain bewildered by too liberal potations of "Jersey Lightning." As he passed Nate Guttman's store his wandering glance rested on the form of the wooden Indian that stands in front of the establishment. Suddenly George halted and a queer sensation passed along his spinal column. The face, usually so stolid and expressionless, was smiling at him and then the hand of the Indian maid beckoned to him to draw near. George obeyed the summons.

When Patrolman Totten came along half an hour later he found that the acquaintance had progressed with considerable rapidity. There was Leland, wildly embracing the Indian and whispering words of love, sadly muddled, however, into the wooden ear of the aborigines. But the smile was gone and all the officer saw was the dull, expressionless face.

When Totten disentangled Leland's arm, the latter immediately collapsed and the officer had to secure help to carry the helpless man along the slippery sidewalks to the lockup.

Last Tuesday Leland was arraigned before City Judge Stillman on the charge of being drunk. He pleaded guilty. Three dollars or five days re mained the Judge, and they bore him back to his cell to dream once more of the smiles of the Indian maid.

DR. BONDY ARRESTED AGAIN.

Accused of Fraud in Connection With a Chattel Mortgage.

The authorities at Bayonne sent a warrant here Saturday for the arrest of Dr. Bondy on a charge of fraud in connection with a chattel mortgage. Chief Grant and Roadmaster Flynn arrested the doctor late in the evening at the home of Mrs. Huffman, of Terril road. He was arraigned before Justice Nash who held him in $500 bail for his appearance in Bayonne.

Chief Grant and Justice Nash, when seen last Monday, did not recollect the name of the party who makes the complaint but he lives in Bayonne. The doctor is charged with giving a chattle mortgage on his belongings when there was already a mortgage on them for their full value. The prisoner was just released from the Jersey City jail after having settled up accounts with John Keely, J. A. Blatz, Robert Guttridge and others whom he bunooed out of money during the past few months and now is in difficulty again.

To Stop Work for the Winter.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company has decided not to continue the work for the present of laying conduits under ground. The early continued cold weather has been the means of changing the original plans. Yesterday Wm. Hand was given orders to collect all piping placed along the streets and put them away for the winter.

Miss Laura Streeter, of Somerville, has returned home after visiting friends on Park avenue.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a benefit deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for them?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the superintendent of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constantly increasing, due principally to the influence of some of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. They believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think the special benefit was in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm friend of Ripans Tabules for many cases of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of a cure which a friend always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had, for one, but that time the physician's bill was for results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and feel I made a saving of $9 a call.

A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules will cure me of any ailment, and I would not be without them now if I were my weight in dollars." At the time of this interview there were seven persons present two doctors who were specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name before the public, but on this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the talking about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly afflicted to be as grateful as I myself have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how modestly she felt about the matter, gave in, and the testimonial was duly received, and decided she was quite right.

TWO KILLED IN WRECK

Passenger Train Crashed Into Sleeper Yesterday Morning.

WAS WEST OF COLONIA.

ON MAIN LINE OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

Seven Were Injured—One Section of Express Stopped for Local—Other Section Ran into It—Sleeper Overturned.

Rahway, December 21.—One section of a through express train from the West on the Pennsylvania Railroad, crashed into a preceding section of the same train 130 yards east of the Colonia station this morning at 6:50 o'clock. Colonia is two miles west of Rahway. Two were killed and seven injured in the accident.

The killed were:

DEWOLFE, WILLIAM O., clerk in accountant's office of the Ohio River Railroad at Parkersberg, Va.

KNIGHT, E., of Jersey City, porter in Pullman sleeping car "Bartholdi."

The injured were:

LEVY, MRS. JULIA, of 594 11th street, Brooklyn. Suffered from shock, in a serious condition. Removed to Mt. Sania Hospital.

IRISH, FRANK of Chicago, traveling passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. Collarbone broken. Removed to St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City.

WELCH, J. E., of 345 Central avenue, Jersey City, conductor of Pullman sleeping car, "Bartholdi." Both legs broken. Removed to the City Hospital, Jersey City.

VANDEGRIFT, J., of Philadelphia, engineer of P. R. R engine No. 515. Badly cut and bruised. Removed to St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City.

ZANEN, C., of Princeton, fireman on P. R. R. engine No. 515. Shaken and bruised. Removed to St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City.

The through express from the west is to run in a number of sections. The collision occurred between sections 10 and 14. Section 14 was ahead. That section was composed of eleven cars, express and mail, and one Pullman sleeper in the rear. Section 10 was composed of passenger coaches and was drawn by engine No. 515, Engineer Vandergrift and Fireman Zanen.

Near Colonia the Perth Amboy branch of the Pennsylvania joins the main line. The engineer of section 14 brough his train to a standstill to allow a Perth Amboy local to pass in on the main line. Neither section is supposed to stop in Jersey. Section 10 was moving along at 50 miles an hour. Vandergrift supposed that he had a clear track ahead. The fog hid section 14 until too late.

The locomotive crashed into the sleeper, throwing it from the track and into the ditch. Besides the crew of the colliding locomotive, all the injured were in the sleeper, as were also the killed. There were seventeen people in the sleeper. All were badly shaken up. So were the passengers in section 10. The locomotive to section 10, No. 515, was wrecked.

GRANTS A NEW TRIAL.

ALLEGED MILLSTONE BURGLARS WILL HAVE A CHANCE TO GET FREE.

An Affidavit Presented to Judge Bartine in Which State's Leading Witness on First Trial Says He Did Not Tell the Truth.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Somerville, December 21.—Judge Bartine granted a new trial yesterday to Thomas Shine and Thomas Wright, who were convicted, at the last term of court of being implicated in the robbery of the East Millstone Pennsylvania Railroad station in September.

The State's witness, Jerry Washington, a colored man, swore before the Grand Jury and on the witness stand at the trial that he was one of the gang that committed the robbery and tied and gagged Henry Jones, the night watchman. Since the trial he has informed the Court that the story told was untrue, and yesterday an affidavit was presented to the Court by Counsel William G. Steele in which Washington confesses himself a perjurer. He denies that he was in East Millstone on the night of the robbery, but was at his home on the west side of the river. He says the detective gave him liquor until he was half drunk and did not know what he was saying.

Judge Bartine thought the story of Washington very improbable. No conviction should take place on the evidence of an accomplice, he said, unless well supported. In this case he held that there was nothing to sustain the verdict except the testimony of an accomplice.

HIS AGE WAS A RIPE ONE

JESSE MILTON EMERSON DIES AFTER FOUR SCORE YEARS OF LIFE.

Last September He and His Wife Celebrated Their Golden Wedding—He Was an Author of Several Interesting Books.

The death of Jesse Milton Emerson aged eighty years, occurred Tuesday afternoon at his home, "Inter-Haven," North Plainfield, after a long illness from paralysis. Mr. Emerson and wife lived a retired life. September 19th last he and his wife celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage and the event was an auspicious one. Since that time Mr. Emerson has frequently visited Plainfield in a carriage and enjoyed various drives. Owing to his condition his death was not wholly unexpected.

Mr. Emerson was born at Methuen, Mass., and Mrs. Emerson at Amherst, N. H. They were married September 18th, 1848, by Mrs. Emerson's father, Rev. Ira Pearson, who for seventy years was active in the Baptist ministry. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Emerson located at New Orleans, where Mr. Emerson had business interests. Soon afterward they returned to New York city, where they resided until four years ago. During his early years Mr. Emerson conducted a publishing business at 38 Park Row, New York. He was the author of "New York to the Orient" and "European Glimpses and Glances," both of which relate the personal experiences which the author and his wife had while traveling abroad. Another work is entitled "Stimulants," and treats of the uses and abuses of such. After Mr. Emerson left the publishing business he founded the Brotherhood Wine Company, of New York, and he has been president of the company ever since. Two sons, J. M. Emerson, Jr., and Edward R. Emerson, both of New York, are associated in the business.

Mrs. Emerson and the two sons mentioned survive the deceased. The funeral services will be private.

Twins Again.

The home of Former Street Commissioner and Mrs. William B. Emmons, of the borough, was brightened last Saturday by the arrival of twin boys, and congratulations are now being extended. In December of last year twins, a boy and girl, arrived at the same home, but later the girl died. Mrs. Emmons is the daughter of Letter carrier and Mrs. Chas. B. Stephens, of this city.

Queen City Lodge Elect.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., met Monday night and elected officers as follows: Noble grand, James D. Brown; vice grand, Harry W. Fraleigh; recording secretary, R. J. Neal; financial secretary, H. H. Hoffman; treasurer, J. P. Allis.

Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, who has been ill with typhoid fever, is now able to go out of doors on pleasant days.

—There will be a meeting of the Branch Alliance at the Unitarian church Monday afternoon, January 9th, at which time Mrs. E. M. Conklin will deliver a lecture on "History."

SENATORS PLEDGED TO SUPPORT REED.

Somerset Man Has Seven Votes Sure for President.

EXPECTS TO SECURE TEN.

NO PLANS MADE FOR THE GUBERNATORIAL INAUGURATION.

Arrangements for Mr. Voorhees' Induction Into Office Likely to Be Delayed Until After the Legislature Meets—Assessment Discussion Made One Enemy for Reed From Ocean County.

Trenton, Dec. 21—There were less than a dozen members of the coming Legislature at the State Capitol yesterday. Essex county's delegation was not represented. Senator elect Pitney, of Morris county, was on hand, having come to Trenton on some court business.

He had a short talk with Senator Reed, of Somerset, and Senator-elect Hutchinson, of Mercer, the only other members of the Upper House present. The talk was purely informal. Nothing was said regarding the presidency. So far Senator Pitney has not committed himself as to his preference for a presiding officer.

There seems to be no question now as to Senator Reed's landing the presidency. He has seven of the Republican votes pledged to him, and it is very probable that he will get ten votes in the caucus. Eight is the number requisite to a choice.

The Senators who have assured Senator Reed of their support are Francis, of Monmouth; Johnson, of Camden; Stanger, of Gloucester; Miller, of Salem; Hand, of Cape May, and Hutchinson, of Mercer.

These, with his own vote, make seven. While Senator-elect Evans, of Atlantic, has not pledged himself it is understood that he is favorable to Reed. The latter's friends claim that Senator Ketcham will support Reed in preference to Johnson, of Bergen, and that Pitney will be for Reed. This practically assures Reed of ten votes, as against Senator Johnson.

All the Senators are friendly to Reed with the possible exception of Smith, of Ocean. The latter is opposed to the Somerset man because of Reed's championing the bill providing that where one county is satisfied that another county is not paying a fair share of school tax, an appeal may be taken to the State Board of Taxation.

This bill was aimed at Ocean county, the Somerset authorities claiming that the assessments at Lakewood especially, were too low. It was under this law that Somerset last summer made the complaint against Ocean, but the State Board of Taxation, with the exception of Major Lents, upheld Ocean county. For this reason, Senator Smith is against Senator Reed.

So far no preparation have been made for the inauguration of Governor-elect Voorhees, although the event is but a few weeks off. The local Republican leaders have done absolutely nothing toward arranging for the inauguration.

Heretofore the Mercer county leaders, in either part, have always taken the initiative and made elaborate preparations for the induction of Governors, but this year nothing whatever has been done.

The outlook now is that no move whatever will be made in the matter until the opening of the Legislature, when a special committee will be named to make arrangements for the inauguration.

This will give the committee only five days to arrange for the inaugural programme, and it will necessarily be very meagre.

NEW LOAN ASSOCIATION.

Branch of the Union Building and Loan Association Formed.

The Union Building and Loan Association, of Plainfield, was organized last evening in this city by Mr. Davis, the solicitor, and the following persons have thus far joined: Robert A. Meeker, Curtis M. Thorpe, J. Fred MacDonald, John D. Runyon, A. L. Force, C. H. Clagg, Dr. T. S. Davis, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, T. R. VanZandt, E. V. H. Voorhees, E. V. French, Fred C. Lounsbury, Nelson Runyon, W. J. R. Thiers, A. B. Thorn, R. J. Shaw, S. R. Struthers.

The charter was instituted and shares will be offered for sale at fifty cents each with matured value at $100. The stock will mature in about ten years. Those joining will have the priviledge of withdrawing at any time and receiving 6 per cent. interest. This is the first series and in January the members will meet and elect officers.

Miss Laura Runyon, of West Fourth street, is detained at home by illness.

A SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

STEPS TO BE TAKEN TO SECURE ONE BY THE SONS OF VETERANS.

Plan Proposed by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell—Appointment of Committee to Undertake the Work—Officers Chosen.

An enthusiastic meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, was held last Tuesday. One of the most important subjects considered was that regarding the proposed action in securing for Plainfield a soldiers' monument. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, who is a member of the camp, gave a short talk on the subject. He thought that there should be a sufficient amount of patriotism in every one to help this worthy cause along. He also thought that if the right plans were adopted nearly every person in the city could be induced to interest themselves to some extent, however small. Mr. O'Donnell incorporated in his remarks a motion that a committee of three be appointed from the camp and that that committee be given power to ask the City Council for the appointment of a committee of three to work jointly in the matter. This motion prevailed and acting-Captain Raymond McVoy appointed Mr. O'Donnell, H. C. McVoy and W. C. Dobbins as the committee to represent the camp.

Mr. O'Donnell assured those present that the committee intend to get to work at once and if possible to accomplish before 1900 the object for which they were appointed.

The next business transacted was the election of officers which resulted as follows: Captain, Raymond McVoy; first lieutenant, Frank H. Clarkson; second lieutenant, E. P. T. Smith; camp council, George Bedford, Frank Perry, Charles Graves; delegates to division encampment, E. P. T. Smith, H. C. McVoy; alternates, F. A. Sutton and Clarence Rittenhouse.

Following the election it was unanimously agreed that the members of the Camp should furnish the supper on the evening of installation. H. C. McVoy proposed the idea and he thought that inasmuch as heretofore the G. A. R. or Women's Relief Corps had performed this work it would only be fair for the Sons to give a supper in return for past favors. The committee appointed to look after this supper consists of E. P. T. Smith, F. A. Sutton and W. S. Sutton.

A partial report of the fair committee showed that the Camp will net $200 as a result of their efforts. This money will be put in the Dime Saving's Bank where it will draw interest.

TROUBLE DOWN ON THE FARM.

Son Went to the Klondike and New Worker Wasn't Satisfactory.

A dispute between neighbors over the division of last season's crops, the trespassing of pigs and sheep and the amount of money due one neighbor from the other, was aired in Justice Smalley's court at Washingtonville Tuesday. Court was held in Finger's Hotel, and lasted from 11 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock last night when the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $80.

The parties at odds were Stephen Bicknell and Mrs. Anna H. Underhill, and the suit was brought for $200 damages which Bicknell claimed in lieu of several tons of hay stored in Mrs. Underhill's barn, and which Mrs. Underhill refused to deliver to him.

Girard H. Underhill formerly managed his mother's farm, but last winter he went to the Klondike, leaving no one to run the farm. In her dilemma, Mrs. Underwood called on her neighbor, Bicknell, and offered him one-half of the crops if he would run the farm on shares. This Bicknell agreed to do.

When the crops were all harvested, there was a dispute between the two as to the division of the crops. Tons of hay is Mrs. Underhill's barn was the point on which they differed most, and finally Mrs. Underhill ordered Bicknell off the farm.

Bicknell, through Coddington & Swackhamer, brought suit in tort against Mrs. Underhill. Read & Coddington defended her.

The jurymen were: Frank Giddis, Newton Smalley, J. W. Coddington, August Mobus, John Emmons, Amity Wolffe, Edward Mundy, V. Dunky, Francis Bartells, William White, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Burnett.

The jury went out at 6 o'clock, and came in with their verdict at 9 o'clock.

Freeholders Looking Around.

The bridge committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders was in Plainfield Tuesday afternoon making a tour of the town for the purpose of selecting a suitable railing to be erected on the new bridge at Rahway. One similar to the railing on the Watchung avenue bridge was selected, and Sheriff Kirk secured the contract for erecting the same.

GAY GIBSON GIRLS GATHER AT CASINO.

Plainfield Edition of Gibson's Famous Drawings.

FOR A WORTHY OBJECT.

SERIES OF TABLEAUX WELL RECEIVED BY THE AULIENCE.

Affair Given for Benefit of Young Women's Club—Twenty-two Tableaux Given—Girls Were Pretty and Tableaux Cleverly Arranged—Who the Participants Were and the Committees.

A Plainfield edition of Charles Dana Gibson's drawings was presented at the Casino of the Union County Country Club Tuesday evening. While the pictures were not exactly Gibsonlike, they were very pretty notwithstanding. The trouble is that the typical "Gibson Girl" is a rare creature, while the uplifted head and superior glance of the maiden in many of the drawings are not characteristic of the Plainfield young women. The tableaux were very pretty, however, and cleverly arranged so that the very fashionable audience present departed well satisfied with it all.

The affair was given for the benefit of the Young Women's Club and was arranged by those interested in that work. The committee in charge was composed of Mrs. I. H. Bigelow, Jr., Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Minne Wood, Miss Harriet Halloway, Miss Grace Cooley and Mrs. J. E. Kimball. The decorations were prepared under the direction of Mrs. C. C. Cokefair and Mrs. Samuel Kimball. The young women in charge were assisted in arranging the stage by Dr. Knott, J. E. Kimball, Frank Cokefair and I. H. Bigelow.

The stage was arranged with a large black frame on the left, over which hung the American and English flags, side by side. The rest of the stage was devoted to the large groups while the single figures were shown in the frame.

The programme opened with "The American Girl," Miss Florence Warning, in a very Gibson-like pose. Next was a tableaux, entitled "This Can Happen. The American father may be amazed at finding his English son-in-law not an undesirable article."

Miss Edmee Corliss and Howard Corliss appeared as the Englishman and his bride while the American father, Laurens H. VanBuren had completely collapsed with amaze in the arms of his buler, City Judge elect William N. Runyon.

Miss Elizabeth VanBoskerck was the central figure in "The Maiden and the Mistletoe," a soliloquy. "Now if I hang you over this dark corner he won't see you, and if I hang you in the light he won't dare." The next was "Not a Ghost." "It is only poor Jim who happened to marry the wrong girl," and sometimes she is very particularly unendurable, he remembers the other one." Dr. B. Van D. Hedges did look particularly doleful as "Jim," while Mrs. Edward VanBuren was properly regaled as the "wrong girl." Miss Negley appeared as "the other one." Miss Carrie Vail and Howard Huntington played the minor parts. Miss Minnie Wood and Harry Slauson, as a A. D. T. boy represented the picture "Her Protector." "Reading the Will" was pictured by Mrs. Edgar Corliss, Miss Carrie Vail, Miss Estelle Day, Tom VanBoskerck with E. C. Perkins in the role of solicitor. A study was given by Miss Mabel Negley attired in a riding habit.

Miss Katherine Reinhart looked every inch a Gibson girl in "Her Night-mare; How She Saw Herself." She was standing all alone at one side of the stage, attired in evening gown, while Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Dr. F. C. Ard, E. S. Wilcox, Howard Huntington, Mr. Dowding and Gifford Cooley were apparently ignoring her presence entirely. It was amusing to see one of the young men forget and steal a glance at her during the tableau.

Mrs. W. L. Saunders appeared in "A Study." In a rustic scene, with very green grass and rocks, Miss Marion Bowen sat with her head on the shoulder of George VanBoskerck, who was looking unutterable things at the "ceady." Rob Abbott, "Is a Caddy Always Necessary?" was the title. A vision in blue by Miss Edmee Corliss was entitled "A Study."

Part first closed with "The Old Tune," played by Miss Marguerite Burnett, while Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hallock and Laurens H. VanBuren were grouped about the stage. The tune was "The Last Rose of Summer."

Councilman William N. Runyon sang two bass solos in the intermission and then a truly delightful "Bachelor's Suppe" was shown by C. F. Abbott,

NO ONE AT THROTTLE.

ENGINEER SUDDENLY KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS BY ACCIDENT.

P. & R. Locomotive Ran for Some Distance Without Anyone to Control It—Injured Man is at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Camelback engine No. 470, drawing a P. & R. B. R. freight train, westbound, ran from a point west of Roselle to a short distance east of Westfield without an engineer at the throttle yesterday, which was due to the sudden rendering unconscious of the engineer, R. J. Whitty, of Philadelphia.

As the locomotive passed under an overhead bridge near Roselle Engineer Whitty struck his head out of the cab window and was struck by one of the braces supporting the bridge. He was knocked unconscious and fell to the bottom of the cab floor. The fireman was busy stoking the furnace and did not see the accident. After the train had run several miles, however, he noticed that the engineer was apparently not at the throttle and he hurried forward to investigate. He was startled to see Whitty lying on the floor of the cab. He tried to arouse him, but was unable. As the train approached Westfield he whistled for down breaks and stopped there.

The locomotive was detached from the train and ran hurriedly to this city, where it arrived at 12:20 o'clock and Whitty was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. He was still unconscious when admitted to the hospital. It is impossible to tell how serious the injuries are.

THOUSANDS FOR TAXES.

PROPERTY OWNERS FLOCKED TO COLLECTORS ON LAST DAY.

City and Borough Officials Had a Big Rush Tuesday—$33,000 Received in the City—$7,000 Paid in the Borough.

Tuesday was one of the busiest in the history of the city and borough collectors. All day the offices were crowded with taxpayers who wanted to wait until the last minute before paying their taxes. During the morning hours the people came in rather slowly, but as the afternoon drew on they began to flock to the offices and from that time up to late in the evening a steady stream of taxpayers poured in and kept both Collectors Martin and Brown, together with their assistants, exceedingly busy. There was one annoying feature of the day and that was concerning the payment of dog tax. So many people claimed that they had no dogs, and in some cases they were very persistent.

Collector Martin was assisted by Miss Novius and David Pope, while Councilman Flynn stood guard to see that no crooked work was attempted by taxpayers and to keep people in line. In all Mr. Martin received $33,000 Tuesday. Collector Brown received the sum of $7,000. Up to date Mr. Brown has received about $41,000 of the $54,000 which he is supposed to collect. Last evening at 11:30 o'clock he made his returns to Justice Crosley, and those who did not pay yesterday will now have to see that dignitary.

Up to date Collector Martin has received about $130,000. It was after 10 o'clock Tuesday when the office was closed and the money was deposited. In both the city and borough a large number of checks for taxes were received in letters and they were still coming in that way yesterday.

RABBI HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

The Segal-Reiner Troubles Brought up in Justice Collins' Court.

Westfield, Dec. 21.—The case of Rabbi Joseph Segal, and his two sons, Bernard and Frank, charged with breaking and entering the house of Dr. John M. Reiner, of Broad street, Elizabeth, Tuesday night of last week, was called in Justice Collins' court in Westfield this morning. Lawyer Faulks, of Newark, representing the defendants, stated that his clients desired to waive examination and be held for the grand jury. The justice then placed them under $800 bail each, which was furnished by Isaac Newman and A. Silverstein, of Elizabeth.

Miss Segal, the daughter of Rabbi, who was the cause of the trouble between Reiner and the Segals, appeared in court ready to testify against her relatives. It will be remembered that Rabbi Segal claimed that Reiner was detaining his daughter in his house by hypnotic influence, and the offense charged by Reiner was committed when the Rabbi and his sons rescued the girl and carried her off to Newark at midnight.

MUST NOT CROWD GYMNASIUM GALLERY.

Y. M. C. A. Directors Notified of Violation of State Law.

BLOCKED AISLES THERE.

BASKET BALL DREW LARGE CROWDS TO GYMNASIUM.

Used to Put in Two Rows of Chairs and Fill Rest of Space With Standing Spectators—Director Puzzled How to Overcome Violation of Law—Basket Ball is Blocked at Present.

The directors of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association find themselves face to face with an unpleasant situation. Without being aware of the fact, they have been violating a State law and city ordinance for the past three years. The trouble is over the gymnasium. It was not originally built for any public exhibition. The running track gallery that overlooks the main floor of the gymnasium seemed to answer the purpose of a visitor's gallery and has been used as such. Large crowds have assembled there and have been packed in a way that is in direct violation of State laws and local ordinances.

Ever since the growth of basket ball in popularity among the people of Plainfield, it has been customary to play in the gymnasium and allow the spectators to sit in the running track. As the crowds grew in numbers, two rows of chairs were placed around the gallery and the little space remaining filled by standing spectators. The people were literally packed in the gallery like sardines in a box. Excess was impossible except by emptying the entire gallery in the order in which they sat and stood.

The state of affairs reached the ears of Chief T. O. Doane, of the Fire Department. When he learned of the methods pursued, he immediately interviewed Physical Director Heywood and several of the directors of the association. He told them that they were violating the law in thus blocking the exit and not leaving an aisle in the gallery. That had been for several days ago. The chief told them that they must make some arrangements to comply with the law. In case of fire or panic the present state of affairs would undoubtedly result in serious and perhaps fatal injury of some of the spectators.

Exactly how the directors will make their way out of the difficulty it is impossible to say, but at present they have been compelled to give up the basket ball games to which the public are admitted. It was planned to have basket ball as part of the entertainment at the "open house" on New Year's Day, but that will have to be given up unless some way is found in which to accommodate the visitors, and yet not endanger their lives by closing the means of exit.

BOY BURGLARS PLEADED GUILTY.

George Kline Set to Reform School—Sentence to Rest Deferred for a Week.

Elizabeth, Dec. 21.—Plainfield's six boy burglars came before Judge Vail in the Union County court this morning. All pleaded guilty George Kline, colored, the youngest of the party, is under the age limit for a sentence to State prison and was therefore committed to the Reform School at Jamesburg. Sentence on the others was deferred for one week at the request of William G. DeMeza, lawyer for Alfred Springer. The other young offenders, Charles Westerfield, Thomas Cases, Abraham Conuett and John Taylor were not represented by counsel.

Funeral of Jacob Jennings.

The funeral services of the late Jacob M. Jennings were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the house on West Second street, and the attendance of friends was large. Rev. Dr. Main, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, officiated and spoke at some length on the exemplary Christian life of the departed and of his many excellent qualities. There were several very pretty floral tributes from relatives and friends. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery for the present, and when the soldiers' plot is prepared it will be interred there.

Thomas Callahan to Build.

Thomas Callahan, the grocer, is helping to improve the neighborhood of Richmond street, near Third street, by erecting a large three-story dwelling house, the first floor of which will be divided into three stores. He hopes to have it ready for occupancy by March 1st.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT.

BY C. A. PARKER.

ROBERT GOODman, pastor of a certain church in a certain town, seated himself at his study table one morning, drew toward him his writing material; then he took a deliberate survey of the room in which he sat. The view was not a very pleasing one. The walls were adorned with paper sadly discolored and falling away in places; the bare, smoky ceiling was traversed by numerous cracks; the paint on the woodwork, of dismal hue to start with, showed the ravages of time; the carpet was wretchedly shabby.

Mr. Goodman sighed at all this and sighed, as he had often done before.

"I could write better sermons in a decent study, I am positive," he said to himself. "This room is mortality in depressing. It does seem that the church might paint and paper it. The expense would be small. Then there is the carpet; but if that remained I should have to 'look up and not down.' Well, that is what I must do anyway," and with a decisive air he turned again to the work before him.

Just then there was a little tap at the door, and he rose and opened it.

"Good morning, Mr. Goodman," said Miss Hope Arnold, who stood outside the study door, looking fresh and bright as the morning itself. "Shall I disturb you? Mrs. Goodman said she thought you wouldn't be fairly at work yet, and told me to come right up."

Meanwhile the young girl had entered the room at the minister's invitation and seated herself with a comprehensive glance at her surroundings.

"I wished to consult you, Mr. Goodman," she continued, "about some of our Christian Endeavor work, but first of all, I want to tell you how much good your sermon last Sunday morning did me. I thank you for it. It was just what I needed."

"I am very happy to hear you say so, Miss Hope," replied the minister with a flush of pleasure, "and I thank you for telling me;" but the visitor little guessed how much good in turn she had done her pastor.

When they had finished their talk on Christian Endeavor work, and Hope had risen to go, she exclaimed impulsively: "So this is our minister's study! I have never been in it before. Really I should think the church could afford to paper it, at least."

"It would be a great improvement certainly," responded Mr. Goodman, smiling.

"It ought to be done," she declared in decided tones, "and it shall be," she mentally added.

When the caller had gone, Mr. Goodman, greatly cheered and encouraged, turned once more to his study table, and the next Sunday morning's discourse was generally pronounced one of his best.

Mr. Goodman was all that his name implied, but, though an earnest preacher, he was not brilliant nor eloquent, and the large churches with corresponding salaries were not for him. And as there were several small people at the parsonage to be fed, clothed and otherwise cared for, there was no money for superfluities, or for many other things not generally reckoned as such.

Mrs. Goodman, fortunately, was a cheery, efficient little woman, with a wonderful knack for compelling a dollar to do more than full duty, and in every way she was a true helpmeet to her husband.

On leaving the parsonage Hope hastened to the office of her uncle, one of the trustees of the church, and inquired whether the pastor's study could not be repapered and painted, but he shook his head.

She did not give up, however, by any means, and at the next meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society she presented the case.

"Now," she said, "I propose that we rejuvenate that study as a Christmas present to our pastor. I have made some inquiries, and find that it can be done at small expense.

"Mr. Bell, who is a member of our church, would furnish and put on good paper for four dollars. A neat matting for the floor could not cost over four dollars more. Fred Johnson (a young painter, and a member of the C. E. Society) will kindly attend to the woodwork without charge. So you see that the actual expense of the undertaking need not exceed eight dollars, though some other changes and additions might be made to good advantage."

Much to her delight, Hope's plan met with general approval, and then arose a discussion as to the best method of raising the money to carry it out.

Finally Ellen Berry, one of the most active members, said: "There are so many oyster suppers, sociables and things of that sort, let us try something different. Suppose each member becomes personally responsible for fifty cents."

After a little discussion this plan was unanimously adopted, and the meeting adjourned.

The Sunday before Christmas, Mrs. Bardwell, a jolly, motherly woman who lived four miles from the town, and who was a member of Mr. Goodman's church, said to the pastor and his wife as they shook hands after service, "I want you folks all out to my house for one good holiday visit. Can you come the day before Christmas? It seems a kind of queer time, may be, but if you can possibly come, that's the day I want you."

Mrs. Goodman reflected a few moments then replied, "Why, thank you, Mrs. Bardwell, I think we could come that day. I could arrange to go, I am sure. Couldn't you, Mr. Goodman?"

"Yes, I think so," he responded, very cheerfully. "Of course, there will be preparations going on for the evening exercises, but I don't know that I shall be particularly needed. Thank you very much for your kind invitation, Mrs. Bardwell. We shall enjoy the visit, I assure you."

Mrs. Goodman securely locked the front door on the day appointed, and dropped the key into her pocket; then accurately had the sleigh containing Mr. Goodman and herself and the four hilarious little Goodmans vanished down the road, then a man with rolls of paper appeared at the parsonage, and was admitted by Hope Arnold, who had secured a duplicate key from her uncle.

The man with paper and paste was speedily followed by another bearing a pot of paint, and the transformation of the study was soon under full headway.

Late in the afternoon three of the male members of the C. E. Society took possession with a roll of matting, and when in a short space of time, their work with that was finished, they were followed by several of the girls, and the study was soon in readiness for its occupant.

Great was the satisfaction of the conspirators as they surveyed the rejuvenated room. The paper on the walls and ceiling was restful to the eye, with its soft tints and unobtrusive patterns. The coloring of the woodwork harmonized with that of the paper. In spite of fresh paint, neat muslin curtains had been put up in place of the shabby lace ones; and the well worn table cover had given way to another just from the store. Over the neat matting, before study table and easy chair, rugs were placed for warmth and coolness.

And as a crowning touch a beautiful etching that spoke of itself as inspiration hung on the wall opposite the pastor's seat at his study table. This was a personal gift from Hope Arnold. Care had been taken to have everything done before it should be time for the pastor and his family to arrive at the church, that they might not be so soon surprised at seeing a light in the house. But toward the close of the evening's exercises Fred Johnson slipped over to the parsonage, and when Mr. and Mrs. Goodman stepped out into the wintry air they were startled by a gleam from the study windows.

"What can it mean!" cried Mr. Goodman in alarm. "Can it be fire?"

Home was soon reached and they hurried upstairs. A lighted lamp was on the stand before the study door, and against it leaned a placard bearing the words, "Beware of paint" in large letters. Mr. Goodman carefully opened the door and entered the room, followed by Mrs. Goodman ushering in her brood with due deference to the warning without and the odor within.

The little folks chattered and exclaimed, and pointed out to one another the various changes, but for a few moments the pastor and his wife said not a word.

Then Mr. Goodman took an envelope from the table. It contained a $10 bill and a card, from which he read aloud in a clear, unsteady voice:

"Please accept the alterations in your study as a testimonial of affection and esteem from the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and use the inclosed for such further improvements in the way of books as it will make, and your many desire."

Mrs. Goodman sat down and cried. "Oh!" she exclaimed, "this study has worried me so! I've tried and tried to get having it done, but there didn't seem to be any way to do it. Finally I gave up and just left it with the Lord, and since then I've been sure it would be done some day. And it is! Those blessed young folks! And $10 for books, too!"

"Yes," replied Mr. Goodman, wiping his own eyes, "I am very thankful for it all. It was Hope Arnold's idea, I am positive. She looked very determined when she left the study that morning she was here."

"Well, it is certainly a welcome Christmas gift, and a great surprise."

Then small Johnny Goodman, who had been regarding his parents in great perplexity, exclaimed: "I don't see what made papa and mamma cry about it! I think it looks nicer than it did before!"

A Lakeside Christmas.

"Ouch!"

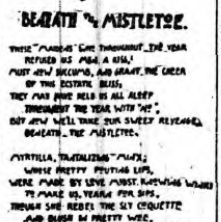
The beautiful maiden withdrew her foot hastily.

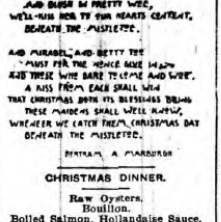
Flinging her arm into the silken depths she took from the toe of her stocking a five-pound box of candies she had overlooked.

Need it be added that this happened in Chicago?

Baggs—Well, old man, what did you get in your stocking this morning?

Waggs—My foot.





A merry Christmas to all, my dear fellows, say I—
May you live in enjoyment, and live till you die.
May you share in the good things the world can afford
And never look sad at the gay, social board.

A happy New Year—let me drink to you all—
To the men, to the ladies, to the great, to the small;
The ladies I'll toast in a glass of good wine—
May your phizes, when old, look as smiling as mine!

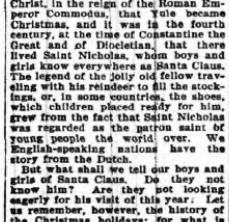
ORIGIN OF YULE TIDE.

The Festive Season Celebrated Long Before Christmas Came.

Once upon a time, when Christmas was yet unknown, the northern nations of the world held a yearly festival which they called Yule. They wreathed with greens the temples of their heathen gods, as we wreathe our churches to-day; they burned great yule logs in honor of the sun, that he might make the earth blossom into Spring; and they gave their children yule gifts from fir trees loaded down with pretty things, just as we give to our children upon Christmas Eve.

It was not until 180 years after Jesus Christ, in the reign of the Roman Emperor Commodus, that Yule became Christmas, and it was in the fourth century, at the time of Constantine the Great and of Diocletian, that there lived Saint Nicholas, whom boys and girls know everywhere as Santa Claus. The legend of the jolly old fellow traveling with his reindeer to fill the stockings, or, in some countries, the shoes, which children placed ready for him, grew from the fact that Saint Nicholas was regarded as the patron saint of young people the world over. We English-speaking nations have the story from the Dutch.

But what shall we tell our boys and girls of Santa Claus. Do they not know him? Are they not looking eagerly for his visit of this year. Let us remember, however, the history of the Christmas holidays; for what is more beautiful than that the living religion of Christ should touch and vivify one of the oldest of the heathen festivals, not only taking away nothing that it was good to retain, but following one particular day, the 25th of December, as the birthday of the child Jesus?



PLEASANT FOR THOMAS.

MRS. EFFROCS—Thomas, you must not make any noise when you draw down Santa Claus and fill the children's stockings tonight. Jimmy and Freddy have each got an air gun and a bow and arrow, and are going to shoot you with them to-night if Santa Claus is really alive. But you won't mind, will you?

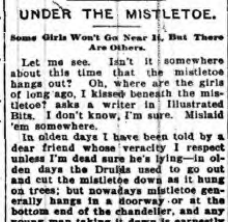
UNDER THE MISTLETOE.

Some Girls Won't Go Near It, But There Are Others.

Let me see. Isn't it somewhere about this time that the mistletoe hangs out? Oh, where are the girls of long ago, I kissed beneath the mistletoe? asks a writer in Illustrated Bits. I don't know, I'm sure. Mislaid 'em somewhere.

In olden days I have been told by a dear friend whose veracity I respect unless I'm dead sure he's lying—in olden days the Druids used to go out and cut the mistletoe down as it hung on trees; but nowadays mistletoe generally hangs in a doorway or at the bottom end of the chandelier, and any young man taking it down is earnestly requested to replace it after he has been round the room and kissed all the pretty girls he wants to. It is not good form at all for one fellow to stick to the only piece of mistletoe in the room all the evening. We've all got to have a chance, you know.

There are some girls who won't go near the mistletoe anyhow. And there are others. The others generally freeze on to a chair or lounge immediately under the biggest piece of mistletoe in the room and hope for good luck. Some of them will hang around a piece of mistletoe for an entire evening on the off chance of a fellow coming in and mistaking them for a pretty girl, and kissing them before he finds out the bitter, relentless truth.



A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

The frost gleams white on the housetops high,
And the clouds—they look like snow;
And the plumber man goes briskly by—
Blow, little tin horns—blow!

And I view my cash with a secret sigh,
And I say to my soul: "Go slow!"
But the children come, and I can't lisp grum—
Blow, little tin horns—blow!

So, I'm quite resigned to the rocket's noise,
And the Roman candle show;
It's hands all around with the girls and boys—
Blow, little tin horns—blow!
—Frank L. Stanton in Atlanta Constitution.

THE CHRISTMAS TABLE.

How to Arrange It in an Artistic and Up-to-Date Fashion.

There are no hard and fast rules for setting the Christmas table—or any other table, for that matter—but custom prescribes certain forms with more or less definiteness.

In many private families, for instance, a cocked-up napkin is placed at the left of each plate, and in the snowy linen jaws is stuffed a dainty roll. In many others this style has been abandoned and the napkin plainly folded, so as to show the monogram it laid on the plate. The latter method is perhaps the most "up-to-date."

So of the glasses. Time was—and, to a certain degree, still is—when a little forest of crystal was ranged at the right of every plate. "A glass for every wine and a wine for every glass." But here again the later day method is toward moderation. Three glasses—champagne, claret and apollinaris—are counted in better form for social gatherings. Indeed, the deep drinkers and large eaters of not so very long ago would shiver with hungry apprehension at the sight of the stylish banquet board of to-day.

Good taste, as we see it now, requires that no eatables whatever, except the merest nibbles—the hors d'oeuvres of the high-toned menus—shall be on the table before the guests are seated.

Daintily heaped on mounds of cracked ice are the olives at one end and the radishes at the other end of the row, flanks right and left by salted almonds and French candy.

How shall we be knived, and wherewithal shall we be spooned and forked in not too sadly new style?

Any hostess may have notions of her own on these matters within rather wide limits, and be in no wise an offender.

But again, the best way is the short one. The oyster fork, a spoon for the soup, and two knives at the right, and two forks—one for fish and at the left, are all that are required at the beginning of the banquet.

A butter chip and individual salts and pepper pots bunched before each plate. But butter plays a subordinate role in the very pretentious dinner casts.

For the centre piece a large piece of holly—a Christmas-like air, and the red and green form a pretty bit of color contrast.

The olives and radishes carry out the same color scheme, and add to the attractiveness of the board.

For a soft, pretty light candleabra with colored paper shades, prettily tinted, are the thing and they are very decorative.

All table decorations and fixtures tend toward simplicity. The high centre pieces of fruits or flowers—once so prevalent—are rarely used now.

When friends or intimates meet around the social board there is no sense in making the conversation of opposites so largely a matter of peek-a-boo.

CHRISTMAS.

(Rhymed Acrostics.)

Christmas, come and bring again
Holly-berries all aglow,
Roving, merry strain,
Ivy-wreath and mistletoe,
Sweet reunions, friendly faces,
Tender thoughts; bring, too, for me
My lady's kiss and fond embraces,
And thy poet I will be.
Singing oft in measures soft of love and thee!

Christmas, monarch of the year,
Haste and spread thy wonted cheer.
Rock the steeples, bid each bell
Iron-tongued thy liege tale tell.
Sorrow strangle, nurse contend,
Tune all hearts to merriment!
Mirth is heir, and care will wait
At the threshold soon or late.
So scare him out with song and shout beyond the gate!

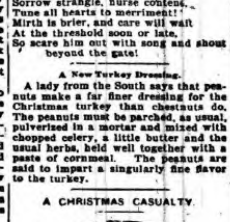
A New Turkey Dressing.

A lady from the South says that peanuts make a far finer dressing for the Christmas turkey than chestnuts do. The peanuts must be parched, as usual, pulverised in a mortar and mixed with chopped celery, a little butter and the usual herbs, and well together with a paste of cornmeal. The peanuts are said to impart a singularly fine flavor to the turkey.

A CHRISTMAS CASUALTY



MRS. SANTA CLAUS—What's the matter with your hand?

SANTA CLAUS—Some fresh little boy put a steel trap in his stocking to see if there really was such a person as me.

THE ANGEL AT THE HELM.

A CHRISTMAS STORY.

I was a wild lad, stranger,
And, seemed to be "hell bent";
But time, the great reformer,
Had taught me to repent.
The money I had taken
I longed, now, to restore;
To tread again the pathway
Before my mother's door.

I longed to ask her pardon,
And see her saintly face—
My brothers and my sisters,
And view the dear, old place.
To turn their grief to gladness
Set mother's heart at rest;
For, I had been her fav'rite—
The son that she loved best.

One scene I saw in fancy,
When I should cross the sea—
The time, it seemed glad Christmas
With its gift-bearing tree,
As "Santa Claus" I'd enter,
Dress't like that carl of old;
And, with a pack of playthings—
Likewise the stolen gold.

I saw the yule log blazing,
The mirth and mistletoe;
The little ones all crowding
Around the tree a-glow.
And, then the cry of rapture—
The quick, responsive start
Oh, mother, as the wanderer
She presses to her heart!

And mem'ries, but haunting vague
Came stealing soft and low;
While far, faint spirit voices
Kept urging me to go,
And, so for home I started
Across the salt sea wave,
To win my mother's pardon,
Or seek a sailor's grave.

* * *

The sea was bright and sparkling
When first we sailed the craft,
Which floated like a feather
While winds were fair abaft.
But, when the land no longer
A single eye could view,
A hurricane descended
That threatened ship and crew.

And fiercely flashed the lightning
Along the flapping sail;
The men grew faint and fearful
Who gazed upon the gale.
I felt myself a craven
With blanched and haggard cheek;
I feared the gold I'd hidden
Had made the good ship leak.

I thought of the dear mother
I had not seen in years,
Whose prayers, like white doves, followed
Her sorrow and her tears.
Of mother, sweet and gentle—
And, of her broken heart,
It now, some guarding spirit
Did not its aid impart.

But, brighter flashed the lightning,
And, higher dashed the waves,
Where many of my messmates
Had found their watry graves.
Then, called I upon heaven,
And prayed with all my soul
The ship might reach its harbor,
The golden shore its goal.

And, as I called in anguish
Across the sea at night,
Methought I saw a spirit,
All clothed in shining white,
And, kneeling down, I worshiped
Though waves sought to o'erwhelm;
For, lo! there stood as pilot
An angel at the helm!

And there he stood in glory
Until the dawn of day,
When ocean's conflict over
We anchored in the bay.
But, oft, again in fancy,
I see that raging tide,
The dark, dismantled vessel,
And bright, celestial guide!

* * *

So, that sweet scene I pictured
I, thus, now spared to see—
Dear mother and the children—
The candle-sparkling tree.
And to return the money,
With one repentant tear;
And cry, hurrah for Christmas,
The Monarch of the Year!

Christmas in the Far North.

When Peary was in the Arctics his party had hurdle races for Christmas games and ice cream made from condensed milk for the dinner dessert. Their menu for that occasion included broiled salmon trout with tomato sauce, potato patties, olives, roast saddle of venison (reindeer) with cranberry sauce, cheese, candy, nuts, raisins, champagne, cigarettes and coffee.

The Old Soldier at Last Forced to Retreat.

Philadelphia's Great Christmas.

American history is replete with Christmas events. Time was Philadelphia's "tea party." On December 26, 1778, the tea ship was intercepted before it reached Philadelphia and sent back to England. This was nearly ten days after the still more famous Boston tea party, but it is a cherished event in Philadelphia's history.

Encouragement.

Jack—I suppose that young Richman who comes to see you so often will give you such an expensive Christmas gift that you won't want the trifling present I can afford to give you.

Marie—No. I think you had better save your money for—er—future contingencies, Jack.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

Where the Glass Decorations Come From.

How many of the hundreds of thousands of children and grown people who have enjoyed the sight of and helped to fasten the fragile ornaments to the Christmas tree know whence these dainty nothings come? At least nine-tenths of the world's supply of these flimsy little knick-knacks come from Thuringen-Wald, the forest of Thuringen, in Central Germany. Nothing could more appropriately be called the storeroom and workshop of Santa Claus than these elevated, as well as isolated, forest-clad mountain regions.

Every cottage among the mountains is a complete little factory, which turns out just as many goods as the numerical strength of the family permits. Everybody works, from the venerable grandparents, if they are alive, to the smallest child able to toddle.

As a rule the older members of the family—the father, mother and grown sons—perform the most difficult and hardest work, that of blowing and shaping the glass ornaments. The blowers generally sit three to five around a table, each making his particular pattern as suits his fancy. The three chief points of the flourishing importance observed are speed, cheapness and quality. The people might be said to be a race of artists in their particular line, as there is little or no room for really designs. The glass used a great deal is known in the trade as flashed glass. The workman has two pots, one with colored and one without any metal. The latter is first blown, and he dips his blowpipe in one or the other, sometimes mixing the two substances.

To produce the film of color he quickly immerses his bulb in the coloring fluid, which gives the object a marvelous lustre. The most delicate shading is obtained by exhausting the color by means of fluoric acid, which is frequently employed, and most beautiful effects are thus produced. No one has seen these elongated Christmas tree decorations but has marveled at the intense brilliancy of their color. These superb effects are produced by the use of metallic oxides, and are generally applied by some of the children of the family.

PUTTING ON THE CAPTURE.

As soon as the object leaves the glass blower's hand it is passed to some other member of the family, whose duty it is to fasten an eye or a hook, as the case may be, to the ornament. If to be dyed it goes to another who stands at the bath and dips every object with lightning rapidity. He or she then hands it to some child who puts it on a long stick for the drying oven. If an oven is not to be had the heat of the room or the sun may be performs this office. Then the silvering, which gives additional lustre to the object is attended to. This is done by dropping some quicksilver solution through a funnel contrived for that for that purpose. The final touches are then given the ornament in the buffing or polishing with soft cotton balls.

In the immediate vicinity of the Louscha in the village of Steinheid, the people have taken up the manufacture of Christmas tree ornaments, made chiefly of the cheapest kind of tin. These ornaments are more durable and almost as cheap as the ones made of glass. The objection to them, however, is that from an artistic point of view they do not compare favorably with the latter. But these are many thousands of dollars worth, and the dealers predict an enormous trade in this line. All sorts of shapes are made—stars, crescents, suns and all sorts of geometrical designs. They are cast so as to have one side deeply indented. On this side the ornamentation is done, which consists in lining the depressions or indentions of the pattern with a wonderfully brilliant substance. By skillfully combining harmonious colors some very beautiful effects are obtained.

THE SONG OF THE FROST KING.

BY W. TYLER OLCOTT.

I'm king of the Alpine heights;
I'm lord of the snow-capped peaks;
For me the avalanches roar,
And the "cold-wrought silence" speaks;
I dwell in a palace of gleaming snow,
Where the cloud-mists dream of the sunset glow.

At my heels the wind-dogs cringe;
At my word they swiftly dash
In mad career, over all the world,
For they fear my stinging lash;
And the dawn-pink lingers alone for me
In the glorious light of the golden sea.

I'm king of the rock-bound crests;
I'm lord of the rugged steeps;
For me the frost-sprite weaves a veil,
And the shyish glacier creeps.
I'm monarch of Earth's vast Solitude,
Where the frost and the cold forever brood.

A CHRISTMAS WOOING

BY E. B. BARTEN.

There has been many a memorable Christmas in my life, seared and scarred as it is by Time's rebuffs, but none is so fixed in my mind as that of 18—, none that comes back to me with so stirring, so boldly—outlined, so sweet a memory.

Perhaps it were well not to dilate on my personality in that year, except to say that I was fresh from college, and full of the energy with which we all begin the real battle of life. Perhaps I was handsome. I thought so, at least, although I was not vain, and I am quite sure that one other certainly agreed with me. I was at—but I must stop descanting on myself, for it cut but a sorry figure in this tale.

Among my circle of acquaintances at college was Eugene Kerr, wealthy beyond the dreams of avarice, keen-souled and bright-eyed, dark-featured and handsome, taller than I by several inches, and with a nature as free and open as his speaking, sparkling eyes. It was to his home that I had been invited to spend the holidays before engaging in the business of which I was destined to become the head in a few years.

At the Kerr home, a delightful country residence near New York, I was but one of a gay young party, for the Kerr family kept open house for a score of friends during the holidays.

As usual at these gatherings, we were thrown together continually, and my whole soul had suddenly gone out to the sister of my friend Eugene. Her head was covered with dark, shining, chestnut hair, luxuriant hair, that looked all the more luxuriant, perhaps, by reason of the careless way in which it was wrapped about her head. The great gray eyes were set deeply under a straight wide brow. A delicate nose that would turn up a little when she lifted her head, and a splendidly-cut, clever, wide mouth, the lips of which parted every now and then with a sweet smile. And there. This was her face, and it was fair enough; but it was her figure, her glorious, graceful, full, yet supple figure that struck me most.

Nor was she averse to my attentions. I noticed from time to time a coldness in the voice and face of Mrs. Kerr, the mother of my young friends. She was a stately matron, and in her drooping black velvet dress and soft-falling delicate white lace, which blended about her head and throat, looked strikingly handsome.

Grace—that was the name of the daughter—seemed at times to be under the spell of the mother's eye. I noticed that the conversation would lag when the elder woman entered the room, and that all the airy gayety and sprightliness of the daughter would disappear under the withering glance of the mother.

There was a secret, a mystery which I had determined to fathom and so proceeded about it in anything but a diplomatic manner, for I was young and thoughtless. My whole soul had become wrapped up in Grace. She was the ideal woman I had pictured in my dreams, and I had determined that she must be mine at any cost.

I took back to those days with wonderment, more perhaps at my own temerity under the circumstances, for I did not even know that I was loved in return.

"Gene," I remarked, one morning, after I had lain awake all night planning and hoping, "I want to talk with you about a matter that concerns me nearly—concerns us both."

He looked at me in some little amazement. Then putting his arm through mine, laughingly pushed me along, saying, "Well I should judge from your long face, it's something serious. Drive it away, old man, don't consort with your cares during the holidays. Never worry in December. January is an awful good month for broken vows, worriments and all that sort o' thing."

"Gene, I'm going to blurt it out and have it over with. I'm head over heels in love with your sister!"

"Walter!"

If I haven't mentioned it before I will say the above is my given name, although it really has nothing to do with the story.

There was that in Eugene's face which I had dared me. He seemed terror-stricken at my abrupt but simple announcement. All the acts of my life passed before me, for I was in vain endeavoring to find a cause for his consternation, and then I poured out my soul.

"Truly, Gene, there can be nothing against me. I have some wealth, excellent prospects, I am not a roue——"

"Hush, my boy," cried Eugene. "It last that why my sister has been engaged for a year, and do you think my mother would ever forego a coronet! It's impossible!"

"Engaged! A coronet! What do you mean," I cried.

"I mean simply this," he replied, putting his hands on my shoulders. "Grace was abroad with mother, a year ago as you know. At that time—but please remember that this is all confidential. It's a family secret—Lord Deerland fell madly in love with Grace and proposed for her hand. Mother accepted the young man with alacrity, and I think Grace likes him. The formal announcement is to be made after the holidays and they are to be married in the spring. That's all there is to the story, my boy, and now don't make a fuss over it, but just accept the inevitable."

I presume I looked crestfallen after this disclosure and for twenty-four hours kept to my room, determined to get over my chagrin and not to spoil the Christmas party by any hasty departure.

On the following day, the day before Christmas, I summoned all my courage and went down stairs, into the midst of the gayety. The expression on Mrs. Kerr's face had undergone a delightful change. She fairly beamed on me, and a lurking suspicion filled my mind. 'Gene had undoubtedly told his mother and sister all, for in no other way could I explain the change in expression on the mother's face, and the sadness that seemed to have come over the younger woman. That of course was simply pity, I argued. She was like all the others, ready to play the coquette though she knew she would break a heart or two.

By a most fortunate chance I received a message late in the morning which summoned me to the city for a few hours on a matter of business. Eugene had arranged a sleighing party for the afternoon, and this I was forced to forego. My train left shortly after noon, and I was waiting at the station scanning a paper, my thoughts on a sweet face in the Kerr home, when I heard my name mentioned by the agent as he directed some one to the house on the hill. It was a telegram announcing the completion of the business and informing me that it would not be necessary for me to leave.

On this trifling incident hung my fate, for when I returned I found that the only one of the party who had not felt equal to the long drive was—Miss Grace.

She saw me coming up the hill, and in her amazement as I afterward ascertained, thought I had purposely deceived her mother and brother.

Oh, but her heart was beating for some one, and when she met me I knew by her sweet eyes that all the happiness of the days before my disclosure had come back to her heart.

I had her all to myself that afternoon, that glorious afternoon, the radiance of which has sent its light along the pathway of my whole life.

I dare not tell you what occurred except to say that when the party came back I had my telegram to explain my sudden return but no word of explanation for the joy in my soul.

And now for the finale. Yet it was only a finale to the old lady's ambition, and but the beginning of my "long sweet story."

The Christmas dinner was on! I could tell you every detail of it. I could tell you where Grace sat, and I remember distinctly every flower in her corsage. I see in my mind's eye every laughing face, every feature of the table and of the room. Aye, I remember even the dainty country maid, with her natty cook's cap, coming into the room with a steaming fowl. You must bear in mind that this was long ago, before the days of the country house luxury which now prevails.

I recall the arrival of the dainty maid, for it was at that moment that Grace, contrary to all banquet formulas, arose, and looked her mother and brother full in the face, her eyes aglow with the spirit within, her face handsomer than ever in its framing of American pluck, and her stately form like that of a queen.

"I want you all," she said, "to listen to an American girl's Christmas determination. Perhaps what I am going to say is not according to rule, but I think it is according to right. I, an American girl, promise to become the wife only of an American citizen. I promise that I will preside over an American home or over none at all."

I cannot picture the consternation of the mother. I am quite sure that it completely spoiled her Christmas dinner. The guests, who knew nothing of the mother's plans, applauded the sentiment to the echo.

As for Eugene! Why, he is a sensible fellow, and he rather prides himself on his brother-in-law even to this day. Mrs. Kerr never fully forgave me, and even to her dying day occasionally referred in the saddest of accents to "that dear broken-hearted Lord Deerland."

And Grace! Why, she's dressing for the Christmas dinner even as I write.

LETTERS TO SANTA CLAUS.

Post-office Authorities Find Them Productive of Many Christmas Tears.

In every well-regulated post-office of large size there is a corps of "guessers" and directory searchers, who are kept busy for the express purpose of finding out where people live, when addresses are carelessly or not fully written out. Last year a letter came to the post-office, New York, with the superscription "To Santa Claus, 263 Goat Street." There is no Goat street in New York, so the letter was stamped "misdirected," as in the reproduction above, and sent to Washington, where, it was supposed, Goat Street might be found. The clerks thought that fuller directions might be discovered inside, so they opened the envelope, and found the following letter:—

Dear Santa,—When I said my prayers last night I told God to tell you to bring me a hobby horse. I don't want a hobby horse, really. A honest-ly lively horse is what I want. Mamma told me not to ask for him, because I probably would make you very mad, so you wouldn't give me anything at all, and if I just him I wouldn't have any place to keep him. A man I know will keep him, he says, if you get him for me. I thought you might like to know. Please don't be mad.—Affectionately, John.

P. S.—A Shetland pony would be enough.

P. S.—I'd rather have a hobby horse than nothing at all.

Another letter, written by a girl of seven, who is sometimes "norty," was sent off some time ago, in order that Santa might have a good opportunity to get the doll's baby carriage and the "squeak cat for the baby."

My Dear Santa Claus,

I hope you are quite well. I have got a great big stocking reddy to hang up at Xmas. There is only one big hole in it at the top for you to put the things in. Please bring me a dolls pram. If it is too big to put in my stocking please tie it outside where I can see it. Dear Santa Claus I do like butter scotch. Please not forget to bring some, also some nuts and oranges. My teacher tells me you will look at my face to see if I have been good. I am norty sometimes but please don't forget me, and bring a horse for my little Tommy and a squeak cat for the baby. I love you very much and hope you will not forget poor little Jimmy who lives at Hope Cottage.

For individuality, and expression of a sweet, womanly nature, the following letter, written by an eleven-year-old girl, could hardly be surpassed:—

My Dear Santa Claus

I have been counting up the weeks to Christmas and am longing for the time to come. You have put something in my stocking lots of times, so please Dear Santa Claus, remember me again. Last year I wanted a dear little baby a real live one you know but I suppose it was too cold, and besides I did not write to you as I am doing now, so it did not come. Please bring me one this year, a little girl if you can. I have saved money enough to buy a corolle, and I can get plenty of flannelette to keep it warm. As babies are so expensive I will not ask for anything else for myself. Please bring a chooky pig for my little Clement. He will be nearly two years old then. Good-bye dear Daddy Christmas, with my best love, hoping you will not forget little Gertie.

P.S.—If you really do manage to bring the baby, please not forget the feeding bottle.

THE DESTROYING ANGEL.

BY CARL SMITH.

Oh, the whuffy-duff was the prettiest bird
That a toy shop ever knew,
With a great, long tail and with goose-quill wings,
And a glass eye good and true:
But his wings are gone and his tail's pulled out,
And the head is twisted awry,
For the goo-goo has torn him limb from limb,
And has swallowed the whuffy-duff's eye.

The oogley-dum had a wobbling head,
And a grin, round, curving horn,
And a tail that would almost wag itself,
And a nose turned up in scorn;
But the oogley-dum isn't scornful now—
He is meek and as sad as can be,
For the goo-goo has torn his short horn
And has broken his tail in three.

The whank-whank-whank used to squeak her joy—
That is, when properly pressed—
With a voice that was hidden away somewhere
In the depths of her hollow breast:
But I wish you could see the hapless corpse
That is lying here on the bed;
Oh, the hank-whank-whank has a ghastly look
Since the goo-goo tore off her head.

And yet, in spite of her deadly work,
The goo-goo is dear to me;
Though she kill and maim I shall love her still,
And her comrade in crime I'll be,
For when I turned and looked just now
Where she lay in her trundle bed,
She reached me the wreck of the oogley-dum,
And "Papa" is what she said.

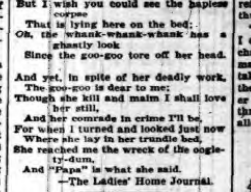
IN POVERTY ROW.



One of Them Had to Surrender.

During the revolution a little American privateer stole up on a British line of battle ship in a fog, mistaking her for an East India merchant, and ordered her to strike. When the seventy-four ran out her guns and threatened to blow her puny assailant out of the water, the Yankee skipper stepped to the quarterway, and, taking off his hat, said politely: "Oh, very well, sir; if you won't surrender, I will."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Appearances Deceptive.

"You haven't changed much since I saw you last."

"You mistake. When you saw me last I was a Populist, and anti-expansionist and a free silverite. I am now a gold standard Republican expansionist."

"It's on me. What'll you drink?"

"I've quit drinking, too."—Chicago Tribune.

They Need Sympathy.

"Yes," said the young man, "literary work is very fatiguing."

"I should imagine so," replied Miss Cayenne. "When I realize that some authors have to keep their names on the stuff they write I feel positively sorry for them."—Washington Star.

SAMMY TO SANTA.

Oh, Santa, dear old Santa,
As this is Christmas eve,
Of you what rosy fancies
Beside the hearth I weave.

Oh, now I know you're skimming
Across the drifts of snow,
The whirlwinds madly kindling
Your nose into a glow.

But when beside the gateway
You tell the deer to stop,
And swiftly down the chimney
Into my room you drop,

I wish you'd stack my playthings
Upon the table near,
With all the shining candy,
To me so very dear.

Not in this swinging stocking
Are pretty playthings put—
'Tis mother's and a "biker,"
That hasn't got a foot.

PRISONER'S PRESENT.

The Sheriff's Kindness Was Not the Sort They Wished For.

"Boys," began the Sheriff as he went among his prisoners in the county jail on Christmas eve, and sat down with them in a friendly way—"boys, I reckon ye aware that to-morrer's Crismas, hain't ye?"

"Yaas," drawled a couple of them, and all looking at the officer indifferently.

"Wall, I've bin a-thinkin'," he went on, "that I orter do sumthin' fur ye to-morrer, boys. I'm shore ye's aggreshuate it if I die?"

"Ye bet we would!" was the hearty reply as they began to pay some attention to his remarks now.

"Wall, I believe ye would, boys. It's a blamed shame to keep ye penned up yere on Crismas, an' I'm goin' to let ye all out fur the day. How does it strike ye?"

"Fust class—fust class!" they exclaimed, crowding around him and shaking his hand with great vigor.

"I'm mighty glad it pleases ye, boys," continued the Sheriff, seeming as happy over the matter as they were. "A man in my position, ye know, has gotter be kind-hearted an' strict, but I'm durned if I'd keep even a dawg shet up on Crismas."

"About what time will you let us out, Tom?" asked one of the delighted prisoners, while the others danced around excitedly.

"I 6 o'clock in the mornin', I reckon. Yaas, I'll hev the saws an' axes all ready by that time an' "——

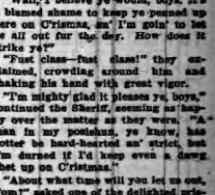
"Saws an' axes!" he was interrupted with. "Saws an' axes?"

"Yaas, saws and axes. I'm a-goin' to let ye fellers come up to my house on Crismas an' cut about six cords of wood for me. It'll be a big chance for ye all to git out o' yere an' smell the fresh air again, but ye kin repay me fur my kindness by workin' fast an' "—

But he was interrupted again by every man trying to tell him at once that they'd be hanged if they wanted to go out for that purpose, and when the Sheriff realized that his offer had been refused he got up with a red face and thundered, as he turned to go:

"Wall, of all the durned idjots! Yere I come down an' offer to git ye a change jest to make it merry Crismas for ye, an' ye don't know 'nuff to take me up! Wall, just go to blazes, the hull pack o' ye, an' the fust prisoner I h'ar grumblin' to-morrer will git throwed out o' this jail an' never be allowed to come back again!"

Why Tommy Is Doing Penance.



Grandma—Are you looking forward to your Christmas dinner, Thomas?

Tommy—Yep, grandma, but not as much as Johnny Green, what lives up the street.

Grandma—Why so, Thomas?

Tommy—His grandma died last week and he'll get all her Crismus turkey.

Thomas is still standing on the cowcatch.

His Method.

"I never make Christmas presents," announced Cawker, solemnly, when the subject of holiday gift-giving was under discussion.

"You don't you?" replied four or five hearers in unison.

"No, I never make Christmas presents. I buy them."

Wilted Sapolehrea.

"Bobble," said genial Mr. Thistlium, "don't you want one of my golf stockings to hang up?"

"Naw, I don't! Then golf stockings are bluffs! All wool, but not an inch wide inside."

A Good Lesson.

Downtrod—I always take my wife to church on Christmas day.

Quizzer—Any special reason?

"Yes. The sermon's about 'peace on earth, good will to men.'"

The Curfew Again.

Down in Vineland there is a lively time between those who want to see the curfew bell made part of the municipal government and those who do not. The situation in that South Jersey town obtains contemporary interest in Plainfield, because we are confronted with the probability of a similar idea cropping out in the Common Council. As might naturally be conjectured, the curfew idea is being pushed by the women. A committee from the W. C. T. U. appeared before the Mayor and the Council and earnestly petitioned the enactment of an ordinance that would bring back to these modern days the ringing of curfew to warn the youth to hie themselves away to their respective home at seasonable hours of the evening. Subsequent happenings in the Council are best told in the words of a newspaper correspondent, as follows:

After the proposed ordinance had passed its second reading and the ladies had congratulated themselves upon its apparently clear sailing, Rev. Eli Gifford created a sensation by taking the floor and vigorously denouncing curfew ordinances as severe, un-American and unjust. "I have a young son," said Mr. Gifford, "and I would not want to be humiliated by his arrest and temporary imprisonment because he happened to be out at night after 9 o'clock. You boast of America being a land of liberty. Do you call the curfew freedom? I believe it is unconstitutional, anyway!"

Inasmuch as the reverend gentlemen who delivered himself of these emphatic remarks is the pastor of the very church of which some of the most pronounced advocates of the curfew bell are members of, one can imagine in a small degree the flutter that was caused among the fair sex who had believed the sailing clear and unobstructed for the resuscitation of the puritanical notion To use the words of the correspondent again: "Many uncomplimentary remarks concerning the pastor were made, but he kept gamely on and belabored the ordinance until it seemed to fall to to pieces. The Council sought safety from the gathering cycle by postponing action until the next morning."

Vineland's grappling with the curfew idea will be watched with interest by Plainfield, and perhaps in the end we may gather some profitable facts from the rumpus that has been stirred up down there between the women on one side and the outspoken minister on the other.

Advantages of One City.

In discussing the project of a Greater Newark, to be formed from the Jersey metropolis and a number of smaller cities and towns in that vicinity, the Newark Sunday Call advances several reasons favoring the consummation of the movement. In a general way the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield would bear the same relative importance and effect to this community that the Greater Newark idea does to that section, and so The Call's observations may as well apply to Plainfield as to Newark. In substance they are as follows:

A large city has greater reputation and better standing than a small city or town.

The cost of administering government would be cheaper, and taxes would be lower.

Suitable and creditable public buildings could be provided.

Central administration of justice would be convenient and save expense.

Business could be more easily transacted, and at a cheaper rate.

The beneficial influences of a great community, in State and National affairs, would be felt by all parts of the aggregation.

The consolidation would be in accordance with modern progress.

Many important public works could be prosecuted, without undue burdens.

The influence of the different communities would work for the common good. There are good features of each existing government which could be applied for the benefit of all.

There is a public sentiment in this direction. There is no partisan or political scheme involved.

Several papers are agitating the subject of having all tax assessments published annually in the newspapers of the various localities where they prevail. Such a plan would be a severe blow to the habitual tax dodger who hates to have his faults shown up as badly as he dislikes to bear his proportionate share of the public expenses. The annual publication of the assessments in the newspapers would undoubtedly accomplish wonders in reforming the inequalities of making values for purposes of levying taxes. Such a process, too, would be unusually severe for the real estate speculators who hold properties at a price several times greater than the tax books show.

Many farmers in South Jersey, now in the midst of hog killings, have departed from the usual custom of inviting several neighbors, who come merely for the purpose of getting a good dinner and do as little work as possible. This season help is hired and the work is accomplished in half the usual time.—Current News Item.

Yes, indeed, all signs in Jersey indicate that the millenium is not far off.

Fooling the Public.

Those who favor the demands of the Plainfield Street Railway Company in their application for trolley extensions say that it will be impossible for the company to sell their bonds on the money market unless secured by a fifty year franchise. Admitting for the sake of argument that that is true, then what is the use of the Common Council making them a present of forty-nine years' use of the streets after that? Why not stop at fifty years?

While on this question of bond selling business we would like to ask some of these eminent financiers if the stockholders of the Plainfield Street Railway Company—the Nevins', the Rikers and the Sorrells, etc.—are so poor in pocket that if they have to go down in Wall street to raise the small sum of money that will be required to construct this extension of a little over a mile in the eastern section of the city.

As a matter of fact, the plea for a long term franchise on the ground that it is necessary in order to ensure the sale of the bonds to raise money to build the extension is a mere subterfuge for gaining extraordinary concessions from the people.

Thomas Nevins, of Orange, the real owner of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, is several times a millionaire and there is not the slightest doubt but that if he cared to—and he wouldn't hesitate probably if it was not that such action would be the entering wedge that would effectually show up the system of financiering in which the people are the too willing tools—to advance the money to build this extension in the same manner as he would in any other enterprise that did not first require the consent of the people to undertake.

The idea of granting a franchise for a long term of years to millionaires on the plea that the rights thus granted must exist for extended periods of time in order to secure the bondholders is a trick of financiering aimed to fool the public.

We presume that the eminent financiers will regard such talk as the wildest sort of socialistic rantings, but it is plain facts and nothing more.

The average Plainfield woman, and man, too, who goes to New York to do their shopping excuse their failure to help their home town by trading with local merchants on the plea of not saving so much money in their purchases as in enjoying the pleasures of the spectacular effects of the metropolitan stores. Perhaps shooting off a few pieces of fireworks, or maybe a punch and judy show, with a peroxide soubrette and a Dutch comedian thrown in, might help things for the local shop keepers. We respectfully submit this suggestion to the consideration of our always enterprising merchants.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, believes that there are no more worthy set of servants of that municipality than the firemen. The job of a volunteer fireman comes under the category of "all honor and no pay," but the Mayor changed the rule somewhat this morning by presenting a check of $50 to the Firemen's Uniform Fund, which will be a material aid to Warren Engine Company No. 1, in securing the uniformal for the purchase of new uniforms. In the letter enclosing the check His Honor indulges in a few words of well-deserved eulogy for the firemen.

The choler of the rival gas companies in Trenton having cooled off, the price of the commodity they deal in takes a big jump. Twenty-five cent gas was really too good to think of enjoying a great length of time. The rates for gas in Plainfield, however, could be dropped several points and then be high in comparison with some other towns.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler expresses himself in favor of an extra session of the fifty-sixth Congress. He thinks that the subject of the currency demands the calling of an extra session, and believes that one will have to be held. Fowler, if nothing else, is willing to earn his money as Congressman.

When Passaic Valley editors become so plutocratic that horse thieves find their barns veritable Klondikes and reporters on the News begin to buy the stock of projected silk mill enterprises in large-sized blocks we are impelled to the thought that the millenium can not be far distant.

Representative Howell has recommended Benjamin B. Ogden, a lawyer and an active Republican of Keyport, to Postmaster at that place. The office is in the Presidential class, and Senator Sewell indorses the recommendation. Another applicant for the place was James H. Magee.

Every newspaper that has commented on the proposed terms for trolley extensions in this city has said or inferred that they were all right with the exception of the length of time that the franchise is to run. All agree that ninety-nine years is too long a period to grant such estimable rights to a corporation.

A Thirty-third Degree Poet.

Our own Bayonne from bay to bay
Doth spread her winsome wings.
And fragrance permeates the air
When spring the flowers brings;
Here lawns and gardens bloom with joy
All through the summer's reign.
And pleasures true, without alloy,
Claim this wide domain.

In order to avoid misapprehension and to ensure identification, permit us to credit the above poetic flow to our esteemed friend, Col. Page, of the Bayonne Herald. This sonnet to Bayonne's beauties is printed on a green hued cover of our contemporary, but that does not necessarily infer that Col. Page is but a budding genius with rhymes. As a matter of fact, considering the vision of nanny goats browsing gently on tin cans scattered promiscuously about, the sombre-hued view of oil tanks and the sight of every street corner quartering a saloon, the panorama that Bayonne presents, anyone who is capable of penning such felicitous sentiments as quoted above must be a thirty-third degree poet. We congratulate Col. Page on his attainments.

Pay For Peace Commissioners.

Twenty million dollars for a balm to Spain in the loss of the Phillipines is not the only big expenditure of Uncle Sam in connection with the negotiation of the peace treaty. It is reported that William B. Day and Whitelaw Reid will each receive $100,000 for acting as Peace Commissioners at Paris, and James B. Moore $20,000 as secretary. Senators Davis, Frye and Gray, however, will have to be satisfied with what glory they can get out of being members of the Peace Commission, as they are already salaried officers of the government and are barred from receiving compensation for their services. And Admiral Dewey, the greatest of them all, whose work thrilled the nation and gave the Peace Commissioners the opportunity of the gathering in the Phillipines, rests content with a salary of a few thousand a year. But he is first in the hearts of his countrymen.

Elizabeth's district court is regarded as a high-priced ornament by some people, inasmuch as it costs $4,000 a year to operate it. The New York Press has this to say of it:

Elizabeth has discovered this fact and now wants the Legislature to force the county of Union to pay a part of the court's expenses, which aggregate $4,000 a year. It is said that the court can be moved about, like a show on wheels, meeting out justice in Plainfield and Rahway, as well as in Elizabeth, thus absorbing somuch the business that often clogs the machinery of justice in the county seat. Elizabeth. How the farmers will take to this idea will be learned by the hours until the bill with this object in view is placed before the Legislature. Of one thing there is a certainty—the justices of the peace in Union will do their best to kill the bill.

The definition of "mustered out soon," as applied to the various volunteer regiments who are anxious to see home-life again, the Third New Jersey among them, is rather an aggravating one for the soldiers. When Attorney-General Griggs was asked how quick "mustered out soon" meant, Mr. Griggs replied that "after the army reorganization bill was passed." When the soldiers have to take their chances with Congress, which is always bent on doing more talking than anything else, it's pretty tough luck.

The New York city health authorities have come to a decision that concerns a great many people, though it has taken a whole decade to arrive at it. It is none other than that the grippe is a contagious and infectious disease. Such a decision would ordinarily strike terror to the hearts of people who regard their health with great care, but inasmuch as ten years of existence of the malady has not caused widespread mortuary losses there is no reason to get excited over the situation.

The war has turned things upside-down in more ways than one. Think of the New York Evening Post actually admitting that Col. Bryan has voiced a sentiment that wasn't demagogic, but that is what Editor Godkin has cheerfully emblazoned in cold type on the editorial page of his ultra-conservative paper. Lazzy and Billy are bedfellows when it comes to considering colonial expansion.

The New Jersey editor of the New York Press seems to be laboring under the impression that Chancery Clerk Thompson carries Somerset county Republicans around in his vest pocket. Well, if that's so, Senator Reed must have had a hand in that pocket.

After lecturing in Chicago the other evening Lieut. Hobson obligingly kissed 165 silly girls, who stood in a row to go through the osculation process. We suppose that the fad in Chicago society now will be to kiss the girl that kissed Hobson.

CHRISTMAS BOX FOR OUR SOLDIER BOYS.

Two Large Ones Sent to Boys in Third Regiment.

ARE NOW AT ATHENS, GA.

FAMILIES AND FRIENDS HAD MUCH TO SEND TO THEM.

Movement Started by J. J. Kenney and Henry Haurand—Lengthy List of Private Contributors—Nearly a Thousand Cigars Also Given—Boxes Sent Tuesday—A List of Those Who Donated.

There will be nearly a score of Plainfield's sons who will spend their Christmas in the city of tents near Athens, Ga. While Uncle Sam is in the habit of taking pretty good care of his boys that don the army-blue, it hasn't been his custom to provide Christmas delicacies for them. That is left to their friends at home. Tuesday two large wooden boxes, filled to the last available inch with good things, started on their way to the camp of the Third New Jersey Volunteers near Athens.

There were eighteen Plainfield young men enrolled in the Third Regiment, principally in Company H, which hails from Somerville. Two weeks ago, John J. Kenney and Henry Haurand started a movement toward a Christmas box for the boys in the Third. Their appeal to the friends of the soldiers met with generous response, and there will be a glad time when the result of it all arrives.

The contributions came in so fast that one box wouldn't hold them all and two had to be secured. The private contributions included the following: A box to Lieut. Irving from Ed. Weaver; box to I. V. VanArsdale from a friend; box to Charles A. Flynn from John Flynn, Sr.; box to Emmett Wortman and Crook V. Wortman from a friend; package to Charles Sprigg from a friend; package to Benj. F. Scribner from his mother; two package to John Lemair from friends; package to I. L. Giles from a friend; box to H. and J. McCormack from Mr and Mrs. John Adelmann; two boxes to same from friends; box to same from Michael Nevins; package to Robert Simmons from a friend; two packages to Mark Dowd from mother and sister; plum pudding to H. L. Overbaugh; package to F. C. Carver from mother; package to Edward Peaslee from mother; package to Frank Haurand from brother; box to Richard Hoffman from relatives; box to F. J. McCarthy from sister; box to Fred Frey from Charles Frey; box to same from mother and brother; H. and J. McCormack from Fred Eckerss; box to Charles Sprigg from a friend; box to John Sullivan from William Sullivan; box to Frank Haurand from H. Haurand; box to Frank Carver from a friend; box to Calvin J. Neuman from a friend; box to William Kennedy from a friend, box to same from sister; box to George Bolsterli from mother; box to Robert Fleming from Mrs. John Hunt, of Dunellen; box to same from Miss Margaret J. Logan, of Dunellen; box to Charles Spring from mother; box to Frank Haurand from a friend; a box of cigars each from Sheriff Kirk and Elston M. French.

The general contributions included 200 cigars from Mayor Charles J. Fisk; 100 cigars from Assemblyman Roger F. Murray; 100 cigars from City Treasurer W. F. Arnold; 100 cigars from C. H. Rugg; 50 cigars from Postmaster E. H. Bird; 50 cigars from M. C. Dobbins; 50 cigars from Henry Haurand; 50 cigars from D. J. Kenney; cigars from Mayor John F. Wilson, City Collector James A. Martin and Councilman E. T. Barrows; four boxes of hominy from W. A. Westphal; light wines from A. D. Findlay; light wines from H. Haurand; clothes brushes from Scowed Brothers; and copies of the Christmas editions of The Daily Press and The News.

The boxes were sent by the United States Express Company. President Platt furnishing free transportation for them. The Southern Express Company will handle the boxes from Washington south. The boxes were addressed to Henry McCormack, F. J. McCarthy and Chas. A. Flynn.

HUSBAND AND WIFE ARRESTED FOR BEING DISORDERLY.

Both Pleaded Guilty in the Borough Court and Were Fined by Recorder Long—Chatham Street Residents Complained.

A pathetic scene was witnessed in the borough court Tuesday a. m. when Robert Hart and his wife, Elizabeth, of Chatham street, were arraigned on a charge of being drunk and disorderly and disturbing the neighborhood in which they live. The complaint was made by Marshal Wise at the instigation of the neighbors and Recorder Long issued the warrant.

The act which caused the arrest occurred last Saturday evening. Last Monday Hart was arrested, and his wife was arraigned Monday a. m. The reason of delay in arresting the wife was on account of Mrs. Hart's two children who could scarcely get along without their mother. The arrest was made by Marshal Schenck, and when the husband and wife were arraigned last Monday they pleaded guilty to the charge.

Recorder Long examined them so as to learn the extent of their disorderly conduct and then decided to fine the husband $10 and the wife $5.

Later in the morning the fines were paid and the prisoners were discharged. Hart is employed as a moulder at The Pond Tool and Machine Works, and after his release he returned to his work.

BOILER ROOM FLOODED.

A Small-sized Inundation Invaded the Daily Press Office.

The boiler room of The Daily Press office, which is located directly under the sidewalk on North avenue, was subjected to a sudden and unexpected inundation Monday as the result of the severe storm that prevailed. The sudden rush of water was caused by the settling of the earth used to fill in the trench in which the electric wire conduits were laid. A small-sized water-shed was formed in the gutter in front of the office, which allowed the water to gather in pools along the curbing and gradually work its way through the side walls of the boiler room. The result was that several feet of water gathered around the boiler and finally put out the fire.

By dint of hard and steady work a good portion of the night, Thomas Lynch, the engineer, with the aid of another workman, prevented the water entering the press room and doing further damage.

As soon as he learned of the accident, Patsy Christmas, the contractor, who laid the wire conduits, was on hand with a force of men leveling off the sunken ground and taking preventive measures against a repetition of the flood.

—Friday of this week the borough school will close for the holiday season, School will be resumed early in January.

PORTO RICANS AND SELF-GOVERNMENT

Dr. Carroll Believes They Will Eventually Be Qualified for it.

PRESUMTIOUS INFERENCE.

HAWAIIAN COMMISSION'S REPORT IS CRITICISED.

Dr. Carroll Says That Their Inference, Conveyed by Comparison of the Hawaiians and Porto Ricans, is Highly Incorrect—Porto Ricans, He Says, Show Plenty of Evidence for Self-Government.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, President McKinley's commissioner to Porto Rico to ascertain the actual condition of internal affairs on that island, spoke to a large audience in the First M. E church Sunday on his observations in that country. The most important part of his address was his references to the ability of the Porto Ricans to govern themselves.

In discussing the question he referred to the report of the Hawaiian commission in which they advocated a territorial form of government for the people of that island, and by comparison inferred that the Hawaiians were much more capable of self-government than the Porto Ricans or Filipinos. Dr. Carroll said he had no personal knowledge of the condition of the Filipinos, but that the inference that the Porto Ricans were incapable of self-government after the United States had effected a suitable administration of the affairs of the islands was a highly incorrect and, he considered, presumptious view for the Hawaiian commission to make, especially in view of the fact that the commission had no knowledge of the condition of the Porto Ricans.

Dr. Carroll said that he considered the Porto Ricans quite as capable in every respect to govern themselves as the inhabitants of Hawaii are. He said that the Porto Ricans are not the barbarians and savages some people regard them as. While confessedly there is much illiteracy in the island Dr. Carroll believes that by the adoption of the customs and institutions of the United States on the island would gradually do away with that condition, and that eventually the Porto Ricans would evidence plenty of capacity to govern themselves with equal prospect of success as either the Cubans or the Hawaiians.

Their aspirations, said Dr. Carroll, are indicative of their reaching a useful and creditable state of citizenship. They are anxious for the introduction of American and institutions as fast as possible, as well as the adoption of the English language in place of Spanish as the native tongue. They are considerably different from the Cubans in that they are a peace-loving people. The fact that there is practically no system of registry in the island, but that estates and properties are handed down by common consent from generation to generation without litigation is an evidence of their peaceable characters and their recognition of right over wrong without the fear of legal punishment.

Monday Dr Carroll finished an important report on the rates of tariff desirable for Porto Rican ports and forwarded it to the President at Washington. He declined to make public the contents of the report.

Dr. Carroll stated to a reporter Monday that he expected to sail for Ponce to resume his investigations either December 30th or 31st. If there is a proper transport ready to sail on the former date he will take passage on that, but otherwise he will sail on the Red D Line steamer Philadelphia the 31st.

Honorably Discharged.

The case of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals against Fred W. Bowden, of this city, came up for trial before Justice Storms, of New Market, at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Wm. Newcorn, counsel for the defendant, moved for an honorable discharge of the prisoner, which was granted by the Court.

Handsome Stars and Stripes.

Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, has just made a handsome American flag, 6x10, for the Commission to Porto Rico. He has presented it to Dr. H. K. Carroll, the head of the Commission, and it will be taken to Porto Rico and brought back on the return trip.

Pleasantly Surprised.

Willard B. Rose, of Codington avenue, was given a surprise party last Monday by a number of his friends in honor of his birthday. Games were the feature of the evening.

TAKEN FOR RUNAWAYS.

RAN SHORT OF FUNDS AND STOLE A RIDE.

Boys Were Arrested and Locked Up—Proved to Be On Their Christmas Vacation—From Sacred Heart Acad my.

Matthew Walsh and Harry Dalton left the Academy of the Sacred Heart in New York to spend the Christmas holidays in Plainfield, before they arrived at their destination they went through all the excitement of a stolen ride on the rear platform of a mid-night train, arrest and consequent imprisonment. Monday afternoon they finally reached the home of Mrs. Mary Buckley, of Cottage place, to spend the vacation

Walsh is from Lakewood and Dalton from 747 Amsterdam avenue, New York. They are small lads of about twelve years of age. They attend the Academy of the Sacred Heart, a Catholic military school. Yesterday morning they received permission to depart for the home of Walsh's aunt in Plainfield to spend the holidays.

The attractions dear to the boys' hearts had tempted the greater part of their spending money away and they discovered that there was not enough to take them to Plainfield by rail. With confidence in their ability to get along somehow, they started out and finally reached Roselle. There they waited until late at night. A seedy-made aquaintance among the railroad men told them that they could steal a ride on a night train.

They waited until the "owl" train, due in Plainfield at 1:17 o'clock, came along and jumped on the rear platform. The excitement of the ride kept them warm. When they reached Plainfield the brakeman saw them and reported the fact to Sergeant Kiely and Patrolman Vanderweg. They found the boys at Fourth street and Watchung avenue and placed them under arrest. It was immediately supposed that the boys had run away despite their protestations that they were going to visit in town.

Monday a. m. they were brought before City Judge Stillman. He instructed the police to find Mrs. Buckley and see if their tale was true. The police did so and found that the boys were expected there for over Christmas. Then Mrs. Buckley went over to see the lads and took them home with her.

LETTERS FROM FOREIGN CLIMES.

Novelty and Instruction in a Missionary Service Sunday Night.

A novel and interesting missionary meeting was held Sunday night by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church. Two of the members had been directed to visit foreign countries and write home their experiences. Miss M. G. Morse went to Mexico, by the book route, and sent home to the chairman of the missionary committee a letter describing the people, the country, and the state of mission work there. This letter was read by Miss J. Louise Jenkins. Miss E. E Chase visited the Pacific islands in the same manner, and another letter, telling of manners and customs, missionaries and mission work in those far-off bits of land, was the result. This letter was read by Miss Nellie Winckler. A real letter, written from China by a young woman visiting there, was read by Clarence G. Wilson. A let er from a missionary among the Zulus, read by Miss Julia M. Belknap, concluded this "foreign letter evening."

WENT TO STONY HILL.

The Return was so Hilarious That the Police Interfered.

Theodore Trundall went to Stony Hill soberly and in his right mind Sunday. Theodore Trundall came home from Stony Hill happily and hilariously drunk Sunday evening. At Stony Hill he went to see Carl Peter Rubenstein. Some say that there was hard cider at Stony Hill Sunday.

At any rate Trundall had too much of something and so Rubenstein decided to bring him home. Rubenstein says that he, Rubenstein, was not drunk, hadn't touched a drop all day, and that his young companion made all the noise.

Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Saffron heard the shouting and saw a horse driven recklessly about the city streets. They arrested Rubenstein and his companion. This morning they were arraigned before City Judge Stillman and fined $5 each.

A Trivial Affair.

The troubles of Mrs. Julia Serracker, of 532 West Fifth street, were heard by City Judge Stillman Monday. Mrs. Anna Doyle accused her of quarrelling and being generally disorderly. The Judge dismissed the complaint for lack of evidence.

HIS DAYS SPENT HERE TO THE VERY END

Death of a Life-long Resident of City and Borough.

JACOB JENNINGS NO MORE.

BORN SEVENTY YEARS AGO IN A HOUSE STANDING IN THE BOROUGH.

He Had Been in Feeble Health for Several Years, But Only Seriously Sick for a Short Time—a Veteran of the Civil War—Faithful Attendant at Seventh-day Baptist Church — Funeral Was Held Tuesday.

Another one of Plainfield's oldest citizens passed away Sunday morning in the person of Jacob M. Jennings, who was familiarly known as "Uncle Jacob." He was taken ill two weeks ago Sunday with pneumonia and began at once to fail rapidly, owing to his advanced age and the weakened condition of his heart. From 5 o'clock Saturday evening until 6:30 o'clock Sunday, the time he died, he was in an unconscious state and did not recognize anyone. Death came peacefully and without a struggle. Dr. Tomlinson was the attending physician, and he did everything possible for the alleviation of suffering.

Mr. Jennings was born seventy years ago in the borough in the house that still stands in Hudson's lane. It was at that time known as Jenning's lane. He was the son of Benjamin Jennings, who was a familiar figure throughout Somerset county, and who was somewhat of a politician. Mr. Jennings lived in the borough about twenty-one years, and then moved to this city. In early life he learned the shoemaker's trade and followed it steadily until about twenty years ago. He then gave up his trade on account of his health.

When Mr. Jennings gave up his trade he entered the newspaper business and up to the time of his death he was one of the best known paper dealers in this vicinity. He at first began to sell Sunday newspapers, and he lived to see the business grow to large proportions. Later he began to sell the New York morning papers and had a stand in the men's waiting room at the North Avenue station.

When the Civil War broke out Mr. Jennings enlisted for nine months as a private, and while in the army he contracted a disease that materially weakened him for life. He served in Captain Hubbard's company, which was the Thirtieth, N. J. Volunteers. He was a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and until recently always took a lively interest in its affairs.

Mr. Jennings was a faithful attendant at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, where he was a member. He was a Christian of sterling qualities and respected by all who knew him. Among those who he leaves are two brothers, Augustus Jennings, of Rahway; Isaac Jennings, and a sister in Decatur, Illinois; also a half-brother, Benjamin Jennings. The address of the latter is not known. He also leaves a wife, a daughter, Mrs. M. L. Haven, of Washington, D. C., and a son, Andrew Jennings, first assistant chief of the fire department. The daughter, Mrs. Haven, is seriously ill at her home and will not probably be able to come to Plainfield to attend the funeral, which was held last Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home on West Second street.

—The loss on the Somerset Hotel last week by fire was $1/0. Elston M. French & Co. held the insurance.

DEATH OF MRS. HARRY ROBERTS.

After Two Years of Suffering With Consumption She Died Tuesday.

Hurriedly summoned to Plainfield, Harry Roberts, son of Former Councilman Dan Roberts, arrived at the bedside of his wife just in time to bid her a last farewell. Tuesday, at 12:30 o'clock, she quietly passed away. He reached the city barely a day before she died.

Mr. Roberts and his wife occupied apartments in the Roberts building on North avenue, close by those of his father's. Mrs. Roberts, who was but twenty-three years old, has been ill for nearly two years. She fell a victim of to consumption and quietly faded away despited the best of medical attendance. They had a little daughter, Helen.

For the past three months she was unable to leave the house and was failing fast. A week ago her condition became critical.

Mrs. Roberts was well-known in the city, and had a host of friends who will sincerely mourn her loss.

Death of John E. Moore.

John E. Moore, formerly of East Sixth street, died at Long Lake, Adirondacks, New York, Saturday, from consumption. He resided in this city for several years, having moved from Belfast, Ireland, some time before. He was a man of quiet, retiring nature, but greatly liked among his circle of friends. He was not in good health when he came here and his trouble necessitated his removal to the Adirondacks, where he died. He leaves a wife and several small children. His funeral was from the home of R. T. Fawcett, 143 Grove St., Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Entertained at Euchre.

The Watchung Avenue Euchre Club was pleasantly entertained Saturday evening by Mrs. Kampman, of 45 Sandford avenue. The usual club membership was present, and the play resulted in Miss Marie Kampman and Miss Lillian A. Force winning first and second prizes. Seymour G. Smith and Harry Saltzeld were the winners of the first and second prizes for the men. After this play refreshments were served to the guests. Mrs. Slocum, of Sandford avenue, will entertain the club at its next meeting.

Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is received through the nostrils, cleanses and heals the whole surface over which it diffuses itself. To test it, a trial size for 10 cents or the large, for 50 cents, is mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York. Druggists keep it. A remedy for Nasal Catarrh which is drying or exciting to the diseased membrane should not be used. Cream Balm is recognized as a specific.

Speer's wines are unexcelled by any in the world, Especially for Delicate Ladies and the Aged For medical use, physicians say Speer's Port Wine surpasses the imported. Delicate ladies and aged people find it the best wine to be procured.

Trial A Journey for a Week.

John Lines appeared before City Judge Stillman for trial Monday. He was represented by Councilman W. L. Redfield. The complainant, Isaac Shrager, was represented by William Newcorn. At the request of the latter, the trial was adjourned for a week.

Frank Vosseller on Another Furlough.

Frank Vosseller, of the 12th New York Volunteers, encamped at Lexington, Ky., is home on a thirty day furlough. He is spending the time at his home on East Sixth street.

GIBSON GIRLS AT CASINO

The first of a series entitled "A New York Day" was "Morning," given by Miss Katherine Reinhart. One of the best groups was "Their Presence of Mind. They had been in their room but a moment when they were startled by a knock." Miss Helen Bushnell and Reeve Stockton were evidently the young married couple so disturbed. Both sat up very straight while he tried to read a newspaper upside down. The disturbing element was Will Runyon who wrestled bravely with a bag of trunk.

Miss May Evans appeared as "Noon" in the series. Then came "What Delicious Moment, When you find that you are to take in to dinner the girl who yesterday refused you." Mr. Doubleday was the fated man and Miss Wickersham his partner for dinner. The picture also included Mrs. J. Parker Mason, Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Tom VanBoskerck and Harry Patton. Miss Wickersham was "Evening" in the next. The audience was presented with a "Paris Find the girl who has been kissed within ten minutes." The characters in it were Miss Emma Butler, Miss Gertrude Andrews, Mrs. F. M. VanBuren, C. F. Abbott and Harry Patton. The "New York Day" series was completed with "Night." Miss May Waring.

"All's Well That Ends Well, It's a love song, and sang with deep feeling, as her thoughts are with Tom in a far away land." Miss Meredith sang it in the frame, accompanied by Mrs. W. L. Saunders, while "Tom," O. G. Waring, seemed to be enjoying himself surrounded by a bevy of Japanese maidens, the Misses Margaret Tracy, Marjorie Coe, Charlotte Lowe, Elsie VanZandt and Elsie Brokaw.

The entertainment closed with a worthy finale in which Miss Florence Waring was shown in the embrace of her brother, Lewis Waring. "A Farewell" it seemed.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP.

Inspiring Service Held in Trinity Reformed Church Monday Night.

Last Monday at Trinity Reformed church an excellent and profitable temperance and good citizenship meeting was held under the auspices of the young men from the Christian Endeavor Society that has the work in charge. The meeting was conducted by J. Q. Miles. After the devotional exercises B. W. Hand made an address on the necessity of individual effort along the line of temperance and good citizenship.

Following Mrs. J. H. Manley sang an appropriate solo, entitled "Where Is Our Boy Tonight." This was followed with a recitation by Miss Bertha Clum. "The Volunteer Organist," was rendered in a realistic manner by W. B Mattox.

In conclusion, excellent remarks were made by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A. B. Meredith and W. A. Townsend Carried Off Honors.

TWO EVENTS CONTESTED.

EIGHT COMPETITORS WERE IN LINE SATURDAY EVENING.

Three Standing Broad Jumps and the Running High Kick Were Contested —Other Competitors Will Make up Events Later—New Records Broken— The Contestants and the Winners.

The athletes of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. contested two more events in the race for local indoor championship honor in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday evening. Eight contestants were present, two of which were new. The remaing five in the competition will have to make up the two events of Saturday evening at some future time.

At the start, Raymond Carroll and Berry Egan carried off the honors of the first night. Saturday night they did not appear and A. B. Meredith and William A. Townsend did the best work among the candidates.

The contestants in the events Saturday night were William Morgan, J. H. Green, Jr., Hervey Doane, William Brokaw, A. B. Meredith, Walter Drier, Henry A. Pierce and William A. Townsend.

The events contested were the three standing broad jumps and the running high kick. In the first the contestants were allowed three trials each. Albert B. Meredith was first with a distance of 25 feet, 9 inches, W. A. Townsend was second, 25 feet, 1 inch, and William Morgan third, 23 feet, 7 inches. Hervey Doane, third, 7 feet, 2 inches. The record, held by F. O. Bristol, was not equalled.

PROTEST AGAINST MORMONISM.

Dr. Lewis Visited Washington and Urged Unseating of Congressman Roberts.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis has returned from Washington, where he went last week commissioned by the Ministers' association, of this city, to oppose the admission of Roberts, of Utah, to Congress. Dr. Lewis was gone from Tuesday until Friday, and joined with General Eaton and others in a protest against the admission of this man. Dr. Lewis intends to follow up this matter when the new Congress assembles in March.

Dr. Lewis also spoke at a hearing of the committee on territories, with others, against the repeal of the prohibition law in Alaska. Dr. Lewis attended the convention of the Good Citizenship Society conducted by Dr. Josiah Strong.

Death of Mrs. Kilmarry.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Sarah Kilmarry, of Hampton Junction, mother of Mrs. Maloney, of East Second street, this city. Mrs. Kilmary had been ill for a long time. Two daughters survive her, Mrs. Bell, of Junction and Mrs. Maloney, of this city.

An Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kline, of 21 Sandford avenue, gave an informal luncheon at her home last Saturday afternoon. There were about fifteen guests present.

HOME OF GOD'S PEOPLE.

DR. RICHARDSON THUS DESCRIBES THE UNITED STATES.

Sunday Given Up to a Praise and Thanksgiving Service in the Park Avenue Baptist Church—Country's High Stand.

The service in the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday took the tone of a service of praise and thanksgiving. It consisted of responsive readings, anthems by the choir, a solo by Thomas A. Cuming and a sermon by the pastor upon the present and future possibilities of America.

Rev. J. W. Richardson mentioned authorities who claim that the Anglo-Saxon people are the descendants of the ten lost tribes of Israel, and that America is the future home of God's people. He said that God was with us, and gave as an example the fact that the United States had as yet never been defeated in war since its establishment. He also spoke of the American flag as adapted from the ancient flag of King David, as many people think, although that cannot be proven.

Mr. Richardson said that the attitude of all Europe towards us has changed during the past few months, in that where, before our war with Spain, the powers over there were ready to pat Uncle Sam on the back and tell him he was a quiet, dignified old gentleman, now they are ready to fly at his throat at the least provocation.

Mr. Richardson also urged the people to be zealous in pushing the work in behalf of missions, as in a few years the Russians and Germans, if they achieved success in some of their contemplated movements, and gain possession of China and some of the Countries in the East, would no doubt prevent American missionaries, with their love of religious and National freedom, to enter their possessions.

VOLUNTEERS TO DISBAND.

Local Post Talks of Success and is Heavily in Debt.

It is a fact to be regretted that the members of the American Volunteers of this city are compelled to give up and disband after a hard struggle for existence. This course, however, is inevitable and the belongings of the Post will be sold to help satisfy a portion of debt incurred. The chief officers of the organization in New York will be asked to help liquidate the balance of the debt. The movement in this city has not recently been ably supported and the lack of interest manifested is the real cause of failure. At present the few remaining members are meeting from house to house holding services and these are productive of much good. Just what action the chief officers will take regarding the local post has not yet been learned, but there seems to be no doubt but what they will readily assist their workers in this city.

Profitable Cake Sale.

A very profitable cake sale was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. A. Pope, under the auspices of the Advance Circle of the King's Daughters of the United Presbyterian church. There was a good attendance at the sale and the cakes were all sold, netting the sum of $10 to the society which will be used to sustain the city nurse in her work. The ladies who assisted at the sale were: Mrs. H. A. Pope, Mrs. J. A. Haines, Mrs. Searing, Mrs. John Beerbower, Mrs. Wean and Miss Bilsh. Another sale will be held soon.

Site for a New Church.

Elston M. French & Company have just sold to the members of Hope chapel a valuable lot near the chapel, and in the spring a handsome new church will be erected thereon.

FELL THREE STORIES.

THRILLING ACCIDENT TO ELEVATOR IN BABCOCK BUILDING.

Twelve Freemasons Were in the Car—They Escaped With a Severe Shaking up—Elevator Man Remained at His Post.

The elevator in the Babcock building fell three stories Thursday afternoon and the thirteen occupants escaped with nothing more serious than a severe shaking up, in which they were decidedly lucky. The elevator is laid up for repairs in consequence.

Twelve members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 36, F. and A. M., took the elevator for their lodge rooms on the top floor to assemble for the purpose of attending the funeral of the late Samuel Ball, of Scotch Plains. When the car reached the third story, it stopped of its own accord and then began to descend. The colored elevator man turned pale, but pluckily clung to the rope.

At last the electric brake gave way, and the speed of the car rapidly increased until there came a crash and the car suddenly ended its downward journey at the ground floor. The car withstood the shock while the occupants were thrown down in a heap. They recovered in a moment and climbed out to a place of safety. None were injured, save for the mental shock.

The elevator is run by electric power. Part of the mechanism gave way which resulted in the fall. It is understood that it has been known for some time that the elevator needed attention.

METRONOME CLUB'S FIRST CONCERT.

Took Part in One at Madison Avenue Reformed Church, New York.

The Metronome Banjo and Mandolin Club made its first appearance this season in public last Thursday when the members took part in an entertainment given in the Madison Avenue Reformed church, New York. The very fashionable audience present gave the Plainfielders a most flattering reception and enthusiastically encored every selection. The club appeared on the programme three times, but they were compelled to give two selections each time. The club showed a striking improvement over its work of the past and playing in excellent time and with feeling.

Frank O. Bristol, of East Fifth street, took part in the same entertainment as reader and impersonator, and scored a remarkable hit. His selections were cleverly given. His laugh was contagious and the audience found his impersonations very delightful.

A HEART PARTY.

Miss Florence E. Beal Entertained at Her Home on South Avenue Last Night.

Miss Florence E. Beal, of South avenue, entertained a few friends at a heart party Thursday. The first prizes in the game were won by Miss Mabelle Smith and Bert Hinrichs. The booby prizes were Miss St. Clair and Clement Morgan. Those present were Misses St. Clair, Sara Ball, Mabelle Smith, Mary Collier, Ethel Finch and Lydia Vanderwerden, and Clement Morgan, Godwin Beard, Walter L. Long, Fred Bonny, Albert Finch and Bert Hinrichs.

Miss Raybert Entertains.

Miss Etta Raybert, of North avenue entertained about fifteen of her friends at her home last Thursday at a musicale, which was a delightful affair. Almost the entire evening was devoted to music. There were violin solos by I. H. Lambert, of Westfield; Albert Garland, of New Brunswick; cornet solos by Mr. Brittingham, of Westfield; flute solos by Mr. Holland, of New Brunswick, and Mr. Wilcox, Westfield piano solos by Miss Mabelle Force and Miss Etta Raybert, and vocal solos by Miss Charlotte Messersmith and Miss Raybert. Following the programme refreshments were served and a short time was passed in sociability.

Mishap to Livery Rig.

A rig owned by Liveryman George Ogle met with a mishap Saturday morning on West Front street, near Sycamore avenue, while answering a call. The horse stumbled and in falling broke the shafts. The wagon was allowed to remain on the street for a time while the driver came back to the stables for another wagon. No one was injured in the accident.

Tested the Memory.

The Christian Endeavor consecration service at the First Baptist church last Friday, was one of the most interesting in the history of the society. The topic was "God's Unfailing Promises," and the service was conducted from memory. Each member responded from memory and no Bibles or hymn books were used.

Y. M. C. A. Reception.

The Y. M. C. A. this year will hold a reception to their members and a few invited guests on the evening of December 26th, which promises to be a pleasant affair in every way. This is a new departure for the Y. M. C. A, New Year's day being "open house," but this year Christmas, too, will be observed that way.

DROPPED INTO ARMS OF A POLICEMAN.

Story of Capture of Ringleader of the Gang.

HE IS CHAS. WESTERFIELD.

HOW THE POLICE ROUNDED UP THE YOUTHFUL BURGLARS.

Chewing Gum and a Conversation Gave the Clue—Most of the Boys Were Arrested in Bed—Westerfield Tried to Escape—Springer Was Captured in the Borough—All Six Held for Grand Jury.

The story of the capture of Plainfield's gang of boy burglars will long stand as one of the most important happenings in police annals in this city. Had Plainfielders realized what an organization was at work in the very heart of the city, their slumbers would no doubt have been less sound. They can rest secure now, however, for the six young men, the record of whose crimes startled the whole community, are safe behind the bars of the county jail, where they were escorted yesterday afternoon to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The circumstances of their discovery and capture sound more like the happenings of a great city rather than incidents in quiet Plainfield.

A conversation and a piece of chewing gum were the clues that finally led the police to discover the identity of the youthful culprits. The series of burglaries had led the police to believe that there was a gang at work somewhere. Sergeant Kiely gave a piece of chewing gum bearing the Goodrich mark, that had been passed out by one of the boys. Then Roundsman Frederickson overheard a conversation between Thomas Casey and a friend regarding the disposal of certain chickens which proved to be those stolen from the coop of Mrs. Asam Smith, of West Second street.

Thomas Casey, alias Trainor, was released several months ago by Chief Grant on giving his promise to pay a fine. He never paid it and the police made use of that charge. The officers were instructed to arrest him on sight, ostensibly on the charge of never paying the fine.

Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock he was arrested by Patrolman Watson and locked up. It was then deemed best to capture all the gang before they should learn of Casey's arrest and depart suddenly. Westerfield and several of the rest, it was learned, had gone to New Market skating and would not be back until late. A warrant was issued by Justice Nash for Westerfield's arrest, and the police waited for his return.

At 9 o'clock Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson went to the homes of George Kline and Abraham Cosch, both colored. The boys were found in bed and placed under arrest. They dressed and were taken to the jail.

At midnight Sergeant Kiely, Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolmen Totten and Cash went to Westerfield's home. The first two went to the front door, Totten was stationed in the rear and Cash at the side. Then Kiely and Frederickson rang the bell.

Mrs. Westerfield, it is alleged, came to the door and assured the officers that Charlie was not at home. The officers insisted on entering and searching the premises. At first she refused but the determined front of the policeman had its effect and they were finally allowed to enter. Meanwhile, Patrolman Totten was at the back of the house. He heard a window above his head open and saw a figure creep softly out and slide down the leader pipe from the third story to the second. Then the figure stepped out on the roof of the back porch and prepared to clamber down. Totten hid in the shadow and, as a pair of slim legs dangled before his face, made a grand swoop and took them in, owner and all.

Westerfield, for it was he, struggled to escape but the officer had him fast. At length the prisoner gave in and asked to go up stairs and get his coat. They went up and there met Mrs. Westerfield, the Sergeant and Roundsman. Westerfield was locked up at once.

A hurried visit to the home of Justice Nash at 1 o'clock obtained a warrant for Alfred Springer. Justice Thomas was roused up to endorse it. For over an hour the borough marshals and Sergeant Kiely pounded on the front door before they could gain admittance. Meanwhile Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Totten kept guard at the rear of the house. He was finally arrested in bed.

The prisoners were left supposedly alone while two policemen hid in the adjoining room. Sufficient was learned to implicate John Taylor, of South Second street, and to prove that the boys had been the burglars who had visited Scheuer's store. At 6:30 o'clock Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Totten arrested Taylor in his bed.

The boys were questioned separately and several of the younger ones told the whole story of their misdoings.

Besides learning what the young burglars had accomplished, the police found out some of the plans that the youthful criminals had made for the future. Friday they were to enter and rob Woodhull & Martin's big store. Edward White's store and the shoe stores of M. C. VanAradale and Doane & Edsall were counted in their list of visiting places for the near future. They also planned to lay for Edward White as he was returning to his home on Myrle avenue some evening. A wire across the street was to throw him from his wheel, sandbags would keep him quiet and then the boys were to ransack his pockets. Other crimes were being planned as well.

The six boys were given a hearing before Justice Nash Friday afternoon. They all entered a plea of guilty and were committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury which will mean sentence in their case unless they change their pleas. Not one of them showed any signs of weakness, they took the hearing and the trip to the county jail afterwards as a matter of course and seemed supremely indifferent to the disgrace of it all.

They were taken down on the 3:19 train to Elizabeth, chained together in gangs of three. Chief Grant was in command. Their departure was witnessed by several hundred people. The prisoners looked unconcerned as several smoked cigarettes.

TARIFF FOR PORTO RICO

IT IS BEING PREPARED BY DR. H. K. CARROLL.

New Tariff for Cuba is Being Used as a Basis—Dr. Carroll Will Not Sail the 21st as He Expected He Would.

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield, one of the United States Commissioners to Porto Rico, is preparing a tariff schedule for that island. The new tariff for Cuba, completed several weeks ago, is being used as the basis. Dr. Carroll said Friday: "The Spaniards evidently had no desire to give the natives of Porto Rico a chance. A four-seated carriage, for instance, was taxed $150 in Porto Rico and $300 in Cuba. All the necessities of life were highly taxed. This will be changed under the new schedules.

"One great need in Porto Rico is an American postoffice. When I was there in November the men were almost dying from homesickness. They had not heard from home in thirty days. A good postal system will do more for the health of our troops than anything else I can think of."

Dr. Carroll will call on the Cabinet Obdam the 31st, as was announced. He will confer first with the Secretary of the Treasury, and will probably start south by the last of December.

TREATED TO SURPRISE PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fraleigh Taken Unawares by Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Fraleigh, of 1130 West Seventh street, were treated to a surprise party Thursday night. They were taken unawares by about forty of their friends who came in upon them and insisted upon making themselves at home. When the couple had recovered their equilibrium they entered joyfully into the festivities, and played the parts of host and hostess to perfection. Dancing was the order of the evening, and before the guests departed refreshments were served.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Coch, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Connett, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Storr, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Hand, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Mowen, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Pugh, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Wyckoff, Mr. and Mrs. Bolmer, Miss Pugh, Mrs. A. Campbell, Mrs. H. Hague, of Three Bridges; Mrs. Winter, of Phoenicia, N. Y.; Mrs. Neal, Miss Alice Pugh, Percy Hand, Miss Mabel and Miss Susie Hand, Newton Mowen, Edward Mowen, Harold Storr, Russel Abbott, Raymond Pugh and Samuel Ayres. W. C. Townsend furnished music for dancing.

FIRE IN A HOTEL.

Lamp Exploded in a Hall in the Somerset Hotel.

Considerable excitement prevailed in the Somerset Hotel in the borough last Friday shortly before 8 o'clock by the explosion of a lamp in one of the hallways. The burning oil, which spread rapidly, set fire to the stand on which the lamp was standing, as well as the carpet and bric-a-brac.

Mrs. Dreyer, the mistress, happened to be passing through the hall at the time, and noticed the flames. She gave the alarm and in a few moments Joe Neuman and Thomas McGann, members of Warren Engine Company No. 1, rushed in with a chemical extinguisher and with the assistance of some of the guests succeeded in quenching the flames.

The damage was about $50, covered by insurance.

GIFTS FOR CHRISTMAS

PLENTY OF ARTICLES TO BE FOUND IN LOCAL STORES.

Some of the Practical and Handsome Things to be Found in the Clothing and Gent's Furnishing Goods Stores.

One of the most acceptable gifts for Christmas is a nice warm overcoat or suit of clothes, and Plainfield has clothing stores enough to equip a small sized army. The New York Clothing Company, of West Front street, of which M. Weinberger, is manager, is without a doubt the cheapest place in town to buy, and this season they are abundantly supplied with everything in the clothing line, with a corps of efficient clerks and salesmen to wait upon you. Mr. Weinberger has been established here long enough for the public to know that what he sells is all right. His are no shoddy goods. Honest value for your money is his motto, and it is surprising what a lot of things a small amount of money will buy there.

Overcoats, suits, both for business and dress occasions, hats, clothing for little children and grown men, all are there, and are sold at such low prices as to surprise you.

Harry Werner, another West Front street clothier, handles a larger variety of goods. A look at his windows, dressed by his window dresser, Max Lindeman, tempts one to enter. Werner carries a full line of suits, overcoats, business and dress suits, extra trousers, hats, gentlemen's furnishings, etc. A fine arry of neckties attracts the eye, and the goods are all displayed so that they can be looked at examined easily. Werner's goods are sold as cheaply as the goods he carries can be sold for. His stock of very cheap suits is extensive, just as his line of higher priced and better finished clothing is.

Sebring makes a specialty of merchant tailoring, and his custom made clothing is worn by people all over the city. This department of his store is complete, as well as his stock of ready-made clothing, hats and gentlemen's furnishings. Sebring at present is offering a line of $7 trousers made to order for $5, and is receiving orders every day for them.

Charles Frey, the Somerset street tailor, is also offering special inducements to Christmas purchasers. His all-wool suits made to order are the talk of the city.

J. R. Blair's store on Park avenue presents a holiday look, indeed. Blair deals in gentlemen's furnishings of every description. He has an elaborate display of neckwear, also mufflers, suspenders, silver buckled canes and umbrellas, hats, underwear, collars, cuffs, gloves and everything the well-dressed man of today wants. His entire stock is large and complete, and the prices are consistent with the quality of the goods he keeps.

A. M. Griffen and J. P. Laire are the places to go for knives, razors, skates, hockey sticks, metal goods, kitchen utensils, carpet sweepers, etc. There are lots of nice presents for Christmas to be found in a hardware store, and both Griffen and Laire have a complete stock of them.

The Christmas season is a good time of year to freshen up that house of yours by adding a new mantel or by putting in a new grate. Curtis M. Thorpe, who keeps "everything for the fireplace," is the man to go to, and just let him give you a few suggestions. A look over his establishment, filled with mantels, tiles, open grates, etc., is well worth the time spent.

JURY COULDN'T AGREE.

Case of Cold Storage Company Against Fred Hand Must Be Tried Again.

The case in tort of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company against Fred Hand for $71.18, which the company claim Hand collected and kept after selling out his ice business to them several months ago, came to trial in Justice Moffett's court yesterday before a jury of twelve men, who considered the evidence for over an hour and at last came to the conclusion that they couldn't agree and were discharged.

When Hand sold out his business to the Cold Storage Company he sold all claims, and the plaintiffs say that instead of abiding by his contract Hand collected over $70 worth of old bills on his own responsibility and kept the money. Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiffs and Codington & Swackhamer the defendant.

The jury were in favor of bringing in a verdict for the full amount claimed, but five of them refused to bring it in in tort, because if Hand could not pay the money he would have to go to jail. As the plaintiffs' lawyers would not agree to change their form of action the jury could not agree, so the case will be tried over again next Friday.

Seniors Won From Juniors.

The Seniors and Juniors of the Park Club met in a friendly match last Friday on the club alleys. The Seniors gave their young opponents 50 pins handicap on each game. The Seniors won two out of the three games by the following scores, which include the handicaps: 766 726, 702-727 and 880-733.

A POPULAR FUND FOR SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell Proposes a Plan.

SONS OF VETERANS TO LEAD

HIS IDEA TO GET EVERYBODY INTERESTED IN THE PROJECT.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell Believes That a Committee From Sons of Veterans and the Common Council Could Work Together Jointly and With Success— Plan Will be Presented to Former.

There is a scheme on foot to erect a soldiers' monument in Plainfield, and if the plan meets with general favor there is no reason why the city should not have such a monument. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E church, is the originator of the plan and he is very enthusiastic over the idea. He is a member of John Hand Camp, No. 39, Sons of Veterans. His plan is to have a committee of three from the camp appointed to confer with a committee from the City Council for the purpose of forming plans to raise the necessary amount of money for the monument. He thinks that in this way the people of the city can be interested in the movement to such an extent that they will contribute liberally to the fund.

His idea is to give everybody in the city an opportunity to contribute something toward the fund, and to give concerts, entertainments, etc., whereby money can be raised. He thinks that in such a scheme sons of the war are the ones to take hold of the work and thus rear a monument of those who have given their services for the country.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell has estimated on the cost of such a monument as would be suitable for the city, and thinks that the amount can be raised if properly looked after by interested persons. It is his intention to attend the meeting of the Sons of Veterans next Tuesday evening and present the matter to the members and to secure if possible the unanimous and hearty support of all in the movement. If his plan is adopted the Council will be asked to appoint a committee also.

LAST NIGHT OF BAZAAR.

Queen Esther Band's Affair Was a Successful One.

The entertainment and bazaar given under the auspices of the Queen Esther Band of the Grace M. E. church was concluded Friday. The entertainment consisted of a piano solo by Miss Florence Bagg; a tenor solo by Edson C. Martin; a recitation, "The Lost Baby," by Miss Helen Wooley; a solo by Miss M. McKeon and a recitation, "The Irish Schoolmaster," by A. A. Lake, of Dunellen.

The patronage at the various booths was excellent, and most of the articles were sold. To Miss Della Voehl and Miss Marguerite Schenck, managers of the affair, great credit belongs. These two were assisted by Mrs. George Fairchild, Mrs. G. Gardner, Mrs. E. E. Winckler, John Carney, A. A. Taft, A. Marsh, J. Langer, Mr. Hoagland, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Fairchild, W. Woodland, Robert VanNess, J. P. D. Kirch and Mr. Vermeule. The ushers, who saw that every one was made welcome and offered a seat, were John Carney, Harry Schenck, David Fairchild and Grover Schenck.

LOAN ASSOCIATION OFFICERS.

Dr. Davis Made President of New Jersey Building and Loan Investment Co.

The members of the New Jersey Building and Loan Investment Company held a meeting in the office of Murphy & Blair Friday evening and elected the following officers:

T. S. Davis, M. D., president; Geo. W. Rockfellow, first vice-president; James P. Homan, second vice-president; C. L. Murphy, solicitor; Ira L. LaRue, secretary; and H. Otis Newman, treasurer.

And the board of directors are as follows: George W. Rockfellow, W. R. Codington, T. S. Davis, M. D., J. D. Spicer, C. A. Read, Jas. P. Homan, L. A. Hummer, C. L. Murphy, L. B. Woolston, H. O. Newman, J. A. Smith, J. L. LaRue, J. C. Manning, A. Hubbard, O. L. Jenkins, M. D., Seaman Williams, L. E. Berkelow, M. Armstrong and W. F. Manning.

Boarders Skip, Landlady Follows.

The goods and chattels of Mrs. Margaret Johnson have been stored in George Stover's barn at Oak Tree since her departure several months ago, leaving unpaid bills behind her. It seems that Mrs. Johnson, who is a colored woman, boarded a number of the men who were laying pipe for the Water Company, and the majority of them, when the work was done, gave nothing but log ball for their board. So Mrs. Johnson followed suit, and Aug. 30th Grocer Russell O. Howell, of Plainfield, procured an attachment from Justice Moss, and Mrs. Johnson's belongings will be sold by constable's sale.

BIT OF CHEWING GUM LED TO THEIR ARREST.

Police Round Up a Youthful Gang of Burglars.

CONFESS THEIR CRIMES.

AUTHORITIES CAPTURE A GOOD DEAL OF STOLEN BOOTY, TOO.

A Large Number of Petty Thefts Are Charged Against Them, and Indisputable Evidence of Their Guilt is Secured—Six Boys in the Gang—One's Mother Died Soon After His Arrest.

During the past week or ten days the police have been doing some detective work which has resulted in the arrest of six young men, ranging in ages from 17 to 20 years, who are charged with committing a series of petty robberies heretofore during a period of a little over a year past. The boys were all arrested between the hours of 8 o'clock Thursday and 9 o'clock last Friday, and have confessed the crimes. The young men are Charles Westerfield, of Central avenue; Thomas Casey, of West Third street; Alfred Springer, of Grove street; John Taylor, of South Second street; George Kline, of West Third street, and Abraham Connett, of Plainfield avenue, the two last named being colored.

Sunday, December 4th, Werner's clothing store on West Front street, was entered and robbed of $30 worth of clothing. Then the police set to work on that case and Sergeant Kiely soon had a clue, which, followed up, has resulted in this wholesale arrest. During the past year a dozen stores and houses have been entered by these lads, among them being C. E. Compton's store, where $10 worth of candy and gum were stolen; Scheuer's store, where $30 was stolen from the cash drawer; Fred Endress' Muhlenberg place store, where several hams, a silver watch and money was taken. The Grant Avenue station was entered twice. Once the lads were frightened away before they secured any booty, but the second time they broke open a nickel in the slot machine and stole all the pennies and gum it contained. They also broke into Mrs. Adam Smith's chicken coop on West Second street and stole 5 pullets which they sold to Kriman Rothberg, who keeps a dry goods store on Liberty street, and who will also be arrested for receiving stolen goods. They got into Schloss' shoe store and stole boots and shoes; also into Leal's school where they found some money in one of the desks; into the Park Club and stole sods; into Voehl's bakery where they took cake; into the house on the corner of West Front street and Waynewood place and got away with an oil stove and some edibles; into Vito Ferraro's store on West Front street where the took ice cream and candy.

Casey and Springer went to Westfield a week or so ago and got into Piker's shoe store where they stole 4 pairs of shoes. Some one interrupted them in their work, but Casey pulled a revolver and fired at the intruder. It made of had a blank in it, for the man was not hurt.

Sergeant Kiely received his clue from a person to whom one of the gang gave a piece of gum one day. The Sergeant discovered that it was a piece from Giles' bakery, so putting this and that together, decided that he was on the right track. Captain Grant, Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson deserve great credit for the work they have done during the past few days.

The first arrest was made Thursday when the Sergeant sent Officer Watson down to Casey's home on West Third street after Casey. The Sergeant has been waiting for a week to make this arrest, but owing to the illness of Casey's mother, the raid was held off as long as possible. As it was, the mother died Friday morning, although death may not have been hastened by the disgrace into which her boy had fallen, for the police bandied the case so carefully that she was to remain in ignorance of the whole affair, and would not have known had not her husband told her.

Then Kiely and Frederickson arrested the others, and worked all night gathering them in. Westerfield's room contained three overcoats, several suits of clothes and pairs of trousers and there were also more clothes and shoes in Casey's room. The boys, even when locked up, denied everything until confronted with the stolen goods. Then they broke down and confessed. Westerfield, the lads say, was the leader and planned the raids, while Casey generally led the party that entered the house or store. The police have made a very important capture, for according to the lads own statements, they have been the gang who have been operating in this vicinity recently.

Newark Academy Won.

The basket ball game between the scrub team from the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. and the regular Newark Academy team, played at Newark last Friday, resulted in an overwhelming victory for the Newark boys.

VIVID WORD SKETCH OF A POWERFUL MAN

Dr. Gunsaulus' Splendid Description of Savonarola.

THE ITALIAN STATESMAN.

DELIVERED BEFORE A LARGE AND ABSORBED AUDIENCE.

The Striking Points in the Life and Character of the Famous Italian Reformer Were Made Intensely Interesting by the Noted Chicago Divine—The Spirit of Savonarola Still Lives, He Said.

Against the dark background of Italy in the fifteenth century, dark with corruption in both church and state, there stands out one brilliant and heroic figure, Girolamo Savonarola, reformer and statesman. Always a fascinating character in history, Savonarola becomes doubly so when his story is told by such a man as Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, whose lecture delivered Thursday in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was attended by a large and absorbed audience.

The lecture was not a history of the great Italian reformer so much as it was a word-picture. In tone, in gesture and in word, Dr. Gunsaulus has the art of painting for his audience a most vivid picture of the events he is describing. Savonarola the boy, born in Ferrara in 1453, the year of the fall of Constantinople, became a living figure, with his boyish love affairs, and his early hatred of tyranny. The Renaissance became real and the listeners entered into its intellectual and artistic excitement. The boy grew into an earnest and devotedly religious man, entered upon a monastic life, and became prior of St. Mark's at Florence. He ruled the brilliant but unscrupulous and wicked Lorenzo d'Medici. The problem of city government, then as now a question uppermost in the thoughts of patriot reformers, was handled with no gloved hands by Savonarola. The reformer's eloquence shook not only the city, but its ruler as well, and when the wicked Lorenzo lay on his deathbed the one man he would have to tell him how to die was the man who had never cringed before him. When Charles VIII. of France, came into Florence the Italian statesman wielded such an influence that he held Charles in one hand and Florence in the other. But such a man would never be allowed to die in peace. He incurred the enmity of the corrupt Pope Alexander VII, whom he had denounced, and who tried to wile him to Rome in order to have him assassinated. Savonarola was too busy in Florence. Alexander then offered to make him cardinal. Savonarola said that he would undoubtedly wear a red hat, but it would be the red hat of martyrdom, not that of the cardinal. He was excommunicated at the instance of Alexander, but when told that he was separated from the church militant and the church triumphant, replied that to separate him from the latter was beyond the power of man. He was executed, being strangled and then burned, but, said Dr. Gunsaulus, the flames of that fire gave birth to the spirit of Savonarola has lived and still lives in all our great statesmen and reformers. He was a man who was not afraid to confront well dressed error; he asked one question: "Is it right?" He was an aristocrat, but his was the aristocracy of brains and of character.

FIRST STEP TOWARDS SECURING SILK MILL

Board of Trade Appoint Committee to Organize Company.

STOCK TO BE $25 A SHARE.

SEVERAL SHARES SUBSCRIBED FOR LAST NIGHT.

The Enterprise to Be Known as the Plainfield Silk Company—Special Committee Make a Very Favorable Report of Their Visit to Paterson—Payment for Shares Paid in Installments.

The prospects of a silk mill being started in this city now seems favorable, as a good start was made in this direction at a special meeting of the Board of Trade last Thursday. President Lounsbury was in the chair and there was a fair representation of the members. Mr. Lounsbury, as one of the committee composed of Eugene A. Laing, Charles H. Hand and himself, made a report of the committee's visit to Paterson last week. He stated that everything as represented by the two promoters from that city had been found true. They found that the silk industry had done a good deal for Paterson and would no doubt be a good thing for Plainfield. The committee visited several silk mills and especially the plant now idle which it has been proposed to purchase and move to this city. The machinery in this idle mill is owned by Bannigan Bros., elderly men, who have become wealthy and retired from business. It is in fine condition and equal to new machinery. The plant is complete in every respect and can be purchased reasonable. It can also be moved to Plainfield for $250, which is considered remarkably cheap.

An informal discussion of the subject followed. Secretary Harry C. Runyon said that he had seen a number of prominent Plainfielders who signified a willingness to take shares of stock. To assist matters the committee was instructed to draw up a prospectus and to make their report in writing. A motion was to the effect that a committee composed of Eugene A. Laing, J. C. Pope, Garret Dunham, C. H. Hand and H. C Runyon retire to another room and draft a plan of organization and report back to the meeting. The president was also made a member of the committee. In a short time the committee returned with a plan, a substance of which is that the new organization shall be known as the Plainfield Silk Company. The capital stock shall be $25,000 in shares of $25 each. The subscriber shall pay 20 per cent. of the the total subscribed ten days after the first call, and 20 per cent. each thirty days thereafter until the whole amount shall be paid. The subscriber is not bound unless the whole amount desired shall be subscribed.

On the strength of this plan forty-two shares of stock, representing $1,050, was subscribed as follows: Eugene A. Laing, J. C. Pope, Garrett Dunham, ten shares each; Fred C. Lounsbury, M. F. Elderton, five shares each; and Harry C. Runyon two shares

Should this company be organized they will not be bound to take the Crescent Rink building for a mill. A number of good sites have been made for a site, etc., and after the company is organized it shall be for them to say where the plant shall be located and who shall be the officers of the company.

PARTOOK OF PANCAKES AND COUNTRY SAUSAGE.

Novel But Successful Sociable at Trinity Church.

GIVEN BY SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

A SATISFACTORY REPAST WAS PROVIDED FOR ALL.

Lecture Room Was Patriotically Decorated—American and English Flags Intertwined—Three Pirates Guarded the Door and the Donation Plate—Informal Programme Rendered—Those in Charge.

"They have a great way down here at Trinity, haven't they?" remarked the Sausage, frying merrily in the pan.

"You're right, my friend," responded the Buckwheat Cake as they turned him over on the griddle and his face began to brown. "It's all for a good cause, I suppose. But 'tis hard to be sacrificed to pay for matting even if it is to cover the floor of the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church."

Such were the remarks that the Coffee Pot on duty at the "pancake sociable" at Trinity last Thursday heard in a quiet interval in the kitchen where the good things were being prepared. Soon after, both Sausage and Buckwheat Cake were served to Chief Boaze, the first customer of the evening. The Chief promptly sent in a second alarm for more sausage and more cakes. They were even more enjoyable than a fire he said.

The social was arranged by the Sunday-school to raise funds to pay the amount still due on the matting for the lecture room where the affair was held. A long table was arranged in the primary room and there the good folk hastened to follow in the footsteps of the genial Chief. Pancakes, both wheat and buckwheat, country sausage and coffee were served. There were many customers, and a large corps of waitresses were kept busy supplying the demand that continued well into the evening.

The supper began at 6 o'clock and for the first hour Mrs. E. E. Anthony presided over the dining department, assisted by a corps of waitresses. From 7 until 8 o'clock Mrs. H. J. Martin was in command. For the next hour Mrs. E. Randall became commander-in-chief.

With such a precious cargo within doors it did not seem right to leave the place unprotected, and the "three pirates" stood guard at the door. They were J. P. Laire, R. A. Meeker and Albertus Swalm. To those who encountered them, it is unnecessary to explain whence they derived their title of pirates. Beside them was a place for which was received a silver offering, only sometimes it was paper. The room was prettily decorated in the national colors, the work of William H. Olmstead, assisted by Miss Gertrude Tier. Right at the entrance was the motto, "Friendliness Makes Friends," beneath which the American and English flags were draped together. A reception committee, headed by Mrs. Cornelius Schenck and Robert Clark, Jr., welcomed the visitors.

During the evening, an informal programme was rendered, which included vocal solos by Miss Etta Krymer, with Miss Lillian A. Force as accompanist, and cornet solos by Benjamin LaVere, with Miss Mabelle Force as accompanist. This part of the entertainment was arranged by a committee of which Miss Lillian A. Force was the chairman.

At the head of the whole affair was a general committee composed of Fred E. Smith, Miss Mabel Wilson and E. E. Anthony.

There is one soulless corporation that is famous for its kindness to churches. The Hecker-Jones-Jewell Milling Company furnished the material for the pancakes and further sent one of its expert cooks to the scene to prepare the cakes themselves. And the cakes well sustained their reputation for they were positively delicious.

The net proceeds will amount to about $25.

Corporal McCarty Home.

A letter just received from the Third New Jersey Volunteers encamped at Athens, Ga., tells of the promotion of Florence McCarty, formerly a member of the Plainfield police force, to the grade of corporal. All the Plainfield boys in the regiment are reported to be well.

Increased Delivery Facilities.

Manager Mills, of the U. S. Express Co., will receive two new express delivery wagons today making in all seven delivery wagons. This move was found necessary owing to the heavy express business of the holiday season.

An Informal Dinner.

Mrs. William L. Saunders, of Rockview avenue, gave an informal dinner Thursday evening to a few intimate friends to introduce Mr. Otis, who has recently taken up his residence in Washington Park.

WESTFIELD DOWNED IN THREE GAMES.

Parks Rolled Wonderful Scores on Their Own Alleys.

'TWAS LIKE OLD TIMES.

LAST GAME WAS WON BY ONLY FOUR PINS.

The Result Has Placed the Parks Second in the League, While Westfield Fell Down to Fourth Place—Parks Won First Game by 118 Pins—Their Score Within One of League Team Record—Finishes.

It was like the good old days. The Parks came to the front again with some phenomenal bowling and buried their old rivals from Westfield out of sight in three games. It was real bowling and made the hearts of the old enthusiasts grow young again. The result of it all is that the Parks are now in line for second place in the Central Journal Bowling League.

To sum it up briefly, the Park Club defeated the Westfield Athletic Club three times Dec. 14th on the Park Club alleys, first badly, second fairly and third by a wee small margin.

Westfield stood second in the league and came up with the intention of getting the best of the series with the Parks, at least. While the Parks defeated Roselle one game, the only game they they have lost this season, the Plainfield contingent had not done anything particular brilliant so far.

The first game opened with a rather poor showing for the home team. On the second frame Westfield was 32 pins in the lead. Then there came a great change. With an irresistable rush the Parks swept to the front, Westfield couldn't even keep them in sight. Strikes and spares became commonplace events. At the end of six frames the Parks were over 60 pins in the lead. When the windup came Westfield was so far behind that she might just as well not have been there at all. The Parks won by the comfortable margin of 118 pins. It wasn't the work of any one man in the home team, they all had the winning spirit and their scores were all good. The score, 883, was within one pin of the best rolled in the league this year.

Westfield made a brace for the second game and took the lead. It wasn't by a large majority but enough to say that they were ahead. The Parks cantered comfortably after until the seventh frame was reached, then they tied. Westfield gradually showed signs of becoming demoralized. The pins wouldn't fall and the Parks went into the lead winning out by some 21 pins.

The same tactics were noted in the third game. Westfield made a jump for the lead in the first frame and took it with the Parks only a few pins behind. The first half of the game seemed in favor of the visitors. They were in the lead but could not shake their opponents. At the fifth frame the old time Park Club spirit began to manifest itself. In the sixth strikes by Hibbard, F. O. Ball and "Doc" Thiers brought the Parks up to within two pins of their rivals. A double by the doctor and spares by the rest sent the Parks into the lead by 19 pins in the seventh. And it still had they stayed despite Westfield's strongest efforts to dislodge them. The lead was cut down to 6 pins in the ninth and four in the tenth frame, but the Parks were still there and Westfield had to rest content with defeat.

Captain F. O. Ball set a rattling good example for his team-mates, scoring 204, but his father was in rather poor form.

The individual scores were as follows:

PARK CLUB.	1st.	2d.	3d.
F. H. Ball	167	199	195

Good Shooting.

The following information will be of interest to gunners and sportsmen. On the James river, between Curie's Neck and Claremont, Va., there are plenty of ducks and good quail shooting. City Point is the best place to locate. Good accommodations, guides, boats, blinds and batteries will be found here, and duck shooting will be at its height until the first of the year. Gunners should take their own dogs. City Point is easily reached by the Old Dominion Line from New York, to whom application for further particulars should be made.

Miss Lewis Entertained.

Miss Evelyn M. Lewis, of West Seventh street, entertained a number of Plainfield young women at her home Thursday afternoon to meet Mrs. Johnston. In a contest to guess the representations of songs, Miss Mary Collier won first prize, and Miss Mabelle Smith the booby prize.

CHANGES MADE IN TAX ASSESSMENTS.

Commissioners of Appeal Have Completed Their Labors.

SYNOPSIS OF THE RESULTS.

OUT OF 265 COMPLAINTS, 206 WERE GRANTED BY COMMISSIONERS.

The Total Amount of Assessed Valuations Reduced by $160,435—Taxes to the Amount of $3,695.15 Were Remitted—The Commissioners of Appeal Found a Host of Objectors This Year.

The host of complaints against the present arrangement of the tax assessments gave the Commissioners of Appeal of this city an unusually difficult session. Heretofore there has hardly been a score of objectors but this year the number swelled to 265. The hearings of the Commissioners were held about a month ago and testimony taken in each complaint. Since then the Commissioners have been busy considering those complaints. Their labors are now completed.

Out of the 265 complaints made to the Commissioners, 206 have been granted and the valuation adjusted or the tax remitted as the case happened to be. The result is shown $160,435 deducted from the assessed valuation and $3,695.15 the amount of tax remitted.

A synopsis of the work done by the Commissioners is as follows:

JUSTICE NEWCORN'S LAST CASE.

A Contract Case Growing Out of the Removal of a Tenant of a House.

Wm. Newcorn presided over a court as Justice of the Peace for the last time Friday, and listened to the evidence in the case of Mrs. Agnes Bushnell against Miss Kate Daly. Mr. Newcorn having resigned his office as Justice cannot legally take any new cases, but has the right to finish up all his old ones, and yesterday's case was the last one of these.

Miss Daly's defense was that she was only acting as agent for her mother in renting the house, and was therefore not liable for the rent. Nevertheless the jury brought in a verdict for the full amount $30 for the plaintiff. The jury men were Samuel Tunison, A. W. Stites, John Rose, Frank Wyckoff, William Remsen and B. T. Barnes.

No Change in Trolley Schedule.

There will probably be no change in the present arrangement of running trolley cars between Dunellen, Bound Brook and New Brunswick, until next spring after the new bridge is completed at Bound Brook. It is then proposed to run through cars. The present arrangement is far from satisfactory, but still is better than nothing, for it is claimed that the Brunswick Traction Company were not compelled to operate the road until spring, and are doing so merely for an accommodation to the public.

Senate Lodge Elects.

The annual meeting of Senate Lodge, Knights of Honor, was held Thursday evening and the officers elected for the ensuing year as follows: Past dictator, J. H. VanMiddlesworth; dictator, W. D. Williams; vice-dictator, H. C. Reynolds; assistant dictator, A. A. Lake; reporter, R. A. Frey; financial reporter, John H. Doane, treasurer, E. G. Smith; guardian, Richard Warnock; chaplain, E. H. Graves; guide, James R. Phillips.

Pretty Home Wedding Celebrated in the Borough.

HANDSOME DECORATIONS.

REV. CORNELIUS SCHENCK PERFORMS THE CEREMONY.

The Bride Was Miss Emily Leeds Austin—Frank Kleinhans the Groom—Ceremony Performed Beneath an Arch of Evergreens—Bride Gowned in White Organdie—Groom College Graduate.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the winter season took place Dec. 14th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Townsels, of 26 Jackson avenue, when their niece, Miss Emily Leeds Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Austin, of Warrenville, was united in marriage to Frank B. Kleinhans, of Easton, Pa.

Promptly at 6:30 o'clock, the appointed hour, the strains of the wedding march were played by Clifford Braider. At the same time the ushers, Arthur Austin, brother of the bride, and Frederick M. Townsley, of Bayonne, N. J., cousin of the bride, entered the parlor, followed by the maid-of-honor, Miss Elizabeth G. Austin, sister of the bride. Then appeared the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away in marriage. Near the centre of the room the party met the groom and best man, Arthur Kleinhans, brother of the groom, of Easton, Pa., and beneath an arch of choice evergreens, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, impressively pronounced the marriage ceremony making the happy couple husband and wife.

After the ceremony the bride and groom received the congratulations of their many friends, who showed their appreciation of the young couple by the many handsome and useful gifts presented to them.

The house was prettily decorated for the event with palms, ferns, potted plants and choice cut flowers. The bride wore a gown of white organdie trimmed with white lace over white silk, and she carried bridal roses. The maid-of-honor was gowned in white organdie over pale green silk and she carried a bouquet of roses.

A reception followed the ceremony, after which supper was served so the bride and groom could take the 9:28 o'clock train for Philadelphia, where the groom has furnished a handsome home for himself and wife to begin housekeeping.

The groom is a graduate of Lafayette College, Class of '97, and now holds a valued position at the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia.

There were about seventy guests present, including friends and relatives from Easton, Pa., Astoria, L. I., Sayreville, N. J., New York, Philadelphia, Flemington, Cranford and Plainfield.

"BIRD GODS."

A New Volume Decorated by George Wharton Edwards.

The publishing house of A. S. Barnes & Co., of New York, announce the early publication of "Bird Gods," a small but very artistic volume by the Hon. Charles de Kay, late Consul General at Berlin and decorated by the skilled pencil of George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place. The book notice says of his decorations: "His clever hand and fancy have struck just the right note of savagery and quaintness for such a theme."

Decree Granted.

Mrs. Sebring, of Greenbrook, has secured from the Court of Chancery an absolute divorce from her husband, Charles F. Sebring, on statutory grounds. The testimony in the case was taken before J. H. VanWinkle, and then submitted to Chancellor McGill for a decision. No defense was made and the decree was readily granted.

WHAT LEGISLATORS MAY DO THIS WINTER

The Greater City Idea Causing a Good Deal of Talk.

TWO RIVALS FOR BIGNESS.

NEWARK AND JERSEY CITY ANXIOUS TO SPREAD OUT.

Such Legislation Would Give New Jersey Two Populous Cities—Question of Substituting Commissioners for Boards of Freeholders Also Talked of—State Finances Receiving Considerable Attention

Republican House caucus over, the result of the Senate caucus almost entirely foreshadowed, the interest in the preliminaries of the legislative session has been superseded by thought as to what is likely to engage the attention of the legislators when they get down to business. Of course, the inauguration of Governor elect Voorhees and the formal choosing of ex Congressman John Kean as the successor of United States Senator James Smith will be the interesting features of the first two or three weeks of the session.

The greater city fad is likely to find development in the introduction of bills consolidating municipalities or annexing suburban territory to now existing municipalities. Assemblyman Benny, of Hudson county, has already prepared for submission a redraft of his last year's bill providing for a Commission to take the preliminary steps toward merging all of the subdivisions of Hudson county into a Greater Jersey City. Then there is another proposition to take the Hudson county municipalities of East Newark, just across the Passaic from Newark, and consolidate them into a city by themselves. This proposition is looked upon as a forerunner of detaching them from Hudson county and placing them in Essex, to become a part of the Greater Newark that is also projected. Whether a bill will be introduced at this session to make a Greater Newark is not certain. It is always difficult to keep legislation affecting municipalities free from the influence of political consideration. East Orange and some of the other municipalities in Essex county are strongly Republican, and would not relish being made a part of Newark at a time when the latter city is in Democratic hands. There is no doubt that legislation will come in the near future, if not this session, which will provide for a Greater Newark and a Greater Jersey City, each with over 300,000 population, and give New Jersey the seventh and eighth most populous cities in the United States.

The question of substituting Commissions of three or five persons to supersede the present Freeholders in the government of counties will be agitated again. It was pressed a couple of years ago by Senator Parry, of Burlington county, and will be pressed this year by Senator-elect Allan McDermott of Hudson. Mr. McDermott is particularly anxious for the measure in Hudson county, and the proposition may at first be limited to first-class counties, and later extended.

One of the most important matters to engage the attention of the Legislature will be that of State finances. The immense sums that the State is receiving from trusts and other big concerns that become incorporated under the laws of New Jersey are fast bringing the receipts of the State to a point which will be far in excess of the present disbursements. The Democrats in their recent State platform declared for equal taxation, and this is understood by many to mean that the railroads must pay more taxes to the municipalities and less to the State. This proposition has a local aspect. The larger cities which embrace a great deal of railroad property within their boarders would like the Legislature to go further than it did in the equal taxation law of 1897, and divert more of the revenue of the State from railroads to the local treasuries. Those localities containing little or no railroad property can see no benefit for themselves in such a plan while decreasing the State's receipts, and are naturally opposed to it.

COLD CASH NEEDED NOW.

STOCKHOLDERS IN SILK MILL PROJECT BEING LOOKED FOR.

Proposed New Enterprise Talked of in an Informal Way by the Board of Trade—Canvass for Capital to be Made.

There was a scarcity of members at the regular meeting of the Board of Trade last Monday, and in consequence no business was transacted. Those present included President Lounsbury, Secretary Harry Runyon, and Messrs. Eugene Laing, Charles Runyon, R. B. Rogers, J. C. Pope, Percy Ohl, of the Board of Trade, and Messrs. Bullock and Zimmerman, of Paterson. The last two named are the ones interested in the silk mill organization.

Inasmuch as no business could be transacted those present remained for a time and discussed plans for pushing the silk mill project among the citizens. It was finally decided that Messrs. Bullock and Young, of Paterson, should come to Plainfield next week and assisted by members of the Board, make a tour of the city and personally see probable investors. In the meantime the committee from the Broad will prepare a prospectus to be used in presenting the subject to the people. This committee will also endeavor to secure a number of subscribers this week preparatory to beginning the canvass. It was mentioned last evening that several persons had signified their desire to subscribe from $500 to $1,000 worth of stock. There does not seem to be the slightest doubt but what the necessary $25,000 will be raised at an early date.

The canvass would have been started this week but on account of the approaching holidays it was deemed wise to wait until next week. The Paterson representatives feel gratified with the prospects of success and are willing to do all they can to further the interest of the project.

STEAM PIPE BURSTED.

Accident to Heating Apparatus in Park Avenue Baptist Church

An accident occurred to the steam-heating apparatus of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning, before church time, that came near interrupting the service and compelling the pastor to take his flock into the chapel.

One of the steam pipes gave way about 9:30 o'clock, and filled the church with escaping steam. The fire was drawn, but as the day was mild and the church well-heated before the accident, there were no serious results. By hard work, Sexton Edgar Brokaw succeeded in repairing the damage so that at night the heater could be used.

RAILROAD DETECTIVES AFTER COAL THIEVES

Regular Organized Gangs Work Near Graceland.

STRICT WATCH BEING KEPT.

THIEVES BOARD CARS AND KICK OFF THE COAL.

Latest Haul Was Seen By the Officers, But in the Darkness the Officers Escaped—Search Warrant Secured but Coal Could Not Be Found—Horrible Way of Living Seen by the Officers.

The Central Railroad detectives are busy every night looking for coal thieves near Graceland, and it is said they now have a scheme on foot which will soon put a stop to the stealing of coal from the cars at night. There have been several organized gangs who make it a practice to jump on the cars, and while the train is in motion kick the coal off. After the train has passed the coal is gathered into bags and carried away. It is said a gang of Italians have made a business of stealing coal in this manner and then selling it to their countrymen.

There have not been many robberies of this kind of late, for the miscreants have arrived at the conclusion that their actions are being watched too closely by the railroad detectives, who claim they know who is engaged in this work, and if any person is caught in the act the law will deal very severely with them.

The last haul made by the miscreants occurred Friday evening, and the detectives were not far away. They saw the men, but owing to darkness were unable to get them. A search warrant was procured from Judge Mendell, and the railroad detectives, accompanied by the local police, visited the old house occupied by William Ketch and John Bloodgood on the county road at Garwood. Here some coal was found in the apartments of John Bloodgood, which was full of ballast. There was not, however, enough evidence to cause the arrest of Bloodgood, who claims he picked the coal in the morning from the roadbed.

The old house was searched from top to bottom, and the sight that met the searchers' eyes was a most horrible one. The house was filthy. The floors were covered with rubbish and disease lurked in every room in the house. There were no beds for the occupants, who evidently sleep on the floor, and the stench which arises from the first floor of the building would cause one to wish he was again in the open air. The good people of Cranford can do some missionary work at home if they will visit this house, and the Board of Health might also save disease from spreading if the house was disinfected.

This building is probably the most horrible sight in Cranford, and the men who went there would have been ashamed to have arrested the poor souls who endeavored to live in such a place.

WYCKOFF ACCUSED OF NEGLECT BY WIFE

Asks Courts to Compell Him to Support Her.

TELLS A VERY SAD STORY.

LANNING WYCKOFF AND HIS WIFE LIVED AT FINDERNE.

She Claims He Did Not Provide Actual Necessities of Life—Says Their Child Died From Lack of Proper Care and Treatment—Says He Finally Refused to Live With Her—Bill Filed in Court.

Mrs. Amanda Wyckoff tells a sad tale of desertion and neglect by her husband and is now preparing to force him through the courts to give her the necessary support. Murphy & Blatz, her attorneys, have now filed a bill for alimony in the Court of Chancery.

On July 28, 1897, Mrs. Harry Grader, of North Plainfield, formerly of Somerville, was wedded to Lanning Wyckoff, of Finderne. The marrige was performed by Rev. Mr. Kipp, at his own home at Hartingen, Somerset county. Before that time, Mrs. Grader had been a dressmaker and had earned sufficient to keep her and her child.

After their marriage they went to live at Finderne where Wyckoff found occupation at the neighboring farms. A child was born to them, a weak, sickly child who, Mrs. Wyckoff says, died for lack of proper care and treatment. Her husband, she says, refused to give her sufficient fun is to meet even the ordinary household expenses and none for medicines. He left her in the house alone with the sick babe. The house was in an isolated part of Finderne and she was in constant terror for fear of an attack by tramps or thieves.

On January 22, 1898, she says that her husband told her to get another house as he was going to leave their present home. She found one in Somerville but he refused to go there and furthermore refused to pay the rent. She was then compelled to fall back on her skill as a dressmaker to earn her daily bread. He has been employed at the farm of John Groendyke, at Finderne, since the time of his alleged desertion.

Mrs. Wyckoff claims that he is fully able to support her and the child as he has a farm at Flagtown Mountain and owns other property.

The proceeding are instituted under section twenty of the Divorce Act which provides that the wife may file a bill for alimony in case of abandonment or desertion. They are rather unusual and very few cases of the kind have come before the Court of Chancery.

BRIEF SESSION OF THE MARTIN ACT COMMISSIONERS.

Met to Remit Back Taxes on Property Held by Innocent Owner—The Commissioners Meet Again Next Week.

There were just four complaints against the former rulings of the Martin Act Commissioners for those same Commissioners to correct Monday afternoon. And all four men went away happy. According to the ruling of Judge VanSyckle, the Commissioners met in the Council chambers yesterday afternoon to remit such of the back taxes on properties now held by innocent owners.

J. A. Hubbard and Frank Bergen were the Commissioners present. Mr. Carleton was ill and unable to be present. The secretary of the Commissioners, Frank J. Hubbard, was also in attendance. The four objecters told each his little tale, and was assured that it would be all right. Then they departed, and the Commissioners adjourned to meet again Wednesday afternoon of next week.

An Unparalleled Time Record

Was made every day during the period of the Omaha Exposition by the trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway on its Chicago & Omaha Short Line.

Altho its trains hauled from ten to thirteen well filled sleeping cars and coaches each night, yet schedule time of arrival at Omaha and at Chicago was an accomplished fact,—a record to be proud of, and which has resulted in establishing the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway in the minds of the traveling community as the shortest, best and most reliable route from Chicago to Omaha, as well as to California.

All coupon ticket agents sell tickets via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. For information regarding the line address Wm. Kelly, Jr., General Eastern Passenger Agent, 381 Broadway, New York.

BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL.

Former Representative Clark Sells His Holdings in Elizabeth for $500,000.

One of the largest transfers of real estate in Elizabeth for many years was consummated Monday. Former Representative Ames Clark has disposed of all his holdings in Broad street, Morris avenue, Westfield avenue and North Broad street to Mr. Eugene Jones and her brother-in-law, Fred Jones, of New York, for the sum of $500,000.

The Jones family already own $500,000 worth of Elizabeth property, and with this acquisition they will control $1,000,000. The property just purchased is located on the principal business thoroughfares and includes the Citizens' Bank and the Clark Hotel. Mrs. Jones was formerly Miss Julia A. Dix, daughter of the late J. Augustus Dix, superintendent for many years of Elizabeth's public schools.

Christmas at First Baptist Church.

The Christmas entertainment at the First Baptist church will be held the Thursday evening between Christmas and New Year's at the church. Next Sunday the religious service will be held at the church and all the Sunday-schools connected with the church will join in the celebration.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a benefaction deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital Formula, called A Case of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a hotchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co., on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling, bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for them?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and given out during the year, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun, I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who, it was known, to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said the reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which would parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other women who suffer, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS
RIPANS
ONE GIVES RELIEF

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES (retaining the name RIPANS) is now for sale at most drug stores—the FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the people and the dealers who do not now handle the Ripans Tabules because the 60-cent packet is too high priced. Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists everywhere. If your druggist does not keep them, send five cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (containing six 60-cent packets) will be sent for 72 cents. Ripans Tabules are the best medicine known to mankind for the cure of indigestion, biliousness, headache, nervousness, and all forms of stomach disorders. They give relief.

INCOMING COUNCIL TALKS IT ALL OVER

Fred H. Andrews Will be President of the Council.

PERMANENT PAVEMENTS.

COUNCILMEN THERE IRRESPECTIVE OF POLITICAL AFFILIATIONS.

Mayor-Elect Rockfellow and Councilman Homan Kept Away by Illness—One New Committee—Frank Cortell to be Chairman of Fire Committee—Streets and Police Committees Same as Present.

The eleven men who are to govern Plainfield during the year 1899 as sembled at the home of Councilman E. T. Barrows last Tuesday to settle on their organization and consider plans for the year's work. All were present with the exception of Mayor-elect G. W. Rockfellow and Councilman J. P. Homan, who were kept at home by illness. It was not a political gathering.

First of all, it was settled that Fred H. Andrews should be the next President of the Council. In the list of standing committees there is to be one change, the committee on printing and stationery is to be dropped and the work done by a new committee of assessment and taxes.

As the term of office of all the members of the fire and buildings committee has expired, an entirely new committee will have to be appointed. B. Frank Cortell will doubtless be chairman, as he is an ex-chief of the fire department. The other members will be George P. Melliok and R. I. Tolles. The street committee will retain its former members, Messrs. Barrows, Buckle and VanHerwerden. Mr. Buckle will probably be chairman of the police committee, with Messrs. Barrows and Homan as the other members.

Besides arranging the organization there was considerable discussion on subjects of local importance. While the Council of '98 was unable to do anything toward permanent pavements for the streets in the business section, the Council had expressed itself in favor of them. The Council of '98 declared itself in favor of them as being more economical for the city, as well as being far better for the people who use them.

While the members of the incoming Council made no preference regarding the kind of pavement, they believed that the city could reduce expenses materially and more than cover the interest on the bonds necessary to cover the cost of the improvement. The streets proposed for the new pavement are Front street, between Central and Watchung avenues; Park avenue, between Front and Fourth streets, and Somerset street, between Front street and the city line. It was also proposed to see the Jersey Central Railroad Company to see what proportion that corporation would stand of the cost of putting a permanent pavement on North avenue. The Plainfield Street Railway Company will have to stand about one-third the cost of the entire work.

The question of a city hall was suggested but not discussed to any great length. The Arlington avenue extension of the Plainfield Street Railway will undoubtedly be allowed under the same terms as the present extension.

Six Months More.

After the holidays the Plainfield Business College will resume work and continue till July 1st. It is the aim of this school to adopt the best systems of bookkeeping and shorthand, and the best text-books on all other subjects. Gadlers bookkeeping has no superior; and Isaac G. Dement, author of the shorthand text-book used in this college, is the most rapid writer in the world. Now is a good time to begin a course of study.

Anchor Lodge Elect.

Last Tuesday the following officers were elected at the regular communication of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M.: Worshipful master, Stephen Higham; senior warden, G. W. V. Moy; junior warden, S. B. Joseph; treasurer, J. E. Turrill; secretary, G. A. Rogers; senior deacon, J. C. VanDyke; junior deacon, George Macintyre.

Fourteen Remarkable Old Ladies.

An attractive feature of the January Ladies' Home Journal is the collection of photographs of "Some Remarkable Old Ladies" artistically grouped on a single page. CUPID IN MAYOR'S HOME

MR. ROCKFELLOW'S SON AND DAUGHTER TO WED TODAY.

The Mayor-elect Going South for His Health and the Weddings Have Been Arranged to Take Place Before Hand.

Miss Cornelia Rockfellow, daughter of Mayor-elect George W. Rockfellow, of Park avenue, will be married to Fred J. Slack, of this city, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. This evening George A. Rockfellow, son of Mayor-elect Rockfellow, will be wedded to Miss Caroline Potter, of Rahway, at the home of the latter. Both weddings will be private and consist of a simple ceremony.

They were to have been held at a later date, but Mr. Rockfellow is quite ill and it has been decided that he should go south at once. So the ceremonies will be held so that he can be present before his departure. On account of his ill health, they will be private, only the families of the couples being present.

COAL FOR ADMIRAL DEWEY.

Captain George D. Morrison Cables His Wife From Manila.

Mrs. Morrison, of Plainfield avenue, wife of Capt. George D. Morrison, received a cablegram last evening from her husband, stating that he arrived at Manila Monday and that the cargo of coal which he had in charge was on fire.

It will be remembered that Capt. Morrison was engaged last summer by a Philadelphia firm to take several thousand tons of coal to Admiral Dewey. He sailed from the Quaker City in August.

He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Mary Morrison. Mrs. Morrison received no further particulars and she is inclined to believe that her husband and daughter are safe. Mr. Morrison has followed the sea for a number of years and his voyages have always been successful.

AN EVENING OF MUSIC.

Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Doane Entertained a Jolly Company.

Twelve or fifteen music-loving people gathered at the home of Mrs. T. O. Doane, of West Fifth street, last Tuesday, to enjoy themselves in a musical way. The first part of the evening was spent in singing and playing, after which refreshments were served.

Frank Ockefair and Fred Pope rendered several vocal solos, and Stuart Pope and Miss Edith Randolph entertained the audience with piano solos and duets. Selections on the violin were rendered by Arthur Mosher. Messrs. Koff, Sattels and Hyans.

Minerva Temple Elect.

Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, met last Tuesday and elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: P. C., Mrs. E. T. Bowman; M. E. C., Mrs. E. Hallard; M. E. S., Mrs. T. Chamberlin; M. E. J., Mrs. J. B. Higgins; M. of T., Mrs. A. Baker; M. of R. and C., Mrs. E. K. Cox; M. of F., Mrs. A. Loughlin; P. of T., Mrs. J. Bird; G. of O. T., Mrs. Guttman; trustee, eighteen months, Mrs. E. T. Bowman.

Judgment on Mechanics' Lien

The mechanics' lien case of John E. Naylor against Ferdinand O. Smith came up Tuesday before Judge Magie at Somerville for the fifth time, and the plaintiff secured judgment for $42.90, the amount sued for. The ruling of Judge Magie was that one cannot offset claims brought against a mechanics' lien. Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman represented the plaintiff, while Lawyer Swackhamer represented the defendant.

Much Work at Potter's.

The Potter Press Works were kept running Monday on account of the great amount of work on hand. All the men were perfectly agreed as to working inasmuch as they had enjoyed Sunday off. In a few days the works will be shut down for a short time so that an account of stock can be taken.

Champion Peanut Eater.

Frank Jones, one of Plainfield's popular young men, is a great lover of peanuts, and on Christmas day his friends made him a present of four bushels of peanuts which were sent to his house. The gift was greatly appreciated, and the local peanut dealers will have to suffer for awhile.

FIVE YEARS FOR MURDER

MODERATE SENTENCE ADMINISTERED TO WARREN STREETER.

Pleaded Guilty to Killing William Drobney Near Bound Brook Last Fall—Was Advised to Leave Liq or Alone.

New Brunswick, Dec. 28.—Warren K. Streeter and Joseph Spencer were brought to the Courthouse here yesterday from the Somerset County Jail to answer charges of murder. They had been confined in the Somerset jail because the murder was committed so close to the line that it was for a time doubtful in which county it had been committed. It was finally decided that the case belonged in the Middlesex courts. Indictments were found last week. Meanwhile former Representative Alvah Clark had been assigned to defend them in Somerset, and Justice Collins confirmed the appointment for Middlesex.

Streeter, Spencer and William Drobney lived in Somerville; but went to Bound Brook on a spree. On the way home they fought, and Streeter stabbed Drobney three times. The stabbing occurred in Middlesex county, but Drobney dragged himself into Somer et county and died just across the line.

Streeter entered a plea of guilty to manslaughter, and the State accepted it. Spencer was cleared of participation in the stabbing, and a nolle prosequi was entered for him. Mr. Clark asked for leniency owing to the youth of Streeter, who is only nineteen years old. His victim and Spencer were of about the same age. Drink was known to be the cause of the affray, and Justice Collins gave the prisoner a lecture on the evils of drink and sentenced him to five years in State prison.

DID TRAIN STRIKE HIM?

SCOTCH PLAINS MAN FOUND WITH BADLY SHATTERED ARM.

Frank Gotlack Found in Horrible Condition Early Yesterday — Taken to the Hospital Where His Arm was Amputated

William Hurst, night-watchman at the Aluminum Plate and Press Company's works on the corner of North avenue and Berckman street, opened the entrance door to the factory yesterday from the inside and discovered a man lying close to the door, unconscious. His coat was splashed with blood, and the right arm seemed to be broken. Hurst carried him in and when William Dagnall, the engineer, came he recognized the man as Frank Gotlack, of Scotch Plains, a stone mason, about thirty-three years old and having a wife and children.

When Eugene Borst, the foreman, arrived he telephoned to the hospital for an ambulance, and Gotlack was taken to the hospital, Dagnall accompanying him.

When he was examined the physicians found that the bone in the right arm was so badly shattered that the member had to be amputated close to the shoulder. Gotlack was also suffering from the extreme cold and the shock, and his recovery is looked upon as doubtful.

As Gotlack had not recovered consciousness at the time of going to press, nothing has been learned as to how he was hurt. Some think that he was walking on the railroad and was struck by an engine, and crawling along towards the city he got as far as the factory door, when his strength gave out and he sank down exhausted.

DID NOT FIND HEALTH IN COLORADO.

John M. Messerschmidt Succumbed to Lung Trouble at Denver.

Word was received in Plainfield yesterday morning by Charles Messerschmidt, of Washington street, telling him of the death of his brother, John M. Messerschmidt, late of Fairview avenue. Mr. Messerschmidt went to Denver, Col., last December in the hopes that he would recover from lung trouble, but the disease was too far advanced to effect a cure.

Mr. Messerschmidt was about 43 years of age and was born in Plainfield. Since 1876 up to a year ago he was employed by H. B. Claflin & Co., of New York, and was a valued employe. He leaves a wife and child. Mr. Messerschmidt's death occurred Tuesday p. m. and arrangements will be made to bring his body to Plainfield for burial. His family was with him when he died, and in fact were with him while away.

Painting the Hotel Grenada.

Charles Rice and Winfield Scott Chase have just secured the entire contract to paint, paper and decorate the Hotel Grenada, which is now being remodeled. They have already started their work, which will be pushed rapidly.

SANTA, JOLLY AS EVER, REMEMBERED THEM ALL

The Liberal Old Fellow Seen in Several Churches.

HIS GIFTS WERE PLENTY.

MANY SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS SPENT LAST TUESDAY ENJOYABLY.

Kris Kringle's Time Has Been so Taken up the Last Few Days That He Was Unable to Get Around to Some Places Until Tuesday, But When He Arrived He Made Up For His Delay.

That merry old soul—and liberal one, too—Kris Kringle, put in an appearance at several of the local churches Tuesday and made the hearts of the little people beat happy with his multitude of gifts. The following tells where Kris was Tuesday night:

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Christmas entertainment at the Congregational church was largely attended. The exercises began with the singing of a carol, "Good Tidings," by the school, after which the pastor, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, offered prayer. Miss Aimee Emmons then gave a reading, a Christmas story, entitled "Pete," in which humor and pathos were mingled. A very pretty exercise by a number of children from the primary department followed. They sang a dainty little song about the life of Christ, and as they mentioned each place where an event of His life took place, they placed a candle in a dent in the sand. William McKillop gave a violin solo, "Mauria Salon," by Danbe, after which came a costume recitation, "The Twelve Months," by twelve girls, each taller than the last: Marguerite VanZandt, Ethel VanZandt, Jean Miller, Myra Emmons, Maud Emmons, Marion Dwight, Hattie Messersmith, Caroline Fuller, Lulu Fuller, Miss Eva Wilkins, Miss Hattie Winckler and Miss Beade Pound. After another carol, "Beautiful Bells," an entertaining exhibition of magic was given by Charles S. Thomas, of Elizabeth, assisted by Master Harold Thomas and accompanied by the pianist, Mrs. Thomas. Just the table for the members of the primary department and candy and oranges for the school were distributed.

MONROE AVENUE.

The Christmas entertainment here consisted of recitations by Miss Agnes M. Taylor, of New York, and selections on the musical glasses by Charles Wood, also of New York, after which there was a distribution of candy, oranges etc. to the little ones. Prof. Wood used a number of common looking goblets, set in rows on a table, but from them was able to produce wonderful melodies. Miss Taylor, a finished reciter, chose selections both humorous and sad, and was enthusiastically received by her audience.

CRESCENT AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN.

There was a great gathering of Sunday-school scholars at this church last Tuesday. None of the mission schools were invited to meet with the home school, so all who were there belonged to the Crescent Avenue. They were entertained with readings by Mrs. Frank J. Smith, and violin solos by Miss Marguerite Burnett, after which ice cream and cake were served in the church parlors.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

"The Bird's Christmas Carol," a comical Christmas sketch, was given at Grace M. E. church Tuesday night. Those who took part are as follows: Mabel Stevens, John Carney, Beasie Farley, Charles Powell, Laura Woolston, Alice DeMott, Russell Conroy, Kittie Rutledge, Madeline Durhahs, Mabel Garry, Miss May Conroy, Dyckman Winckler, Miss Elisabeth Hoagland and Lottie Benner.

Andrew Wilson took the part of Santa Claus, and distributed gifts to the children. Among the presentations was a handsome library desk to Miss Lunger, of the primary department. The Sunday-school class taught by L. A. Hummer presented their teacher with a gold-headed cane, while Mrs. Powell received an arm chair from her class. Mr. Marsh, the janitor, received a present of a purse of money. These gifts were presented by Superintendent Valiant, after which the pastor, Rev. Mr. Gardner, presented to Mr. Valiant a set of books of American literature from the officers and teachers of the school.

During the evening several recitations were given by Helen Rose, a very small girl from the primary department.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

The Christmas festival at the First M. E. church was held in Vincent

MAKING OF A GOVERNOR

NO DEFINITE ARRANGEMENTS FOR INAUGURATION OF VOORHEES.

Two Receptions to be Held on the Day the Union County Man Takes Office, but No Elaborate Display.

Trenton, December 28.—The State house corridors were deserted yesterday, only three members of the incoming Legislature putting in an appearance. These were Senator Miller, of Salem, and Senator-elect Smith, of Ocean, and Assemblyman Wright, of Burlington.

There was some little gossip at the Statehouse concerning the inauguration of Governor-elect Voorhees. No communication has yet been had with the Governor-elect regarding the inauguration, as he is still confined to his bed with the grip. There is little likelihood of any demonstration in the way of a street parade, as no steps whatever have been taken to arrange for such a display. The local Republicans have done nothing with reference to securing Taylor's Opera House for the ceremonies of swearing in the Governor, and it may be that the oaths will be administered at the State Capitol, although such a thing has rarely been done in recent years. Custodian Bonnell will arrange for the customary receptions at the Statehouse.

The receptions are held by the Governor in the big outer room of the executive suite and take place from 2 to 5 in the afternoon and from 8 to 10 in the evening of Inaugural Day. For these receptions the Statehouse will be appropriately decorated and the Seventh Regiment Band will furnish music. Several counties have expressed a desire to send large delegations to participate in a parade or any other public display, but the time is now almost too short to arrange for anything on an extensive scale.

OFFSET NOT ALLOWED.

JUDGE MAGIE DECIDES IN FAVOR OF PLAINTIFF ON A MECHANICS' LIEN.

It Was in the Case of Naylor Against Smith, and the Defendant Tried to Avert Judgment From Being Taken.

Somerville, December 28.—The Somerset County Court opened yesterday. The only case tried was the case of Naylor against Smith, on mechanics' lien. Under the ruling of the court judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for $42.

The court refused to allow the defendant to offset claims against the plaintiff which had been assigned to him. Mr. Swackhamer, who represented the defendant, argued that the difference between a claim on mechanics' lien and an ordinary claim on contract was that the property on which the work was done was held as security for the payment of the claim, and that in all other respects the proceedings were the same as on ordinary contract, and therefore that claims against the plaintiff which had been assigned to the defendant could be offset against the claim of the plaintiff. That otherwise a builder who was indebted to the owner of the property could ignore the debt which he owed to the owner and compel the owner to pay him every dollar for work done or materials furnished to the building, no matter if he was indebted to the owner in double the amount.

The Judge, however, after considering the matter, decided that he could not allow the offset, and admitted that it was a debatable question and said that he would give the defendant exception to his ruling. The case will probably be taken to the Supreme Court. W. S. Angleman represented the plaintiff.

HER AGE WAS A RIPE ONE.

Four Score and One Years Mrs. Randolph Saw to Her Life.

Mrs. Margaret A. Randolph, widow of Nehemiah J. Randolph, aged 81 years, died last Tuesday at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Stine, 580 West Front street. She was born near New Dorp, S. I., and had been a resident of Plainfield for a great many years. She was a faithful attendant and member of the First Baptist church. She was a woman of stirling qualities and she was held in high esteem by all who knew her. The funeral services will be held next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of Mrs. Stine.

New Series of Stock.

The Plainfield Building and Loan Association have opened their books for a new series. Parties desiring shares should within the next few weeks notify L. E. Barkalew, president; B. Frank Cortell, secretary; W. R. Codington, treasurer, or any of the directors of the said association.

SENT TO STATE PRISON

WESTERFIELD AND CONNETT GO FOR EIGHTEEN MONTHS.

Casey Sentenced for a Year—Taylor and Springer Had Sentence Suspended—Judge Vail Presided—Burglary Charged

Elizabeth, December 28. — Plainfield's boy burglars came before Judge Vail in the Union county court this morning for sentence. All six had pleaded guilty to the charge of burglary and George Kline, colored, the youngest of the gang, has been committed to the Reform School.

Charles Westerfield and Abram Connett, colored, had been before the court for a similar offence. They therefore received the heaviest sentence. They were sentenced to State Prison for eighteen months. Thomas Casey was sent to the same place for a year. John Taylor and Alfred Springer were considered more as tools of their companions than anything else. Sentence was suspended on them. Kline was taken to the Reform School yesterday by Sheriff Kirk.

The Judge in suspending sentence, said that Taylor and Springer would have to furnish $200 bonds for good behavior, or else to go to prison, too.

THE SILK MILL PROJECT.

Paterson Promoters are Meeting With a Favorable Reception Here.

T. B Bullock and W. J. Young, of Paterson, the promoters of the silk mill enterprise, who are spending a few days in town in the effort to interest local capitalists, both large and small, in the project, were seen by a reporter yesterday afternoon and stated that they were meeting with excellent results.

They have succeeded in securing promises from a number of prominent business men who realize that the establishment of a silk mill here will be of commercial advantage. The option on the plant that is idle in Paterson, and which can be secured for a moderate sum to be removed here, will expire in a few days and it will be necessary for a definite answer to be given in a day or two. Messrs. Bullock and Young however, are confident that they will be able to secure the promise of sufficient capital to inaugurate the industry.

Christmas Dance at the Seminary.

The Christmas dance at the Seminary was held in Seminary Hall last Tuesday, some hundred young people participating. The dancing was continued until 11:30 o'clock. Rogers furnished the music. The chaperones were Mrs. J. F. Harman, Mrs. C. L. Case and Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard. The committee in charge consisted of the Misses Ruth Peckham, Elner Strong, Emma Sterling, Ethel Titsworth, Clara Case, Mary Wadsworth, Agnes Strong and Elsie Harman.

Roantree Released and Discharged Once.

Theodore Roantree, of New Market, who, it is said, stabbed George Fiske, of the same place, with a penknife while engaged in a row early last Sunday morning, was arrested last Sunday afternoon at 108 Kinney street, Newark, which is known as a disorderly house.

He was arraigned Monday morning and was later discharged. Roantree is wanted at New Market on a charge of assault with attempt to kill. His whereabouts is now unknown.

Miss Isabel St. John, of Sumsbury, Conn., is visiting Miss Elizabeth Ailis, of West Fifth street.

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Ailis, of Montclair, spent Christmas with J. A. Ailis, of West Fifth street.

S. R. Edwards and family, of La Grande avenue, spent Christmas with relatives in Bayonne.

Miss Sadie Randolph, of West Eighth street, is visiting out-of-town friends for a short time.

Mrs. Newell, of Brooklyn, who has been the guest of Miss Eda Beekman, of West Eighth street, has returned home.

Miss Amy Gertrude Burt, of West Seventh street, has gone to New York to spend a few days with relatives there.

Mrs. Furman and children, who have been visiting at the home of Charles Whital, of East Second street, have returned to their home in Ohio.

Miss J. Louise Jenkins, of West Seventh street, went to New York today to visit Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jenkins, who are spending the winter there.

Miss Marion Henderson, of New York, formerly of Rockview avenue, is spending the Christmas holidays with Miss Cornelia Faber, of Rockview avenue.

Harry Bush, of West Front street, who has been confined to the house with typhoid fever, expects to be able to go out of doors this week if the weather permits.

COURT TO DECIDE IF AWARDS ARE PROPER.

County Boulevard Matter Will Be Reviewed By Judge VanSyckel.

MAY BE APPEALS TO JURY.

SOME PROPERTY OWNERS NOT SATISFIED WITH THE AWARD.

Under the Statute Law There is No Clause Providing for an Appeal by Jury From Condemnation Decision of the Commissioners, But Good Many Think the Court Would Call on a Jury.

Elizabeth, Dec. 28th.—Judge VanSyckel, of the Supreme Court, will next Saturday review the report of the commissioners appointed to condemn lands along the county road for the purpose of widening that thoroughfare to 100 feet, and determine whether or not the awards for damages made by the commissioners should be confirmed.

Several property owners, it is said, have signified their intention of appearing before the court and making an effort to secure an increase in the awards, among them being representatives of the Bronson estate, Mrs. F. L. Pope and the representatives of the Chase heirs. These claim that they have not been awarded a sufficient amount to cover the damages to their property.

It has been stated that the court would probably confirm the report, and then the appealing property owners can carry their claims before a jury. This is said not to be the case, by some persons, who claim that the court will make the final award and that such award is not subject to an appeal.

Ex-Senator F. C. Marsh, one of the commissioners, says that while in the act permitting the condemnation of property for county boulevards, under which the Westfield avenue condemnation acted, there is no clause permitting appeals to juries, he believed that the court would call on a jury to determine the amount of damages done property owners who were not satisfied with the awards made by the commission. The commission had not acted on the assumption that their awards were to be final, but on the contrary had acted with the idea that if the awards did not meet with the approval of the property owners the case could appeal to a jury. It was his belief that under the law the court would decline to affirm awards made by the commission which were objected to by property owners, until the question of damages had been passed on by a jury.

In speaking of the smallness of several awards made by the commission, Senator Marsh explained that while all of the commissioners had not agreed on every figure that had been incorporated in the report, they had agreed that the majority should decide all differences, and that no minority report should be made.

In regard to those cases where nominal awards were made, the commissioners had concluded that the benefits that would accrue to the property through the widening of the avenue would be at least equal to the damages sustained by loss of land, and had therefore made only the nominal award.

Says He Destroyed His Wagon.

Charles Smith, a fourteen-year-old boy, has been arrested and arraigned before Justice Mosher charged by Mark Micilleson, a Jewish peddler, with destroying his peddler's wagon Christmas day. Smith will be tried this afternoon. Both parties live on Cottage place. The peddler says that on Monday Smith deliberately walked into his yard, and commenced to cut and slash the cover of his wagon, until driven away.

Star Tree For Rats Kringle.

The primary department of Trinity Reformed Sunday-school will hold its Christmas festival this afternoon. The intermediate and senior departments will give the entertainment, "General Basil Glaze or the Story of the War" in the evening in the lecture room. There will be 57 young people to take part.

Another Minister to Visit Palestine.

The FARM

Shallow Covering of Manure.

Farm yard manure should be kept as near the surface of the soil as possible. The rain water as it percolates through the soil has a tendency to carry the soluble plant food downward and out of the reach of plants. Consequently an attempt should be made to delay the downward progress of plant food instead of assisting it by plowing the manure too deeply. Then again, nitrification is most active near the surface of the soil. Therefore, manure kept near the surface is under more favorable conditions for having its plant food made available and consequently gives quicker returns.

When a heavy application of manure has been plowed under deeply it is no uncommon thing to see lumps of manure brought to the surface by subsequent plowing, showing that it had never become properly incorporated with the soil. It is quite probable, too, that this deeply buried manure has lost considerable nitrogen through denitrification. Economical manuring consists in obtaining quick returns over as large an area of the farm as possible, and this is accomplished by moderate applications with the limited work which can be performed with the surface soil. Shallow covering of manure also increases the humus of the surface soil. As a result the soil does not bake and crack in dry weather; it absorbs and retains water much more satisfactorily and works up into a fine filth more easily.

Root Pruning and Growth.

Experiments have recently been made to determine how much the roots of young trees should be pruned away before planting. By the Stringfellow method the roots are cut back to only one or two inches in length, at the same time cutting the top back to a mere stump a foot or so high. Another method is to cut about one-half of the roots and limbs off, while a third method consists in leaving the roots wholly unpruned with the limbs cut back one-half. Some time later observations showed that trees planted with no root pruning averaged larger than those with roots cut back. Those planted by the ordinary method of cutting off a little of the limbs proved to grow fully as fast as those trimmed in any other way.

Keeping Apples Sound All Winter.

Take fine dry saw-dust, preferably that made by a circular saw from hard wood, and cover a thick layer on the bottom of the barrel, then place a layer of apples, not close together, and not close to the sides of the barrel. Put saw-dust liberally over and around and so proceed until a bushel and a half or less are packed in the barrel. Keep in a cool place. No bruised or mellow apples will be preserved, but they will not communicate rot to the other apples. This is an easier and quicker way than to wrap each specimen in paper, and the apples would bring fancy prices in the late spring.—Emma Clearwaters in Agriculturist.

What to Feed Hogs.

Hog cholera and other diseases of swine seem to prevail in the fall of the year more than at any other season, and in a majority of cases the disease appears in the pens where corn is used exclusively. Experiments made to determine the value of foods show that the hog increases more rapidly in weight when the food is varied, and that it also gives them of better quality. Corn is an important food in fattening hogs, but when milk, cooked roots, cut clover hay (scalded) and bran are added to the corn the hogs will improve more rapidly and keep in health.

Dry Leaves as a Protection.

If you do not rake up the leaves and lay in a supply of dry earth before winter you will make a mistake. Dry earth is an absorbent and a disinfectant, as well as permitting of easily cleaning the poultry house. If a large supply of leaves are obtained in which the hens can scratch in winter the result will be less liability to disease and more eggs. Leaves on the floor make excellent protection from the cold drafts of air that come from below, and thus assist in keeping the poultry house warm and comfortable.

Nuts for Planting.

Gather the nuts (walnuts, hickory nuts, hazelnuts, pits of peaches, etc.) place in a rough bag and bury in the garden about a foot deep. By the time the frost is well out of the ground in spring the nuts will have burst and the nuts can be placed in a bed especially prepared for them or put where the trees are to stand.

Value of Soil Mulch.

In experiments with barley it has been found that a field harrowed after rolling gave a larger yield than one upon which no work was done after the rolling. The explanation undoubtedly lies in the fact that the harrowed surface acted as a mulch and conserved moisture.

Growing Corn for the Cob.

One of the minor exhibits of interest at the Omaha fair was a sample of field corn with a very large cob grown for the manufacture of cob pipes.

Condiment for Hogs.

Once a week give the hogs a supply of wood ashes to which have been added a little sulphur and salt.

The FARM

Crossing Chickens.

When crossing breeds it can be done so as to retain the color of the breeds used without a radical change, and as the same time secure size, prolificacy and table qualities. If the Partridge Cochin hen be crossed with a Brown Leghorn cock, a most magnificent bird will be the result, and the size will be combined with good laying qualities in the offspring. While the plumage will be elegant. The hens from the Leghorn-Cochin cross may, the next season, be mated with a Black Breasted Red game cock and a fowl will be produced that possesses good size, early laying, prolificacy, and table qualities equal to any cross known. With the legs yellow and the plumage uniform in the whole flock, the Game, Leghorn and Cochin mentioned being nearly alike. The cross will also make a very hardy fowl, while the chicks will equal any other as broilers. Taking the cross as a whole, it is one of the best that can be made.

Destroying Undesirable Trees.

A writer in the Country Gentleman says: For 25 years I have applied common fine salt to every stump of tree or shrub as soon as cut that I wish to destroy, without a failure. My first experience was with ailantus and lilac; next was twelve acres of land covered with a second growth of all the varieties of the northern oak and hickory, fine maple, white birch and mountain willow, using twelve barrels of salt. I have also applied it to the stumps of Lombard poplar, which is very tenacious of life, and I have not a failure to report. I apply about one-half teaspoonful to a small shrub and a half peck on a stump measuring two feet in diameter, varying according to size. I recommend late summer or early fall as the best season for cutting and salting, for the reason that the downward flow of sap at that season will carry the dissolved salt which is poison to all tree growth, to the extremity of the out-reaching roots.

A Railroad Educator.

The Seaboard Air Line railroad proposes to send a large number of young men from stations along their line to northern points, securing them positions on farms where they can be given practical instructions in farming, dairying, fruit culture and poultry raising. Four young men are to be sent from each station, placed on farms for two years, working with other employees, and receive for all sum, say $4 a month, with board and washing. They are to do what work they can, but are to study northern methods very carefully, so as to teach southern farmers when they return. Incidentally they are to distribute printed matter about the Seaboard location, and try and induce people to come down there as settlers. This plan, it is thought, will afford better practical instruction in farming than by going to an agricultural college, and without laying any money be sides.—Country Gentleman.

Cutting or Shredding Fodder.

As a general rule it is not considered profitable to cut first class hay for mature animals. It is very coarse, chaffing may be beneficial. In one instance Indiana station found that steers made better gains on cut than on uncut clover hay. For young stock especially, cutting is desirable, as they eat it more freely. Prof. Henry of the Wisconsin station thinks that should be good feed cutter on every dairy farm and that all corn stalks should be put through the machine. Long corn stalks are a nuisance in the feeding manger and are worthless for bedding. Many farmers find difficulty in feeding cut corn fodder, as the cows even refuse to eat it. This is often due to overfeeding or endeavoring to have the cows live on a limited variety. Keep the mangers clean and feed the cut fodder with care, and usually very little will be left, with the exception of the very coarsest portions.

Burr Knapp's Farm Furrows.

Thin field; scanty yield.

Economy is not cent wisdom and dollar folly.

Congress set to work to reform the State. He found that Indiana secured about $2,500,000 a year in taxes from railroads, while Michigan, with a larger railway mileage, had been getting about $70,000 from the same source. Pingree had a bill introduced in the legislature giving the various counties in the State the power of local taxation over the railroads and allowing them to assess railroad property the same as other property and collect taxes from the corporations independently. The railroads opposed this, but the people approved, and the result was the passage of a compromise bill increasing the taxation on gross earnings and doubling the amount of taxes received. But this was not satisfactory to Pingree, and in the last campaign he made his fight chiefly in favor of a further increase.

The general impression is that Pingree is a demagogue. Those who know him do not believe this. He is a man of high ideals and exalted principles. His reforms have always succeeded. None of them have been chimeras. In bringing them about he has used the methods of practical politicians and has proved himself their master. He has a wonderful knowledge of human nature and he has used it to bring about the ends he has sought.

In every way he has shown himself the master politician of the age. Quay does not own Pennsylvania as thoroughly as Pingree owns Michigan. Judging by results, he is the greatest boss of all.

THE KEELY MOTOR BUBBLE.

It Was One of the Most Successful Gold Bricks in the History of Modern Times.

With the death of John E. W. Keely probably ends the career of one of the most remarkable impostures that have ever obtained credence with men reputed, in other respects, to possess ordinary intelligence. Keely's claims rested entirely upon his own audacious assertions as to what he could do if the money to do it with were only given him, and to exhibitions of an apparatus which he would neither permit to be examined by experts nor explain himself. His was a confidence game, pure and simple, and out of it he made a comfortable living to the very last, in spite of his repeated failures to fulfill his promises to his dupes.

Keely's pretended discovery was that of a method of disintegrating water, by means of musical vibrations, into its component molecules, and of thus developing a vapor of an elastic ity and expansiveness which far exceeded those of steam. In fact, his excuse for not demonstrating practically the availability of his new motive power, was its excessive intensity which defied the control of ordinary machinery, and needed engines of unusual strength to confine it within bounds. The same reason was given for not permitting any one but himself to manipulate his apparatus, and to those investigators who warned that they risked their lives if they meddled with it except under his supervision.

That Keely had a motive power of some kind, which he employed for exhibition purposes, is undeniable; and whether it was compressed air or gas liberated by chemical decomposition, or something else of that kind, it is, at present, impossible to say positively; but that it was nothing of the kind he asserted it to be, is none the less certain. The production of electricity is from one step to another; each step being but little in advance of the preceding one. Nothing approaching the disintegration of water by mechanical means, much less by musical vibrations, has yet been even hinted at by science. If such a known facts render it highly improbable. Indeed, were water in this condition of instability we should all be living over a volcano, the Croton reservoir would be as dangerous as a nitro-glycerine magazine, and the ocean would be a huge bombshell.

Keely's success in imposing upon men of the class that he did, shows of how little avail are business education and experience in aiding to judge of matters of physics and mechanics. If Keely's dupes had possessed only a moderate knowledge of the principles underlying his pretended discovery, they would have seen at once that his claims were absurd. But as all cats are gray in the dark, so to an ignorant mind all inventions are equally meritorious until they are proved to be the contrary. In respect to the victims of the Keely motor are like those of the Marine Salts Company, which was to extract gold from sea water, of the Electric Sugar patent, of Paine's water gas, and of dozens of similar schemes, which have proved highly profitable to their promoters, and of no use to anybody besides.—New York Sun.

HAZEY S. PINGREE.

An Uncomplimentary Compliment.

A young Dane who is trying to master the English language called on Senator Shedman the other evening why every one laughed when he made what he thought was a complimentary remark. The question of introducing stringed instruments into church choirs was under discussion, and his opinion was asked.

Here is what occured, in his own language:

"I have enthusiasm. I say by all means let us have the guitar, the harp, the lyre—and here a polite compliment seemed to occur to me, and I add, turning toward the minister—"though we have already a most accomplished lyre in the pulpit."

"Everybody in the house joined in a positive roar of laughter, and the minister laughed more than any one else. I laughed, too; I like to be agreeable; though there was a humor I certainly missed. Will you kindly tell me what is amusing in comparing a minister to that beautiful stringed instrument, a lyre?"—Chicago Times Herald.

A Town Built of Zinc.

"A City of Zinc" is the name which may appropriately be given to the mushroom city of Portugese East Africa, Beira. All the houses, all the hotels and public buildings, barracks and warehouses, are built of zinc. Thousands of tons of zinc from France, England and America supplied the material. The unpleasant impression produced by the aspect of this town is heightened by the thought that men have to dwell in these houses under a tropical heat. Everything in this strange city is under the dominion of the metal. Even when a person falls ill he is carried on a zinc stretcher to a hospital, which is also, of course, made of zinc. And if he dies he is laid to rest in a zinc coffin.

MICHIGAN'S "BOSS."

HE PLAYS A HAND WHICH NEITHER QUAY NOR PLATT CAN "CALL."

Pingree Has a Wonderful Knowledge of Human Nature and Uses It for the Accomplishment of the End He Desires To Gain.

Hazen S. Pingree, Governor of Michigan, is the greatest political boss that the country has seen, says the Chicago Times-Herald.

To-day he is the absolute master of Michigan. His will is law, and the people not only follow him wherever he leads, but they are proud of it. There is, to be sure, a difference in the methods he employs. Pingree is honest. One of the chief faults his enemies find with him is that he is incorruptible. This is an unusual charge to make against a boss. But Pingree is an unusual boss.

The last election held in Michigan illustrates the control which Pingree has over Michigan politics. The man Pingree was a candidate for Governor. He won the nomination after the hardest kind of fight. Then he ran 30,000 or more ahead of his ticket. He named most of the Republican legislative candidates. Never has there been such a case of fossism as there was in the Detroit legislative districts. Pingree sent down to the convention a printed list of the men who were to be nominated. He admitted it and gloried in it. The opposition called the nominees "D. K'd ten," and the "branded slaves." They were held up to ridicule as being owned by Pingree. The nominees did not resent it. They went on the stump and publicly announced that if they were elected they would have no higher ambition than to do exactly what Pingree advised them to do. The result was that they ran away ahead of their ticket.

Can Croker, Quay or Platt show any parallel to that?

Pingree has his own methods. He is original. In the first place, he came into politics by accident. Before his nomination as Mayor of Detroit in 1889 he did not know the first thing about politics. He was a Republican because he was born in Maine. Beginning life as a journeyman shoemaker, he had become proprietor of a shoe factory, and his political duties consisted in sending a check each year to the campaign committee.

Pingree was nominated for Mayor in 1889 because Cleveland had carried the city a year before by nine thousand majority and no one else wanted what was considered the empty honor. So soon as Pingree realized that he became angry and announced that he would be elected. And he was—by three thousand majority—after a hard fight, in which he pledged himself to redeem the city from corporation rule if elected. Workingmen supported him in spite of the fact that he was a millionaire. During the campaign he showed his genius for organization and knowledge of the wishes of the people. Elected, he fulfilled his pledges. He made the street railway companies reduce their fares to three cents, purchased the streets, had the gas rates cut in half, taxed big corporations twice as much as they had paid before, and indeed reformed so much that when he came up for nomination again the politicians were against him. But the people were with him, and he won. Four times in succession he was elected Mayor of Detroit, and each time in spite of the politicians and the corporations. Each time his majority was increased.

Then he went into his fight for Governorship, promising that if elected he would do for the State what he had done for the city. Opposed to him were all the veteran politicians, like Senator McMillan, Alger, Bliss, Burrows and Governor Winans. But he beat them all and got the nomination. Election as Governor followed as a matter of course. McKinley carried Michigan by 56,000 plurality. Pingree's plurality was 83,000.

Congress set to work to reform the State. He found that Indiana secured about $2,500,000 a year in taxes from railroads, while Michigan, with a larger railway mileage, had been getting about $70,000 from the same source. Pingree had a bill introduced in the legislature giving the various counties in the State the power of local taxation over the railroads and allowing them to assess railroad property the same as other property and collect taxes from the corporations independently. The railroads opposed this, but the people approved, and the result was the passage of a compromise bill increasing the taxation on gross earnings and doubling the amount of taxes received. But this was not satisfactory to Pingree, and in the last campaign he made his fight chiefly in favor of a further increase.

The general impression is that Pingree is a demagogue. Those who know him do not believe this. He is a man of high ideals and exalted principles. His reforms have always succeeded. None of them have been chimeras. In bringing them about he has used the methods of practical politicians and has proved himself their master. He has a wonderful knowledge of human nature and he has used it to bring about the ends he has sought.

In every way he has shown himself the master politician of the age. Quay does not own Pennsylvania as thoroughly as Pingree owns Michigan. Judging by results, he is the greatest boss of all.

GHOST SENSATIONS.

A PHYSICIAN WHO DIED AND THEN CAME TO LIFE AGAIN.

Features of the Spook State as He Described His Experiences—The Old Body Seen From the Viewpoint of the New.

"Speaking of strange experiences," said the professor as the party sat chatting over their after dinner coffee, "if you care to hear it, I will tell you how it seems to die. My uncle, Dr. J. S. Long, one of the prominent physicians of St. Louis, told me years ago. This incident happened to one Dr. Warren, a physician of Columbus, Ga., about twenty years ago. I will give you the facts as they were related to me by one of the members of the Society for Psychical Research. Dr. Warren, when in full possession of his faculties, appeared to come to the moment of death in the last stage of typhus fever. Before the final lapse into unconsciousness he discussed with his friends the question of immortality. His voice failed and his strength weakened, and, as a last effort, he stiffened his legs. He lay for hours as dead, the church bells being rung and the death needle was thrust into various parts of his body from the feet to the hips without having any effect. He was pulseless for a long time and for nearly half an hour he appeared absolutely dead. While his body was thus lifeless in appearance his soul was disengaging itself from its earthly tabernacle. This is the account he gave of his sensations:

"I woke up out of unconsciousness into a state of conscious existence and discovered that the soul was in the body, but not of it. While I was yet out of my body, as I beheld the wonders of my bodily anatomy, intimately interwoven with which, even those for tissue, was I, the living soul of that dead body. I learned that the epiderme was the outside boundary of the ultimate tissues, so to speak, of the soul. I realized my condition, and reasoned calmly thus; I have died, as men term death, and yet I am as much a man as ever. I am about to get out of the body. I watched the interesting process of the separation of soul and body.

"By some power, apparently my own, the ego was rocked to and fro latterly, as a cradle is rocked, by which process its connection with the tissues of the body was broken up. After a little time the latteral motion ceased, and along the soles of the feet, together with the toes, tingling rapidly to the heels, I felt and heard as it seemed, the snapping of innumerable small cords. When this was accomplished, I began slowly to retreat from the feet toward the head, as a right-of-way retreats. I noticed how reaching the hips and saying to myself, "Now there is no life below the hips." I can recall no memory of passing through the abdomen or chest, but recollect distinctly when my whole self was collected in the head, when I reflected thus: I am all in the head now, and I shall soon be free. I passed around the brain as if I were hollow, compressing it and its membranes slightly on all sides toward the centre, and peered out between the sutures of the skull, emerging like the flattened edges of a bag of membranes. I recollect distinctly how I appeared to myself something like a jellyfish as regards color and form. As I emerged from the head I floated up and down, and laterly like a soap bubble attached to the bowl of a pipe, until I at last broke loose from the body and fell lightly to the floor, where I slowly rose and expanded into the full stature of a man. I seemed to be translucent of a bluish cast.

"I fled toward the partially opened door, but upon reaching the door I turned and faced the company. As I did so my left elbow came in contact with the arm of one of two gentlemen standing in the door. To my surprise, his arm passed through mine without apparent resistance, the severed parts closing in behind mine as the two ulnas united. I looked quickly up at his face to see if he had noticed the contact, but he gave me no sign—only stood and gazed toward the couch I had just left. I directed my gaze in the direction of his, and saw my own dead body.

"I saw a number of persons sitting and standing about the body, and particularly noticed two women, apparently kneeling by my left side, and I knew that one was my wife, but since learned that they were my wife and sister, but I had no conception of individuality. Wife, sister and friend were all as one to me. I did not remember my condition of relationship; at least, I did not think of any. I could distinguish sex but nothing more. Not one lifted her eyes from my body.

"I turned and passed out at the open door, inclining my head and watching where I set my feet as I stepped onto the porch. I crossed the porch, descended the steps, walked down the path and into the street. There I stopped and looked about me. I never saw that street more distinctly than I saw it then. It was not of the redness of the soil, and the washes the rain had made. I took a rather pathetic look about me, like one who is about to leave his home for a long time. Then I discovered that I had become largely conscious of earth life, and congratulated myself thereupon. I was somewhat smaller in the body than I just liked to be, but in the next life, I thought, I am to be as I desired. My clothes, I noticed, had accommodated themselves to my increased stature, and I fell to wondering where they came from and how they got onto me so quickly and without my knowledge. I examined the fabric, and judged it to be some kind of Scotch material—a good suit, I thought, but not handsome; still, neat and good enough. The coat fits loosely, too, and that is well for summer. 'How well I feel,' I thought. 'Only a few minutes ago I was horribly sick and distressed. Then came that change called death, which I have so much dreaded. It is past now, and here am I, still a man, alive and thinking—yes, thinking as clearly as ever, and how well I feel.'

"In the exuberance of my joy at the thought that I would never be sick again, I danced in high glee. I then noticed that I could see the back of my coat with the eyes of my old body, while my spiritual eyes were looking forward. I discovered that a swift but pleasant rate of speed until I arrived on a narrow but well-built roadway inclined upward at an angle of 25 degrees. It was about as far above the treetops as it was above the clouds. The roadway seemed to have no supports, but was built of silky quartz and white sand. Feeling very lonely I looked for a companion, and as a man dies every twenty seconds I thought I ought not to have long to wait before some one would travel my way. But I could see no one. At last when I was beginning to feel miserable, a face full of ineffable love and tenderness appeared to me. Right in front of me I saw three prodigious rocks blocking the road. A voice spoke to me from a thunder cloud that hung low down to the eternal world; once you pass them you can no more return to the body." There were four entrances, one very dark; the other three led into a cool, quiet and beautiful country. I decided to go in, but when I reached the first one of the rock I was suddenly stopped. I became unconscious again and when I awoke I was lying in my bed. I awoke to consciousness and soon recovered.'

"This narrative was written out by the doctor right after the thing occurred. He told the story to those at the bedside as soon as he revived. The doctor who attended him said that the breath was entirely extinct as far as could be observed and every symptom marking the patient as dead was present."—New York Sun.

A BLOW AT WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

An Editor's Opinion of It's Defeat in the State of Washington.

An editorial in the Portland Oregonian has this to say in relation to the defeat of the woman suffrage amendment in the state of Washington

"The woman suffrage amendment was buried in the same grave with the single-tax proposition by the voters of Washington. Political suffrage for women is a purely dynamic question and it is dying because it is without excuse for further existence. The real wrongs of women which existed when Lucy Stone began her agitation in 1847 have mostly been redressed by legislation. To-day every practical principle which is at the outset is enjoyed by women, save full suffrage, and every legal right sought by Lucy Stone has been granted to women. They are even treated with partiality by the laws, compared with men. Their individuality is not lost in marriage, as it was when Mrs. Stanton, who is now over 80, was a young girl. Every avenue of activity is open to them; they are as free as men to earn their living in any way they please. The conjugal, parental and property rights of women have been completely established by the political action of men without the aid of woman suffrage, simply because the vast mass of influential women and public opinion thought that the best way. The present situation is wholly different from that of forty years ago, when "woman's rights" was a genuine cause, because there were genuine woman's wrongs to be righted and legal disabilities to be removed. The agitation and organized effort made by women in those years go had much to do with the recognition and redress of these wrongs, legal disabilities and inequalities; but with the accomplishment of these reforms the cause of woman suffrage has made no real progress. The political revival in Kansas, Colorado and Idaho, was but the outgrowth of the temporary socialistic spirit that prevails in those states.

"The lack of the ballot surely robs a woman of no rights of life, liberty or property. The reason why woman suffrage is not favored by the mass of women or the mass of men is because it is a barren ideality. It rights no wrongs. It corrects no disability. Women to-day have rights that the ballot in the civil and social rights exercised by men. As a natural right suffrage belongs to neither man nor woman, for the ballot is only the child of an artificial social order to be granted or withheld as a matter of social and political expediency. The mere whim of a few women to vote is of no more consequence to the state than the mere whim of a few women to enlist in the regular army. That Bull Pitcher served her wounded husband's cause at Monmouth is not an argument for the expediency of enlisting women as artillerymen.

Alarming.

Doctor—Your wife, sir, is suffering from general functional derangement.

Mr. Parvenu—I knew it. Maybe she'll give me credit with knowing a few things after a while. I told her to quit gadding around to all these swell functions, or she'd be sick. Now she's deranged. Is she liable to be violent, doc?—Detroit Free Press.

CHEERFUL.

There's many a trouble
Would burst like a bubble,
And into the waters of Lethe depart,
Did we not rehearse it,
And tenderly nurse it,
And give it a permanent place in the heart.

There's many a sorrow
Would vanish to-morrow
Were we not unwilling to furnish it wings;
So, sadly intruding
And quietly brooding,
It hatches out all sorts of horrible things.

Resolved to be merry,
All worry to ferry,
Across the famed waters that bid us forget;
And no longer fearful,
But happy and cheerful,
We feel life has much that's worth living for yet.

Georgiana C. Clark.

HER HUSBAND.

We were dining at the Savoy in London, and I was staring about me at the beautiful Englishwomen in the evening dress which is so strange to American eyes in a public restaurant. It was a gay scene and I enjoyed its full flavor.

I liked London. I had been there exactly three hours, but the peculiar atmosphere of the place, the Embankment with the strings of barges on the little, slow river, the great Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square—with its lions, the cabs—were all old friends. Like everybody else in America, I was saturated with English literature, and as most of us need to have a thing described to us before we can see it though it be before our eyes, I really felt that I knew London better than New York. I could read more about it than those who get opposite me smiled now and then in vast and beautiful content. He had told stories of Australia, where he had been for three years. He had had important boat race in San Francisco and had come home that way—for England was familiar to him, except that he knew of him, except that he was brown of skin, deep of chest, and with honest eye and a good laugh. One can't dislike a man with a real laugh. He had great tales of riding in Australia of the red dust and the gold country, of the kinds and the conditions. Evidently he had felt the tragedy as well as the comedy of his life. He was a likable chap and I wished I knew more of him than that his name was Gordon.

We left the table presently and strolled down towards the Embankment with our cigars. It was the end of night in which a man wants to confide in something. I didn't know much, but I felt like telling it. Perhaps I was hunting a leader when I said, "Gordon, I'm in trouble and as much as you do should have left it."

The answer I expected was that he had gone out to make money; and I had a tale of my own which hung on money. But he grew suddenly grave.

"I went to Australia for the same reason nine men out of ten do anything—a woman."

I waited a minute for something more, and then I could think of nothing more original than the old saw about a woman being at the bottom of everything.

"Certainly she was at the bottom of my going to Australia. I loved her too much to stay."

"Why married?" I asked.

"She was—and to a confounded rake, a chap who ought to have been horse whipped all over England. He drank, he raced, he gambled, he led her the devil of a life."

"That must have hurt."

"But not half as much as it hurt her."

"Do you think she loved you?"

"I know she did. That was the thing which finally gave me the courage to go away. There hasn't been a minute in these three years that I haven't known it, and it has made my life possible. If I hadn't known that she was true to me in the days of my believing in me, trusting me, loving me, I'd have lost my head many's the time."

"And now?" asked I.

"Now I am going to see her again. She will be on the train from Paris which will come over that bridge these in just one little half hour. I haven't seen her for three years."

"I suppose her husband has died?" I ventured.

"No." He spoke with sternness.

"But—"

"There are no buts about it. We are going to pretend that drunken wretch is dead, and begin our lives all over again. We are going to take a yacht and poke its nose into every corner of the globe. I am going to take her out to Australia and show her some of those places where I suffered and where the thought of her kept me alive."

"Do you think that is just fair to her? She may love you enough, but—"

"She's willing to risk life with me, and I am willing to risk it, although there was a time when I wasn't. When two people love each other as much as she and I do it overcomes everything."

I had liked the man so much that I hated to see him so wrong, and I made a final plea.

"But her husband? The man whose lawful wife she promised to be?"

He gave me a heavy grasp on the arm and burst into his happy, boyish laugh.

"But, man, I'm her husband! She's my wife!"—Robert McDonald in Munsey's.

HOW INDIANS FARE.

DR. PARKHURST WOULD RATHER BE A MALAY.

Hon. T. J. Morgan, Ex-Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Tells How Much Worse Off the Doctor Would Be If He Were a Yellow Subject of Spain.

Dr. Parkhurst of New York recently preached a sermon in which he said: "I would rather be a Malay subject to Spain than an American Indian subject to the Indian Bureau. So long as it is an understood thing that office is spoils we may well pray to be delivered from the responsibility of governing dependencies."

Hon. T. J. Morgan wrote the Tribune in defense of the Government's care of the Indians as follows:

By "Malay" I suppose is meant any inhabitant of the Philippine Islands, and I assume that Dr. Parkhurst means by his statement to institute a comparison between Spain's treatment of the Philippines and our treatment of the Indians. I do not raise the question, Would Dr. Parkhurst rather be a "Malay" or an "Indian"? as I do not suppose that is pertinent. Let me glance then for a moment at what seems to me a fair statement as to the difference in the Spanish method of dealing with the Philippines and our method of dealing with the Indians.

First—Spain has derived from the Philippine Islands large revenues by a system of taxation which has borne very heavily upon the inhabitants. She has sought to force from them the largest possible amount of money, and has spent upon them for their own benefit a mere pittance.

We have never regarded the Indians as subjects of taxation or sources of revenue. On the other hand, we have treated them as wards and have bestowed upon them as gratuities large sums of money. When we have taken their land it has been by agreement, and we have paid them for it large sums of money in the aggregate. A large part of the present expense of the Indian Bureau is incurred in the payment to them of stated annual sums in fulfilment of treaty stipulations.

Let me give one single illustration. The Osage Indians, now living in Indian Territory, a remnant now of about fifteen hundred people, hold in common a large reservation on which they live, which they have in the most part comfortable homes, extensive farms, stocked with cattle and horses and supplied with a fair amount of agricultural implements. From this land alone it would be possible for them to derive a comfortable subsistence; with proper industry no Indian would suffer want. But in addition to this landed estate—in the use of which they are protected by the Government—there is to their credit in the Treasury of the United States $8,000,000, which the Government pays them in cash every three months the sum of $100,000. Besides this, the Government maintains for them large well-equipped boarding schools. A good many white men have thought it well to go among these Indians, marry their daughters and identify themselves with the tribe in order to share in their wealth. If an instance similar to this can be pointed out by Dr. Parkhurst in Spain's treatment of the Malays, I should be exceedingly interested in reading it.

Second—The five so-called civilized tribes—Cherokees, Creeks, Choctaws Chickasaws and Seminoles—in the Indian Territory have for many years maintained their position as nations, each tribe having its own autonomy, its landed estate, its system of legislation, administration, courts and schools under the protectorate of the United States. The Government is seeking through the Dawes Commission to prevail upon these people to surrender their autonomy and identify themselves with the people of the United States as citizens. I do not know of any similar instance of absolute self-government among the Malays under Spanish protection. If there is such will Dr. Parkhurst kindly indicate it?

Third—Any and every Indian has the privilege of separating from the tribe, assuming civilized habits, accepting allotments of land and becoming a citizen of the United States, with the full enjoyment of all ordinary privileges of citizenship and with some special safeguards and exemptions which his white fellow-citizens do not enjoy.

Fourth—The United States, through the Indian Bureau, is maintaining among the Indians of this country a system of public boarding-schools at a cost of about $3,000,000 annually, in which there are now enrolled no less than twenty-four thousand Indian pupils, who are fed, clothed, instructed and nursed when sick at the expense of the United States. From the best information that I have been able to obtain, Spain has adopted no such scheme of education for the Malays under her control, and I had supposed that the outlook for the Indian boy and girl who can receive free of cost the advantages offered in these great Government schools, where they receive not only a common English education but an industrial training, and where there is open to them on leaving the school the choice of occupation and of residence anywhere in the United States, was possibly superior to that of the Malay under Spanish rule. Will Dr. Parkhurst kindly correct me if I am mistaken?

Fifth—It is commonly understood and I had supposed it was correct that the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands have been plundered and oppressed by the so-called religious orders to a very extreme degree, and that there is practically no such thing among them as religious liberty. On the other hand, the Indian Bureau does not seek to impose upon the Indians any form of religion, but gives them the utmost freedom of action in religious matters, and offers every facility to any and all religious denominations for the prosecution among them of missionary work.

For these and for other reasons which I might mention, I confess that for myself I should rather be an Indian under the Indian Bureau than a Malay subject to Spain.

THE SOUTH'S COTTON PROBLEM.

A New Theory to Account for the Falling Off in Cotton Growing Acreage.

Along with the question of the identity of the man who assaulted William Patterson, with the controversy over the relative merits of city and country life and the discussion whether married men live on the average longer than single men, we only imagine that it is longer, is another familiar subject of dispute not yet settled—why the cotton acreage of the South keeps constantly increasing and why the agriculturists of that region do not become more prosperous. The cotton acreage in the South has steadily been increasing for a good many years; the selling value of cotton has been steadily going down. As the acreage has been enlarged the selling price of cotton has decreased, with the result that though the gross value of the American cotton crop does not vary radically from year to year, the ratio of the expenses involved in its production, the cost of labor, machinery, land interest, is steadily on the increase. Now there comes forward a man with a new theory to explain the matter. He hails from the heart of the cotton district of Georgia, the chief cotton-producing State till Texas by a narrow margin took precedence. His theory is that the reason why the price of cotton is going down and the cotton acreage is increasing is that each year that a larger number of colored men and a smaller number of white men are engaged as principals in cotton culture. He says that in all the southern states negroes are buying farm lands and they are producing cotton at a cost below that at which the white man can produce it. Their rapid strides forward in cotton culture have done more than anything else to double the cotton output and reduce the price in the last few years. They have driven the price down.

Under the direction of the Department of Agriculture there were made by census enumerators in the territory of colored inhabitants of the cotton belt. The investigation was conducted in co-operation with the Agricultural College of Alabama. It was shown by them that the average cotton crop of a negro laborer in the cotton fields amounted to three-quarters of a pound of bacon, less than half a pound of flour, half a pound of molasses, and one pound of cornmeal, and that as a result of their modes of subsistence and the ways in which the labor of colored men in the cotton belt was of such small material value as seriously to embarrass and threaten the work of the white farmers—when ever the colored men have control of the land. This theory was brought up for discussion at a recent convention at Macon, Ga., and considerable support was given to this view of the case.

BILL NYE'S BIG HIT.

The Audience Was Full of Emotion and Appreciation.

The following is one of James Whitcomb Riley's stories of his former lecturing partner, Bill Nye:

Nye's opening of their joint season; they had both been rusticating during the vacation and were both brown as berries. Nye looked much like an Othello in his sunburned make-up, and Riley suggested to him the application of some "liquid white," a cosmetic much effected by the gentler sex of the profession.

Nye sent for the preparation, and never having used anything of the kind before, he filled the palm of his hand with it and carelessly smeared it over his countenance. There was no mirror in this very primitive dressing room, and Riley was beautifying himself on the other side of the stage.

The "liquid white" dries out somewhat like whitewash, and when Nye appeared before the audience he was a sight to behold. His head looked like a frosted top piece on a wedding cake; his face, white as the driven snow, was expressionless and blank. The audience shrieked, and when he made his application of some "liquid white," a cosmetic much effected by the gentler sex of the profession.

Nye went for the preparation, and never having used anything of the kind before, he filled the palm of his hand with it and carelessly smeared it over his countenance. There was no mirror in this very primitive dressing room, and Riley was beautifying him self

No Work for Arbitrators.

In theory the existence of a State Board of Arbitration is an excellent thing—one aiming to prevent labor troubles, but in practice all the good it does is to provide a number of nice jobs for politicians that costs the taxpayers a little over $6 000 a year. That fact was brought out in the annual report of the Board, which was made public yesterday. It was not the fault of the members of the Board, however, that their services were not of more value to the commonwealth.

The summary of the Board's work for the year shows that not a single strike was arbitrated. In most instances the offers of the Board to act as an arbitration body were either ignored or declined. In the few cases where there was an expressed willingness to accept the Board's services, the response came from only one side, and it therefore became useless to interfere.

The report of the State arbitrators contains some very sensible comment on the bad feeling that strikes engender and the suggestion is made that the board's services would be much more valuable to all concerned if invoked before strikes actually occur. The experience of the board is stated to be that where one controversy or dispute can be settled after several days of relations, twenty could be settled if taken in hand before the rupture comes.

This condition of affairs has led the members of the Board, in their report, to refer passively to the idea of compulsory arbitration in the effort to arrive at some plan whereby the usefulness of the Board will be more marked than last year's record shows. As gently as possible they suggest to the incoming Legislature the necessity of bringing about compulsory arbitration.

It hardly seems possible that compulsory arbitration is the proper thing, because to make it efficient and bring about the ends that fair arbitration aspires to, it would be needed to have a law compelling both sides to accept the decision of the Board after it has been arrived at in a thorough probing of the trouble from all sides. The millionaire is too far off to think of either employer or employees bowing unreservedly to the decision of State officials in such a matter. And to pass a law attempting to compel either side to abide by the decision of the Board, even though such a decision was arrived at in an eminently fair and impartial manner, would be a rank invasion of personal liberty.

How to Advance a City.

In discussing the advantages of obtaining largely diversified industries as possible, no matter how small each particular line may be, as aiding to contribute to the general commercial improvement and advantages of its city, the Paterson Press expresses some opinions that apply as well to Plainfield or any other town that is in the line of progress. The remarks of our Paterson contemporary are especially apt at the present time, in view of the project of a new silk mill for this city. The Press says:

A few hundred hands more or less will not make or break a city of this size. But when it is recalled how many ways a few men and additional dollars stimulate business and broaden the scope of the city the foolishness of that indifference which turns away from opportunities is apparent. We can get along with the manufacture of silk and iron, perhaps, but every new factory out of these lines would help to diversify our industries and lessen the periodical slumps that are inevitable in those towns whose manufactures are limited and which are prosperous only when the market for their particular lines is good. Every new factory, however small, stiffens the value of real estate and thus benefits every holder of such property. Every new factory circulates other moneys. Every new factory tends to create new demands and thus to plant by its side sooner or later another concern that will supply those demands—a fact illustrated by those enterprises here which have been brought into existence by the weaving and throwing of silk and would not be here but for them. But the benefits of diversified industries are too apparent to need argument. What we need here is a revival of civic interest. The people in general complain of bad features of the municipal government, the selfseekers complain of indifference in the schools, the Board of Trade complains of the differences in our industrial affairs, and every one of these evils is the result of a civic lethargy that must be shaken off if we hope to remain abreast of our communities in industries, education and municipal government. These are days of sharp competition, not only between individuals, but communities, and the law of the survival of the fittest applies to them. The town that turns a cold shoulder on industrial chances in these times helps some other town and stunts its own growth for the live town's benefit.

The Trolley Ordinance.

The Common Council will meet this evening to give a hearing on the application of the Plainfield Street Railway Company for a franchise to extend their lines to the eastern limits of the city. The subject of this franchise has been thoroughly discussed and its various points, good and bad, —as determined by the terms inculcated in the ordinance only waiting the final action of the Council and the signature to become a law—have been exploited sufficiently to acquaint every citizen with city's position in the matter.

As we have said before, the only question involved in this franchise is one of terms, as it is readily understood on all sides that Plainfield is anxious for trolley extensions in every direction. And the principal agitation as to terms is the length of time the franchise is to run. The Council has framed the ordinance to give the street railway company ninety-nine years' use of its streets. A great many citizens, however, are opposed to a franchise running for such a period.

It seems that the Council is determined to face this opposition by passing the ordinance as now constituted, and we suppose that it is best for the people to look at it philosophically and accept the bargain as one, perhaps not as good as might be made by a little more delay, but much better than any other municipality has received of the same class.

In meting out punishment to Moore, the worker of the badger game, Recorder Goff, of New York, has destroyed pretty near all the chances of the District Attorney's office to convict his wife, who is accused of being his accomplice in the dirty work. The Recorder sentenced the convicted man to nineteen years in State Prison. In the event of a conviction on the second trial of the woman it is reasonable to think that she, too, would receive in punishment the same severe proportion that her husband has encountered. It is a well-known tendency of juries to avoid arriving at a verdict of guilty if such action will make a female prisoner liable to a long term behind the bars, especially if she is pretty and vivacious as in the case of Mrs. Moore. So it seems from a general knowledge of how the twelve "true and good men" act under such circumstances that Mrs. Moore stands a much better show of going scot free than she has at any time since her arrest, because the disagreement of the jury on the second trial would probably result in the prosecution dropping the case.

As might well be anticipated, Somerville has already shown its hand in the matter of consolidating North Plainfield and Plainfield into one municipality. Somerville seems to take an ugly view of the project—conceived, no doubt, in the view that the making of a Greater Plainfield will clip Somerville's wings so that she won't fly quite so high after the proposed consolidation has been effected. We presume that no matter what terms are proposed for the consolidation of the borough and the city, Somerville and a good portion of Somerset county will be "agin" it on general principles. The creation of a city the size that a Greater Plainfield would be is a terrible bugbear to the rural denizens of Somerset.

If the officials of the borough persist in their determination to rigidly enforce the law in reference to the collection of taxes—even going to the extreme of seizing the bodies of the unfortunate delinquents and casting them into jail until they settle up accounts—we may expect to see either a large addition made to the Somerset county jail, or a new brand of expert tax dodgers developed.

Secretary of Navy Long, it is said is desirous of resigning from President McKinley's cabinet, and will probably do so after the first of January. Any action as many are to measure the honor of being a member of Cabinet and in close touch with the President, it is seldom that one man serves continuously during a Presidential term as the head of any of the important departments of government.

Jersey may rock the cradle of the trusts, but the nurse certainly is well paid for the service.—New York Press.

And the rocking of that cradle is making people sick.

Now that you have had a Merry Christmas let us trust that it will be a Happy New Year to all.

May Curb the Trusts.

New Jersey's pleasant relations with the monster and, in many instances, over-bearing combinations of capital and enterprise, in affording the promoters and interested ones thereof an asylum to come legally in to existence without onerous conditions, is rapidly securing for the State the distinction of being the "Cradle of Trusts." It is a reputation that is not enviable on the part of any other commonwealth, and is in reality a disgrace to New Jersey. Not long ago we took occasion to suggest that if the next Legislature would make a name for itself it could profitably take up the matter of enacting laws that would become stumbling blocks to the present easy path that the trusts tread in New Jersey.

The figures of the last 12 months, which show that trusts with an aggregate capitalization of over half a billion dollars have been incorporated under New Jersey laws, are truly startling, and have led many thinkers to foresee that the day must soon come when a check shall be placed upon the monopolistic aggregations of capital which seek the incorporating laws of the State as a harbor of refuge.

From Trenton comes the news that in all probability the approaching Legislative session will be marked by an effort being made to secure the passage of a law that will be a sharp and effective edge in the face of the grasping monopolists who organize themselves into high sounding titled corporations. It is time that such action was taken, and the members of the legislature who support measures along that line will deserve and receive the praise and appreciation of the people.

The idea advanced by those who have taken the initiative in the agitation of the subject is to secure a readjustment of the laws regulating the incorporation of these organized companies of wealth, especially with reference to the issue of stocks and bonds. Under the present lax system condoned by the State there is great peril from the reckless expansion of debt by corporations and trusts, better known under the term of "watering stock," as there is many cases where business collapse may follow continued increase of liabilities. That the good name of the State would be injured by such business wrecking, far beyond any pecuniary return that it now receives by fostering the monopolies, is recognized on all sides.

The Way They Do It In Middlesex.

It is generally recognized that barring trampsthere are few men who like to get into jail; and ones in they will do all they can to get out In fact, that was illustrated not long ago when seven prisoners incarcerated in the Middlesex county bastile took leave through the windows without the knowledge of the jailer.

But the bad men of New Brunswick are nothing if not original. Doubtless possessing more or less civic pride in having their feats exploited far and near as peculiar to the old Dutch city, and illustrating its contradictory phases of life, a gang changed the ordinary rule yesterday morning and accomplished the clever trick of getting into the jail without the knowledge of anyone besides their own select set and then getting out with equal ubiquitousness and facility.

In the procedure, however, sad to relate, these original men relieved Sheriff Litterst of $700 in cash that he had tucked away in one of his coat pockets for a rainy day. The Sheriff may now be expected to devote considerable time to arranging plans for a second visitation of these clever gentlemen, though, it is unlikely that it will be quite so auspicious for them as the first.

In the event of Senator Reed being made President of the State Senate, and there is but little doubt about it, Warren Rowley, of North Plainfield, will probably be made his private secretary. That will mean that Fred Brown's chances of being re-appointed a doorkeeper during the legislative session will drop to zero.

The much-mooted question of erecting a monument to the memory and honor of the heroes of the Civil War comes again to the fore. Rev. Mr. O'Donnell will find a big job before him if he succeeds in raising the necessary funds to secure it, but he will be thanked in proportion to the size of the undertaking.

President McKinley wants the citizens of the United States to furnish the down-trodden Cubans with 20,000 yoke of oxen in order that they may commence to till the soil and become independent. Persons having a spare ox or two will please notify the President.

A Passaic man who conducted a gambling house in that city a year ago and was arrested, and subsequently took leg ball and was seen no more for a year, has just returned to face the courts on the charge. It is marvelous how homesickness will deprive some men of the terrors of the law.

chapel last Tuesday. The programme included a cantata, "Santa Claus Land," Donald A. McGee was "Santa Claus," Miss Edna Kennedy, "Mary," Harold Fenno, "Jack Frost." The chorus of elves was composed of George Bittenhouse, Clarence Conover, Clarence Ulrich, Fred Lynn, Albert Codington, Eddie Springer and Arthur Bibgaman. The fairies were the Misses Gladys Peck, Marion Overton, Helen Joy, Dorothy Welch and Katheryn Smincle. There was also a recitation by Arthur Humble and a solo by Miss Etta Raybert. The presentation of gifts to the pupils followed. G M. Rittenhouse, assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, was presented with a Morris chair. Janitor Kennedy received a substantial check.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

The entertainment at this church attracted a large number of the Sunday-school scholars and members of the church. J. Stewart Blackton, sketch artist, assisted by Miss Matta Holmes, of New Brunswick, who gave several recitations, and accompanied Mr. Blackton on the piano, entertained the audience. After the above programme Superintendent Cave distributed gifts. Three prizes were awarded to those who memorized the greatest number of Bible verses during the year. Marion Englehart received first prize, having committed to memory 507 verses. Bertha Englehart received second prize for memorizing 389 verses, while the third prize was given to Bertha Townley for committing 378 verses.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Sabbath school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held its Christmas festival Tuesday evening at the church. The programme included opening prayer by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis; address, Rev. A. E. Main; recitations by Helen and George Rogers, Charles Potter Titsworth and Bessie Dunham, and carols by the school. The music was in charge of the superintendent, D E. Titsworth. A supper in the lecture room followed the distribution of the gifts. Sets of dishes and ships were given to the small children and pictures and pocketbooks to the larger ones. The table was arranged in the shape of a crescent while the decorations in holly were grouped as stars and crescents. The committee on entertainment was Mrs. George H. Babcock, chairman; Miss Mabel Maxson, Miss Ida Bauer, Arthur J Spicer and Asa Randolph.

EAST THIRD STREET MISSION.

A pleasing entertainment was given at the East Third Street mission last Tuesday. There was a piano solo by Clifford Braider, violin solos by R. W. Barnes and M. C. Dobbins, and short addresses by Superintendent L. Warren Randolph and Rev. Mr. Fitch, pastor of the Baptist church, at Caldwell, Essex county. A feature was the rendition of a musical cantata entitled "Santa Claus' Choice," which was given by the school. After the entertainment Superintendent Randolph received a handsome framed picture from the members of the Sunday-school. The presentation was made by U. B. Crane. Clifford Braider took the part of Santa Claus and distributed gifts to the schools.

PUPILS' YULETIDE GLEE

IRVING SCHOOL CHILDREN DISPLAY ENTERTAINING ABILITIES.

Exercises Held in the Assembly Hall, Which Was Filled With Many Admirers of the Little Folks—Programme.

Christmas was made much of this year at the Irving School, and a pretty entertainment entitled "Yuletide Glee" was given Friday afternoon by the pupils under the direction of their teachers. It consisted of recitations and songs by the little ones, and closed with a Christmas play, "Mr. St Nicholas," which was taken part in by ten boys and girls.

The assembly hall, where the exercises took place, was darkened and lighted only by the electric lights which made the costumes worn by some sparkle and glisten like gold. The platform was arranged so as to represent a parlor, with greens placed around, and an open fireplace in which a make believe fire was burning.

To the procession the pupils marched in from their different classrooms and took their seats and joined heartily in the song, "Message of the Bells," which opened the programme. Then followed recitations and songs by the pupils singly or as parts of classes. The entire programme was gone through with without a break, and as many of the reciters and soloists were very young, it was somewhat remarkable.

Recitations were given by Hattie Walls, Mabel Hand, Stanley Childs and Jerry Manning. A recitation and song by the pupils of the first year, B, was well gone through with. "Santa Claus," was the name of the piece, and each of the little ones wore a letter on her bosom, the whole spelling "Santa Claus." A song was sung by Florence Phillips, and in another Grace Murphy sang the verses as a solo, the pupils of the fourth year, A, joining in the chorus.

"Winter," by eight pupils of the seventh grade, was very good. Lois Huson was winter; Hannah Higgins, snow; Lillie Duckworth, ice; Florence Chichester, frost, and Rose Droll, wind. "Christmas in different parts of the world" was told about by little girls dressed so as to represent their country, who explained how they spent Christmas in their homes.

The play, "Mr. St. Nicholas," was taken hold of by the pupils with vim. It opened by showing a group of children gathered about the fireplace, some of them about to hang up their stockings for Santa Claus to fill. One or two, with more modern ideas, sneered at Santa and said that they wanted a new plan. Just then in popped Mr. St. Nicholas, a modern youth, attired in a tall silk hat, who began bustling about, taking the names and addresses of the company, and offering to send them their gifts by messenger or express. But after all Mr. St. Nick did not receive an enthusiastic reception and soon left. Then the genuine old Santa Claus appeared and met with a jolly reception, which ended by his distributing all kinds of gifts and filling the various stockings.

Charles Burt made an excellent "Mr St. Nicholas" and Santa Claus was Frank Kline. The others who formed the group and hung up their stockings were Sidney Gilbert, Sanley Childs, Margie Phillips, Winona Dodds, Ada Rogers, Wm. Montgomery, John Kenney and Ethel Walsh.

BACHELORS BOWLED A WINNING GAME.

First Game at Park Club Won by Six Points.

BENEDICTS ARE DEFEATED.

"DOC" THEIRS HAD A CHANCE TO WIN THE GAME BUT FAILED.

Benedicts Braced up in the Second Half and Tore Down the Bachelor Lead But Failed to do Anything on the Windup—Low Scores Were Made—Charlie Lyman Led Cheering Section.

"If" Doc Thiers had only made a spare on the wind-up and "if" Benjamin Reed had only made one more strike, together with sundry other "ifs," the Benedicts of the Park Club would have won. As it was the Bachelors were victorious in the first bowling match between the two teams by the very slim majority of six pins.

For several years, these annual contests at the alleys of the Park Club have been leading events in the holiday season at the club. Old and young turned out to see the fun and cheer the respective teams. Saturday night saw the first of the series of three games of the series.

The Benedicts entered the arena led by their veteran captain, Dr. C. B. Thiers. President B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., was his trusty lieutenant. Charles H. Lyman led the cheering section.

Peter B. Matthews was at the head of the Bachelor cohort, but he didn't wear his famous "ninety-eight cent" sweater. Percy Sandford was the most distinguished of the unmarried men with his red golf stockings. There was also the Yale combination, Dupee and McCutchen.

Through some mistake the Benedicts took the lead in the first frame. Then the mistake was rectified and the Bachelors went to the front where they remained. After rolling up a big lead, they went to pieces and just managed to win out by a paltry six pins. "Doc" Thiers had the chance to defeat them on the wind-up but he only scored eight instead of a strike or spare that would have won the game.

The individual scores were:

An Unparalleled Time Record

Was made every day during the period of the Omaha Exposition by the trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway on its Chicago & Omaha Short Line.

Altho its trains hauled from ten to thirteen well filled sleeping cars and coaches each night, yet schedule time of arrival at Omaha and at Chicago was the accomplished fact,—a record to be proud of, and which has resulted in establishing the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway in the minds of the traveling community as the shortest, best and most reliable route from Chicago to Omaha, as well as to California.

All coupon ticket agents sell tickets via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y. For information regarding the line address Wm. Kelly, Jr., General Eastern Passenger Agent, 381 Broadway, New York.

PARK CLUB ENTERTAINED

CHRISTMAS SEASON AT THE CLUB OPENED FRIDAY NIGHT.

Miss Ida Strauss, Chas. Pettinos, of Bethlehem, and Judge-Elect W. N. Runyon Furnished the Programme.

The opening of the holiday season at the Park Club was marked last evening with an informal entertainment for the members and their families. Last Saturday seen the opening of the series of bowling matches between the Bachelors and Benedicts of the club. Next Friday evening the club will hold its formal dance, and the night following will take place the second game in the Bachelor-Benedict series.

The entertainment Friday evening proved a decided success. The entertainers were Miss Ida Strauss, pianist; Charles Pettinos, of Bethlehem, formerly leader of the Lehigh University Banjo Club, banjoist and vocalist, and City Judge-elect William N. Runyon, vocalist.

It was the first appearance of Miss Strauss in public and she proved herself a talented musician. She has a pleasing manner and a bright smile hat delighted the audience. Her selections were difficult but she gave them with ease and expression that was very pleasing. Her technique was excellent.

Mr. Pettinos was greatly handicapped in the absence of his regular accompanist. He gave several spirited banjo solos and then sang. His selections were fanny and new to most of the audience so his reception was a very enthusiastic one.

With the dignity of the city judiciary to sustain, William N. Runyon will not be the genial entertainer next year that he has been for the past three years. He will make only one more appearance after last evening. He had several "coon songs" that were well received and then sang his famous "Irish Jubilee."

B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., president of the club, acted as master of ceremonies. After the entertainment the floor was cleared for a dance. Part of the evening, William N. Runyon at the piano and Charles Pettinos on the banjo, rendered a number of selections. Some of the returned college boys sang their college glees as well.

ANOTHER LODGE.

Grand Fraternity Branch Organized in This City Friday Night.

Plainfield is to have another fraternal and beneficiary organization. The latest is known as the Grand Fraternity and was organized Friday night at the office of Lawyer Brady in the First National Bank building.

The officers of the new order, which will be called Plainfield Camp of G. F., are as follows: Commander, J. Henry Buchanan, M. D.; Recorder, Irving L. Brady; Collector, Thomas S. Currin, Jr.; Treasurer, Horace J. Martin.

The preliminar organization was effected last night and the charter left open for farther applications. The society has social features as well as a beneficial side and is expected to become popular among Plainfield people.

The society will meet in January at the call of the Commander to receive further applications.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY IN PROSPECT.

Freedman Brothers, Cloak Manufacturers May Locate a Branch Here.

Freedman Brothers, the well-known cloak makers, of New York, have visited this city in the prospect of establishing a branch of their business. The senior member and his son were in town a few days ago at the solicitation of Albert Lederer, son of the dry goods merchant. They were quite favorably impressed with the place. They do not think that there would be any trouble in locating a branch here. Their object in establishing a branch out of New York city is that they have much trouble with strikes.

They now employ 1,500 expert cloak makers and they would divide their help if a branch is established. The matter is now under advisement and there are strong possibilities that the firm will decide to start a branch in Plainfield.

Entertained at Euchre.

A progressive euchre party was given Friday by Mrs. H. Augustus Schuyler, of 319 LaGrande avenue, for her daughter, Miss Schuyler. There were guests present from New York and from Plainfield, and the first prizes were carried off by Miss Marion Bowen, of this city, and Allan Hartley, of New York. Miss May Evans and Bryant Harman, won the second prizes.

DIDN'T FORGET THE POOR

SANTA CLAUS MADE MANY UNFORTUNATE CHILDREN HAPPY.

Gifts for 177 Children Whose Parents Were Unable to Make Them Presents—Mayor Fisk's Most Generous Offer.

In connection with the celebration of Christmas-tide there was one incident that probably was productive of more good than any other. It was the celebration held at the home of Mrs. Wm. A. Woodruff, East Second street, Saturday afternoon, when 177 children, poor as far as this world's goods are concerned, were made happy.

This plan was adopted in 1895 by Mrs. Woodruff, and every year it has been a great success. This year Mrs. Woodruff was assisted greatly by Mayor Fisk, who gave freely of his means and instructed Mrs. Woodruff to see that every poor child received something. During the entire afternoon the children called and received gifts of oranges, candy, popcorn and a package containing toys, books and games. There was no partiality shown.

As an additional feature Mrs. Woodruff provided a large Christmas tree which was filled with pretty things. The children were allowed to admire the tree and enjoy themselves before receiving their presents. Every child that called was made happy and feelings of appreciation was depicted on every face. Mrs. Woodruff was assisted in her work by Mrs. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, and Miss Mabel Woodruff. During the afternoon many donors called and witnessed the distribution of gifts. There were many who contributed either money, toys, candy, etc., toward the celebration and thus helped to give the children a pleasant Christmas.

Mulford Estil and William Williams donated books, and there was a sufficient amount of money contributed to supply oranges, candy, popcorn and mittens to the children.

FOUND ALMOST DEAD.

Italian Laborer Lay Bleeding on the Tracks Where He Had Been Struck.

Tuesday morning the engineer of engine 393, drawing a loaded coal train, discovered the unconscious form of a man lying beside the tracks of the Central Railroad in Vandeveer's cut, south of Raritan. It proved to be a heavily built Italian laborer, bleeding from from wounds in the head. The man was still breathing, so he was picked up and carried on the engine to Somerville where Dr Swinton, of that place, examined him and pronounced his injury a fracture of the skull. He ordered his removal to the hospital here. The man was brought down on the train arriving at 8:37.

Although it is evident that the man was struck by a train, it is not known, as yet, when or how the accident occurred, or who he is. When the man reached here he was taken to the hospital in the ambulance. He was still unconscious.

An examination of the man proved that he has a very bad fracture of the skull, and the chances are that he will not recover. He is about 30 years of age and fairly well-dressed. The only thing found in his clothes was 22 cents. There is not another thing to identify the man. An effort will be made as soon as possible to learn the man's name. He has been unconscious ever since he entered the hospital.

Profitable Affair

As a result of the tea and birthday party given at the home of Miss Will son, "Tunlaw," for the benefit of the Church of the Redeemer, $76.80 was received clear of expense. This is reported to be the largest amount ever received at a similar affair, and the gratitude of all is extended to Miss Wilson for her earnest efforts.

A REPRESENTATIVE CITIZEN PASSED AWAY SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Up to a Few Years Ago His Life Had Been One of Activity—He Was a Public Spirited Citizen of This City.

Saturday afternoon last occurred the death of A. C. Baldwin, of Park avenue, who for many years has been one of Plainfield's most prominent citizens. As he has been in ill health for several years, his death was not wholly unexpected.

Augustus Chester Baldwin was born in Spencertown, Columbia county, N. Y., March 13th, 1821. He was one of a large family. As a young man he entered the employ of Baldwin, Starr & Co., of New York city, a firm doing a large wholesale clothing business with the South. He was admitted as a partner, and on the retirement of C. P. Baldwin and C. J. Starr, he became the head of the firm. He remained in business until several years after the war when he retired. After spending some time abroad he returned and formed a partnership with Christian Schepflin, of Plainfield, which later bore the name of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Company. He remained in business until ten years ago. Since his retirement he has been in failing health and a great invalid for the last four years. Always a public spirited man, he has ever had at heart the welfare of Plainfield, which has been his home for more than twenty years. Largely to his efforts Plainfield owes her Public Library and Music Hall. He was also a promoter of the Hillside Cemetery Association, and one of its first directors. Mr. Baldwin leaves a widow and one son. The son is fourteen years of age.

The funeral services were held at his home, 805 Park avenue, this city, yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

That sensational comedy, "Slide Tracked," with its scenic and mechanical effects, its bright up-to-date singing and dancing specialties, catchy musical mirth-provoking situations will be the attraction at Music Hall Saturday, Dec. 31st. The powerful figure in the play is a tramp through whose persistent efforts a mysterious crime is finally cleared up, the good rewarded and the guilty brought to justice. The cast contains such people as E. H. O'Connor, Billy Bowers, R. E. Vance, L. C. LeRoy, Gertrude Barnes, Marguerite Mayfield, Josephine Robers and others.

"Continuous gaiety" will reign at Proctor vaudeville houses during this week, for the programmes have been made up with no one end in view—to amuse. The vaudeville world has been ransacked and the best acts engaged, some of them months ago, to insure excellent bills for the holiday season. The continuous houses appeal especially to holiday makers, for one is able to choose one's own time to see the show, instead of being bound down arbitrarily to a certain hour. At Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre the bill includes the favorite comedy stars, Rice and Cohen, Lafayette, Reno and Richards, Jane Whitbeck, the Angela Sisters, A. D. Robbins and a score more. At the Pleasure Palace, East Fifty-eighth street, Helene Mora, McIntyre and Heath, Hayes and Lytton, Caulfield and Carleton, Montgomery and Stone, etc., will entertain. At both houses there are continuous concerts each Sunday, and the prices are the same all the year 'round, 25 and 50 cents.

Little Tots Made Merry.

Many parents and friends assembled at Miss Scribner and Miss Green's school Friday morning to see the little children of the kindergarten make merry with games and carols around a beautiful Christmas tree. All the decorations and presents were the handiwork of the little ones and certainly did great credit to their teacher, Miss Juanita Machado.

SPIRIT OF CHRISMAS IN LOCAL CHURCHES.

Special and Appropriate Services Carried Out.

SEASONABLE DECORATIONS.

MUSIC FORMED A LARGE PART OF THE PROGRAMME.

Sermons Preached by the Pastors Were Particularly in Sympathy With the Day Celebrating the Birth of Christ—Sunday-schools in Several Churches Enjoyed Services in the Afternoon.

ST. M. E. CHURCH.

The services at St. Mary's church Christmas morning began at 6:30 with a high mass, and services were held after that time at 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 10:30. The interior of the church presented a handsome appearance, the main altar being artistically decorated for the occasion, while throughout the edifice roping of evergreen and holly wreaths in profusion were reminders of the season. At one side was the representation of our Saviour's birthplace at Bethlehem. The celebrant of the last mass was Rev. Father Westman, assistant rector of St. Mary's, church, while a sermon appropriate to the day was delivered by a visiting clergyman. The musical part of the services was up to its usual high standard, the regular choir being augmented for the occasion. Miss Smith presided at the organ.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

At the morning service the choir sang several beautiful selections very acceptably, giving evidence of much careful rehearsing under the guidance of their instructor, A. L. Titsworth, the organist. The pastor, Dr. Schenck, delivered an appropriate sermon which commanded the closest attention of the large congregation present. The pulpit platform was very tastefully beautified by palms, ferns, cut flowers, and also a large green wreath on the organ front, all the result of much labor on the part of Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, who had the decorating of the church in charge.

In the afternoon, in the lecture room, the primary department of the Sunday-school had a happy time and showed their proficiency by rendering the following programme:

Song by School, Bring Out Happy Bells.
Recitation—Happy Christmas Time.....Harold Schenck
Recitation—Keeping Jesus' Birthday.
.....Helen Wooley
Recitation—Little Soldier.....Ida Schofield
Song—We Come This Happy Christmas.
.....Nettie Cairns
What We Love Christmas, 4 girls—Bessie Randall, Laura Bodine, Mildred Osborn, Emma Yeager, Delia Dufford, Elsie Dunavan.
Christmas carol, recitation and song—Mary Neal, Freddie Smith, Hazel VanSickle, Ira Yeh, Hadie Yeager, Bessie Holdaer.
Recitation—The Joy of Christmas..Luella Day
Recitation—Sing, Christmas Bells.
.....Cornelius Schenck, Jr
Rainbow Sisters, 12 girls—Nettie Cairns, Bessie Bandall, Fanny Lackey, Frances Wendell, Anna Bodine, Myra Dunavan, Delia Dufford, Edna Kelly, Violet Hope, Nettie Robinson, Agnes Garretson, Ida May Tier, Rosa Hook.
Goodbye.....Elsie Tier

The little folks did so nicely that their superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Tier and her assistant, Mrs. Randall, were well repaid for the result of their labors. The "Merry Christmas" arch of evergreens and other decorations of the room were tastefully arranged by William H. Olmstead.

In the evening the exercises were held in the auditorium of the church in charge of the Sunday-school. Every inch of room was occupied and many persons went away for the church, unable to get a seat or even comfortable standing-room space. As at the morning service, the singing of the choir was a feature of the service and greatly enjoyed by all, as was also the singing of the scholars of the Sunday-school.

Miss Martie Anthony read "The First Christmas Present" beautifully, and Miss Cora Emille Laire recited "The Sweetest Song" to the delight of all, Mr. Titsworth, the organist, accompanying her recitations with soft, sweet notes on the pipe organ. Edson C. Martin, a favorite tenor singer to Plainfield audiences, sang "Ring Out the Bells" in a manner that made everybody feel like applauding for more.

Dr. Schenck and Superintendent Anthony each made a few remarks on Christmas-tide, which was followed with more singing by the choir and school, the exercises being brought to a close by all joining in singing "Close by God From Whom All Blessings Flow." The excellent music by the organist of the church, A. L. Titsworth, was a very pleasant part of both the morning and evening exercises.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sunday was a joyous one for all who attended the Christmas services at the First Baptist church, from the youngest to the oldest. The church was tastefully decorated with greens and holly, while an arrangement of bows of red silk ribbon added to the attractiveness. Over the organ there was a large star made of evergreens, which was studded with incandescent lights brilliantly lighted.

In the morning the service was mostly musical, with the exception of an appropriate and interesting discourse by the pastor, Dr. Yerkes. P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, assisted and Howard Case presided at the organ. The choir rendered several special selections. The musical programme was as follows: Prelude, organ and violin; carol, "Sweet Christmas Bells;" anthems, "Arise, Shine," "How Brightly Dawns," "The Christ Child," "The Christmas Song." "See Amid the Winter's Snow;" offertory, "The Angel Herald;" sopeano solo, Miss Harris, with violin obligato; organ postlude. During the rendition of the above programme there were solos by Miss Harris, Mrs. Ward, Wm Holmes and George Smith.

The afternoon service was under the auspices of the Sunday-schools of the home church, the East Third Street chapel and the Mt. Olive Baptist church, and the scholars and teachers all assembled at 3 o'clock. The programme opened with a prelude, "Adagio," violin, organ and piano. The musical numbers are as follows: Singing by schools, "Holy, Holy, Holy;" choral dictation, choir; Christmas hymn, "The Anthem of the Woods;" choir; carol, "The Snow Lay on the Ground," schools; hymn, by primary department; hymn, "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem," schools.

Features of the afternoon service were the recitations. Miss Addie Parker Jackson recited "Long Years Ago," and another recitation, "Why We Love to Bring Christmas Gifts to Jesus," was given by Nellie Ballentine, Sadie Johnson, Helen Adams, Isabelle Taylor, Ethel Webster, Henrietta Winn and Ada Keller. Those who had charge of the Scripture reading were George Batchelor, M. C. Dunham, Warren Randolph, Mr. Batchelor, as superintendent of the home school, made a few remarks in which he extended to all a Christmas greeting. Both services at this church were largely attended.

SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Christmas-tide was properly observed in the Seventh Day Baptist church with special services Saturday morning and afternoon. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. A large star of holly hung in front of the organ, and the pillars in the auditorium were decorated with branches of the same. The platform was attired in palms and other potted plants.

In the morning there was a Christmas sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. A. E. Main, and special Christmas anthems by the regular choir under the direction of D. E. Titsworth. The Sabbath-school held its special exercises in the afternoon. The members of the primary department marched into the church and gave a short programme of songs and recitations. Then each child brought up a gift to go to some charitable institution. Each of the other classes also presented gifts for the same object. The programme also included carols by the school and by the superintendent, D. E. Titsworth.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Christmas services were held morning and afternoon in the Congregational church. The decorations were of red and green, and unusually artistic. The pulpit platform was transformed into a chancel by a railing of evergreens, holly and crimson immortalles; beautiful roses were on the reading desk and piano, and the whole end of the church was draped with evergreen roping, shields and wreaths, while a great star hung over the desk. In the morning service the pastor, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, preached a strong and helpful sermon on "The Prince of Peace," and Horace J. Martin sang a Christmas offertory, "Cantique de Noel," by Adolph Adam very effectively. The singing by a quartette choir arranged for the service was given up on account of illness. The Sunday-school session was entirely devoted to the Christmas exercises. A Christmas service from a new book of responsive worship just introduced into the school was given, and the programme also included singing by the primary department, two violin solos by William McKillop, the reading of Eugene Field's story, "The First Christmas Tree," by Miss Catherine Wolcott Dwight, and the singing of two quartettes, "Once in Bethlehem of Judah," and "Sweetly Sang the Angels," by the Sunday-school choir, Miss M. D. Morse, Miss Cornelia Dwight, Miss Julia Van Belkaap, Morris C. VanAredale and Stacy Reynolds.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

The Christmas service at this church was held Sunday afternoon, at which time the Sunday-school scholars, teachers and friends assembled and joined heartily in the programme. The church was prettily decorated about the pulpit platform with greens and flowers and the effect was admired. The church choir was present and assisted in the rendition of the Christmas music. The following programme was presented under the direction of Miss Lunger, superintendent of the primary department: Recitations, "The Little One's Welcome," Mildred Long, Madeline Uhrhahn, Stella Kline, Kittie Peony, Jennie Nelson, Bessie Taft, Marion Major; "Joy of Christmas," Willie Morton; "Why We Love to Bring Christmas Gifts to Jesus," Carrie VanAredale, Laura Woolston, Viola Higgins, Bessie Pope, Grace Woolston, Etta Bodenheimer, Mabel Wakefield; "How the Wise Men Found the Christ Child," Carrie VanAredale, Margaret Rickett, Alice DeMott, Kittie Rutledge, Laura Dean, Florence Rickett; "Christmas Morning," Mildred Long; "Everybody Thinks," Christmas service was held. The Helen Ross; "Eddie's Little New Sunday-school met in the afternoon, Year," Miss Grace Gaddis, Bert and in the evening the service was Simpson presided at the organ, and particularly impressive. during the service a selection was given by Lindley Hillman, violin, and Walter Serrell, flute. The services were in charge of Superintendent John Valiant, and he received the offerings from the various classes. In all $18.36 was received for the missionary department. There is now about $45 in hand for the expenses of the school and by a rising vote it was agreed that $5 of the next quarter's collection should be appropriated to this fund to complete the necessary for school purposes. Next Sunday the regular church Christmas music will be rendered.

MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH.

The Monroe Avenue M. E. church looked very pretty Sunday in its holiday attire of greens. Christmas services were held there morning and afternoon. In the morning the pastor, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, preached an interesting sermon suited to the day.

The Sunday-school held its special service in the afternoon when the Christmas service, entitled "The Heralds of Peace," was given under the direction of the superintendent, Walter M. McGee. It included carols by the school, exercises by the primary department, a solo by J. P. Thompson, and an address by the pastor. Ed Beekman led the responsive readings.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

At the Holy Cross church a lengthy programme of Christmas music was rendered by the choir at both the morning and evening services. The decorations in the church were of greens and holly wreaths, which were displayed around the altar and choir loft.

SWEDISH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Sunday evening in the W. C. T. U. rooms the members of the Swedish Missionary Society observed Christmas in an appropriate manner. The pastor, Rev. O. G. Tinqlof, was in charge, and there was an orchestra of guitars and violins that assisted very much in the rendition of the music. During the service they rendered several selections. A choir of mixed voices also sang several Christmas carols. There were three declamations at follows: "Peace on Earth," Emma Swedberg; "Come to Jesus," Hulda Back; "The Praying Children," Hulda Erikson, and there was also a recitation in concert by the scholars, and a vocal solo was given by Nelly Linner. During the evening the pastor delivered an address on the theme, "Reminescence of the Christmas Tree," and also extended the pastoral greetings. After the rendition of the above programme gifts were presented to all from the Christmas tree, and everyone went away feeling very happy.

CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER.

The choir at the Church of the Redeemer, Sunday, rendered special Christmas music, and the church was trimmed up in a holiday fashion with evergreens.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

At the First Presbyterian church the special Christmas service began in the morning with a service in which the members of the Sunday school as well as the choir and congregation could join. The leaflet used was entitled "Bethlehem," the music being by George B. Nevis, and published by Ditson & Company. The carols were sung by the Sunday-school, the anthems by the choir and the selected hymns by the congregation. There was also an address by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Christmas Day was observed at the First M. E. church Sunday morning and afternoon with special services. The church was trimmed with holly and greens. In the morning Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the church, preached a special Christmas sermon. The choir, with several additions, sang four anthems at the service.

The Sunday school held its exercises in the afternoon which were quite elaborate. The superintendent, J. W. Jackson, was in charge. There were recitations by Miss Dorothy Douglass, Miss Edna Moore, Ralph and Eddie Bingaman, Allan Douglass and Miss Helen Douglass, a recitation by Miss Gertrude Anderson, with song by the primary department, carols by the school and by the primary department. Then followed a Christmas service entitled "Would I Were There."

In part first J. B. Joy and Miss Etta Baybert took the leading parts as "Narrator" and "Singer." A very pretty effect was given when the sudden appearance of a star was referred to. Then a star composed of electric lights, hanging at the head of the arch over the pulpit was suddenly illuminated. The electric star was designed and made by W. B. Rittenhouse, of this city. In part second Miss Etta Baybert and Miss Edna French were prominent. In the third part Miss Baybert and Rev. Dr. Snodgrass carried the burden of the service. There was no evening service.

CHRISMAS CANTATA AT BRYANT SCHOOL

"The Realm of St. Nicholas" Was the Title.

MANY VISITORS PRESENT.

THE ENTERTAINMENT WAS HELD AT THE SCHOOL FRIDAY.

Simple Plot to the Cantata—Costumes Were Quite Elaborate, However—Affair Was a Great Success—Was Repeated at Request of Audience—The Names of Those Who Took Part.

"The Realm of St. Nicholas" was the title of a pretty musical cantata given at the Bryant School Friday afternoon. The regular Christmas exercises were given in the morning, but a more elaborate entertainment was given in the afternoon for the parents and friends of the children. A small admission fee was charged.

The platform was converted into a stage with curtain, wings and all complete. The first two scenes were laid in the Coart of St. Nicholas, which was prettily arranged with plenty of greens and white and silver trimmings. The plot of the cantata was simple. It introduced a dance by Snow-flakes and Holly-berries, the arrival of the Postman with the mail for the jolly old saint, and the subsequent arrival of his assistants with their hosts of gifts, Christmas trees and Christmas stockings.

Then they all prepared to depart under the direction of St. Nicholas who led the procession about the stage. The last scene showed St. Nicholas' first visit with the little tots fast asleep on the rug and their stockings hanging in the foreground. As the programme was so short, it was repeated at the request of the audience. The dress rehearsal was held Thursday afternoon and was attended by the children from the Lincoln school.

Santa Claus, Herbert DuBois; Prince Bon Bon, Robert Chilton; Prince Playfellow, Edward Heyman; Prince Gift Book, Harold Tenno; Paul Fry, Raymond Harvey; Robinson Crusoe, Shepherd DeKay; Baby Days, Katharine Waldo; Mother Goose, Emily Tempkin; Kate Greenaway, Ethel Shillman; Mrs. Dolly Head Wheat; Snow Flake Fairies, Louise Davis, Ethel Guilberg, Clara Gullberg, Anna Morrison, Bertha Hill, and Bessie Pound; Holly Berries, Herbert Grant, Fred Crook, Arthur Bingaman, Irving Walsh, Clyde Doane, Harvey Morrison; Christmas Trees, Frances Anderson, Lawrence Miller, William Walsh, Ralph Bingaman, Margaret Kenney, Mary Tempkin, Louise Klein, and Hazel Grant; Christmas Stockings, Helen Johnson, Violet Hope, Ella Linbergere, Alice Sharkey, Charles Hellyer, Eugene Walsh, Walter Wilson, and George Rittenhouse; Postman, George McVoy; Secretary, Leslie Palmer; Switchman, Raymond Harvey.

IN THE BOROUGH SCHOOL.

Christmas Exercises Participated in By the Pupils.

This morning in the Borough Public High School the following excellent programme was presented in commemoration of Christmas: Processional, "Glory to God in the Highest;" vocal solo, Miss Katherine Dwight; recitation, Arthur Smith; vocal solo, Ethel King; vocal solo, Frank Emmons; trio, vocal selection, Clarence Hand, Willie Nischwitz, Frank Whitely; recitation, Leslie Hicks; vocal solo, Clarence Smalley; vocal solos, Miss Helen Smith, Harry Allen, Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux, accompanied by Geo. Smith on violin; vocal quartette, Misses Isabel Milne, Dorothea Wells, Emma Laboyteaux, Bessie Martin. There were several selections by a chorus, and those who took part included Clyde Slater, Lottie Conner, Sadie Fountain, Hazel Martin, Hulda Rummel, Archie Bailey, Malcolm VanAredale. A number of other vocal selections were given by the scholars of the upper grades. This programme was in charge of Miss Sydenham.

In the primary department the following programme was given in an enjoyable manner: Recitations, Eva Higgins, Dorothy James, Mary Cain, Fred Emmons, Edwin Springer, Reba Kline, Marguerite Edwards, Andrew Carney, Ethel Reynolds, Christian Nelson, Bertie Hardelder, Edith Gunn, Grace Smalley, Nellie Ballentine, Elvira Hoerster, Sarah Pearson, Alice Johnson, Henry Haurand, Charles Feller, Alice Mason, Bessie Reynolds, Agnes Moffett, Leah Wightman, Willie Morton, Elsie Brose, Bertha Mants, Ruth Wheeler, Dorrance Smith, Viola Higgins, David Bush. Interspersing the above the following Christmas music was rendered by the department: "Merry Christmas," "Jingle Bells," "Skating Song," "Jolly Old Saint Nick," "Santa Claus," "Christmas Echoes," "Christmas Night," and "Hush, My Babe." The above programme was in charge of Miss Petrie, and Charles Lewis trained the scholars in the rendition of the music.

SHED TEARS IN COURT

JUSTICE AND CULPRITS WERE BOTH DEEPLY TOUCHED.

Augustus Nier and Willie Howe Admitted in Court That They Cut Down Trees on Memorial Chapel Property.

Augustus Nier and Willie Howe, the two youngsters who were arrested Wednesday evening on a charge made by George Wilsons, of Washingtonville, for cutting down Christmas trees on the property surrounding the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, were arraigned Thursday afternoon before Justice Mattison. The scene was one of the most pathetic in the history of the court. There were more tears shed than usual. Justice Mattison read the charge to the young lads and as he did so tears came to his eyes and his voice filled up.

The plea of guilty was told in a pathetic manner, and amid sobs and tears by the culprits. This attitude on the part of the boys found a tender spot in the heart of the justice. While personally he would have preferred to discharge the boys, but was compelled to follow the law. He therefore held them in $50 bonds each to appear before the next Grand Jury. This decision brought forth more tears. But when the boys saw that they were to be furnished with bail their faces brightened.

KRIS KRINGLE WAS THERE.

Yuletide Season Made Pleasant for a Party of Little People

One of the most delightful events of the Yuletide season was that of Friday afternoon when Mrs. William Truman, of West Seventh street, gave a Christmas party at her home to Kate and Mary Barlow. There was nothing left undone to make the affair complete and the genuine pleasure afforded Mrs. Truman as well as her assistants, Miss Wilson, Miss Barlow and Miss Martin, was only increased by the unlimited pleasure of the children.

The little tots appeared in pretty white gowns and kid slippers. A portion of the afternoon was spent in playing games, and when this form of amusement was suddenly brought to a close by the appearance of Santa Claus the joy experienced by the children knew no bounds.

A feature was the supper served by the hostess. The table was decorated in true Christmas style, with flowers, greens, holly, etc., while lighted candles gave a brilliancy to the scene. At this time everyone received a present in the shape of a gold ring which the receiver possessed by unwrapping the pretty fixings around motto candy.

SEVEN TRAMPS RUN DOWN.

Two Killed—Five Fled, Leaving Their Mate Behind.

An express train on the Pennsylvania Railroad early December 21st ran into seven tramps walking on the elevated structure at Elizabeth. One of the bodies was hurled thirty feet into Pearl street and killed. Another was run over. His body was picked up by a trackwalker.

The other tramps had their hats thrown off by the flyer and fled without them. It is not known whether any one of them was injured. There was nothing on either of the bodies to establish identity.

WILL OF LATE JAMES McGEE.

In Surrogate Spencer's office at Somerville, Den. Stat., the will of the late James McGee was filed. Henry A. McGee and Walter M. McGee, sons, are made executors. There were no public bequests and the executors are empowered to distribute the property and money left among the children.

AWFUL DISCLOSURE AT THE PARK CLUB.

SUFFERING FROM THE GRIP.

LACK OF PROTECTION EXPOSES HIM TO MANY DANGERS.

President B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., Learned the Facts While Inspecting Grounds—Senator Reed Was Appealed to for Legislative Aid—Board of Governors Are Considering the Case.

As every president should, it is the custom of Former Mayor B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., now president of the Park Club, to frequently inspect the property of the club to see that it is all there. Last Tuesday, the worthy President Hegeman waded out in the fog to examine the place. As he passed the bronze figure that stands guard on the lawn in the rear of the clubhouse, he noticed that the statue trembled as with the ague.

"What's the matter?" inquired Mr. Hegeman, solicitously.

"Only the grip. That's all," returned the figure as he lifted his shield a little higher to keep off the moisture. "Merely in the fashion. But there's no telling what may happen if the club doesn't furnish sufficient protection for me. I've twinges of rheumatism already and typhoid is a certainty if there isn't something done to protect me from these wintry blasts."

Just then President Hegeman spied the "Tall Sycamore of Somerset" looming up through the fog and signalled to him to approach.

"There's Steward Israel Jones," continued the statue after saluting Senator Reed with the tattered remains of his sword. "He has a brand new uniform while I am left out here to catch my death in these dreadful."

"Can't you cancell them?" suggested Mr. Hegeman.

The statue gave him a metallic look and then turned to the Senator.

"Look here, Senator. Can't you get a measure through the Legislature for me. You provided blue envelopes for the ballots, why can't you provide something in which to envelop me? The color don't make much difference."

"You must remember that the Park Club isn't the Legislature or Somerset county either," interrupted President Hegeman.

"I'll bring the case before the board of governors," continued that dignitary, and so they departed.

The little talk bore fruit, however, and now President Hegeman is agitating the question of properly robing the statute for the winter. The question is one of the most important that the board of governors has had to consider for some time. A number of visits have been made to various public establishments in New York, but nothing satisfactory has yet been found. It is now proposed to have the garment for Christmas and make it a gift to the poor little bronze statue on the lawn who only has his shield and the belt of his sword to keep him warm these days.

SIXTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY.

The sixty-third anniversary of the New England Society was celebrated Thursday night in the large banquet hall of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, and was one of the most notable patriotic demonstrations of the year. Among the guests were Augustus D. Shepard, of "The Gables," Fanwood, and J. Evarts Tracy and John Bushnell, of Plainfield.

CHRISTMAS WAS OBSERVED IN SCHOOLS

Exercises Held Throughout the City Friday.

MANY ATTENDED THEM.

CANTATAS GIVEN AT THE IRVING AND BRYANT SCHOOLS.

Only Class Exercises at the Lincoln and Whittier Schools—Exercises at the Bryant School Morning and Afternoon—At Franklin School Programme in Afternoon—Other Exercises

Friday was observed throughout all the city public schools as the occasion for the special Christmas exercises. For nearly a month past the children have been preparing their parts and today will sing, recite and give little cantatas for the benefit of their admiring parents and friends. In some cases the exercises were held in the morning, others took place in the afternoon.

Owing to the absence on account of illness of the principal, Miss Bullock, for the week preceding Friday, the exercises at the Franklin school this afternoon were not as elaborate as they otherwise would have been. The exercises were held at 2 o'clock and were attended by a number of the friends of the school. The programme was as follows:

Processional; "In Remembrance," School; "Twinkling Little Stars," Miss Sutphen and Miss Barber; "A Song for Christmas," School; "The Earth Lay Like a Little Child," "Carol, Oh Carol," children from Miss Strong's class; "The Message of Peace," School; "Hail! the Lord of Glory," "Snow flakes," "Santa Claus is Coming," girls from Miss Gilbert's class; "Behold! in Matchless Splendor," Master Staats; "Beautiful Story," School; "Tell Us, Ye Shepherds," chorus of girls; "A Lullaby," Miss Carmon; "Message of the Bells," School; "O, Wond'rous Star," chorus of girls; "Why Do We Sing?" School.

At the Whittier and Lincoln Schools there were no united exercises, each class holding special exercises of its own. Some of them were quite elaborate, however.

At the Washington School, an elaborate programme was given at 1:45 o'clock Friday afternoon which was listened to by a large audience. The programme was as follows:

Carol, "A Song for Christmas," school; carol, "In Remembrance," school; "Christmas Stockings," by Misses Nancy VanTeller, Aliene Carver, Rose Haggerty and Walter Pound, Howard Firstbrook and Lewis Rothberg; carol, "Beautiful Story," school; "The Three Pets," Misses Laura Baker, Jennie Root and Cornelia Lonsbury; piano solo, Morris Brokaw; "Shoe or Stocking?" Edward Schiller; vocal duet, Robert Sherwin and Anthony Kreger; "Christmas Time," William Westphal; chorus, "O, Wondrous Star!" eight girls; "The New Neighbor," Randolph Chandler; "Twinkling Little Stars," Misses Cora Gray, Violet Knight, Miriam Van Horn, Catherine Shepherd, Alice VanHorn, Josie Myers and Emloise St. John; solo, "Lullaby," Miss Maud Green; "Christmas Questions," Rose Rothberg; carol, "Why Do We Sing?" school; costumed exercises, "Christmas Ogerings by Children of Other Lands;" carol, "The Message of the Bells," school; dialogue, "Santa Claus' Arrangement;" violin solo, Miss Lizzie Hickey; Christmas Dream," Edward Weber; chorus, "With Joy We Hail the Day," nine boys; "The Marriage of Santa Claus," Miss Laura VanCampen; carol; "The Message of Peace," school.

The Irving School was crowded at the exercises held there in afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. The programme was as follows:

Processional; song, "Message of the Bells," school; song, "O Wond'rous Star," pupils of 6th and 7th grades; recitation and song, "Santa Claus," pupils of 1st year B; recitation, "Christmas Eve," Hattie Walls; song, "Tell Us, Ye Shepherds," school; recitation, "Christmas Time," Mabel Hand; exercise, "Christmas," pupils of 3d year A; "A Song for Christmas," school; "Christmas in Different Parts of the World," by pupils of 2d year B, in costume; carol, pupils of 3d year A; recitation, "Christmas in Georgia," S. Childs; song, "In Manger a King," Flor. Phillips; recitation, "Christmas in Indiana," Jerry Manning; song, "Beautiful Story," school; "Shine Out, Oh Blessed Star," pupils of 4th year, A and B; "Winter's Children," in costume: winter, Lola Huson; snow, Hannah Higgins; ice, Lillie Duckworth; frost, Flor. Chichester; wind, Rosa Droll; song, "'Tis Santa Claus," Grace Murphy, chorus by pupils of 4th year A; song, "In Remembrance," by eight girls, 7th grade; Christmas play, "Mr. St. Nicholas," by pupils of 5th, 6th and 7th grades; song, "Ye Bells! Ye Bells!" school.

One of the most elaborate programmes of the day was given at the Bryant school under the direction of Miss E. V. Shattock, principal. This morning special exercises were held from 9 to 10 o'clock. A novel feature appeared in the introduction. After the processional and a carol, "Beautiful Story," by the school, Miss Shattread the prophecy from Isiah telling of the coming of Christ. Then seven girls from the Seventh grade, the Misses Martha Klein, Lillian Thorn, Elizabeth Hartlau, Lottie Chamberlain, Carrie Mulford, Emma Stratton, Bessie Bond and Juliet Hall, recited the Scriptural story of the coming while "While Shepherds Watch Their Flocks by Night" was played softly. The rest of the programme was as follows:

Carol, "Little Town of Bethlehem;" recitation, "The Glorious Song of Old," Ethel Bolce; carol, "In Remembrance;" song, "Away in a Manger," first year class; recitation, "Christmas;" fifth year B; carol, "The Message of the Bells;" "Lullaby," Julia Crane; carol, "The Message of Peace;" "Twinkling Star," 4th, 3d and 2d classes; carol, "A Song of Christmas;" carol, "A Star in the Sky," fourth year B; carol, "Why Do We Sing;" "Oh, Wond'rous Star," sixth year class; "Tell Us Ye Shepherds," seventh year class; recessional.

This afternoon the cantata "Court of King Christmas" will be given to the friends of the school.

The exercises at the Plainfield High School were held this morning and attended by a large nnmber of graduates and friends. The building was prettily decorated with the various class colors. Charles J. Baxter, State Superintendent of Schools, was present, but did not speak. The address was by Rev. C. E Herring.

After the exercises the presentation of the usual gifts to the Juniors from the Seniors took place. The Juniors heaped coals of fire upon the heads of the graduating class by presenting each with a box of home-made candy. Various mottoes calling attention to the verdancy of the Freshmen were conspicuously posted about the building.

WANT A SCHOOL PAPER.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN BOROUGH SCHOOL TO RAISE FUNDS.

Three Hundred People Present to Enjoy the Afternoon Musical and Literary Programme Under Teachers' Direction.

Thursday in the Borough Public High School an entertainment was given by the scholars under the direction of Miss Petrie and Miss Crowther, teachers in the school. The entertainment was given for the purposes of raising funds to assume the publication of a school paper, which is now known as the High School Sun, and which was formerly The Autocrat. The success of the affair can be imagined when it is known that nearly 300 people were present and about $30 was realized as profit.

The programme was introduced with the appearance of "The Ruggles Family," from the Bird's Christmas Carol. Miss Clara VanFleet assumed the part of the old woman. Her children consisted of Frank Durie, Anne Bodine, Grace Powell, Mabel Stevens, Leslie Hilock, DeWitt Brokaw, Charles Windham, Belle Mantz and Lottie Benner.

This family appeared behind a white screen and gave representations while the recitative part was given by Miss Rita Pond.

Following the above there was a violin solo by George Smith, accompanied on the piano by Bert Simpson. The next number was a recitation by Miss Dwight entitled "The Minstrel." The vocal selection "The Ballard and the Oysterman," was given by Arthur Smith, who was the oysterman. Miss Anna Bodine was the fisher maiden, while DeWitt Brokaw was the fisherman.

A vocal selection for a trio entitled "A Wondrous Story," was given by Miss Bessie Martin, Emma LaBoyteaux and Bessie Milne. Miss VanFleet was the accompanist. The next number was a vocal solo by Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux, accompanied by Geo. Smith on the violin, and Miss VanFleet on the piano.

The closing number was entitled "The Charge of the Light Brigade." The story was read by Miss Rita Pond, while those who acted the part of the brigade included Arthur Smith, Charles Bryan, George Smith, Howard George, Benjamin Schuck and William McCullough. They were all attired in gowns of white and depicted the actions of the light brigade in a realistic manner.

Christmas Tree at Children's Home.

In consequence of several severe colds among the children at the Children's Home the Christmas tree will be deferred till Friday, Jan. 6th. Frank Rowley has sent a number of toilet articles to the Home for Christmas presents.

Syrian Infant Very Ill.

The infant girl of Mrs. Mary George, the Syrian woman, who is now stopping at the City Industrial Home, is very ill and it is thought cannot possibly live. Mrs. George expects to take up her home in New York or Philadelphia at a Syrian home, which will be provided for her by the local charity people.

BACK TO THREE MAIL DELIVERY SERVICE.

Old Carrier Schedule to be Resumed by the Postmaster.

MAJORITY SEEM TO WANT IT.

INSPECTOR FROM HEADQUARTERS HAS LOOKED OVER THE GROUND.

The Present Arrangement Was Inaugurated Only After Many Prominent People Had Petitioned for It—Now They Fail to Come to the Support of the Postmaster in the Matter.

After a fair trial of two deliveries a day in the local postoffice Postmaster Bird stated to a reportor Friday morning that after the first of January the old schedule of three deliveries a day would be returned to, as he was convinced that the majority of the people were in favor of the old system of delivery.

Mr. Bird has been freely importuned of late by those desiring a return to the three deliveries and as a result he has given considerable attention to the matter. An inspector from headquarters has also been here within the last few days and looked over the ground and has agreed that a return to the three deliveries will be best. Mr. Bird said that he expected to get orders from Washington to make the change soon after the Christmas rush was over.

A good deal of misapprehension exists as to the Postmaster's attitude in reference to the mail delivery.

"It was only after being urged by some of the most prominent citizens in town," said Mr. Bird today in talking to a reporter, "that the two delivery system was inaugurated after I assumed office. The strange part of it, however, is that not one of the men who advocated the abolition of early morning delivery have come forward to offer a word in its favor now that it is being criticised by others. I am in the office to do as the majority of the people want me to do, and so far as I can tell it seems to be the sentiment of the majority for a three-delivery service, and so that is what we will get after the first of January."

A good many people seem to think that Postmaster Bird is responsible for the change in the carrier service. This is not so. His orders come direct from Washington.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

Meeting of Afro-American Union at Mt. Olive Baptist Church.

The quarterly meeting of the Afro-American Sunday-school Union of New Jersey was held all day Thursday in the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Morning, afternoon and evening sessions were held, and lunch was provided for the delegates by the ladies of the church. The sessions were alimly attended, but those who did attend were greatly benefited. Delegates were supposed to be present from all over the State, and several did arrive from Long Branch, Bedbank, Princeton, Roselle and Cranford.

During the morning session Rev. Mr. Vaughn, of Roselle, preached a sermon on Sunday-school work which was profitable to all who heard him. Mrs. P. H. Brown, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, welcomed the delegates present in a few words, and the secretary of the union, H. C. Hewbett, of Cranford, made the response. The evening session was devoted to a service of songs and recitations and ended with a social hour.

FREIGHT TRAIN RUNS AWAY.

Conductor and Fireman Mortally Hurt —Engineer Badly Injured

At Yatesville Crossing, near Scranton, Pa., Dec. 21st, a Jersey Central freight train ran away. The engineer lost control on a down grade. The engine ran into the rear of a freight train on the Delaware and Hudson Railroad. Eighteen cars and one engine were wrecked. Peter Stark, conductor, and Lyman Zephyrs, flagman, were mortally hurt, and Harry Fulton, engineer, was badly injured.

Nature makes the cures after all.

Now and then she gets into a tight place and needs helping out.

Things get started in the wrong direction.

CENTRAL LODGE A. O. U. W. CELEBRATED ANNIVERSARY.

A Record Breaking Increase—Eighty-five New Members Joined the Order—Grand Officers Present—The Committee.

Central Lodge, No. 46, A. O. U. W. celebrated its ninth anniversary last Thursday and incidentally made a substantial increase to its membership. It was made a gala occasion of the year and the grand officers of the organization came to attend it.

The principal part of the meeting last evening was the initiation of the new members. There have been 94 propositions received and favorably acted upon. Of these 85 put in an appearance and were initiated. Patrolman Nicholas Myers and George C. Crandall were selected to go through the ceremony while the rest merely witnessed it. Among the candidates was M. F. Elderton, of The News staff. It is the largest increase at one meeting on record in New Jersey.

The grand officers of the State present were Grand Master Workman Julius Stahl, of Trenton; Grand Foreman McCollough, of Swedesboro; Grand Overseer Lambert, of Newark; Grand Recorder Lippincott, of Camden; Grand Receiver Test, of Camden; Grand Medical Examiner Barwis, of Trenton; Grand Inside Watchman Nash, of Plainfield; Past Grand Master Workman Deffendorf, of Newark.

After remarks by the grand officers a collation was served. The committee in charge consisted of M. C. Magus, H. E. Rogers and L. J. Spicer. The good time continued until 1 o'clock this morning. A pledge was given to repeat the dose of new members at the last meeting in February.

Central Lodge was instituted the evening of December 26th, 1889, with 48 charter members by then Grand Master Workman Deffendorf. In 1892 13 members left the lodge and formed Columbia Lodge. There are now 255 Workmen in Plainfield, of which 225 belong to Central. During the nine years there have been only thirteen deaths in both lodges and $26,000 has been received from the Grand Lodge by the beneficiaries. During the time the lodges have only paid $15,000 into the Grand Lodge.

DEATH OF AN AGED FRIEND.

Sarah Line Passed Away Quietly at Her Home Last Thursday.

Sarah Line, aged 87 years, widow of the late Isaac Line, died last Thursday at her home, 441 Orchard place, after a short illness with neuralgia of the heart. She was a daughter of the late Ephriam Vail, of Greenbrook. She was born at Greenbrook on the old farm, and lived there for over eighty years. She was a member of the Friends' meeting-house and was a faithful attendant at the meeting-house on Watchung avenue for many years. During the past few years her advanced age would not permit her to go out very much. Up to the last her mind was bright and she was blessed by receiving her second eyesight. Of the immediate family there is one living and that is Abram Vail, of East Third street, who is a brother of the deceased.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue.

WILL REQUIRE A BIG JAIL.

Seven Hundred Delinquent Taxpayers in the Borough.

Justice Crosley, of the borough, has returned to Collector George F. Brown the warrant for the collection of delinquent taxes, remaining unpaid Dec. 20th, and Mr. Brown will now follow the law in the collection of this money. All persons who do not pay their poll or personal tax will be arrested and placed in jail until they do. There are about 700 names on the delinquent list, and Mr. Brown will begin his unpleasant task in about ten days. This action is according to a State law and is enforced at the instigation of the Mayor and Council and borough counsel.

Mr Brown has collected up to Dec. 21st $40,190 of 1899 taxes out of a possible $52,000, which was the levy made. When he took the office there was about $13,000 of 1897 taxes left unpaid, and Mr. Brown has been working hard to reduce that amount.

Royal Arch Masons Elect.

At a regular communication of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., held last Thursday the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: High Priest, C. C. Howard; king, Walter Freeman; scribe, C. Gaus; captain host, R. A. Meeker; principal sojourner, P. B. MacIntyre; royal arch captain, Edward Nelson; treasurer, Henry Liefke; secretary, F. K. VanAuken.

Home for First Time in Eight Months.

Daniel C. Main, of Company E, regular of the hospital corps of the U. S. Regular Army, put on citizens clothes Dec. 21st for the first time in about eight months having been discharged from service in the army "by way of favor" and with an official testimonial of "honest and faithful service." He has gone to visit his grandparents and other relatives in Troy, N. Y.

MARRIED WITH NEW METHODIST SERVICE.

Nuptials of Creveling-Lunger Celebrated Dec. 21st.

IT WAS A HOME AFFAIR.

BRIDE'S HOUSE WAS TASTEFULLY ARRANGED FOR THE EVENT.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass the Officiating Clergyman—Bride Attired in White Organdie and Silk and Attended by Her Sister as Bridesmaid—Couple Will Take up Their Residence in Easton, Pa.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Lunger, of Watchung avenue, was the scene of a pretty wedding December 21st, when their daughter, Miss May Lunger, was united in marriage to Charles Creveling, of Easton, Pa. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, in the presence of many admiring relatives and friends. The new service of the M. E. church was used, which is quite similar to the Episcopal service. It was admired by all.

The bride was gowned in white satin, en train, trimmed with white chiffon. She wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms, and a diamond brooche, the gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by Miss Jennie Lunger, her sister, who was bridemaid, and who wore a gown of white organdie over pink, trimmed with white and ribbon. She carried carnation pinks. The best man was Elmer Cutting, of this city.

The wedding march was played by Miss Daisy Gano, of Clinton, cousin of the bride. As this was being executed the bridal party entered the room where the ceremony was performed. The room was prettily decorated and in front of the bow-window where the bridal party stood there was a large bank of greens and palms. Above their heads was suspended two hearts of evergreen and holly, entwined. Following the ceremony the guests extended their heartiest congratulations to the happy couple and a long and prosperous life was wished them.

After congratulations a wedding supper was served and Mr. and Mrs. Creveling left to take the 8:06 train for a two weeks' wedding trip. On their trip they will reside at Easton, where the groom is a prosperous grocery merchant. The bride has been for six years associated with Mrs. Lemuel Cole, of this borough, as her dressmaking parlors, 234 Park, a host of friends, who extend their best wishes to her and her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Creveling received a large number of useful gifts, that will always be pleasant reminders of the happy event. The gifts include china, furniture, cut glass, handsome chairs, and many things too numerous to mention.

Those present who witnessed the marriage were Wm. Creveling and family, Mrs. Damon, Mrs. Myers, of Easton, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Streeter, of Weatherly, Pa.; the Misses Dean, of Newark; the Misses Gano, of Annandale; Daniel Crotsley and family, of Stirling; Miss Emma Lunger and Miss Nellie Lunger, Walter Gano, of Clinton; Mr. and Mrs. Brening, Walter Hoffman, of Jersey City; the Misses Jamison, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. George Callard, of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. William Lunger, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Rose, Mr. and Mrs. F. Merton Lunger, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Allsopp, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Winckler, the Misses Winckler, Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. Bertha Richards, Miss Carrie Coombe, Miss Nellie Fenner, Wm. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. George M. LECTURE ON SHAKESPEARE.

By Henry A. Clapp, of Boston, Before Monday Afternoon Club.

A very entertaining lecture was given Wednesday, Dec. 21st before the Monday Afternoon Club, in connection with the subject of the winter's study. Henry A. Clapp, of Boston held the close attention of the audience with his theme, "Shakespeare, the Man and the Poet." He thought the dramatist's miraculous genius was the culmination of many generations of strong, rarely endowed men and pure, true-hearted women. He described Shakespeare's early life, his education, which was not meagre, his early marriage, his life in London and his success as a writer of plays. The latter part of the lecture was devoted to the Baconian theory and the absurdity of the claim that Francis Bacon was the writer of Shakespeare's plays. Shakespeare's sonnets, the testimony of contemporaneous writers and the history of the times were brought in proof of the dramatist's ability. The miracle of his genius was a miracle like that of Abraham Lincoln's life, writings and sayings.

HEARD OF THE PURITANS

FOREFATHERS' DAY SERVICE AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Several Sketches of the Sturdy Tribe Read and the Most Interesting Points Brought Out—Appropriate Decorations.

Forefathers' Day was observed again in the Congregational church Dec. 21st, the subject of the meeting being "The Congregationalists in 1620." The service was held in place of the regular mid-week prayer meeting, and after the evening programme was through with refreshments were served by young ladies in Puritan costume.

There were several readers who took up the story of the Puritans in Leydon, where they were in 1620. The reasons why they decided to leave Leydon, their experiences on the sea, their arrival at Cape Cod, anchorage at Provincetown, their explorations on Cape Cod, the story of the first encounter with the Indians, were all nicely told in selections from interesting authors, as well as the voyage in the little shallop to Clark's Island and Plymouth parlor, and the final arrival of the Pilgrims in Plymouth harbor.

The landing of the Pilgrim women for their Monday wash day, a humorous story by Jane G. Auston, in "Standish of Standish," was read by one of the young ladies. The description of the Pilgrims' first encounter with the Indians was read by Miss Julia Belknap, and the main accounts of the Pilgrims were read from Wm. Bradford's "Plymouth Plantations." Miss Clark read the compact signed by the Pilgrims in the cabin of the Mayflower.

The room was decorated with pictures of Puritans, copies of paintings, photographs of old Plymouth, a silver fac simile of Miles Standish's sword and other things to remind those present of the days of 1620.

MR. POWELL'S REMINISCENCES.

Editor of The Philanthropist Will Write of Anti-Slavery and Other Reforms.

Aaron M. Powell, of this city, editor of The Philanthropist, New York, (formerly editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard,) is preparing for publication "Personal Reminiscences the Anti-Slavery and Other Reforms and Reformers."

The first volume will contain reminiscences of William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Lucretia Mott, Stephen S. and Abby Kelley Foster, John G. Whittier, Frederick Douglass, Parker Pillsbury, Lucy Stone, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Charles Sumner, Lydia Maria Child, Rev. Samuel J. May and others with whom he was formerly associated in connection with the American Anti-Slavery Society.

FAIR GROUNDS TO BE SOLD.

Agricultural Society Provides for Disposal of Waverly Land.

The New Jersey State Agricultural Society has appointed Henry H. Isham, of Elizabeth, and Elisha B. Gaddis, of Newark, a committee with power to effect a sale or lease of the Waverly Fair grounds. No restriction as to price was placed upon the committee.

The authorization of the sale of the property is said to mean that it will be transferred to the Essex County Park Commissioners and will become a part of Wecquahick Park.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office recently: Nellie P. Lyman and husband to Adelaide B. Ketcham, North Plainfield, $1; James W. Tappin et al to Beth L. Saunders, North Plainfield, $1,645.

YALE BOYS ENTERTAIN WITH SONG AND MUSIC.

Glee and Banjo Clubs Gave Concert at Casino.

MADE FINE IMPRESSION.

WORK OF CLUBS SHOWED LONG AND EXCELLENT TRAINING.

Tutti-Frutti of Popular Airs Found Great Favor—So Did Selections by Quartette—An Intelligent-Looking Lot of Young Men—Played and Sang With Spirit and Dash—Concert Followed by Dance.

The Christmas tour of the Yale Glee and Banjo Clubs began Dec. 21st, and the first concert was given in this city at the Casino of the Union Country Club Dec. 21st. A fashionable audience nearly filled the hall. Without doubt the college boys are popular entertainers, and their concert of Dec. 21st was fully up to the standard.

The banjo club was the first to make its appearance with one of Rosey's popular marches. In response to the rousing applause, they gave the "Georgia Camp Meeting." The boys played well, excellently in fact. They kept good time and played with a spirit and dash that is a necessary quality of successful banjo music.

The glee club was the best of its kind that has visited Plainfield. The college glees are always good, but sung as they were Dec. 21st they found decided favor. The work of the club showed long and excellent training. The beginning of each selection was sharp and united. The voices kept together and blended into a grand harmony. The college boys were an intelligent looking crowd and they entered into the spirit of their songs with a vigor and earnestness that greatly added to the effect.

The "Tutti Frutti" of popular airs as rendered by banjo and glee clubs found particular favor. Messrs. Schneelock, Sheehan and Simmons were all good soloists. Probably the most enthusiastic received selections were the Negro and funny melodies by the quartette, Messrs. Douglass, Noble, Sheehan and Lyon. The song by Mr. Sheehan, president of the glee club, assisted by the glee club, were encored again and again. Mr. Sheehan had a manner all his own that scored a decided hit. His recitation of a parody on "Barbara Frietchie" was very funny.

The mandolin club, largely composed of the members of the banjo club, was well received in several selections. The "Hungarian Dance" recalled to the audience the days of the Spielkartenfest.

There were three parts to the programme, each of five numbers. Every one was encored and so it was long after 10 o'clock before the concert was over. Then the seats were quickly removed and an informal dance followed in which the college boys took part.

The ushers for the concert were Harry Lovell, A. Willis West and Walter Murray. William N. Runyon was at the door and Walter Stewart sold the tickets.

Raymond A. McGee, of Washington Park, was present and sang in several of the selections. He will now go with the club on their tour however.

Have Received a Book.

Miss Bocap's School for Boys, closed Friday. The pupils received pretty books from their teacher, and each boy took to his parents a booklet containing extracts of his daily work nicely mounted.

George Pizie Says Theodore Roantree Stabbed Him.

HAPPENED AT NEW MARKET.

ROANTREE HAS DISAPPEARED SINCE THE AFFRAY TOOK PLACE.

Roantree Was Intoxicated—Wanted to Fight—Pizie Thrashed Him Soundly—Afterwards Discovered He Was Stabbed—Michael Grantz Arrested for Beating His Boarding House Mistress Also

Dunellen, December 27.—George Pizie, of New Market, is now at home with three knife wounds in his shoulder and back. Theodore Roantree, of the same place, has disappeared. A warrant is out for the arrest of Roantree, charging him with assault with intent to kill.

Late Saturday evening Roantree came into Nelson's Hotel, New Market. Those who saw him said he was greatly intoxicated. First he tried to pick a quarrel with George Clawson. Clawson refused to have anything to do with him. Then he used insulting language to Pizie Words were exchanged and the young men went outside to settle the dispute.

The men clinched and Pizie gave his opponent a sound thrashing. Pizie noticed a knife in Roantree's hand and called to Frank Nelson who took it away. Roantree was then allowed to depart. It was then after midnight.

Pizie found that the back of his coat was wet with blood, flowing from three knife wounds in his back and shoulder. The knife was a pocket knife, with a blade 2½ inches long. Pizie went home and Dr. Nelson was summoned. He said that one cut pierced the lung. Pizie is confined at home but will recover. A warrant was issued for Roantree by Justice Storms. Roantree has been arrested several times in Plainfield for fighting. Both young men are about twenty-three years of age.

Michael Grantz was arrested at his boarding place on North avenue, Saturday night at midnight, by Constable Luther Mundy, of New Market, on a warrant issued by Justice Storms. He was charged with assaulting his boardinghouse keeper, Mrs. Barbara Kean, and dragging her about the house by the hair, late Wednesday night. Marshal Wyncoky was called in but could do nothing without a warrant. Grantz was committed to the county jail at New Brunswick.

A Family Gathering.

There was a family gathering Monday at the home of Mrs. T. Adams, of Duer street, and about thirty people were present during the day. A bountiful dinner was served at noon, and in the evening there was instrumental and vocal music, while several games were played to help pass the time away.

Somerset Grand Jurors.

The following persons from North Plainfield have been drawn as members of the Somerset County Grand Jury for the January term: James H. Trewin, Dr. D. C. Adams and Charles Matthews.

AT TURN VEREIN HALL.

Christmas Exercises a Joyous Occasion With the Germans.

Last Sunday afternoon Christmas was celebrated in a happy manner at the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall on Somerset street, when the members of the association, together with their wives, sweethearts and the children gathered to enjoy the tree and exercises provided. The programme consisted of several selections by the singing section; and the children, while recitations were given by the following children: Jacob Schlick, Leonard Schlick, Herman Klinsman, Henry Benner, Carrie Benner, Hulda Rummell, Frank Haurand, O. Heubern, Eddie Gaub and A. Wolf, Jr. During the afternoon the tree was lighted and the children had a parade. They marched around the tree and received candy and oranges, and each one received a useful present. After this part of the programme ice cream was served to all and a general social time was enjoyed. The committee in charge consisted of Henry Wolf, chairman; Henry Eimer, H. Klinsman, L. Fahn, Carl Felbar, Mrs. Klinsman, Mrs. Rummel, Mrs. Benner, Mrs. Felber and Mrs. Charles Myer.

A pleasant part of the entertainment was the presentations. President Henry Haurand, on behalf of the society, made a little speech and presented Prof. Eichorn, leader of the singing section, with a purse of gold coin. The members of the Ladies' Society also presented the Gesang and Turn Verein with a purse of $25.

Odd Fellows Elect.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., elected officers Monday as follows: Noble grand, Charles Summers; vice-grand, Peter Doettger; recording secretary, Joseph Sheppard; financial secretary, Elias Bird; treasurer, Jas. Clarkson. These officers will be installed the second Monday evening in January.

Gift of a Pulpit.

A handsome and substantial Christmas present was received by the members of the Washingtonville chapel in the shape of a pulpit with all the necessary decorations. It was the gift of Robert Lowe and Isaac Giles, two Christian workers, who frequently conduct the services at that place.

Log Fire Sociable.

A "log fire sociable" at the Y. M. C. A. to the members of the educational department and their friends was the attraction Monday night. The social was held in the two young men's school rooms on the third floor, in one of which was a log fire briskly burning, which gave the social a name.

Endeavor Rally.

The union Christian Endeavor meeting held Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church was well attended, and a profitable hour was spent. Miss Florence G. Hawkins, president of the local union, led the meeting, and there were testimonies, hymns and prayers.

Funeral of Mrs. Happell.

The funeral of Mrs. Adlaide Jones Happell took place Monday afternoon from the home of her father, John T. Jones, 133 East Second street. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell officiated at the services. The interment will take place this afternoon at Hackettstown, N. J.

HANDLING A MODERN WAR RIFLE.

Something No Fellow Can Do Until He Has Had Instructions and Practice.

The "magazine rifle, caliber 30," familiarly called the Krag-Jorgensen, is the army equipment of the infantry of the United States army. It has a range of about three miles and an accuracy never before attained in small arms; that is, when in the hands of a man trained to its use, for at the same distance a properly instructed soldier will pick off a man and the untrained one "miss a barn."

When one of these rifles is put in the hands of a new man the theory of its care and use is explained to him by a non-commissioned officer, and before the lecture is through his feelings are somewhat like those of Mark Twain after receiving his first lesson in piloting. He is ready to say "Sergeant, I can never get all that into my head, and if I did it would be so heavy that my legs would not be able to support it. I would have to go on crutches."

The sergeant's reply would be like that of Mark's preceptor: "My son, you have got to learn it, or you will never be able to use your rifle. You will get it by degrees. Private Blank is in the next bunk. Go to him and let him overlook every time you tilt a latch or turn a lever. Little by little you will learn it all, but if you are not careful you will have your piece unserviceable before you are aware of it."

Then comes the training in the gallery at close range, the grip of the piece, the pull on the trigger, the proper time and degree of expansion of the lungs, the proper expiration, &c.

And after that comes estimating distances, the theory of the course of the projectile through the air, the elevation required for certain distances. The recruit is taught that the expulsion of the bullet from the barrel gives it that eccentric movement called "drift," and that the air gives it another movement called windage; that atmospheric conditions often carry with them optical illusions, so that while the target appears to be in a certain place it is in reality several feet distant, and in order to shoot well he has to estimate these influences separately and in combination in every variation of light and wind.

By continued application he masters point after point until what first appears to be a tangled mass now proves to be a pleasing study, and then he thinks he knows it all, but he doesn't.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

NOTES FOR DAILY THOUGHT.

Sunlight and Shadow.

Men turn their backs to the sunlight and call the shadow adversity.—Presbyterian Journal.

Always Safe.

It is always safe to take it for granted that, as yourself, so others are trying to do their best. Shortcoming is no sign of shortwilling. Sweetness is never whipped in.—J. F. W. Ware.

Be Glad For Something to Do.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues which the idle will never know.—The Reformed Church Messenger.

Cultivate Cheerfulness.

We should train ourselves to see the good things, the bright things of life. There are few habits more common, even among Christians, than this of seeing and remembering unpleasant things and being blind to and forgetting the pleasant things, and there is no habit which is more inimical to cheerfulness.

The truth is, there are in the ordinary life a thousand pleasant things to one that is unpleasant. It is a shame, therefore, to let the one roughness of the soil for us all the gladness of a thousand good things, the one discordant note mar for us all the music of the grand symphony.—Forward.

Mourning in Colors.

The custom of wearing mourning is of an antiquity so great that its origin is uncertain.

People are accustomed to think of black as the only mourning color, but almost every color of the rainbow is used somewhere in the world as an emblem of mourning; black and white striped in the south Sea Islands, grayish brown in Ethiopia, pale brown in Persia, sky blue, Syria and Armenia; deep blue, Bokhara; purple and violet in France; Turkey, violet; white, Egypt and Burmah, yellow.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Hindoo Hospitality.

In his private capacity the Hindoo is frequently very hospitably inclined. The fact that his caste prejudices preclude him from eating with Europeans does not always prevent him from offering an invitation to dinner.—his idea of English hospitality. This consists of his driving his guests to a hotel and paying for dinner, while he awaits its consumption in another part of the house. It takes one some little time to get used to this sort of procedure; but after a while one sees the propriety of accepting the kindness in the spirit which prompts it.

"Why," asked the youngest boarder, "do they measure the speed of a ship in knots?"

"I think," said the Cheerful Idiot, "that it has something to do with the tied."—Indianapolis Journal.

NEARLY ASPHYXIATED.

Gas Generated by Coal Stove Overcomes Family.

Mr. and Mrs. George McGinnis and daughter, Miss Nellie, of Somerset street, had a narrow escape from death by suffocation last week Thursday evening. Mr. McGinnis retired rather early and his wife and daughter retired sometime later. Not one of them noticed the escaping gas in their sleeping rooms which came from a double-heater stove down stairs.

Early the next morning Mr. McGinnis was awakened by severe head trouble and he called his daughter. When the latter reached her father's room she fainted away. Mrs. McGinnis was awakened, and while she was attempting to walk across the room she was prostrated. Mr. McGinnis finally succeed in rousing his wife and daughter and they were assisted to the first floor where they were properly treated. As a result of the experience Mrs. McGinnis and Miss McGinnis were detained at home the next day. They have now recovered entirely from their illness.

PASSED EXAMINATIONS.

Daniel Main Has Also Been Discharged From Hospital Corps.

Daniel Main, of Central avenue, who is studying medicine in Philadelphia at the Hahnamann College, has been honorably discharged from the Hospital Corps of the United States, where he served through the war. His name was kept on the college roll and he used his spare time to keep up in his studies as best he could. Last week he took several of his examinations and successfully passed them.

Died in Poverty.

Last Saturday afternoon occurred the death of Mrs. Margaret Wolf, of West Fourth street. She had for some time past been helped by charity and was helpless to a large extent. She was nearly 80 years of age. She lived alone, and Overseer of the Poor Hansen found Mrs. Wolf dead when he went to the house Saturday afternoon. She was in rather destitute circumstances.

Mrs. McKenzie Introduced.

Mrs. Angus McMonzie, who has just taken up her residence on Central avenue, in this city, was introduced to a few of Plainfield's society people Friday afternoon at a tea given in her honor by Mrs. Israel C. Pierson, of 723 Watchung avenue. Mrs. Pierson was assisted in receiving by Mrs. McKenzie and others. It was a small affair and very informal.

Heart Trouble Caused Her Death.

Mrs. Mary A. Chapon, widow of the late Augustus A. Chapon, aged seventy-nine years, two months and seven days, died at her home on East Front street, Monday morning of heart disease. Mrs. Chapon had been a resident of this city for a great many years and she had a large circle of friends. Her husband died about fourteen years ago.

Soldiers Receive Their Discharge.

Chas. A. Fiynn, brother of Roundsman Fiynn, of the police force, and Corporal Florence McCarthy, both members of the Third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, stationed at Athens, Ga., have received their honorable discharges and were home to spend Christmas. McCarthy will go back on the force.

He Devours it All.

Deacon E. E. Anthony presented several little gifts to the members of Trinity Reformed church consistory Christmas morning. Elder Force received a small black and white "billy goat," with the accompanying lines: "An ardent admirer of The Daily Press, who cannot stop until he has devoured every word in it."

AT THE HOSPITAL.

Appropriate Music Heard and Pretty Gifts Received by Patients.

Monday afternoon was a pleasant one for all who were at Muhlenberg Hospital when the usual Christmas celebration was held. There was an unusually large attendance of prominent people who are closely identified with the hospital work. There were members of the Woman's Auxiliary Board, the board of governors and others present. Owing to the illness of Samuel Huntington, who is president of the board of governors, he was unable to be present. E. B. Clark, of the board, made a very happy and helpful address. The music was a special feature and was in charge of Mrs. Freeman, organist of Grace P. E. church. Several of the choir members from that church were present and sang. After the programme the choir people distributed gifts of all kinds to the patients in the hospital. The superintendent, Miss Moss, as well as every nurse, received presents. Among the seventeen patients now in the hospital there is one more interesting than the others. Her name is Effie Hansen. She is three years old and her home is at Lincoln. Recently she was obliged to have one of her feet amputated, but with her misfortune she is as happy as can be, and yesterday she received lots of presents. Everyone of the visitors had a kind word for her and she chatted merrily with all.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES POSTPONED

Sudden Illness of Organist Schilling Prevented Programme Being Carried Out.

Owing to the sudden illness of Frederick Schilling, the organist and choirmaster of the First Presbyterian church, the Christmas exercises of that church had to be postponed Sunday evening. Prof. Schilling was taken sick during the afternoon, and a Westfield physician stated that it would be endangering his life if he attempted to officiate at the services that evening. Consequently, Rev. C. E Herring, pastor of the church, decided to postpone the exercises rather than go on with them without the organist, as a large part of the programme was of a musical nature.

Death Came to Relieve Her.

The death of Mrs. Phillips, wife of Henry S. Phillips, of 182 Grove street, occurred Sunday morning last after an illness lasting about two months. She was a great sufferer toward the last, but all that was possible was done to alleviate suffering. Sometime ago Mrs. Phillips submitted to an operation, from which she recovered nicely, but a little later complications set in and she failed rapidly. Mrs. Phillips was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jethro Vermeule, who for many years lived on Central avenue. She is survived by a husband.

I. A. Hummer to Build.

L. A. Hummer, the butcher, will at an early date erect a handsome building on the corner of Somerset street and Linden avenue, the first floor of which he will use for a meat market. The place now occupied by Mr. Hummer has been purchased by Sigmund Frucht, the bicycle dealer, and he will occupy the place April 1st.

Entertainment by St. Mary's School.

An entertainment will be given Thursday evening by the children of St. Mary's Parochial School in the school hall, Sixth and Liberty streets, which promises to excel other previous efforts.

Grip Taxks Dr. Adams.

Dr. Adams, of Grove street, is a sufferer from the grip, and Monday he was obliged to relinquish his duties for the present. He seems to be improving now.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I conceived that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a lozenge and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter was sent there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and have had a saving of $2 a call.

A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters of the lady who originally objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but as she had been benefited by Ripans Tabules, I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.
